

QUEEN'S JOURNAL

Vol. 102 1974-75

Queens
Journal

Volume 102, Number 1
Tuesday, September 10, 1974

VAN'S GIFTS and BOOKS LTD.
282 Princess St.
KINGSTON 542-6676

More & More Super Specials "TRYPIS" Canadian made sandblasted Pipes Regular $11.95; at VAN'S $8.88. Huge selection of "MEER-CHAUM" PIPES Values up to $35.00 each at VAN'S $9.99 Faces & Plain styles. Bent & Straight models complete selection of MACBAREN PIPE TOBACCOS in 702, 402 & 802 sizes.

STORE HOURS OPEN

MON.—FRI. 9:30 a.m. - 10 p.m.
SATURDAY 9:30 a.m. - 9 p.m.
SUNDAY 12:00 - 9 p.m.

UNDERGRADUATE LIBRARY TOURS

EVERY DAY

SEPTEMBER 9-13

9 A.M. - 4.30 P.M.

BRING YOUR GAEI GROUP!

wat's hapnin'?

Movies

Capitol 1- Three the Hard Way
Cast: Jim Brown, Fred Williamson, Jim Kelly, Director: Gordon Parks, Jr.
Black and Violent. Tradedepapers indicate good popularity, and on this basis we give it two and one half stars (rating)

Capitol 2- The Parallax View

Cast: Warren Beatty, Fume Cronyn, Paula Prentiss

Director: Alan J. Pakula
Screen Play: David Giles and Lorenzo Semple TPV is a superspy flick with the spy organization as "villain". Based loosely on the aftermath of John Kennedy's assassination. It appears to be another star vehicle for Warren Beatty. On the other hand Beatty and Prentiss as leads and Pakula as director (Klute, Love, Pain and the Whole Damn Thing) promise good entertainment. Two and one half stars.

Hyland: Bank Shot

Cast: George C. Scott, Clifton James

Director: Gower Champion

Script: Wendell Mayes from a story by Donald Westlake.

Can you imagine a switch on the bank robbery picture? How about swiping the whole damn bank? It is rated as very funny. Two and one half stars.

Odeon:

Dirty Mary Crazy Larry

Cast: Peter Fonda, Susan George, Adam Roarke

Director: John Hough

A car chase picture in the Bullitt tradition, it has been called everything from very good to silly and stupid, but the surprise ending is just great.

Then too, any picture with Susan George, and I suppose Peter Fonda, can't be all bad. Two and one half stars.

Bands

Tuesday: "Noah" in the Pub. 9-12:30

Wednesday: "Noah" in the Pub. 9-12:30

Thursday: "Erie Weissberg and Deliverance" in Grant Hall at 7:00

"Noah" in the Pub. 9-12:30

"Percy and the Teardrops" outdoors at Jeffrey Hall at 10:00

Friday: "Chateaux" in the Pub 9:00

Saturday: "Exit" in the Pub. 9:00

"Creed" in Leonard Hall

"Sleefoot" in Lower Vic

"Seadog and Yukon" in Grant Hall.

Lectures

Tuesday: Dr. David Atherton (Dept. of Engineering Physics)

"Science, the liberal education for the modern society"

Wednesday: Dr. M. K. Schumaker (Dept. of Religion)

"Putting it all together: Religion and ethics in the contemporary university"

All at 7:00 p.m. in Victoria Hall (basement Common room)

Churches

Sunday: 10:30 a.m. - Morning Worship at Chalmers

United Church

10:30 a.m. - Folk Mass Dunning Hall, followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House 164

University Ave.

AMS CONCERTS

PRESENTS

ERIC WEISSBERG and DELIVERANCE

Thursday,

September 12

7:00 p.m.

Tickets John Orr Room

$2:00 Advance

$3:00 At Door

Houses are unavailable

If you are presently occupying a room in residence or living in an off-campus apartment or house close to campus with reasonable rent, you should be smiling. If you are in a room or apartment which is further away, more expensive than you'd like and doesn't quite measure up to the comforts of home, there's a housing problem. For those students who are quite literally homeless and are still seeking accommodation for the coming year, there exists a housing crisis.

The situation is not unique to Queen's; universities across Ontario are experiencing a general shortage of housing and with students returning to classes in the next week or two, the extent of the problem is becoming sadly obvious. Among those universities hardest hit are Guelph, Waterloo and Lakehead, where tent cities have been organized to accommodate students and at the same time publicize their plight. University of Toronto and York seem not to be caught in the crunch, but Ryerson Polytechnical Institute and most Toronto-based community colleges are having problems.

As yet it is difficult to estimate how many students at Queen's have not yet found housing, or how many have had to settle for lodgings far below their expectations. It is also difficult to determine what facilities are to be considered "adequate" or "satisfactory" when the situation has made such labelling so relative. In recent years, the popularity of off-campus rooms has declined drastically with students opting instead for apartment and houses. However, the fewer numbers of such shared accommodations available has caused a demand for rooms and even these are in sorely short supply.

Residences on both main and west campuses, comprising about 4,000 beds, have been full for most of the summer, with a few lucky students at the top of the long waiting lists expected to obtain a place once cancellations and "no shows" are tabulated. The university's married students' apartments at the John Orr Tower on West Campus and the Van Order Drive complex are also booked, with a substantial number of single students in both locations. Elmdon College expects full occupancy; all their vacancies in apartments and shared houses were spoken for as of the beginning of August. Science '44 Co-op, which accommodates just over 200 students, has been booked solid since the spring when advance arrangements were made by returning students. They have been swamped with inquiries and have a lengthy waiting list as well. Approximately 900 Queen's students are Kingston residents living at home, leaving about 4,500 to be accommodated in private off-campus rental accommodation. This number is not substantially up from last year, as the projected enrollment increase is only just over 200; however this is the group which is hardest hit. Relatively high numbers of units available this time last year and high vacancy rates in the spring led many students to believe finding a place would not be difficult.

Many decided not to "lose out" by paying summer rent and now are regretting it. A similar shortage in 1969 prompted increased construction implying the problem is very much a cyclical one, but plans for new building in the Kingston area in the coming year have fallen off, forecasting an even more pessimistic situation next year.

Students who have recently arrived in Kingston and are still looking for a roof over their heads will be all too familiar with the frustrations of the search. Compared to an oversupply of rooms last year, the Queen's Housing Office has very few listings despite an extensive soliciting campaign over the summer through newspaper and television advertising and coverage. Those who have been lining up daily to get the Whig-Standard "hot off the press" will attest to the shortage of ads there as well. As one discouraged student put it, "it's so often a matter of being in the right place at the right time to get a lead on a place, that's what makes it so frustrating."

What's being done? To combat the immediate problem, the University has made arrangements for emergency overnight accommodation in men's and women's residences in both empty available rooms at $3.95 per night and if no rooms are left, $3.00 for cot accommodation in common rooms. John Gray, A.M.S. Vice-President (University Affairs) credits the administration for this "realistic approach to the short-term problem", and disapproves of the drastic actions taken at other universities as sensationalist and overdramatic. This includes the Ontario Federation of Students' support of tent cities as a measure to pressure the government to take action. Gray feels such overdramatization for its own sake will ultimately be damaging to the students' cause in that rents will increase and the situation be taken advantage of. "The issue is an economic one", people don't rent to students to be philanthropic. Gray sees the crunch at Queen's lasting three to four weeks and hopes an appeal to students who are adequately housed, to staff and faculty of Queen's, and to private citizens of Kingston will result in at least temporary lodgings for those still looking, and perhaps an increase in permanent availabilities.

Whether you're lucky this year or are dissatisfied with accommodations or are facing a housing "problem" or even a "crisis" (and the labelling at this point anyway, is strictly relative to personal situations), look out next year. John Richardson, Director of Housing and Property Management at Queen's terms the current problem "manageable", but warns of a REAL crisis next year. In other words, you ain't seen nothing yet, so whatever home sweet home is now, think twice before giving it up in the spring in the hopes of finding something better.

Bus-It may be back this year

"Free" Kingston bus service will probably be available again this year for Queen's students, according to AMS vice-president (Operations) Peter Druxerman. Members of the Public Utilities Commission have tried to call an emergency meeting to approve continuation of Bus-It at an increase over last year of one dollar per student.

If the proposal goes through, there will be no further charge to students outside of the $3 of the Specific Fee they already pay to the AMS. Druxerman mentioned that the AMS would probably hold a lottery to raise the extra $5400, which the University has agreed to loan them.

Last year the AMS contributed $3 towards Bus-It. The university paid for the remaining $2 a head, bringing the total to $5 per student paid to the P.U.C. for the service.

Bell Canada

To Off-Campus Students Special facilities

have been set up at

449 PRINCESS

to personally take your order for telephone service. The office will be open between 8:30 and 5:00

Please drop in and see us! Helen & friends

Grinning as they handle cash and beer, these two clowns are reflected in the shiny surface of the Pub's new bar.

Learn to swim safely the Red Cross way this winter.

Renovated Pub features live entertainment

Live entertainment comes to a freshly painted and renovated Pub during frosh week. An eight speaker stereo sound system may also be in the line-up of improvements to the campus drinking place, according to Pub manager Brian Stirling.

Last year, groups never came to the Pub because the loud music would have disturbed grad students living in the residence behind the Pub, explained Stirling. A compromise has been reached now between Stirling and the grads which will permit groups to play from Monday through Saturday this week and then once a month after September. Stirling agreed with Prof. Gerald McGrath, Director of the Union residence, and Mr. Doug Saunders, manager of the Students Union, to have the group finish playing as close to midnight as possible, to keep the windows facing the residence closed, and to maintain a low level of amplification. "It just takes a little bit of understanding on both sides," remarked Stirling on the solving of the problem.

The $1200 stereo system which will provide music at "ear-splitting level" on the dance floor is almost certainly going to be approved by the AMS, according to Stirling. There is also increased space for dancing due to the removal of several tables and chairs from the room.

Bare red walls and a massive shiny black bar (so huge that it had to be raised by a crane through a window into the Pub) are now featured in the small room off the House of Lords which used to contain a smaller bar and fewer tables. The old bar had too little storage and counter space which caused jam-ups of waitresses when they filled customers' orders. A partition shielding the eyesore of empty beer cases from the drinkers' sight will soon be constructed in one corner of the room.

The live entertainment and other renovations will attract sufficient clientele, Stirling feels, to maintain a profit level of at least 12 per cent this year.

Summer Pub manager Kim Usher had been unable to maintain this profit level which has been made Pub policy by former Pub manager Peter Druxer.

Stirling is striving to appear more approachable to his staff than he feels former managers have been. He wants his waitresses to "try and keep a cheerful attitude" and to perform "quick and efficient service 'with lots of smiles'." "We're up there to sell liquor and do it well," Stirling remarked.

Toronto recording artists Noah are playing in the House of Lords on evenings from Monday to Thursday this week. A Kingston group called Chateau appears on Friday, and Exit from London, England will entertain on Saturday night. All of these groups, which have been selected by the Queen's Entertainment Agency, will begin playing at about 9 p.m.

Why aren't there any tams?

The cost of the traditional Queen's tam has not been included in the Artsci Orientation fee this year, and so individual members of Artsci 78 will make the decision whether to buy the tam.

During this week the tams will be sold in the gael groups and starting next week they will be available in the Campus Bookstore. The selling price will be $4.85.

Commerce and Applied Science Frosh received their tams when they signed in during the weekend.

The gael will be stressing the importance of the tams in Queen's and it is hoped that most of the frosh will buy them.

MOTHER'S

Pizza Parlour

"MORE THAN JUST A PLACE TO EAT!"

MOTHER'S OFFERS SO MUCH

MORE !!!

- *Free neighbourhood delivery.
- *Fast courteous service.
- *Dining room features warm comfortable roaring twenties atmosphere.
- *Our fully dressed pizza includes no less than 8 items

50¢ This coupon entitles you to fifty cents (50 c) off the regular price of any Mother's 8 or 12 slice perfect pizza. Please present the coupon at Mother's Pizza Parlour, or on delivery orders, turn the coupon over to Mother's boy when he calls at your door. This coupon valid until March 31, 1974. Please, just one coupon per order.

MOTHER'S

1 coupon per order please.

455 Princess St.

Call 549-0006

CFRC
am-fm

QUEENSRADIO

CFRC-AM, 1490 and CFRC-FM, 91.9

LISTEN FOR WEEKLY

Golden Gael Football Broadcasts

BEGINNING SAT. SEPT. 14, AT 8:00 P.M.

(QUEEN'S GAELS AT OTTAWA)

LIVE PLAY-BY-PLAY FROM CFRC

THE ARTS AND SCIENCE UNDERGRADUATE SOCIETY

is accepting applications for

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE

- helps update constitutions
- helps run election

Other Events Committee

- run social, cultural, educational events for the upcoming year

No experience necessary - applications from 1st year students invited

Call Sue 544-8583 or John 546-7018

Centre helps foreign students

by Steve Gareau

About seventy newly arrived foreign students took part in various activities as the Queen's foreign student orientation program swung into gear on Wednesday, September 4th. The program is designed to help the students better integrate themselves into Canadian society.

Under the direction of Mr. Kaspar Pold, the Centre's operations manager, this year's program offered information sessions during the day for the students as well as informal get-togethers in the evening. Talks were given by Pold on topics including housing, immigration, health services, finances, economics of living in Kingston and Canadian social customs. Each day the students were served lunch and dinner courtesy of the International Centre. On Friday, the students were guided on a walking tour of the campus in the morning and then taken on a car tour of Kingston and its outskirts in the afternoon. In the evening, the International Club sponsored a smoker for the students in the Centre's Lower Lounge. Then on Saturday, a boat tour of the Thousand Islands area was provided and after the cruise, the Rotary Club welcomed the students to Canada at a reception in Gananoque. On Sunday, the cottages were taken up to Pold's cottage on Grapen Lake. As a finale to this year's program, a weekend bus trip is planned for September 27-29 to Toronto, Niagara Falls and Hamilton.

Beyond the orientation, the International Centre provides a wide range of services throughout the year to help the students during their first year in Canada. It is also there as a meeting place with an informal, relaxed atmosphere where Canadian and foreign students may come and express themselves in a wide range of academic, social and cultural activities.

Registration info

It appears as if Registration 1974-75 will not be different from last year's operation. Mr. Leech, the Registrar, sees no changes in plan as last year's procedures worked so well. However, an attempt will be made to cut down registration time even more.

In the separate faculties there have been no drastic differences in enrollment. However, the total enrollment is up about two hundred students over last year, making this year's enrollment the highest ever. The overall enrollment figure is approximately 9,400 students for 1974-75.

Registration for first year students in the faculty of Arts and Sciences will occur in the Arena (Division Street door) on September 12, 12:30 p.m. to 3:00 p.m. and September 13, 9:00 a.m. through to 12 noon. Upper year students will register in the Arena (Union Street door) from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 on September 18 and 19.

First year students in the School of Business will register on September 12, 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. in the Arena (Division Street door). Registration for first year Applied Science students will also take place on September 12, 9:00 a.m. to 12 noon in the Arena, however at the Union Street door.

First year students in Nursing and in the School of Rehabilitation Therapy will register in the Arena (Division Street door) on September 12, 12:00 noon to 12:30 p.m.

More information on registration may be obtained from Richardson Hall. Also, there are detailed posters on registration up around campus that contain a complete listing of dates and times for all students.

Journal wants you

Believe it or not, the Pub's not the only place to find the action. Even though the Pub's beer is cheap (50c is a pretty good bargain), there are other (and even better) good times to be found. There's the Queen's Journal!

So you want to be an editor... We're looking for anyone interested in writing, cartooning, photographing, humouring and even section editing. Press nites happen on Sunday and Wednesday nights so if you want to submit something to be printed, the deadline is Friday or Monday afternoons. If you want to find where the action is, drop in any weekday. We're located in the basement of the Student's Union, at the end of the maze (two floors below the Pub).

Vol. 102, No. 1
Tues., Sept. 10, 1974

Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor.
Editors-in-Chief: Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager: Terry Collins
Managing Editor: Dan McClelland

News Editor: Sarah Yarnell
Features Editor: Wendy Reynolds
Entertainment: Kerry White
Photography: John Bellemey, John Wilmer, Keith Bourns, Bob Marlon Contributors: Barb Nyland, Steve Gareau, Laurie Gibson, Pam Ridgeway, Mary Bloos, Booner, John Solman and Woodrow.
Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (413) 547-2684. Printed by Onyx at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

WE WON'T B.S. YOU

WE'VE SIMPLY GOT THE LOWEST PRICES ON THE GEAR YOU NEED

FAMOUS BRAND NAME CLOTHING

JEANS, JACKETS, SWEATERS, SKIRTS, SHIRTS, SHRINKS, PANTS, OUTERWEAR, UNDERWEAR — WE'VE GOT IT ALL

PLUS

FOOTWEAR — Dress shoes, casual shoes, joggers

LINENS AND BEDDING INCLUDING FOAM SLABS

COOKWARE AND HOUSEHOLD SUPPLIES

HEALTH AND BEAUTY AIDS

SPORTING GOODS

PAINT AND PAINT SUPPLIES

KINGSTON'S
FAMOUS
BARGAIN HOUSE!

27 Princess Street
at Ontario

Free Parking - Chargex

Dover's

FOR YOUR

OFFICIAL

QUEEN'S ARTSCI JACKETS

QUEEN'S SWEATSHIRTS

QUEEN'S T-SHIRTS

109 PRINCESS ST.

HOUSE OF SOUNDS

KINGSTON'S LARGEST & FINEST AUDIO & RECORD SHOP

WE HAVE A HUGE SELECTION OF MANY OF THE FINEST NAMES IN SOUND EQUIPMENT

AMPEX

SHURE

Panasonic
just slightly ahead of our time

Dual

SENNHEISER

TDK

KLH

DUNACO

BASF

TOSHIBA

COME INTO
HOUSE OF SOUNDS

&
LOOK THROUGH KINGSTON'S LARGEST SELECTION OF

CLASSICAL & ROCK
ALBUMS & TAPES

- THIS WEEK'S SPECIALS

CHICAGO II	5. <sup>99</sup>
CHICAGO V	3. <sup>97</sup>
CHICAGO VI	3. <sup>97</sup>
CHICAGO VII	7. <sup>99</sup>

ALL ALBUMS BY MOODY BLUES

$3.<sup>97</sup> each TAPES $4.<sup>67</sup>

ALL ALBUMS by THE BEATLES
(including all solo albums by LENNON, McCARTNEY, HARRISON, STARR)

$2.<sup>80</sup> per disc

Single tapes $4.<sup>67</sup>
Twin Packs $7.<sup>94</sup>

TEAC
The leader. Always has been.

PIONEER

SAE
Scientific Audio Electronics, Inc.

YAMAHA

NORESCO

Technics
by Panasonic

ELECTROHOME

X

JBL

Sherwood

277 PRINCESS ST.

HOUSE OF SOUNDS

544-3981

Editorial

Why?...It's Tradition

For any student newly descended on campus, orientation week brings together the two factors that have essentially kept Queen's alive since 1841... Spirit and tradition.

The Scottish tradition, has maintained a strong link through Queen's history and even now provides the backbone to much of our orientation. "Tams, the tribal cantations of Oil Thigh, the name of Ban Righ Hall House of Queen's, the killed pipe band, the Scottish dancers at football games," are all reminiscent of tradition.

Behind the tradition is the spirit that perpetuates it. It's a cheer-ra-ra spirit and its also the spirit that turns itself into pride - a pride in the University.

But it's not only the tradition and spirit that have been important to Queen's. The mark of the University has been its long-standing academic excellence. This has provided Queen's with its consistently increasing enrolments when all other Ontario Universities found themselves at a loss for applicants.

This year, Queen's was the only University to fill its enrolment quota. With stipulations made to keep a tight control on the increase of enrolment, students found more difficulty than ever before in obtaining a place.

Still another aspect of Orientation Week is the sense of continuity that it brings. Fresh this year, Gaels the next year. "The more things change, the more they stay the same". It's so true at Queen's.

About the Queen's Journal

This issue kicks off the beginning of the Journal's second century of publication, having reached the age of one hundred last year.

And it has come a long way during the last century. The first issue featured a poem about God and jewels. Of course, its purpose then was to "foster a literary taste among students, and to afford them an opportunity to give expression to their opinions on the leading topics of the day".

It doesn't sound like the Journal of today, nor the Queen's of today. Except for seven, Journal's magazine of the arts, literature (with the exception of purple prose) has disappeared from the Journal's pages. Page one poems are reserved for days when we're really short of material.

And opinions... it seems that students don't have time for them any more... are now mainly confined to editorials and letters.

During it all, the Journal was always getting into trouble for something. In the early 50's it was attacked by the Dean of Women for publishing stories and drawings which were "insulting to the ideas of women." Student politicians have always bitched... either the Journal published too little or too much about them. One Journal editor even had the audacity to suggest for whom one should vote in an AMS election.

Over the years, the Journal has seemed to reflect the general ambience of the campus. In the 30's and the 40's, dances were the big thing on campus. The page one headlines then gave the name of the hand for coming formal and the starting football lineups. When activism came into vogue in the 60's, the Journal pushed a tent-in on Summerhill lawn to protest the lack of student housing.

As activism died out, a sheep graced at the top of the editorial page to symbolize the lack of student concern with anything and everything. One week the editors found things so bad they replaced the sheep... with a pig.

Fortunately the Journal

doesn't take itself seriously all the time... how else could you explain Superman on the front page?

At other times, it is dead serious. Two years ago it blasted around the province the story that rehab students were no longer being paid their starvation stipend of $37.50 for summer work in hospitals. Copies of the issue circulated around Queen's Park and a few politicians wished the Journal hadn't decided to publish that summer.

ATTENTION STUDENTS

WE SPECIALIZE IN GOOD USED AND UNFINISHED FURNITURE AT REASONABLE PRICES AT OUR ANNEX STORE AT THE Corner of King and Barrack St.

546-5557

Abramsky
AND SONS LTD.

KINGSTON'S LARGEST DEPARTMENT STORE

THE ARTS AND SCIENCE UNDERGRADUATE SOCIETY

WELCOMES

the class of

ARTSCI '78

JOE AND PAUL'S

CORNER OF PRINCESS ST. AND MONTREAL

WELCOME FRESHMAN

WE HAVE A GREAT SELECTION OF LEE, LEVI'S, HOWICK, G.W.G., LANDBUBBER, AND H.I.S.

LET'S GET AQUAINTED

Rooms - Downtown

All of our rooms have been redecorated and have new wall to wall broadloom. Each room has a washbasin and telephone. We are installing cable T.V. There are new showers and washrooms on each floor. These rooms are available for rent to Queen's students for the entire year. References required.

Rates are $90.00 for a single and $120.00 for a double per month. (Chamber maid service)

Hotel Frontenac

178-188 Ontario St.
Tel. 544-6881

Your hosts
Anne and Brendan McConnell

Orientatin week

Running the whole gammit

ACADEMIC RESEARCH LIBRARY

Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date,
176-page, mail order catalog
of 5500 topics. Enclose
$1.00 to cover postage (1-2 days delivery time).
519 GLENROCK AVE.
SUITE #203
LOS ANGELES, CA. 90024
Our materials are sold for research purposes only

THINKING OF GETTING INVOLVED?
THE QUEEN'S
JOURNAL
NEEDS HELP
DROP BY ON "PRESS" NIGHTS
SUNDAY & WEDnesday to the Journal office in the basement of the Student Union

GAY?

QUEEN'S HOMOPHILE
ASSOCIATION

Call TERRY WATSON
547-2836

MON-THURS. 8-9 p.m. or write to

STUDENT AFFAIRS CENTRE
51 QUEEN'S CR.
c/o TERRY WATSON

IF YOU DON'T KNOW A CARAT
FROM A CANTALOUPE,
CULTIVATE US FOR DIAMOND ADVICE.

Don't despair if your diamond knowledge is sparse. Diamonds are measured in carat weight.
The more carats, the bigger the diamond.
But a large diamond isn't necessarily the finest.
You must be sure it is clear and expertly cut.
But what you really need to know... is a reputable jeweller. You can trust his knowledge of diamonds, and his pledge to advise and satisfy you.

KINNEAR d'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

HEADLINES

253 PRINCESS ST.
UNISEX HAIRSTYLING
COME IN FOR YOUR NEW FALL STYLES
No Appointment necessary

Roll out those lazy crazy hazing days frosh week

So, you're a first year plunger and you're upset because your arms to your elbows are going to look like something from a science fiction movie from now until Commencement. You're in Commerce, and if anyone else calls you twinkle toes, you're going to throw up. And let's hear it, artsci frosh, one more Oil Thigh and you'll die in a fit of apoplexy.
Well, let us tell ya you've come a long way, baby.

The old orientation, initiation, hazing, call-it-what-you-will (just don't let your free hear you call it that - you know only too well what he'll make you do) has been around since Queen's had grass instead of lockstone. So, in an attempt to make you feel at home and build up a sense of kinship with the ghosts of frosh past, we at the Journal proudly present a look at hazing through the years.

Since Queen's has been a fledgling school, way back there in the early 1800's, the reception given the frosh has been intentionally cruel and unusual punishment. Sometimes more cruel than unusual.
Mostly more unusual than cruel. In the early days, frosh were treated (only rightly so, we hasten to interject) as the scum of the earth. The smugly superior seniors, notably the sophs, were in charge of putting the weak-kneed newcomers through their paces. Being but slightly removed from the humiliations suffered as a first-year unfortunate, the second-year sadists were only too eager to inflict bigger and better tortures upon their subordinates.

Of course, each succeeding year tried to outdo the previous one in terms of devising ingenious methods of instilling horror and fear in the hearts and souls of the unsuspecting freshman. Sound like it was building to terrors unknown in Nazi Germany? It was. The over-zealous sophs stopped at little short of the rack in their inventions. With little or no external control over these infant de Sade's, frosh could but submit or be hung by the yardarm at dawn.

Finally, the hazing reached such ludicrous, if not downright harmful proportions that those who looked after such things abolished physical initiation.
Of course, each potential frosh was down on bended knee, offering up prayers to the gods that be for a timely delivery from such a cruel fate. However, the unfortunate effect of this (in the seniors' eye anyway) was that initiation, by the early 1900's, had been almost totally eliminated, leaving only a "few mild regulations" governing the frosh. Heaven only knows what they meant by a "few mild regulations" though. Probably that the new guys were only tarred instead of tarred and feathered.

less physical

By 1928, the rules and regulations for hazing and what a frosh did or did not have to submit to were clearly outlined in the AMS constitution. But, you ask, did this mean that hazing was much less strenuous? To which we reply, fat chance, kid.

Natch, each freshman was supplied with a copy of his constitutional rights. Theoretically to protect the innocent. Actually to ensure that there were no violations of the unalterable code - on the part of the frosh, of course, silly. We sincerely hope that he read the fine print. All offenders were responsible to the AMS court and could be brought to trial for failure to comply. Great way to make you feel at home.

So, let's take a mind's journey back to the good old autumn of '29. You arrive at Queen's with palpitating heart, un mindful of the lurking monsters masquerading in the guise of upperclassmen.
ah, the innocence of youth. There's a big meeting in Grant Hall shortly after you arrive. Good, you say to yourself, a chance to meet everybody. Gosh, you say to yourself, sure hope they're a bunch of swell fellas. What's this, though, attendance at the meeting is absolutely compulsory? Well, you think, looking only at the bright side, a good way to make sure everybody goes. Little do you know, you poor innocent, this is but one teeny indication of that which awaits.

Okay, so there you are, sitting on the floor of dear old Grant, more than slightly intimidated by the numbers of assured and sophisticated seniors surrounding you on every side. What's that guy up at the front saying anyway? Can he be serious? Yes, he not only can be, he is. He's laying down the law, he's telling you exactly what you must and must not do for your duration as a "lowerclassman."

You learn that no "fussing" is allowed from now until after the Christmas exams. What the Hell is fussing, you query. Oh NO! Absolutely no dating is what it means. You presumably earn the privilege by writing your first set of university exams. Jeep, by that time you're going to be so frustrated that you'll have to be committed to an asylum.

And that guy up at the front is still yakking.

Lord, you think, do I want to listen to any more?
Probably not. Because you learn immediately that you have to wear your tam and your faculty ribbons in a conspicuous place every day all day (wait a minute, not Sundays) until January. Oh great, after January first, you only have to wear them from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. every day. Oh yes, except Sunday.
Praise be for small mercies.

Can this be all? No way, kiddo. There are more rules which (thankfully) last only the week. Whew.
Now you are informed that you have to buy a faculty umbrella at your own expense - what else? - and carry it open and in full view - how else? - for the week. Sidewalks are out of bounds to the likes of you. You must use the cinder walks when moving from building to building. Compassion is shown by the magnanimous sophs however. On rainy days you can use the real sidewalks, the ones used by the real people. But you walk in single file. With your luck, it'll be as dry as the Sahara desert all week. Of course you are at the mercy of the whims of the big

hazing continued

guys. If they want their cigarettes lit, you light 'em, no delay. If their shoe laces need tying, guess who gets the dubious honour of righting the situation.
And so on.

So you plod through the year, branded eternally it seems as frosh. But eventually you hit the big time and you're a soph! Magical transformation.
How soon they forget. The atrocities inflicted upon them in first year become as nought as they turn around and do the same thing to the frosh of '30. Oh, the vindictive streak in human nature.

The likes of such continued throughout the '30's and '40's. The no fussing rule was by times repealed, then reinstated. You could attend Formal Dances and Church Receptions with a fair freshette, but that was about it. Attendance at all Rugby and hockey games was mandatory, as a unit.
If found in a "beer parlour", the frosh had to provide one beer for every senior in the place. It's a cinch they all hung out in these places of dubious repute, lurking and waiting to pounce like vultures.
No freshman was allowed out and about on the streets past 10 p.m. And you had to be clean shaven at all times.

Now a word about the women. There was a special initiation for all freshettes under the jurisdiction of the big sister society known as Levana. Bearing the distinguishing marks of her freshetthood, the women were often compelled to wear masculine attire. Either that, or they were turned out in large green bows around the ankles, giant aprons tied with green bows, one hand encased with a green glove, carrying giant fruit baskets painted green. Cute, eh? Some choice. Take your pick.

That wasn't all. Like their brothers, there were sundry other little duties which they were privileged to perform. Give us a for instance, you demand, you brute for punishment, you. Well, let us tell you. They had to hold doors open for, pass salt to and rise at the approach of the all-powerful seniors.
Nor could they accept any dates. Such was the lot of the lowly freshette.

less imposing

But a new dawn was breaking. The term of 1949 and '50 hailed as the "first real post-war year". It saw the introduction of the "frosh reception" committee. The frosh were shown around the campus by the sophs and activities to make the frosh actually feel comfortable were planned. This became known as the Vigilante Committee.

Although the old tradition of instilling inter-faculty rivalry was still a feature of the initiation, frosh were treated similarly regardless of faculty.
As the student population of Queen's grew, this changed. Separate initiations for Arts, Science and Pre-Meds became the fashion. The Vigilante Committee, for example, with the sophs known as Vigs, came to be responsible solely for Arts frosh.

The "Hell Week" in 1956 saw the Artsmen armed with shoe brushes, giant identification badges, and quarter inch hair cuts out for early morning rises, serenading the women's residence. The science frosh ended their week of fun and frolics in '56 with the climbing of the now-legendary grease pole. That year they had it good, there was no gooey, slimy pit to wade through. The intention was that if the frosh could remove the tam from the top of the 20 foot, well-greased pole in less than 2 minutes, the wearing of tams would be discontinued. An Olympian feat at best. The final time was over 8 minutes.

The next year saw the first attempts at inaugurating orientation in academic matters. And more changes were underway. By the mid-sixties, the orientations of the faculties were entirely separate. Participation in any part of the program became entirely voluntary in Arts and Science.
Hazing in the faculty was especially toned down.
Although still in evidence, it was directed towards the frosh as a group rather than as an individual.
Groups became known as gael groups with an ever-changing number of frosh and leaders. As initiation programmes became orientation programmes, more organization and preparation for the hoardes of frosh to descend upon the campus were undertaken.

The engineering faculty decided to retain initiation as opposed to orientation. This "traditional" approach is the only one encouraging much of the old inter-faculty rivalry. Commerce initiation also follows the route of more physical hazing.

The concept of initiation and orientation is constantly under fire. It always has been, which is why so many changes have been instituted over the years. So complain away comfortable in the knowledge that yours is not a solitary plight.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 9 AM TO MIDNIGHT

George Bailey
sporting goods
40 Prince Street K7L 1A4
Tel. 613-542-2292
TENNIS: WILSON, SLAZINGER, DUNLOP, PATRICK TENNIS SHOES, CONVERSE
ALL STARS.
PACKS: EVERYTHING FROM MINI TO EXPEDITION SIZE
SKI EQUIPMENT: NORDICA BOOTS, VOLKL
AND ATOMIC SKIS, SKI CLOTHING AND ACCESSORIES
10% OFF TO QUEEN'S STUDENTS
ON NON-SALE ITEMS

Randy Lee's
TAKE HOME STORE
842 PRINCESS ST.
544-9244

FRIED CHICKEN
BURGERS

Monday to Saturday 10 a.m. - 10 p.m. Closed Sundays.
Delivers anywhere within its limits extra - and - Delivery outside
City limits slightly extra.

ARTSCI '78 ELECTIONS
WILL BE HELD ON TUESDAY SEPT. 17, 1974
AT 7:30 p.m. IN
STERLING "D" (PHYSICS BUILDING)

ANYONE INTERESTED IN RUNNING FOR THE POSITION OF PRESIDENT, VICE PRESIDENT,
SECRETARY, 1ST YEAR REP TO ASUS,
TREASURER, MALE OR FEMALE ATHLETIC STICK, SOCIAL CONVENOR OR PUBLICITY REP IS IN-VITED TO CONTACT LESLIE MACLEOD AT 544-1548
FOR ANY ADDITIONAL INFORMATION.

Duncan Kerr Men's Shop Is Selling Out! Quitting Business.

WE HAVE:

QUEEN'S SWEAT SHIRTS. "PENMANS" LONG
AND SHORT SLEEVE - ON SALE 3.99 EA.
QUEEN'S T-SHIRTS-WHITE-NAVY-SALE 2.99 EA.
QUEEN'S WINDBREAKERS-SALE 11.99 EA.
QUEEN'S UMBRELLAS-SALE 6.99 EA.
QUEEN'S SCARVES-SALE 5.99 EA.
"ROADRUNNER JEANS-SALE 10.00 PR.

350 PRINCESS ST. (LDDK FOR YELLDW-RED SIGNS)

Duncan Kerr Men's Shop

talk to a prof..
have a beer.....

at the

ACADEMIC PUBS

TUESDAY SEPT. 10 8 pm - 1
5 LOCATIONS ON CAMPUS

CHECK UNCLASSIFIEDS FOR FURTHER DETAILS

"Not just any ol' dance"

GRANT HALL - SEA DOG
- YUKON

LOWER VIC. - SLEW FOOT

LEONARD CAF. - CREED

LEONARD REC. ROOM - HONKY TONK

SAT. SEPT. 14, 1974 8 PM. - 1 AM. $2.00

TICKETS ON SALE FOR UPPER CLASSMEN ON THURSDAY

QUEEN'S PUB

The Queen's Pub is now open at noon all FROSH week and in the evening till 1 A.M.

Groups will be there every evening as entertainment

Beer $0.50
Liquor $0.60

Brian Sterling - Pub Manager

Campus comment: what the frosh say...

What do the members of the class of '78 think of Queen's? What were their first impressions of the university and their orientation programmes? The Journal interrupted a number of freshmen on Sunday afternoon to see what they had to say.

Cecilia Callaghan (Artsci): I really like the spirit. Everyone seems to be having fun. People are really helpful, giving you lots of information.

Roger Dickhout (Science): I'm looking forward to most of the week and the events that will take place. One thing about the engineers' orientation is that it gives you something to rebel against.

Dori Mueller (Artsci): Orientation is great - it really makes you feel part of Queen's. I didn't expect it to be so good, or to see so many second and third year students.

Ian Miller (Science): If Science 77 survives this week, so can Science 78. We'll be a real class when we're finished.

The Journal attempted, unsuccessfully, to speak to these Commerce freshmen, but the supervising boss explained that they were not in a position to be interviewed.

Journal (to Science freshman): What do you think of Orientation so far?
Free: Say you're having fun, frosh.
Lloyd Peterson: I'm having fun.
(end of interview)

Barbara Devitt (Nursing): I don't know what to say. Everything's so big. You'll have to excuse me, I have to do another oil thigh. I don't even know how to come back in a month and ask me then.

Cindy Whitley (Phys. Ed.): I'm enjoying it, and I wouldn't have missed it, but you get sick of oil thighs. They're trying to make fools of us, but it's fun.

544-1227
PIZZA CHALET
PIZZA AND ITALIAN DISHES
TAKE OUT ORDER AND DELIVERY
359 PRINCESS ST.

LIBRARY TOURS FOR GRADUATE STUDENTS
SEPTEMBER 9-13
9 A.M. - 4:30 P.M.
DROP INTO DOUGLAS LIBRARY
OR
PHONE 547-6637

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN MUSIC AND WORK AMS CONCERTS
REQUIRES
PEOPLE FOR POSITIONS AS TICKET SALES MANAGER
TECHNICAL MANAGER
PROMOTIONS MANAGER
HOUSE MANAGER
FINANCIAL MANAGER
PLEASE SEND RESUMES AND APPLICATIONS
TO DAVE FINLAY
OR RICHARD HAMM
QUEEN'S ENTERTAINMENT AGENCY

The Journal was unable to interview this Science freshtette properly. Her only comment was "Beep flash... beep flash... I am a lighthouse... beep flash..."

Lynn Bulmer (Commerce): I think I prefer the things we have to do to what the engineers go through.

Kathy Dorton (Rehab): So far I've found Queen's to be a really fun place. Everyone is very friendly. I think I'll like it.

The Queen's Journal loves frosh

...and especially those who would like to volunteer their services to this highly working organization. A Lois Lane or Clark Kent would be just perfect, but we'll settle for You. We can't promise you the fast pace, jet setting of a big time paper but we can guarantee greasy food at 4:14 am, a headache at 8:30 the next morning and an overpowering sense of satisfaction for a job well done.

256 PRINCESS ST.

WE  MOVED

TREMBLAY'S MUSIC STORE 274 PRINCESS

"NEVER A DULL MOMENT" ROD STEWART

$1.97

BEACH BODYS
"SURFER GIRL"
"GODD VIBRATIONS"
BOTH L.P.'S

$2.79

BACHMAN
TURNER
OVERDRIVE
"NOT FRAGILE"
REG. $7.98

SALE $3.79

SOUND TRACK
THE STING

$4.97

NEW EMERSON
LAKE & PALMER
DOUBLE L.P.

$9.97

LIGHTHOUSE
GODD DAY

$3.97

ERIC CLAPTON
"461 OCEAN BLVD"

$4.47

GORDON
LIGHTFOOT
"SUNDOWN"

$4.97

TCHAIKOVSKY
"NUTCRACKER SUITE"
"ROMED & JULIET"

DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON
LABER WOULD YOU
BELIEVE .99

MANY MANY MORE SPECIALS

GIBSON
DOVE COPIES
REG. $95.00

$84.50

FLUTES
BY LAFLEUR

$175.00

WITH CASE

MUSIC LESSONS ON MOST INSTRUMENTS
ALL STYLES

549-2525

GIULIO YAMAHA EPIPHONE GIBSON GUITARS

SINCE LAST YEAR TREMBLAY'S HAVE BECOME KINGSTON'S LARGEST MUSIC STORE. THIS WAS DUE MAINLY THROUGH THE SUPPORT OF YOU, THE STUDENT AND VALUED CUSTOMER. IF YOU HAVE NEVER BEEN IN OUR STORE, THE SERVICE IS FRIENDLY, THE PRICES ARE GREAT AND OUR GUITARS ARE FINGER PICKIN' GOOD.

The sports pyramid

by Chris Boon

As most of the incoming students are probably aware, Queen's has a long and generally glorious athletic tradition that stretches back into the dim mists around the turn of the century. Since the inception of organized intercollegiate sports, Queen's teams, both men's and women's, have been consistent contenders, and in some cases (football in the middle sixties, for example) have attained almost dynastic heights. However, what many newcomers to the Queen's community may not be aware of is the depth and breadth of the athletic programs which are offered, not to the intercollegiate athlete, but to the student body at large.

The broad base of this athletic pyramid is the recreation program, which offers inexpensive instruction in a wide range of Sports Skills classes, stressing carry-over activities such as swimming, squash, tennis and jogging and fitness, and helps to finance recreational athletic clubs for everything from Archery to Yoga, depending on the interests expressed by student groups.

These clubs provide an opportunity for everyone to participate in a non-competitive or minimally competitive environment, where there is no pressure to perform other than that imposed by an individual upon his or herself. Coupled with the availability of one of the finest activity complexes in the country, this program means there is no excuse for anyone to complain of inactivity.

A step up from this program, both in the general level of skill and in the degree of competitiveness which generally prevails, are the intramural programs, which offers a variety of team and individual sports in separate men's and women's competitions. The men's program, a long-standing Queen's tradition that features competition amongst a variety of year and discipline groups for the coveted Bews trophy, can be intensely competitive, especially in the team sports like flag football, hockey, basketball and water polo. On the other hand, the women's program, while providing competitive opportunities in basketball, flag football, and volleyball, as well as a number of individual events, stresses more participation, as with their Jogathon program, and offers a number of co-ed events during the year as well. Although the women's intramural program has not been in operation as long as the Bews competition, it has attracted increasing numbers of Queen's women in the past couple of years, and seems to be headed for a level of success comparable with that enjoyed by the men.

Finally, at the top of the pyramid, are the men's and women's Intercollegiate programs. Queen's offers one of the most comprehensive intercollegiate programs on the North American continent, especially as far as women are concerned. Queen's fields no less than 18 women's varsity teams and three intermediate squads, while the men compete in 20 varsity and one intermediate teams. Almost 600 athletes are directly involved in these programs, and every year Queen's reaps the benefits of their efforts in the form of good publicity and a visible presence.

Comedy Tonight

Humor opens season

To inaugurate the new academic year, the Queen's Department of Drama is presenting COMEDY TONIGHT!, a hilarious bill highlighting some of the best British humour of the twentieth century.

The evening begins with "Dark Lady of the Sonnets", a delightfully witty farce by George Bernard Shaw. Combining the renowned Shavian with a plot full of surprising twists and broad comic devices, "Dark Lady" is a tremendously clever sex comedy of mistaken identity.

The first act continues with five Revue Sketches by Harold Pinter. Most famous for his more serious pieces, Pinter proves in these short vignettes that he's not only a terrifically accurate observer of English life, but also that he's attune to the occasionally ribald to the occasionally poignant, but always funny little moments that occur when we drop our guard and reveal our frailties.

The evening concludes with an excerpt from "Private Lives" by Noel Coward. Its sharp witty dialogue and sound sexual psychology have made this one of the most entertaining and frequently revived high comedies of the century.

Overall COMEDY TONIGHT! tries to capture the many moods of great contemporary British comedy. The gamut runs from high to low, from slapstick to sophisticated repartee, but in the end we realize that we're laughing at our own frailties and foibles.

The plays are directed by Bernard Burkom and designed by Russ Waller. The cast includes some of Queen's and Kingston's favourite performers — Norma Edwards, Carolyn Hetherington, David Kemp, Rod Robertson, Russ Waller, Pat Northcott, Chris Cunningham, and Barbara Edwards.

COMEDY TONIGHT! runs Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, September 19, 20 and 21 in Convocation Hall on Queen's Campus. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. Tickets are available at the Department of Drama, 547-6291, or at the door. Admission is free, but a silver collection will be taken.

FINLAY'S SPORT SHOP

PRESENTS

A SPECIAL COUPON SALE
FOR ALL RETURNING STUDENTS

$3.00 off
any TENNIS
RAQUET

$2.00 OFF ANY
PR. OF ADIDAS,
PUMA, TRETORN
OR TIGER SHOES

50¢ OFF ANY
CAN OF TENNIS BALLS

$2.00 OFF ON LABOUR FOR RESTRINGING
RAQUETS

THESE COUPONS ARE VALID UNTIL OCT. 1ST AND THE COUPON VALUE WILL BE TAKEN OFF SALES PRICES.
COUPON MUST BE PRESENTED WITH PURCHASE

ALSO SPECIAL PRICES ON SKIS, BOOTS and BINDINGS

"ARE YOUR TIPS UP?"

BELIEVE IT OR NOT we actually have 2 excellent brick homes for sale within easy walking distance of Queen's, priced right. For details call Bill Parish, representative for Ross, McMahon Real Estate 544-5568 or 389-2822.

FEMALE ROOMMATE wanted - spacious 2 bedroom apartment on bus route. Phone 542-5308.

URGENTLY NEEDED: one bed and desk at reasonable price. Call Duncan at 544-5166 as soon as possible as the floor is rather hard. WANTED - one female student to share 3 bedroom apartment with two others. Location 210 Colbourne St. Please phone 544-5766.

OUR SPRING & SUMMER waiting list has been discontinued, make sure your on our fall and winter list. If you are still interested in Science '44 Co-op, re-apply by phoning 542-5205 or 544-4506 before Sept. 19th.

TIRED OF HEARING the same old line? "Sorry but you're 2001 on the waiting list". Get on Science '44's all new list. Phone 542-5205 or 544-4506 and re-apply now.

WELCOME TO ALL those lucky people who are living in Science '44 Co-op. Don't forget to register for winter co-op. Bring money.

IF YOU WANT to find out about Life Sciences come to the Academic Pub Tuesday night in Wallace Hall. For Fine Arts, visit the Gordon Common Room.

WANT TO DISCUSS language courses? There's an Academic Pub for you on Tuesday night in Brockington Common Room. There is a Pub for Social Sciences too, in Leonard Hall.

IF YOU ARE wondering about genealogy, geography, math, physics or commerce the place to go to is the Pub in lower Vic.

FEELING LEFT OUT of Orientation just because your an Upper Classman? Pick an appropriate Academic Pub and you'll be welcome.

Nuclear armament: a vicious circle

At this moment there are six countries in the world who have nuclear power and at least two dozen more who have the economic and scientific resources to manufacture nuclear weapons. Nuclear technology and resources have become so plentiful that the desire to become a nuclear power is almost all that any country lacks. The Strategic Arms Limitations talks which Russia and the United States have been holding for the past four years have been to no avail. There has been no reduction in production of atomic arsenals of either country.

No depression foreseen

A consensus has emerged among U.S. economic experts at the first of a dozen sessions leading to President Gerald Ford's September 27-28 summit conference on inflation that a depression is unlikely to develop in the United States, but that output is apt to be sluggish over the next 18 months. A number of conference participants called for a gradual easing of the Federal Reserve Board's tight money policy that has produced record high interest rates. Also recommended was serious consideration of a public service employment program. Although many delegates opposed wage-price controls and other guidelines, there was some agreement on increased monitoring by the new Council of Wage and Price Stability. President Ford stated his hopes for the conference: "These meetings are not going to be empty exercises in economic rhetoric. Neither are they going to reveal any quick miracles. There is no quick fix for what ails our economy."

power when it best suits their welfare. These are small but highly volatile nations such as Bangladesh, Venezuela and Portugal.

Before India joined the ranks of nuclear powered nations last May there was a naive belief that no other nations would develop a nuclear weapon because of moral restraints. This belief has been shattered. Although India insists that the nuclear power will be used for peaceful purposes only, the world is reluctant to believe this and India's neighbours are becoming nervous enough to wish nuclear armament for themselves.

The mushrooming of nuclear power has been inhibited by the scarcity of U-235 and P-239, the fissionable material necessary for the chain reaction, and the expense of enriching the uranium isotope. A new and less expensive enrichment process will soon allow smaller nations to produce U-235 suitable for nuclear fission.

If these advances in nuclear technology are not enough, the experts have even more to be worried about. The artificial byproduct of nuclear fission within the power generator is becoming increasingly abundant. This byproduct is plutonium or P-239, the other fissionable material which can be used for the chain reaction. The most frightening conjecture which can be made is that by 1980 there will be one million pounds of P-239 within the industry throughout the world—less than twenty-two pounds can destroy a medium sized city.

Despite the nuclear spectre hanging over us, there has been only one attempt to limit the development of nuclear arsenals.

In 1968, 84 nations signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, which required its members to agree to neither give away their nuclear weapons nor to aid any other country in their production. If the signing country was non-nuclear, it agreed not to accept nuclear weaponry or to manufacture it. This treaty was not signed however by all nations, and there is no guarantee that those who have signed will not suddenly withdraw. What the Soviet Union and The United States had hoped would be a stopping of nuclear armament development has clearly failed.

Number of rotten eggs still growing

Another 5 million eggs have been wasted because they were stored too long by the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency. This makes a total of 14 million and the number is still growing. The egg freezing and drying trade is finding between 10 and 30 per cent rotten eggs in old stock from CEMA. And 5 to 10 per cent of the eggs are rotten in 30,000 cases of 15 dozen each currently being regraded in Ontario on Canada Department of Agriculture orders. CEMA sold old stock at purchasers' risk last month, at a price low enough to make the purchase profitable, despite present waste. It will be about three weeks before all regrading will be accomplished, and waste totalled. CEMA is encountering problems fulfilling the Agriculture Department detention order — it could find only one regrading station to do its work in Ontario this week. Other stations stated that they did not want their plants contaminated by the bacteria in the high percentage of rot expected in the old stock. But faced with the emergency, four other egg stations have agreed to join the operation this week.

CEMA's supply of eggs resulted when it set too high a price last year, encouraging overproduction and discouraging consumption. All regular egg storages were soon full and temporary storage was often so poor that eggs spoiled in a matter of weeks.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, in a recent interview, repeated his support of the principle behind CEMA — controlling production and market prices for eggs so that producers are guaranteed a profit.

Farmers irate

About 1000 prairie farmers have expressed anger at the way the Government has dealt with the Vancouver grain handlers' strike. These farmers are among those who responded to a survey conducted by United Grain Growers Ltd. Almost 90 per cent of the returned questionnaires indicate dissatisfaction with the Government-endorsed Perry report, which apparently proposes wage increases totalling 61 per cent for the striking grain handlers. Many suggested that the grain handlers be fired and farmers hired to replace them. The bitterest criticism of the Government for supporting the report was that it was sanctioning inflation.

Peace conference to re-open early

United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim called yesterday for the early re-opening of the Middle East Peace conference in Geneva to prevent a return to violence in the area.

Mr. Waldheim declared that "unless the momentum is maintained... it will not be long before violence breaks out again with all its dread implications."

back
page

Chances of now getting into residences tightest for men

As the week progresses and people try to find places to live, the situation for men trying to get into residence seems worse than for women students. About forty-three men have beds on a temporary basis in Leonard Field residences, whereas only fifteen women occupy temporary living quarters in Victoria Hall.

Dean of Women, Evelyn Reid, expects that these girls will soon be absorbed into the system. It appears there are no women who need the emergency "overnight" accommodation set up in anticipation of a crisis.

Asked how long men would have to stay in common rooms Prof. Gerald McGrath, Director of Residences replied, "I don't think anyone can project." He said that these students would not be accommodated immediately. McGrath agreed that this year there are more people who want to come into residence than there are beds available.

Reid stated that it may be 4-6 weeks before the last ten women in temporary residence are given permanent accommodation. This follows exactly the same pattern as last year, she said.

Housing manager resigns

Chairman of the AMS housing committee Sheila MacIntyre resigned her position Wednesday. Her resignation came as a result of a conflict regarding her position as Summer Manager which erupted on campus during the summer. She had worked as chairman since March 1st when her position was taken over from Tony Wolman, who assumed his presidential duties at that time.

Four years ago, the AMS entered into an agreement with the university to lease houses for the purpose of releasing them to the students. A housing agreement was struck which delegated complete authority to the housing committee to employ its manager and set its own budget. Appointing a Summer Manager, according to the agreement was also in the jurisdiction of the committee.

The agreement, however, faced a conflict of interest when the Board of Directors made a decision to appoint the Business Administrator of the AMS, Joyce Roe in the position of Personnel Manager of the Corporation as well.

Roe was given the responsibility of hiring and firing all AMS employees with the exception of the constables. However it was not specified at that time that housing was responsible for their own personnel.

When MacIntyre began her term as Summer Manager she was informed by her committee that she was to receive a salary of $100.00 per week for 12 weeks and the amount was budgeted for the 1974-75 term.

The Business Administrator and the Q.S.A. (Queen's Student Agencies) Director made no reply to the committee's actions at that time.

After working for four weeks, MacIntyre was informed by Roe and Druxerman that no salary was due. Druxerman conveyed the Business Administrator's opinion that a Summer Manager was not required, due to the presence of the Society's full-time bookkeeper and therefore a summer manager would not be hired.

MacIntyre was not recognized as a full-time employee after the conflict arose and although she was aware of this, she continued carrying out her duties on a part-time capacity, while being financed by another job.

Instead of the $100.00 per week that MacIntyre expected for work done from May to September she received only $40.00 per month honorarium which is the amount allocated to the Winter Manager.

The crux of the matter lay in the misunderstanding between the directive sent to the Personnel Manager and the housing agreement of 1971. The resulting conflict concerns the relationship between the Board and the Council and the extent of their jurisdiction over the staffing for the AMS Corporation. A committee has recently been struck to investigate and re-evaluate this relationship.

Bus-It vote Monday but AMS may lease bus

The five Public Utilities Commissioners vote Monday to decide whether to accept Queen's proposal of $6 per student a month for Bus-It, said AMS Vice-President (Operations) Peter Druxerman.

Several alternative arrangements for bus service have been suggested since the P.U.C. refused to renew the $5 per head plan followed last year. The P.U.C. originally wanted $7 per student for Bus-It from Sept. 1 to April 30. When the AMS protested that they could not afford to pay $7, the P.U.C. came up with three possible contracts — one asking $6 for service commencing Nov. 1, one asking $5.75 for service commencing Nov. 18, and another asking $5 for service commencing Dec. 1.

An alternative to Bus-It has already been investigated by Druxerman. As this paper went to press, the AMS' application for a permit to operate a bus only for students along Kingston streets, was being considered by the Traffic and Street Commission. According to Druxerman, there is a question as to the legality of such an operation. As the P.U.C. may have a "monopoly" on bus service in Kingston.

This plan, which would cost only $18,360 compared to $54,000 the AMS is willing to pay the P.U.C. involves leasing a Wager line bus for the academic year. This bus would run from 7 a.m. to 12 a.m. Monday to Friday, and would pick up students along main streets covered by three regular P.U.C. bus routes.

First thing in the morning the bus would come south on Division Street and go out to Calvin Park, past the shopping centre and West Campus. After 10 a.m., the bus would follow a circular route travelling downtown via King Street and looping back on Brock Street.

Druxerman mentioned that a change in hours of bus operation would be considered if students wanted service extending to 1:30 a.m.

BUTTON UP A FREE MEAL AT MCDONALD'S.

On Thursday, at 8 p.m., any Fresh Person (that should make everybody happy) who asks, will receive a free button with a number on it.

There's one set of numbers for men, and a corresponding set for women.

The trick is to find the member of the opposite sex who has the number that's the same as yours.

Then, when both of you get hungry, come on out to McDonald's and we'll pop for a BIG MAN for two. After that, you're on your own.

* OFFER EXPIRES SUNDAY SEPT. 22

277 BATH ROAD

MUSIC LAND
FORMERLY OF 108 WELLINGTON IS NOW LOCATED AT
274 PRINCESS ST.
WE INVITE ALL OUR OLD CUSTOMERS TO SEE OUR NEW PREMISES

10,000 STUDENTS READ
THE JOURNAL TWICE WEEKLY
ADVERTISE IN THE

Queen's
Journal

E.P. MURPHY & SON LTD.

Sea Food Restaurant

SPECIAL BEAVER
and
BEAR STEAKS

70 Brock St.
548-7753

CHALMERS

a congregation of the United Church of Canada on the edge of Queens Campus (Barrie at Clergy) invited you to share in its morning worship Sundays at 10:30 Post-church coffee and sermon talk-back
Minister: Rev. Stanford Lucyk, B.A., B.D., S.T.M.
Deaconess: Miss Margaret Quigley, B.A.
Director of Music: Mr. David Cameron, FTCL, FRCCO (CHM)

HILLEL'S OPEN HOUSE

Thurs. Sept. 19-8 pm
26 Barrie St.

- coffee - donuts - entertainment
- come over and say shalom

VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S

VAN'S GIFTS and BOOKS LTD.
282 Princess St.
KINGSTON 542-6676

ANOTHER SUPER SPECIAL
"ORUM & BUCCANEER" cigarette tobaccos regular - 2 pouches for $1.06 AT GOOO HEARTED
VAN'S - 2 pouches for $5.89 Hooka & Water Pipes Special priced at $9.95 each - Also small HERB CURING PIPES from $1.98 - $16.95 Good assortment of incense sticks and cones priced from 25c and up.

MON - FRI. STORE HOURS 9:30 am - 10 pm
SATURDAY 9:30 am - 9 pm
SUNDAY OPEN 12:00 - 9 pm

VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S

Duncan Kerr Men's Shop
Is Selling Out!
Quitting Business.

WE HAVE:

QUEEN'S SWEAT SHIRTS - "PENMANS" LONG ANO SHORT SLEEVE - ON SALE 3.99 EA.
QUEEN'S T-SHIRTS WHITE-NAVY SALE 2.99 EA.
QUEEN'S WINOBREAKERS SALE 11.99 EA.
QUEEN'S UMBRELLAS - SALE 6.99 EA.
QUEEN'S SCARVES - SALE 5.99 EA.
"ROADRUNNER JEANS - SALE 10.00 PR.

350 PRINCESS ST. (LOOK FOR YELLOW-RED SIGNS)

Duncan Kerr Men's Shop

wat's hapnin'?

Friday, Sept. 13

Sobriety - The freshman talent show is held in Grant Hall again this year. Shows at 7:30 and 10:30.
Queen's Pub - The band featured at 9:00 is "Chateaux".

Saturday, Sept. 14

Football Game - Queen's Golden Gaels versus Ottawa Gee Gees in Lansdowne Park in Ottawa at 8:00 p.m.
Frosh Finale Dance - 8:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m. Bands featured are "Creed" in Leonard Cafeteria, "Sleuth" in Lower Victoria, and "Seadog" and "Yukon" in Grant Hall.
Greasepole - Buses leave from Victoria Hall at 12:30 p.m. and tickets will be sold to freshmen for $25.

Sunday, Sept. 15

Morning Mass - Chalmers United Church at 10:30 a.m.
Folk Mass - Dunning Hall at 10:30 a.m. Coffee and donuts are being served at Newman House, 164 University Ave., following the mass.

Monday, Sept. 16

Information Bank - opens in the John Orr Room. Hours are from 9:30 a.m. - 5:45 p.m. Students wishing to volunteer are urged to call Kathy Wood at 544-2055.

Coming soon...

Tuesday, Sept. 17 - Contemporary Cinema Series presents "Citizen Kane", 9:00 p.m. in Ellis Auditorium. $1.00 admission at the door.

Thursday, Sept. 19 - "Chile: The Struggle Against The Junta". Speakers from the Chilean emigre community and the Revolutionary Marxist Group, as well as a movie. See Next Tuesday's Journal for details.

Saturday, Sept. 21 - Division of Concerts presents the Le Groupe de la l'ace Royale in the Grand Theatre Friday, Sept. 20 - Evening Film Series presents "Foreign Correspondent".

The camera catches one determined young Keep up the good work, Catherine, but it may take a "spit" polish to get those boots to shine! Orientation Shinerama for Cystic Fibrosis.

Frank Gauchie, manager of the Campus Bookstore, surveys the renovations which took place during the summer. The store now offers a greater selection of gifts and clothing.

Summer saw major changes in bookstore

Over the summer, in answer to a need for both more space and an updated system, significant renovations were made on the campus bookstore. Frank Gauchie, store manager, feels that the present set-up will eliminate great lineups at cashiers during the three day rush period at the beginning of this week, when most students buy their books.

Foremost among the changes is that the bookstore now consists of three floors rather than two, as it now also occupies the basement level. With this addition, the upper and lower floors will be used for the display of required as well as recommended texts while the main level will offer general interest items such as stationary, paperback novels, Queen's T-shirts and posters. According to Mr. Gauchie the store is arranged in this manner to avoid pile-ups of students in any one area of the store. With more books on the shelves this year than ever before, this arrangement will be most helpful in speeding up service he feels, especially during the rush period. The addition of extra cash registers on each level and the extension of hours from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. for this three day period will help ensure this.

Another new concept in this year's bookstore is that the shelves are now arranged using a new colour-code system with all texts corresponding to the same course displayed together, all with shelf title cards the same colour. A card for recommended texts will have a line through its coloured shelf title card whereas a card for a required text will not be marked by a line.

Gauchie, who has visited over 100 campus bookstores throughout North America foresees a few minor changes and wants to hear, personally, student suggestions as to how service may be improved. The regular hours of the bookstore this year will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays to Fridays and 9 a.m. to 12 noon Saturdays.

Loan processing slightly behind last year's

by Barb Nyland

Despite recently overcome computer problems in Toronto the processing of Ontario Student Loan applications is not far behind last year. Mr. Dave Ellis, the assistant registrar in charge of student awards said that at least 80 percent of the applications that could be expected back have arrived. "Approximately 100 applications are coming back from Toronto each day and we are getting these out to the students as fast as possible," said Mr. Ellis.

The total number of applications is expected to be about 300 to 400 more than last year or approximately 3,500. About 3,000 students will receive assistance.

The Ontario Student Award program was started in 1966 and is designed to help people in the bottom third of the income bracket thus presenting opportunities for post secondary education where it was not possible before. About 30 to 40 percent of the Ontario residents at Queen's are using the program. Of these people only a small percentage are graduate students as they are looked after through other programs

It takes from four to eight weeks from the time of receipt of the application in the Student's Award Office until the answer is back in the student's hands. Applications which are received by September 31 will be considered for assistance covering the whole year. Those applications received in the period from October 1 to January 31 will only be considered for second term assistance.

"I don't anticipate any serious problems," said Mr. Ellis. If problems do arise on the individual level there are means of compensation. If an application was received before July 31 and no answer has been received as yet fee deferral will be considered. "There are also short term University loans available if we are convinced the applicant will receive assistance," said Mr. Ellis.

Up to registration the processing of applications has had first priority in the Student Awards office but now the dispersal of loan certificates and grant cheques takes precedence.

SPECIAL SALE TYPEWRITERS

- Used Underwood and Remington
- Stondard
- Office Size
- Good condition

Phone or Visit Commercial Director
Loyalist Collegiate and V.I.
153 VanOrder Dr.
Office: 546-5575 Home: 546-1580

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN MUSIC AND WORK AMS CONCERTS

REQUIRES
PEOPLE FOR POSITIONS AS
TICKET SALES MANAGER
TECHNICAL MANAGER
PROMOTIONS MANAGER
HOUSE MANAGER
FINANCIAL MANAGER

Please send resumes and applications to
DAVE FINLAY or RICHARD HAMM QUEEN'S ENTERTAINMENT AGENCY
AMS Office, Student Union

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY SPECIALIZING IN CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD

TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 9 AM TO MIDNIGHT

Towne House Pub

Towne House Pub

THE SEAWAY HOTELS
TORONTO - WINDSOR - KINGSTON - OTTAWA - MONTREAL

E.P. MURPHY & SON LTD.
Sea Food Restaurant
SPECIAL BEAVER
and BEAR
STEAKS
70 Brock St. 548-7753

WATER, WATER everywhere

You love the water. You're attracted to it. You love to swim and won't give it up for a day.

Even if you have your period, you know you can swim dependably protected with Tampax tampons. They give you internal protection that won't irritate or cause discomfort. Protection that can't slip or show under swimsuits. Protection small enough to be carried discreetly wherever you go.

Wherever there's water, there you are. Swimming every day. Protected, sure of yourself because you use Tampax tampons.

The internal protection more women trust

MADE ONLY BY CANADIAN TAMPAX CORPORATION LTD., BARRIE, ONTARIO

Students greet school year in tents, due to housing shortage

OTTAWA (CUP) - Tents are sprouting on university lawns across Ontario as returning students find it next to impossible to obtain housing for the coming year.

At the University of Waterloo in Waterloo the student's council has pitched close to 30 tents while lakehead university in Thunder Bay has four on its lawns.

The University of Guelph has pitched one giant tent and may use a football storage area as a temporary dormitory for 300 students. Ryerson in Toronto is also thinking of setting up tents this week.

Other universities like Queens are setting up temporary housing in residence lounges and common areas.

In Ottawa almost 2,000 students are looking for accommodation and most university housing officers are calling the situation a crisis. Last year several Ontario universities had to set up tent cities.

The reasons for the student housing shortage are many: - an Ontario land speculation tax penalizes homeowners who rent rooms to students - there is a general shortage of low income housing because of the difficulty in obtaining mortgage money to build and the increasing trend of developers to renovate older low income housing into modern town houses that sell for high prices. - the reluctance of landlords to rent to students.

Much of the housing that is available for students is also of such a low standard that students can't live in them.

While the tents are serving a practical purpose in housing students they are also a highly visible political tool.

confront government says OFS

The Ontario Federation of Students, a province wide organization of university and college student unions, says the problem is caused by the government housing and tax policies and the government should be visibly confronted.

"It's interesting to have this shortage in light of an Ontario government study, which has never been released, that states with the exception of Northern Ontario and the community colleges the universities have not demonstrated a need for housing starts in the next few years" said

OFS researcher Carolyn Kendrick.

Another problem faced by students is the Ontario Student Assistance Program which estimates that students need not spend any more than $32 per week for room and board. Loans are granted to students for room and board using the $32 figure as a base.

However, the average room cost is now between $20-25 dollars

unclassifieds

LOST: ONE LEVI JEAN jacket, size 40-42, fairly well used. Also one all-white Levi corduroy jacket, same size. If found please call John at 546-7018.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS MAKE ideal gifts for birthdays and Christmas. At Photo Image we specialize in casual outdoor studies both in black and white and colour. For more information and appointments call us at 546-7770 or drop by our studio at 33 Brock St.

NEW MUSIC STORE: Gary Mullen and Ken Wong (formerly of Tremblay's) are pleased to announce the opening of Renaissance Music Store, 324 Princess St. (between Clergy and Barrie). Special for Queen's students for the month of September - 20 per cent off on all instruments (list price), and 10 per cent off all accessories.

PASSIONATE YOUNG MAN with mono wishes to meet passionate young woman with mono (or willing to risk it). Ask for Bill, 544-5806.

WOODROW'S ANECDOTE: Braces are blinders! PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. has expanded their processing lab. and can now offer 24 hour service on all black and white processing and ekachrome slide developing. For further information, call 546-7770 or drop by at 33 Brock St.

FOR SALE: DANISH couch $40; oak chest $50; coffee table $10; wooden bed frame $10; wooden chest $10. Please call 389-2870 after 5:00 p.m.

ANYONE INTERESTED IN PLAYING for the Queen's Pipe Band, come to Grant Hall at 7:30 tonight.

FOR SALE: Size 42 Arts jacket in excellent condition. Best offer. Phone 542-6442.

LARGE SINGLE bed for sale $50, used 3 years. Call between 5:00 - 6:30, 545-3199.

LOST: ONE SILVER BULLET, slightly used, Great sentimental

Classified advertising

Any classified submitted to the Queen's Journal must be submitted by 5:00 pm of the Press Day (namely Sunday and Wednesday during winter term). Any classified not accompanied by one dollar per 30 words will not be printed. Billing only pertains to organizations and not to individuals.

Library

Improved facilities

Two-Week Loan Period for Undergraduates

Undergraduates may borrow books from Douglas Library for two weeks (14 days), rather than the 11-day period in effect last year. This loan period will be on an experimental basis, for September through December. It is subject to change if difficulties in the supply of copies make an excessive number of books unavailable to users. Loan periods to graduate students, staff and faculty, and for special materials such as bound periodicals, remain unchanged.

Interlibrary Loan for Undergraduates

Undergraduates may borrow on interlibrary loan from any Canadian university. This service is on an experimental basis for the year 1974-75. It was agreed by the Canadian Association of College and University Libraries at its 1974 conference to provide the service. In the past two years, interlibrary loan service was available to undergraduates only for materials in Ontario universities. Certain kinds of materials (reserve books, many periodicals, rare or fragile material) will not be available on any interlibrary loan service.

Additional Reading Space

An unsupervised reading room is now available on the main floor of Macintosh-Corby Hall (B-205), opposite the open lounge and vending machine area. It will be open seven days a week, from 7:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. Individual carrels, as well as lounge chairs and study tables, are available. No library materials or services are provided. This area is not a library unit and will not be serviced by library staff. The large number of seats is expected to attract people studying from their own materials, spending a study hour between classes, or seeking a quieter carrel space than is available in Douglas Library or the Law Library.

Macintosh-Corby Hall Library

Library services formerly in four separate campus locations are now in a new library on the ground floor of the M-C complex, (Rooms C-103 to C-119). Geography (maps and air photos), local government, social science documentation (newspaper clippings), and business-economics journals and heavily used books are in this #### new library.

Douglas Library Hours Change

Douglas Library will close at 12 midnight five days a week (Sunday through Thursday) and at 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday. The Periodicals Room and Documents Unit will be open earlier in the mornings, at 8:30 a.m. Monday through Friday. Periodicals and Documents will close at 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday, at 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday. The Reserve Room will close at 10 p.m. daily.

SALE on all camping equipment 20% OFF

cotton's
Sporthouse

299 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, K7L 1B9
TELEPHONE 544-1000

Alfie Sez:

Come to the Queen's Bands new member recruiting meeting on Sunday Sept. 15 at 7:00 pm in Grant Hall.

People are needed for:

Pipe Band
Brass Band
Cheerleaders
Highland Dancers
Majorettes

Experience not needed Instruments supplied

"Not just any ol' dance"

ADMISSION
$2.00

Grant Hall

Lower Vic

Leonard Caf.

Leonard Rec. Room

Sat., Sept. 14 '74

Yukon & Seadog
Slew Foot
Creed

Honky Tonk Piano Player

8 p.m. - 1 a.m.

limited tickets on sale for upper classmen
in Polson Room

Queens
Journal
Vol. 102, No. 2
Fri., Sept. 13, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario.

Editor-in-Chief: Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager: Terry Collins
Managing Editor: Dan McClelland
News Editor: Sarah Yarnell
Features Editor: Wendy Reynolds
Entertainment: Kerry White
Photography: John Bollomley,
John Wilmer, Keith Bourns
Contributors: Barb Nyland, Steve Garsau, Laurie Gibson, Boomer and Woodrow

Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (613) 547-2606. Printed by Enomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

bottomley

Whatever the brand

Just as the businessman considers lunch a martini, and your great-aunt digs her nightly nip of sherry, so the university student quickly learns that his drink is typically beer. The engineers sing about it, no gael party is complete without it and the Pub would be out of business if not for its sale of the frosty pint. Newcomers to campus may know only too well already that it can be the boon or the bane of one's existence.

But a comforting stability arises from the very fact of beer's omnipresence. Beer's year-round popularity as a 90 deg. thirst-quencher or as a winter night-cap attests to its versatility. What other beverage is enjoyed as a pre-dinner dinner, post-dinner drink? Everyone knows that beer nuts were invented for the explicit purpose of satisfying the beer-drinker's munchies. And where would pretzel production be if not for the classic combo.

Sorrows are drowed in it, celebrations made by it, in fact all of life's great moments occur within reach of the fridge and opener. No other excuse is so universally accepted for such blatant attempts at social interaction from friendly conversation to out-and-out seduction. Ask yourself, if the guy beside you was drinking Ovaltine would you let him feel your knee?

Somchow, beer gives you the courage to make life shattering decisions and resolutions, the stamina to continue through assignments and Journal press nights, the humility to apologize, and the guts for making up and breaking up (whichever seems currently necessary).

Aside from its motivational properties, beer and its trappings serve diverse practical functions. The handiest ashtray in the world is an empty beer bottle (or a full one if you're drunk or sadistic), and you don't even have to clean it. Those shiny labels have been the salvation of many a neurotic soul. Innumerable parties have been livened or instigated by the participation in all those beer games, whether man-to-man sudden-death combat like chugging or round-the-table group fun.

The old jug-in-the-jacket caper and the ripped-off mug have stocked many students' cupboard of fine crystal. Even empties find themselves serving a useful purpose as the foundation of broken beds, as TV stands, or as the basis of the entire decor of the desperate and/or imaginative student.

bottomley

bring out the brew

The old jug-in-the-jacket caper and the ripped-off mug have stocked many students' cupboard of fine crystal. Even empties find themselves serving a useful purpose as the foundation of broken beds, as TV stands, or as the basis of the entire decor of the desperate and/or imaginative student.

Beer is produced by allowing a broth made from cereal grains to ferment under controlled conditions. Varying the ingredients and conditions produces differences in taste, colour and smell resulting in the various types of brew. Lager is light, yellow, translucent and contains three to four per cent alcohol by volume.

Ale is darker with a six per cent alcohol content. It takes longer to make and will last for several years in the bottle. Beers can vary from amber to dark brown in colour and average a five per cent alcohol content. Finally, there are porters and stout, malty and as black as licorice (stout actually contains some).

To produce all of these, barley is cleaned, graded, soaked, roasted to produce malt and this is mashed to extract a liquid called wort. The wort is filtered, hops are added and then removed special yeasts are injected according to the type of beer being made, the mixture ferments for weeks, is chilled, clarified and "finished" to give it a sparkling look.

All this before the addition of carbon dioxide, pasteurization and bottling. All you have to do is get the case from the beer store home.

Beer got its start in North America because it was the beer drinkers of Europe who colonized the world, so beer went with them and has remained and flourished, if you can believe Golden ads, as the number one thirst quencher next to water.

Today, Australia, Jamaica, Mexico and Japan all have great locally produced beers and ales to rank beside the famous ones of Britain, Denmark, Germany and Holland. So does Canada.

And Canadians drink enough beer to prove it. Apparent dollar sales of beer as far back as 1967 were $548,750,000 which averages to 1.07 gallons of alcohol contained in beer for every person 15 years of age and over per year. The hazardous amount limit is considered to be anything over 66 ounces of beer per day. Closer to home, the Queen's Pub outsells beer to liquor at a ratio of about three to one.

Most popular brands, some 35 of them, are sold at Brewer's Retail outlets in Kingston. All of these are domestic, and imported beers, including those from out-of-province are available at the L.C.B.O. Everyone is familiar with cans and bottles which come in cases of varying sizes, but only the seasoned beer drinker may be aware of the kegs and barrels which can be rented from the outlets. Half barrels and kegs are great for parties or if the sorrows you're drowning are overwhelming.

You learn quickly the effects of beer, especially in Orientation Week, many of which are not apparent until you wake up the next morning, feeling as though the Russian Army had just tramped through your mouth. As with intelligence and shoe size, after effects are an individual thing, making you different from your neighbour. He gets the dry heaves, you get a headache. There are general guidelines which everyone follows, however.

One to two beer leave the skin flushed, a faster heart beat, reduced inhibitions and a general feeling of gaiety. One more and your judgement is slower, you're giddy and your co-operation is a bit off. Chalk up five and you're having trouble speaking coherently, vision is blurred and your reaction time is slowed considerably.

Slug back a total of eight of the bubbly and you're seeing double and your balance is gone, which accounts for the fact that you're reeling around the room, recruiting participants for a group grope. Should you make it to twenty, your friends will tell you that your skin was clammy, your pupils dilated and that you were generally unconscious.

Further indulgence, if you're still able to swallow, leaves the thrilling prospect of inability to breathe, coma and a swift departure to the great brewery in the sky.

Beer, regretfully, has a relatively high calorie count. Two beer contain more calories than a piece of pie or a cream puff, and provide no nutrients. The great bulk of the alcohol is not actually excreted, dispelling the old "in one end and out the other" myth, but rather must be burned in the body in the same way as sugars and fats. This process is much slower for alcohol than for normal foodstuffs. Your body actually seems to prefer alcohol calories to food calories!

Happily, one way to reduce the alcoholic effects and the calories, but still savour the taste, is to cook with beer. The Germans, English and Swiss are all noted for their culinary adaptation of the beverage. We're not suggesting you dump an Ex into the spaghetti sauce or substitute a Blue for the milk on your Shreddies, but certain dishes, especially beef or bean ones, take on a special flavour when slowly simmered in beer. Added bonus - while you're waiting to sample the results or should the entire thing flop, the case and opener are handy, so you can resort to the traditional way of serving ale.

Thanks to the Journal of Sept. 26, 1972 for some background info.

bottomley

Kelly's TOP 100 ALBUMS $3.99 PER DISC

Stereo Marts

$2.00 OFF LIST On All Pre-Recorded 8-Track and Cassettes

2nd Floor Expansion

Budget Label $1.99 All Other Budget 93¢

Classicals Popular & Rock

Authorized Dealer

SANSUI AKAI

PRO-LINEAR

WE ALSO CARRY FINEST BRAND-NAME COMPONENTS

SHARP DUAL SHURE Electra THORENS KOSS SONY MEMOREX CIS

Kelly's...

100 Princess St.

544-4014 "The Stereo Experts"

World's number one speaker manufacturer

VANCOUVER: 540 Granville St., 2714 West Broadway, Oakridge, Park Royal, 7 West Hastings, NEW WESTMINSTER: 611 Columbia St., SURREY: 10650 King George Hwy., BURNABY: 7303 Kingsway, RICHMOND: 605 No. 3 Road, NORTH VANCOUVER: 1760 Lonsdale, CHILLIWACK: 3 Yale Road, KAMLOOPS: 171 Victoria, KELOWNA: 441 Bernard, VERNON: 3204 30th Avenue, CRANBROOK: 31-10th Avenue, HANEY: 2324 Dewdney Trunk Road, VICTORIA: 648 Yates, ABBOTSFORD/CLEARBROOK: 32222A South Fraser Way, PRINCE RUPERT: 530-3rd Avenue West, NANAIMO: 22 Victoria, EDMONTON: 10068 Jasper Avenue, CALGARY: 110-8th Avenue S.W., TORONTO: 784 Yonge St., 322 Yonge St., PRINCE GEORGE: Parkwood Shopping Centre, WHITEHORSE: Owanlin Mall, HALIFAX: 1662 Barrington.

New series promises a "vibrant stage"

The Division of Concerts, which in the past has offered to the Kingston community the Grant and Dunning Hall Series, is offering a new series this year, a series designed to fill what it feels is a gap in Kingston entertainment. This new series, aptly entitled "Vibrant Stage", is composed of professional theatre, mime and dance presentations, most of which are done by Canadian companies, and all of which promise to be very exciting.

Among the productions offered are "Ten Lost Years", a theatrical adaptation of Barry Broadfoot's best-selling book about the Depression in Canada, presented by Toronto Workshop Productions; "Pleasure and Repentance", presented by England's Royal Shakespeare Company; and a presentation by the Paul Gaudin Mime Company. There are four productions in the series, and two additional productions, one the much renowned Ann of Green Gables, presented by the Charlottetown Festival Company.

Series tickets are $5, $8, and $11 for students, and $8, $11 and $14 for the general public. Tickets and further information are available at the box office in the Agnes Etherington Art Centre.

Landscape exhibition

An exhibit of new landscapes—19 paintings and sculpture from the National Gallery of Canada's collection of contemporary Canadian art, dating from 1968 to 1973, will be on view at the National Gallery of Canada, Ottawa, from September 20 until

October 27.

Over the last decade Canadian artists have shown a renewed interest in interpreting nature in landscapes, which is why Mayo Graham, the Assistant Curator of Contemporary Canadian Art, decided to organize the exhibition. Some of the artists represented are Jean Marie Delavalle (Boucherville, P.Q.), Dave Gordon (London), Ernest Linder (Saskatoon), Joyce Weiland (Toronto) and Dennis J. Vance (Vancouver).

Atherton lecture

Learning self-education

Dr. David Atherton of the Department of Engineering Physics presented a delightfully informal lecture Tuesday evening in the coffee shop of Victoria Hall. His subject was "Science, the liberal education for the modern society"; his talk was well-suited to an audience composed predominantly of first year students. He, quite properly, values education not because it consists of the memorization of a great number of facts, for "even the most knowledgeable of us knows very little", but because, ideally, it teaches us to cope with these facts. Education is, for Dr. Atherton, the learning and beginning of self-education, a skill most valuable in our rapidly changing world. He spoke of the university as a community based on learning, and university life as an opportunity to meet a greater diversity of people than many of us will ever encounter.

In his discussion of science he spoke mainly of the importance of applying the scientific method to our lives. He defined the method as consisting of four steps: preliminary research, innovation, experimentation and assessment. He stressed the importance of research, quoting

Winston Churchill: "Those who don't study history are doomed to repeat it". It is clear that self-education is really the basic premise of this simplified theory of science; once you know where to find facts you are free to experiment on the basis of those facts. And the experimentation is the most important learning—the memorization of a great number of facts signifies little. In our technologically advanced civilization, facts change at such a great rate that we must continually be learning new ones, and we must understand how to do this. And of course the concept of self-education may be extended to virtually every facet of learning. Formal education is only the beginning.

CFRC hi-lites

Friday, Sept. 13th

8:00 p.m. The Living Classics: Two hours of listening to serious music from various eras.

10:00 p.m. Nocturne: The progressive sound of CFRC's rock show.

Saturday, Sept. 14th

8:00 p.m. Golden Gael Football: Live from Ottawa, play by play and colour as the Queen's Gaels meet the University of Ottawa Gee Gees.

10:30 p.m. Nocturne: The alternative sound of the best in rock music, with little chatter and no commercials.

2:00 a.m. Nocturne Request Show: For your favourite rock music, call CFRC at 547-6677.

Sunday, Sept. 15th

12:00 noon: Classics by request: A selection of our Listeners' favourite classical music. To have your request included telephone CFRC at 547-6677 after 11:45 a.m.

7:00 p.m. Montage: A truly free-form music program delving into every corner of the record library.

10:00 p.m. Nocturne: Rock with a jazzy touch. Four hours of music from the best contemporary artists.

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT

in our Lounge
THIS WEEK

Fat Chance

Amateur Night every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

Queen's University

Music
Department

ANNOUNCES OPENINGS IN THE FOLLOWING PERFORMING GROUPS FOR THE 1974/75 SEASON:

CHAMBER SINGERS:

DR. RUDOLF SCHNITZLER, DIRECTOR. A VOCAL ENSEMBLE FOR THE PERFORMANCE OF MUSIC FROM THE LATE RENAISSANCE TO THE PRESENT. REHEARSALS: 3:30 - 5:00 P.M. MONDAY AND 2:30-4:00 P.M. WEDNESDAY.

COLLEGIUM MUSICUM:

DR. WILBUR MAUST, DIRECTOR. AN ORGANIZATION FOR THE PERFORMANCE OF MEDIEVAL, RENAISSANCE AND EARLY BAROQUE MUSIC. MADE UP OF VOCALISTS AND PLAYERS OF INSTRUMENTS OF THE ABOVE PERIODS. REHEARSALS: (SLOT 13) 1:30 P.M. MONDAY, 12:30 P.M. WEDNESDAY AND 11:30 A.M. FRIDAY.

CHORAL ENSEMBLE:

DENISE NARCISSE-MAIR, DIRECTOR. OPEN TO ALL STUDENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY FOR THE PERFORMANCE OF MUSIC FOR LARGE CHORUS IN ALL STYLES FROM THE BAROQUE TO THE AVANT GARDE. REHEARSALS: (SLOT 12) MONDAYS: 12:30-1:30 WEDNESDAYS: 11:30-12:30. THURSDAYS: 1:30-2:30.

CHAMBER ORCHESTRA:

DAVID KEANE, DIRECTOR. AN ORCHESTRA PERFORMING STANDARD REPERTOIRE FROM THE LATE RENAISSANCE TO THE PRESENT. OPEN TO ALL UNIVERSITY STAFF AND STUDENTS. REHEARSALS: 3:30-5:00 P.M. MONDAY AND 2:30-4:00 P.M. WEDNESDAY.

WIND ENSEMBLE:

DR. DUANE BATES, DIRECTOR. OPEN TO EXPERIENCED, WOODWIND AND PERCUSSION PLAYERS. PERFORMING SERIOUS CONCERT BAND AND WIND ENSEMBLE LITERATURE. REHEARSALS: 2:30-4:00 P.M. TUESDAYS AND THURSDAYS.

IMPROVISATION GROUP /NEW MUSIC ENSEMBLE:

A GROUP OF INDIVIDUALS FROM A VARIETY OF DISCIPLINES INTERESTED IN THE PERFORMANCE OF NEW AND AVANT GARDE MUSIC AND DANCE THEATRE IN CONJUNCTION WITH VISUAL ART, FILM AND TECHNOLOGY, INTEGRATED MEDIA. MEETS 4:30-5:30 THURSDAYS.

JAZZ ENSEMBLE:

DR. DUANE BATES, DIRECTOR. A FULL STAGE BAND PERFORMING STANDARD AND NEW WORKS FOR THAT MEDIUM. REHEARSALS: (SLOT 12) MONDAY, 12:30-1:30; WEDNESDAY, 11:30-12:30, and THURSDAYS, 1:30-2:30.

FOR MORE INFORMATION:

PERSONS INTERESTED IN AUDITIONING FOR ANY OF THE ABOVE ORGANIZATIONS OR FOR FURTHER INFORMATION PLEASE CONTACT: MRS. LIN ROWE, MUSIC DEPARTMENT, 547-5783.

Mackenzie Porter

Proud, conservative, and a bit of a snob

by Kerry White
 "Ladies and gentlemen: Thank you very much for inviting me to address you on the value of a university education. You could not have invited a better authority on this subject because I didn't receive a university education. And I know what it means in this competitive economy to lack one."

With this statement Mackenzie Porter began a very interesting lecture Monday night in Grant Hall, and the wry humour which it embodies seems to be very much a part of the personality of this man.

Mackenzie Porter is at present a drama critic for the Toronto Sun. He has written for prominent newspapers and magazines in both England and Canada.

Mr. Porter's comment concerning the value of a degree in a competitive society is well verified by incidents in his own life. He can recall countless promotions lost in both journalism and military service, lost apparently because of his lack of formal education. His second book, Overture to Victoria, a biography of Queen Victoria's father, was refused publication in London although it had been published by the Canadian branch of the same publishing firm, and was on the best-seller list here. Publication was refused because of a lack of academic credentials. Despite these setbacks, Mr. Porter states that he feels no resentment, that although a university education might have given him a better life, his life has been good and rewarding. His skill with words and thoughts has taken him places to which a degree will take no ordinary man.

Mr. Porter values formal education most highly in the fact that, ideally, it instills in the habits of inquiry and study. Something he laments greatly is the fact that so very few young people are socially, economically, and intellectually equipped to graduate. This coupled with the fact that many students who are financially able to attend university, derive little from the experience.

He cited Thomas Jefferson's great "lie", that "All men are created equal". Mr. Porter feels that the public school system does not stress enough the teaching of good manners and good taste. Members of the audience took exception to this, stating their belief that this merely allows a few bright students to move upward socially, and did nothing to solve a much more basic problem.

There is a great deal of truth in Mr. Porter's answer to these comments—that he would like nothing better than to have the power to abolish the class system overnight, but that we must recognize the fact that it does exist. His comments concerning education were much more directed towards raising the general intellectual level of society. Students also questioned the practicality of this ideal, stating that someone must do the menial work involved in any society. This is a very natural question, but it tends to place a rather arbitrary value on our awareness of our world.

'old school' views....

Mr. Porter also discussed his political views. He is proud to be considered a conservative and also, perhaps, a little bit proud that he is considered a snob. He deplores the predominance of liberalism in the politics of Western society, stating that government's attempt to buy votes with welfare schemes which merely cause inflation.

Relating his political views and his ideal of increasing the popular level of awareness he stated that young people should become more aware of the seriousness of politics, marriage, and the bearing of children. He believes that the granting of voting privileges to 18 year olds is but one more example of the attempt of liberal government to curry favour, and that young people should not be allowed to vote until they have earned a living for at least a year. This, and his statement that our protracted educational system prolongs the maturing process into the mid 20's, provoked a great deal of dissent from his audience. Putting family allowance in the same category with the lowered voting age, he warned of the population crisis, and stated that if public education on this subject failed he would advocate an enforced marriage age of 25 years, a level of income and intelligence required for marriage, and the limiting of the number of children. This, of course, angered many in the audience but it may well be the necessity for the future.

Dr. Porter is at once an extremely likeable and an extremely annoying man. He is so terribly "old school", with his belief in the value of compulsory military service, and the great value he places on the monarchy as symbol of the people. The scepticism with which his lecture was received demonstrates his own point—that liberalism is predominant in our society. He seems so very close to being a snob, an intellectual elitist, and this type of person is often disturbing to a member of an academic community. Perhaps this is the reason for our annoyance—we are convinced that he is wrong, but we see enough of ourselves in his intellectual approach to life that we find it difficult to disagree with him entirely.

ALL STUDENTS!
HELLO,

It's a wonderful experience to see all of you young people in our downtown area.

I hope you'll find your way to "my" store, a new gift shop, at 264 Princess.

We have a lot of Scandinavian giftwares, and more will come this fall.

Drop in and see me, Mrs. Berit Johansson, I will show you around.

Mrs. Johansson

264 Princess
549-2340

Nordic
ART SHOPS

ARTSCI '78 Elections

will be held on Tuesday Sept. 17, 1974

at 7:30 pm
in

Stirling "D"

(Physics Building)

Anyone interested in running for the position of President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, 1st year rep. to ASUS, male and female Athletic Sticks, Social Convenor or Publicity Rep. is invited to contact Leslie MacLeod at 544-1548 for additional information.

We look forward to seeing all first year
Arts & Science Students Tuesday evening

colins

Gaels, GeeGees clash Saturday

by Chris Boon

The 1974 edition of the football Golden Gaels break training camp today amidst last-minute preparations for tomorrow night's league opener with the archrival Ottawa U. GeeGees. Game time is a PM at Lansdowne Park in Ottawa.

The Gaels will be featuring a host of new faces both on and off the field this year, and several veterans are playing new positions, but there is a feeling of enthusiasm about the team that has been missing for some time. With a little luck, Ottawa U. could get a very unpleasant surprise.

Offensively, the Gaels are knee-deep in good running backs, led by Dave "the Beast" Hadden, an All-Canadian selection at fullback last year and the current offensive co-captain. Teaming with Hadden in the starting backfield will likely be Brian Tiley, who has been shifted to halfback after a year behind the Beast, and one of several top rookies. Behind them are vet Peter Sabiston, who can play either guard or tackle, and two fine rookies, Robin Clow, who will work at centre and tackle, and guard Randy Edgeworth.

At end, the Gaels will start veteran Greg Anderson and transfer Wes Garrod, who played with Guelph last year. Both are 6'4", and present big passing targets. Two rookies figure behind the starters: Jim Duncan, who has been converted from fullback, and Colin Nickerson, an all-star tight end in Halifax two years ago.

At quarterback, a somewhat contentious spot of late, will probably be Raold Serebrin, the Gaels' backup two seasons ago who has started medical school after taking a year off. Serebrin has looked very sharp all camp, and appears to have matured into a top-notch plat-caller. Behind Serebrin will be either Tom Taylor, who could end up doing the punting, or Doug Latham, the fourth-quarter hero of '73's season finale.

The offensive line shapes up as a strong point, despite the loss of tackles Dave Whiteside and Bruce Potter through graduation, and the retirement of Tom Dickinson. Darrell Craig, a 6'3", 235-lb. transfer from Ottawa via North Carolina, will start at one tackle, while Mike O'Shaughnessy has made a successful shift from defense to fill the other tackle spot. Craig will also see some action on defense as the situation demands. At guard, soph Doug Lowry and vet Keith Taggart give the Gaels a pair of quick, agile blockers, while Jim Murphy, a starter in '71, who has returned for grad work, will play a steady centre. Behind them are vet Peter Sabiston, who can play either guard or tackle, and two fine rookies, Robin Clow, who will work at centre and tackle, and guard Randy Edgeworth.

At end, the Gaels will start veteran Greg Anderson and transfer Wes Garrod, who played with Guelph last year. Both are 6'4", and present big passing targets. Two rookies figure behind the starters: Jim Duncan, who has been converted from fullback, and Colin Nickerson, an all-star tight end in Halifax two years ago.

Tackles posing problem

Barring injuries, the Gaels look set on offense and they may need to be, because things are not quite as rosy on the other side of the line.

Defensively, the problem can be summed up in one word: tackles. John Thompson, Queen's new defensive coordinator, has installed a variant of the classic 5-2 "OklaHoma" defense that has been used with success elsewhere, notably at Wilfred Laurier. However, injuries and inexperience at defensive tackle could cause problems. As things look now, Craig will probably see reasonably extensive duty at one tackle, with either Mo St. Martin, a starter last year, or oft-injured but eager Greg McNamara at the other spot. Ian Anderson, the Gaels' most valuable lineman last year, will start at middle guard, with stocky Bob Vandewater in reserve, while John Tovee and defensive captain John Waddell occupy the inside linebacking spots. Steve Thompson, a Kingston product, and John Raymond from Toronto Leaside are the depth here. At end, Al Stretton and Norm Hagarty give the Gaels solid and sometimes spectacular play, with Peter Ostrom and Don Kitchen waiting in the wings.

In the secondary, Darrell Penner moves up as the "5-yard" halfback, a spot Thompson has indicated requires the best athlete on the field. Penner should fill the bill. On the other side, Jim Dailey has been a terror as the monsterback, with Bill McIver, Alex Morris and Peter McNabb giving the Gaels a solid deep three. Behind them, Larry Small has been impressive, while John Rudan, another Kingstonian, could easily move in if the need arises. Depth here is no problem; no fewer than five rookies and sophs are regarded as being in line for a look this season. These include Bernie Hacker, Bruce Balson, Dick Cross, Jim D'Andrea and Wilf O'Brien.

All in all, the Gaels could go a long way. Certainly, if desire and attitude can make up for certain weakness, the Gaels will be all set. If not, the offense could just outscore everybody the defense is far from weak, and they HIT this year. Tomorrow night will tell a lot, so make the trip to Ottawa and cheer in person, or keep your ear glued to CFRC for the play-by-play. It should be a hell of a game.

CONVENORS
NEEDED

ANY MALE STUDENTS INTERESTED IN CONVENING ONE OR MORE OF THE FOLLOWING SPORTS IN THE MEN'S INTRAMURAL PROGRAM, PLEASE APPLY TO SUE BOLTON IN THE RECREATION OFFICE OR PHONE 547-6984 AS SOON AS POSSIBLE: Ball Hockey, Paddleball, Basketball, Rugby, Badminton, Soccer, Bowling (Assist), Softball, Flag Football, Alpine Skiing, Free Throw, Squash, Handball, Table Tennis, Harrier, Tennis, Horseshoes, Track & Field (Assist), Innetube Waterpolo (Assist), Tug-O-War, Waterpolo (Assist), Volleyball, Monsterball.

NOTE: An honorarium will be discussed with each successful applicant.

Men's Intramural
Athletic Sticks

1st MEN'S INTRAMURAL ATHLETIC COMMITTEE WILL BE HELD ON WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18 at 7:00 PM IN SEMINAR A OF THE P.E. CENTRE. ALL ATHLETIC STICKS, PLEASE LEAVE YOUR NAME, ADDRESS AND PHONE NUMBER AT THE RECREATION OFFICE (102A) AS SOON AS POSSIBLE. ALL FACULTY STICKS, PLEASE HELP THE FRESH-MAN CLASSES TO ELECT THEIR UNIT ATHLETIC STICKS

WE WON'T B.S. YOU

WE'VE SIMPLY GOT THE LOWEST
PRICES ON THE GEAR YOU NEED

FAMOUS BRAND NAME CLOTHING
JEANS, JACKETS, SWEATERS, SKIRTS, SHIRTS, SHIRKINS, PANTS, OUTERWEAR, UNDERWEAR — WE'VE GOT IT ALL

PLUS

FOOTWEAR — Dress shoes, casual shoes, joggers

LINENS AND BEDDING INCLUDING FOAM SLABS

COOKWARE AND HOUSEHOLD SUPPLIES

HEALTH AND BEAUTY AIDS

SPORTING GOODS

PAINT AND PAINT SUPPLIES

YOUR
HEADQUARTERS
FOR

KINGSTON'S
FAMOUS
BARGAIN HOUSE!

27 Princess Street
at Ontario
Free Parking - ChargeX

AMS
HOUSING SERVICE

The position of chairmon, AMS Housing Service is open for applications

Resumes should be submitted to the AMS Office, Student's Union, by 5 pm, Friday September 20, 1974

(Business and/or legal experience desirable)

George Budy
sporting goods
407 Princess Street
Kingston, Ontario
K7L 1A4
Tel. (613) 542-2393

TENNIS: WILSON, SLAZINGER, OUNLOP, PATRICK, TENNIS SHOES, CONVERSE ALL STARS.

PACKS: EVERYTHING FROM MINI TO EXPLOITION SIZE

SKI EQUIPMENT NOROICA BOOTS; VOLKL AND ATOMIC SKIS, SKI CLOTHING AND ACCESSORIES

10% OFF TO QUEEN'S STUDENTS
ON NON-SALE ITEMS

Ford: Happy days are over

Gerald Ford's unharrassed days in the presidency of the United States are now over. His unconditional pardon of former president Richard Nixon has evoked a storm of disapproval from the American people who are two to one against his decision. The pardon was given on Sunday and Ford's press secretary Jerald terHorst immediately resigned to demonstrate his disagreement.

Nixon's pardon was followed by an announcement on Tuesday that Ford was considering a pardon for all those involved in the Watergate case. Ford is conducting the pardon study personally. Senate Democratic whip Robert Byrd felt that a complete pardon for all involved "would complete the coverup of the coverup." House Republican leader John Rhodes said that although he agreed with the pardon of Nixon the others "were not presidents of the United States and have not been forced to suffer the special consequences that a fallen president must bear. Also, their fates are not directly connected with the well being of the Republic."

The cover-up trial is still expected to continue but defense lawyers feel that Nixon's pardon will have great influence on the trial of his subordinates. It now seems that Nixon's appearance as a witness is definite.

It is now known that Benton Becker the lawyer who was instrumental in planning the Nixon pardon is being investigated in a federal criminal action. Convicted Maryland land and stock speculator Joel Kline has given the frauds section of the U.S. attorney's office information concerning financial dealings between Mr. Becker and Mr. Kline.

Meanwhile a relative of Richard Nixon says that the former president is "in a deep depression". The pardon he received apparently did nothing to raise his spirits. It was also stated that Nixon is again suffering from the blood clot in his leg which developed last year just prior to his visit to the Middle East. Looking back the relative said "He is a fighter and he wanted to stay there but his mind overcame his emotions."

briefly...

TORONTO: Food prices have risen by 14 per cent from August 1973 to August 1974, and food is the main item which pushed the consumer price index up by 1 per cent in August of this year. Housing was up by nine-tenths of one per cent in the same month.

In general items which could be bought for $100 in 1961 now cost $169.90.

TORONTO: It has been suggested by Lee H. Hames of Chicago, the director of safety education for the American Medical Association, that if the legal drinking age was lowered or entirely eliminated driving habits of young people would be improved.

Mr. Hames feels that if 14 and 15 year olds are allowed to drink legally they will be more able to drink and drive responsibly when they start to drive. Drinking will no longer be new to them and they will have greater knowledge of its effects.

It is hoped that a safer society will result and that prisoner re-habilitation will be more successful.

Some of the proposals involve the abolishment of definite although indeterminate sentences, the creation of the right of a prisoner to apply for parole at any time and to refuse to accept parole release.

"Parole must be a positive step in the correctional process. It is not to be regarded as sentence amelioration, clemency, proof of rehabilitation reward, a right or prison management function."

TORONTO: After a three year study a Senate Committee has proposed significant changes in the Canadian parole system. If these recommendations are

Minister becomes babysitter

Dr. Theodore Tulchinsky, deputy minister of health and welfare in Manitoba was given a new duty when he arrived at his office this week. Barbara Ness, a college student left her four children on the steps of the Manitoba legislature at 7.15 a.m. on Tuesday morning stating that she could not pay for baby-sitting services from her welfare cheques. The children were equipped with lunch bags and a letter for health minister Saul Miller and when Dr. Tulchinsky arrived the guard who discovered the children put them in the minister's hands.

Mrs. Ness will be eligible for aid under the new day-care program which will come into effect in Manitoba on September 1.

Welfare regulations allow for an expenditure of $130 a month to take care of the children and when the story of the Ness children was released several phone calls were received by the ministry of health from women who offered to take care of the children for that amount.

backpage

ACADEMIC RESEARCH LIBRARY

Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date, 176-page, mail order catalog of 5500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage (1-2 days delivery time).
519 GLENROCK AVE.
SUITE #203
LOS ANGELES, CA. 90024
Our materials are sold for research purposes only

IT'S COLLEGE WEEK
at
Lake Ontario Park
(Kingston's Funspot - King St. W.)
BEER TENT : GAMES
RIDES WITH A SCRAMBLER
This week only - Till Sunday
BRING A FRIEND or
MEET ONE THERE
Special Events Each Night

*****
THE TIME IS RIGHT FOR THE
200 M.P.G. SOLEX! miles per gallon
Solex, a well engineered, motor-assist bike, built for economical transportation. Pedal for fun and exercise or turn on the motor to take you around the traffic.
This popular European bike performs at over 200 miles per gallon. Quiet, easy to operate, great for parking. The Solex bike is ideal transportation to work or school.
ONLY $259<sup>95</sup>
at Firestone STORES
900 Princess St. Kingston K7L 1H1
*****

AISTHESIS-1
queen's musical improv group present an education of the senses
Sat. Sept. 21
outside Grant Hall before the concert
SENSES-1

The grease pole held Saturday was just gallant attempts were made by engineering another example of the extent to which Irish David Joe to retrieve the precious tam. students will go to get in a little shit! Many

Course guide appears over five weeks late

This year frosh were left to choose their courses without the benefit of a course guide. The book was supposed to have been mailed to first-year students in early August, but because of financial difficulties, it was finally delivered last Thursday.

Bob Mutrie, editor-in-chief, claims that the delay was a consequence of lack of communication between himself and Liz Milroy, treasurer. He was to receive a total of $5,000 in cheques from Milroy which would cover the costs of publication and distribution. In order for Milroy to send the cheques, she was to obtain authorization from Bob Atkinson, treasurer of ASUS (Arts and Science Undergraduate Society). Last April she received only $1000 and the balance was withheld. She was given no response to her request for more money.

Although Mutrie had already sent the copy to the publishers in early August, no delivery could be made until all the money was paid. Milroy did not receive authorization until early last week and consequently the publication did not appear until Thursday. To date, they have yet to be distributed and remain in boxes in the John Orr room.

However, Mutrie still believes that there is, even at this late date, value for both students and professors in the course guide.

He sees the purpose of the freshmen book as being two-fold; to provide a guideline for students to choose the most suitable courses as well as to provide a useful guide for professors to check the responses of their students and to note the areas where improvements are required.

When asked by the Journal why it appeared so incomplete in certain faculty evaluations, Mutrie stated that many of the DSC's did not receive the kind of response they had anticipated and therefore some of the class evaluations were not included. He claimed that in economics his evaluations were brought to a minimal since the DSC in charge had unfortunately lost the required papers.

He continued to say that as far as he was concerned, course guide this year was more complete than it had ever been previously and on an overall view 80 percent of all courses were covered.

Bus defeated; AMS to 'lease-it'

There will be no Bus-It service for Queen's students this year. Final decision was reached last night when the AMS refused to accept terms of agreement set by the Public Utilities Commission.

To the original PUC demand of charging seven dollars per student (an increase of two dollars over last year), a counter offer was made to the AMS of charging six dollars per student with the stipulation that the service would not begin until November. Both these proposals were refused by the AMS and the motion to continue Bus-It was defeated.

The alternative bus service, proposed by Peter Druxerman, vice president, operations, of obtaining a private bus from Wager Bus Lines for the exclusive use of Queen's students was also rejected by the PUC last night. However, Wager Lines have received a provincial approval to lease buses and at this point, PUC can find no definite by-law to refute it.

Druxerman remains confident that the AMS will obtain its own bus and expects one, brightly painted, to begin its campus circuit route on Monday.

Protracted Bus-It negotiations between the Alma Mater Society (AMS) and the Kingston Public Utilities Commission have dragged on since early summer when the PUC refused to sign a Bus-It contract for less than $7 per student.

However, AMS Vice-President Peter Druxerman countered with an offer of $6 per head, and backed it up with an alternative plan to operate a Queen's bus service. This service, which would cost less than $18,500, would effectively sap the PUC market at Queen's.

Last year under the Bus-It scheme Queen's Students and the university contributed $45,000 to PUC coffers, helping to ease the large deficit incurred by the transit commission. If the AMS were to operate its own bus, the PUC would stand to lose at least $54,000 which they would receive under Druxerman's Bus-It plan of $6 per student for the '74-'75 terms. Forty per cent of this amount would be paid by the university and the rest by students.

Druxerman's alternative to Bus-It - that of leasing a Wager bus which would pick up only Queen's students on its route around the city - became tangled with the Bus-It hassle on Wednesday at a meeting of the Kingston Traffic and Streets Committee. Here Druxerman had hoped to have his plan approved; however, the decision was postponed until last night's PUC meeting on the basis that it was the PUC's responsibility to deal with transit matters.

As of Sunday, no one in either the AMS or the PUC seemed to know if there are city by-laws prohibiting private operation of a bus on Kingston streets. (The producers of the television quiz show, "This is the Law" would love to snare this issue for their show.)

Public Utilities Commissioner Good feels there is no way the PUC can halt such a plan, as a permit to operate the bus should not be necessary. He remarked that the vehicle would allow passengers to board free of charge. Therefore, he stated, the laws which say buses may not stop at certain bus stops without a permit would not apply.

Commissioner Reg Potts spoke out against the plan to lease a bus, saying it would take away potential revenue from the PUC and that it would "confuse people." "There's no way the AMS should run another bus system," he argued. It would mix up the elderly and people new to the city who would try to board the bus, he feels. It would also leave the City of Kingston alone to cover the transit system's deficit.

A confrontation between the two parties may result if the AMS decides to lease a bus now while there's still confusion as to whether they need a permit. Should the PUC protest that the AMS is acting illegally or unfairly, the university administration wouldn't wish to get involved, according to Professor S.S. Lazier, Assistant to the Vice-Principal (Administration). He was sure that every effort would be made to avert a confrontation, but was positive that the university would not raise the amount that it would contribute to Bus-It.

Queen's
Journal
Volume 102, Number 3
Tuesday, September 17, 1974

wat's hapnin'?

Tuesday, Sept. 17

7:00 p.m. - Queen's Karate Club registration will be held in the Combatives Room in the Phys Ed Centre until 9:00.

7:30 p.m. - Artsci '78 elections will be held in Stirling D. All Artsci '78 students are asked to attend.

9:00 p.m. - The Contemporary Cinema Series, in cooperation with the Department of Film Studies, presents Citizen Kane in Ellis Auditorium. The movie is based on the life story of rich megalomaniac William Randolph Hearst as portrayed by Orson Welles in his role as Citizen Kane. Joseph Cotton, Agnes Moorehead, Ray Collins and Everett Sloane also star. Admission is $1.00.

Wednesday, Sept. 18

7:00 p.m. - Queen's Karate Club registration will be held in the Combatives Room in the Phys Ed Centre.

8:00 p.m. - Forum: "Chile: The Struggle Against the Junta" including the film, "When the People Awake", speakers from the Revolutionary Marxist Group and the Chilean emigre community, and discussion. Child care facilities are available. The event will be held in the St. James Church on the corner of Arch and Union Streets.

Thursday, Sept. 19

7:00 - 9:00 p.m. - Queen's Karate Club registration will be held in the Combatives Room in the Phys Ed Centre.

6:00 p.m. - Everyone is welcome to come to the patio behind Ban Righ for an enjoyable hour of folk music. Please bring something to sit on and your musical instrument if you wish. If the weather is rainy, we will move to the Ban Righ common room.

7:00 p.m. - A Debating Union Meeting and Debate will be held in the Meditation Room on the 2nd floor of the Student's Memorial Union. Everyone is welcome.

7:30 p.m. - A general meeting of the Queen's Skydiving Club will be held in the 2nd floor common room in the Students' Union. Everyone is welcome.

Pubs and Theatres

401 Inn - Six Pack
Townhouse - Lifetime
Manor - Julie Lynn
Commodore - Fat Chance
Frontenac-Finnegan's - Paul Kentner
Capitol 1 - Super Cops
Cast - Ron Leibman, David Selby, Sheila Frazier Director: Gordon Parks
Capitol 2 - White Dawn
Cast: Warren Oates, Timothy Bottoms, Lou Gossett
Director: Philip Kaufman
Music: Henry Mancini
This is the first full length feature film to be shot in the High Arctic and for this reason alone is worth seeing.
Hyland - Conrack is playing at the present time but is due to be replaced by Sunshine on Wednesday.
Odeon - Holiday on the Buses
Cast: Reg Varney, Bob Grant, Stephen Lewis and the rest of the series cast.
One of those popular British comedies, this one is based on the television series On The Buses. Somewhat more racy than television will allow, the film will appeal to those who enjoy either the series or British comedy in general.

Domino Theatre - Domino will feature seven productions this year, each playing the usual 3-week Thursday through Saturday schedule plus "Theatre Nights" approved by the Executive. As last year, curtains will rise at 8:30 p.m. and prices at least for Productions 1-6 - remain unchanged at $2.50 per adult and $1.75 for students (on Thursdays only.) Tickets will again be available at Mahood's Drug Store, 156 Princess St. (Tel. 542-7307), Mondays through Saturdays, or at the Theatre (Tel. 542-9066) on playing nights. Due notice will be given to members and the public if prices are increased for the 7th production, a Domino "special". The first show is "Music Hall", a Moira Davies production offering an evening of music, sketches, skits and jokes ranging from the sublime to the ridiculous. Audience participation is encouraged and fun and laughter guaranteed for all. Playing dates: 19-21 and 26-28 September and 3-5 October.

Coming Soon

September 20 - 22 - Collection of books for the ASUS Book Sale will be held in the 2nd floor common room of the Students' Memorial Union between 12:30 and 4:30.

September 21-8:30 - Leon Redbone with Thomas Handy in Grant Hall. Tickets are $2.50 in advance and $3.00 at the door and will be on sale from 12-2 in the Students' Union, at Silver Threads 417 Princess St., Vern Napiers at the Shopping Centre or at the House of Sounds. Redbone is a superb guitarist and one of Canada's most interesting folk blues and jazz singers. Handy is a veteran of the Queen's coffee houses and concert halls.

September 21-8:30 p.m. - At the Grand Theatre Le Groupe de la Place Royale is a vital and dynamic Montreal modern dance company which combines dance with music, film photography and sculpture. The group, founded in 1966, has represented Canada in both Europe and Mexico. The performances "..." Literally explode with originality and imagination, and bubble over with life" quotes the Montreal Star. Tickets are available at The Agnes Etherington Arts Centre for $1.50, $2.50 and $3.50.

September 27 and 28 8:30 p.m. - Pleasure and Repentance. Tickets are available at the Agnes Etherington Arts Centre for $3, $4, and $5.

Coffee Shop

The coffee shop is located downstairs in the Student's Union and is open at the following times: Monday to Thursday: 7:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday: 7:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Sunday: 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Phys. Ed. Centre

These hours will be in effect throughout the academic term except for holiday periods. All activity areas:
Monday to Saturday: 8 a.m. to 11:30 p.m.
Sunday: 2 p.m. to 10:30 p.m.
The building will close one-half hour after these hours.

VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S

VAN'S GIFTS and BOOKS LTD.
282 Princess St.
KINGSTON 542-6676

VAN'S SUPER SPECIALS
Black and White posters, Reg. $1.25, NOW .63;
Colored Sports and Travel posters, Reg. $2.00, NOW .99; Blacklight Posters, Reg. $2.50, NOW $1.25; Colored Rock posters, Reg. $2.00, NOW .99;
18" Complete Blacklight Set, Reg. $20.00, AT VAN'S $13.95, PLUS ONE POSTER FREE!!!
With Blacklight Units.

MON.-FRI. STORE HOURS 9:30 am - 10 pm
SATURDAY 9:30 am - 9 pm
SUNDAY 12:00 - 9 pm
OPEN

VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S

SPECIAL SALE TYPEWRITERS

- Used Underwood and Remington
- Standard
- Office Size
- Good condition

Phone or Visit Commercial Director
Loyalist Collegiate and V.I.
153 VanOrder Dr.
Office: 546-5575 Home: 546-1580

TRICOLOR '75

"If it comes out lousy it's your own fault!"

We want: writers photographers
layouts do-gooders do-badders
ad-writers

Come to the Tricolor office in the bottom of the Union, tonight at 7:30, and do something about ads like these.

Duncan Kerr Men's Shop Is Selling Out! Quitting Business.

WE HAVE:

QUEEN'S SWEAT SHIRTS - "PENMANS" LONG AND SHORT SLEEVE - ON SALE 3.99 EA.
QUEEN'S T-SHIRTS WHITE-NAVY SALE 2.99 EA.
QUEEN'S WINOBREAKERS SALE 11.99 EA.
QUEEN'S UMBRELLAS - SALE 6.99 EA.
QUEEN'S SCARVES - SALE 5.99 EA.
"ROADRUNNER JEANS - SALE 10.00 PR.

350 PRINCESS ST. (LOOK FOR YELLOW-RED SIGNS)

Duncan Kerr Men's Shop

165 slowly tumbles to make way for Centre

by Cindi Hall
For those students who are returning to Queen's and for those who are examining old campus maps, a familiar face has disappeared. One sixty-five University Avenue, the Student Affairs Centre is being razed to make way for the future building of a new University Centre. The Student Affairs service has moved now to the Grey House, 51 Queen's Crescent, which also houses the Birth Control, VD and Abortion Referral Service and the Centre for Drug Education and Counselling. Both of these services are aided financially by AMS monies, with facility and staff support from the Student Affairs Centre.

In a Journal interview, Fin Bogstad, Coordinator of Student Services, explained the recent administrative moves behind the Student Services. As a result of the investigation of a Senate committee report prepared a few years ago, six Student Service groups have been grouped under the co-ordinating hand of Bogstad. These include the Student Counselling Centre, a service which offers educational and personal testing, therapy and individual counselling on an informal key in the Orr House at 32 Queen's Crescent, the Student Health Service located at Stuart Street but moving within the next year to Queen's Crescent (the former Interim Administration Building); Career Planning and Placement, a service which aids in finding temporary and permanent employment and is located on the corner of Union and University Streets, the International Centre in the Student Union complex and the Day Care Centre located at 169 Union Street.

The atmosphere at the Student Affairs Centre is informal and low-key. Located close to the majority of residences at Queen's, students from all faculties and years are encouraged to drop in and make use of the facilities. In addition, in the past many student groups have taken the opportunity to use the building as a meeting place - and they have found the easy chairs, kitchen facilities and lounging rooms comfortable and congenial. The Student Affairs Centre, the principal unit of the building, employs three professional administrators who are able to act as a referral service or clearing-house for the variety of problems which students, staff and faculty bring in, whether academic, personal, or otherwise. The S.A.C. maintains a close liaison with the other student services plus all other branches of the University and the Kingston community as well.

The Birth Control and Drug services are all located in offices on the top floor of the Grey House and are manned by student volunteers. Again these services provide referral and information service as well as personal assistance.

Photographers!

There will be a meeting tonight at 8:00 p.m. in the Tricolor office for last year's staff photos. All those who have not previously worked as photos for Tricolor are asked to come to the Tricolor office in the basement of the Student's Union at 9:00 p.m.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD

TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 9 AM TO MIDNIGHT

COMMODORE HOTEL 840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT

in our Lounge

THIS WEEK

Fat Chance

Amateur Night every Wednesday
Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

COME TO US LAST FOR CARPETS and BROADLOOM!

Because We Buy Bankrupt Stocks, Factory Seconds, Factory Closeouts, Slightly Used Carpet and Insurance Salvage We Can Cover the Floors Of Your "Pad" for a Whole Lot Less than Anyone else in the Carpet Business. So Try Everyone Else First - Then Come to Us Last. "Marie" Promises To Save You a Big Buck. You Won't be Sorry!

2.00 Square Yard	4.00 Square Yard	5.00 Square Yard	6.00 Square Yard	7.00 Square Yard
VALUES TO 4.98	VALUES TO 7.95	VALUES TO 9.95	VALUES TO 10.95	VALUES TO 13.95
SPECIAL GROUP OF FACTORY SECONDS AND SOILED CARPETING	INDOOR OUTDOOR COMMERCIAL CARPET NEW TOPIC CARPET IN 10 GREAT COLORS MINI SHAGS AND NYLON BLENDS	SHAGS NYLON PLUSH CANDY STRIPES NYLON LOOP	COMMERCIAL WITH RUBBER BACK SHAG WITH RUBBER BACK GOOD SELECTION OF COLORS	Beautiful NYLON SHAGS IN LOAOS OF COLOURS

P & M
ENTERPRISES

270 Bagot Street

Half-way Between Princess and Brock Streets

comment

Clean up your act, Frecs

by Dan McClelland

The grease pole farce witnessed on Saturday was both invalid as a competition and a mockery of the rules of fair play. The competition, and I use the term very loosely, needs a more rigorous set of guidelines. Without these, this "race against time" event seems futile.

It is the general understanding that the point of the exercise is to ascend the greased pole in the hope of reaching a tam at the top. The exercise should not be, however, the ability to free the tam from the pole once the climber has reached the top! The tam on Saturday was fastened by three three-inch ardox nails with washers requiring super strength and unnecessary risks to free.

If so much emphasis is placed on freeing the tam, maybe next year the idea of the tall greased pole should be abandoned, and the tam heavily nailed to a fence post.

letters to the editors

Claim of abuse

Dear Editor:

Last Wednesday I resigned as chairman of the AMS Housing Service Committee. I stated, "I no longer have any confidence in the integrity or competence of those AMS administrators who have dealt with the Housing Committee since March 1, 1974. Furthermore, I deplore their thoughtless and callous attitude toward both AMS employees and the Housing Service's tenants."

While most of you were away for the summer, a small number of AMS officers, primarily Peter Druxman and Joyce Roe, committed a series of actions which demonstrated their disregard for the personal financial welfare of individual members of the AMS. These actions in my mind were "unpardonable" and "frighteningly dishonest," for both Peter and Joyce command considerable power in managing your monies and the services you expect to receive through the AMS.

On Feb. 27, 1974, after repeated interference from the 1973-74 AMS executive in the affairs of the Housing Committee, all four members of the Committee stated that unless the Committee was to have full autonomy, i.e. "all necessary authority" to carry out all housing business as stated in the housing contract between the University and the AMS, they would immediately resign. Before any resigning or 1974-75 committee and janitorial hiring were done. Only when these terms were accepted did leasing begin.

One contentious business decision taken unanimously by the committee but opposed by Joyce Roe, was the hiring of a full time Summer Manager. Several sound reasons for the necessity of such an employee were made available to Joyce through Ian Nordheimer the QSA director and the AMS executive's voting member on the housing committee. That evening the 1974-75 budget, which allowed $1200 for the salary of the summer manager, was set with Ian present. He expressed no opposition. Feb. 28 a copy of that budget was on the desk of Tony Wolman and Joyce Roe. No opposition was made. That budget has been in effect since May 1, 1974.

When I was appointed chairman of the 1974-75 housing committee, my committee formally tabled their unanimous decision to hire me for the summer for twelve specified weeks to perform specified tasks at $100 a week. From May 1 to May 29 I worked full-time in this capacity.

When I asked May 17 how and when I got paid, no one would take responsibility for paying me. May 23 Joyce said that she'd never hired me, and because she was Personnel Manager of the AMS (since November 1973, 3 years after the Housing contract granting the committee full authority was signed) I was not entitled to pay. When I asked what she thought I'd been doing working daily in her office if I'd never been hired, she at length conceded that I must have assumed I was Summer Manager. I told her then, and still assert, that waiting three months to express her opposition to the committee's decision to employ me was "irresponsible," and that allowing me to work in her office under the false impression that I was to be employed twelve weeks for $1200 was "dishonourable". It was also dishonest to wait until my committee has done all leasing before challenging the "all necessary authority" clause of the contract. It was cowardly to wait until they had left town to countermand their decision and abuse their employee.

On May 29 Joyce notified me and the AMS Board of Directors that I had never been hired and would not be paid. To date I have received no money for that time period except a $40 chairman's allowance generally issued only September to April. Peter Druxman admitted Tuesday, Sept. 10, 1974 that the whole sequence was a "mistake" of various members of the AMS, principally himself and Ian Nordheimer. Yet no apologies have been made. No attempt was made to compensate for my loss of a job until my finding a new job necessitated my resigning as summer employee of the Housing Committee. Suddenly Peter scrambled to find me a local job which would allow me to get to the AMS office during business hours. His proposal which I accepted, was to retain me as a Summer "Chairperson" at $100 a month. Due to a quibble over whether this $100 is an honorarium or a salary I have received none of it. I have continued to receive $40 monthly as chairman's honorarium.

June 19, 1974 Peter and Joyce made a request to the property manager of the university, who, by the terms of the housing contract, must be retained by the committee to discharge the AMS's responsibility for repairs as outlined in all leases. He was "requested" without my knowledge or approval, to suspend all non-emergency repairs until September. Because of the danger in allowing repairs to wait and the rising cost of labour and materials, this "request" is most ill-advised. From June 12 to August 14, I authorized payment for $2,371.89 to be paid for repairs, many of which were undertaken and completed well before Peter's letter was written. On September 5, I discovered that none of these bills had been paid, at the orders of Peter and Joyce. This order has damaged our credit and cost us interest up to 5 per cent per month.

On Sept. 10, 1974 Peter called his deliberate decision not to inform me of his "request" and his withholding payments due, a "slip". He assured me and my committee that he had intended to wait only 30 days to pay these bills so as to improve our cash flow. Yet, some 87 days later they remained unpaid. (Peter's "slip" in keeping these decisions from me was planned duplicity, a lie renewed every time I authorized a bill. His "slip" in not paying the bills (AMS Housing has no 30 day payment understanding with contractors or tradesmen) was, at best, incompetence.

One must ask whose interest is being served by this secrecy, dishonesty, incompetence and blatant indifference to the welfare of individual members of the AMS. Don't be deceived that you have nothing to do with my being dealt with in this fashion. These summer actions affect you directly if you are an AMS tenant; if you are presently a member of any AMS committee or if you are an AMS employee; if you intend to apply for any 1974-75 AMS office; or if you expect to deal personally with the administration. For if the AMS continues to deposit itself in this inadmiration fashion, you can count on being grossly abused.

Yours truly

Sheila MacInlyre

Queens
Journal

Vol. 102, No. 3
Tues., Sept. 17, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Founded in 1973 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding members of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (613) 547-2604. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

George Bailey
sporting goods
40 Princess Street
Kingston, Ontario
K7L 1A4
Tel. 613-542-2283

TENNIS: WILSON, SLAZENGER, OUNLOP, PATRICK, TENNIS SHOES, CONVERSE, ALL STARS.

PACKS: EVERYTHING FROM MINI TO EXPLOITION SIZE

SKI EQUIPMENT NOROICA BOOTS; VOLKL ANO ATOMIC SKIS, SKI CLOTHING ANO ACCESSORIES

10% OFF TO QUEEN'S STUDENTS ON NON-SALE ITEMS

STUDENTS

We have a large selection of new and used

Beds, Chests, Etc.

At Low Low Prices

Turk's Used Furniture and Antiques

281 Princess St. — 546-5267
OVER 60 YEARS HONEST DEALING

All A.M.S. Constables

General Meeting

Wednesday Sept. 18

7:00 p.m. Jefferey Hall

Theatres

126 - 127 - 128

Friday Fall Film Series '74

presented by

G. S. S. Film Club

clip for reference

1. Sept. 27 Anne of the Thousand Days (Genevieve Bujo & Richard Burton)
2. Oct. 11 Chariot of the Gods (documentary)
3. Oct. 25 Act of the HEART (Canadian Film with Donald Sutherland & Genevieve Bujo)
4. Nov. 8 The Seventh Seal (dir Bergman)
5. Nov. 22 Take the Money and Run (Woody Allen)
6. Dec. 6 Charly (Cliff Robertson - best actor)

Series tickets available at first showing or at the Division of Concerts Box Office, Art Centre.

6 Films for Only $3.00
(Single Admission $1.00 at the door)
(Single Admission $1.00 at the door)
Films shown in Ellis Hall Auditorium, Fridays at 8:00 p.m.
EVERYONE WELCOME!

Info Bank returns

Well frosh - the panic sets in now that there's no Que Pasa to flip through in a moment of need or gael to run to with a problem that needs solving. And gael, frecs and bosses, as you breathe a sigh of relief you must feel a pang of anxiety at the idea of a day without a handbook. Luckily for you, two far-sighted young ladies have anticipated your feelings as the Orientation handbook becomes obsolete and you wait patiently for Who's Where to appear. Together they have set about to remedy the situation and have found a way to inform you of what's happening. The result is Information Bank which has been set up in the John Orr Room of the Union and is open from 9:30 a.m. to 5:45 p.m.

Started last year as a student-run service which is financed by the AMS Internal Affairs Department, Information Bank is a place to find out anything you need to know about Queen's or Kingston. Susan Meech and Kathy Wood are the chief volunteers who direct the operation and together with their team of student volunteers they dole out pamphlets about concerts and art shows, hand out information about clubs and activities on campus and in town and can even tell you where to go to get speakers for your stereo!

All that the Information Bank needs is some volunteers who can give an hour each week to help staff telephones and desks - what better way to get to know what's going on at Queen's?

unclassifieds

LOST: One ladies watch with blue face and white wristband - Lost Saturday night somewhere between Leonard and Grant Halls. Would finder please call Betsy at 546-7892. Reward.

ACCOMMODATION available in luxury apartment for sincere, masculine, clean cut and discreet gay student. Call 546-1276 evenings.

TEN SPEED Gifane, 23", safety brakes, good running condition. 575. Phone 546-2902.

KINGSTON STAMP CLUB - first meeting Monday Sept. 23 at 7:30 pm at the Church of the Redeemer on Kinkpatrick St. All stamp collectors welcome. For more info call 546-7880 after 5:30 pm.

FOR SALE: Danish couch $40; oak chest $50; coffee table $10; wooden bed frame $10; wooden chest $10. Please call 389-2870 after 5:00 pm.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 Ltd. has expanded their processing lab and can now offer 24 hour service on all black and white processing and ektachrome slide developing. For further information, call 546-7770 or drop by at 33 Brock St.

GAEL GROUP 102 - last but definitely not least - thanks for a super week! Watch the Journal for the times and places of our reunions. Ian, Joe, Heather and Ila.

THE NEW AND IMPROVED BONAZZO FAMILY has once again opened its portals to friends and relatives (sons and daughters) and other street urchins. There's a party at 160 Johnson, Friday the 20th, whenever.

QUEEN'S STUDENT CHRISTIAN MOVEMENT fall programme will be screening NFB films on Hinduism, Buddhism, and examining generally the parallels between Eastern and Western meditation. Politically we're looking at China and showing films on the Chinese revolutionary figure of the Canadian Dr. Norman Bethune. If you're interested or curious about helping organize these or other activities, please drop by the Bookroom (Union basement west side door) on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons and evenings or call 542-7010 anytime.

FOR QUICK SALE - Sony stereo system, STR 110, 52210A and TC 122 cassette deck. Ideal for Res. room - a steal at $260. Call Mark at 546-3907.

TOLU, LOUISE, PAUL and Arsel '78 Orientation Committee - thanks for a great week - Gael group No. 85.

GET ON IT RIGHT AWAY. If you are living in Science 144 co-op and haven't registered for winter co-op do it now. Smiling faces and a warm welcome await you at 387 Brock St., 9:30 to 12:30 am.

STAMPS for collectors. Come to the first meeting of the Queen's Philatelic Society, i.e. a stamp club. We will have stamps for sale, collections, auction catalogues etc. We need help! Come to the Red Room in Kingston Hall, 7:30 pm. Tuesday, Sept. 17.

ANYONE WHO WAS A MEMBER of the Queen's fencing teams in previous years or who is interested in fencing please meet in the Phys Ed Centre second floor lounge 8:00 pm on Thursday Sept. 19. Any questions phone 542-4711 or 544-5243.

LOST: One yellow sailing parka with ear keys in pocket. If found please call Kurt at 542-5929.

COKE'S PIERRE THE BEER, AND HARTSY invite all their friends and relations to their housewarming Friday Sept. 20th (ending April 20th). Welcome at 195 Apt. 3 are: All Francis C. P. third Leonard boys (featuring Lobanelli, Twals, the big w the big B, the big M, Chates, Wild Bill, Bodo, Doss McPhedrun, Furd, Pete the head, McCoekmick, Uncks, Chains, Bromberger), 258 Albert, the cile-bunder loyvi (joint), Boston, Syracuse, Massachusetts, Jean's 3E floor, Gael Group 50, Our sister floor and our sister house the greyhound hockey boosters and all the rest who don't have catchy names!

FOUND - brown leather purse, on Pembroke St., Friday 13th, contact case inside. Phone 544-9555.

TO THE UNIFORMED: the new and improved Bonazo family includes such illustrious newcomers as Laurie McFrieders and Ian Nordheimer (who invited him anyway?) Their friends welcome too at the Friday night

WANTED: One girl to share a three bedroom apt. with two other girls. Alired St. Rent $42 a month. Call 546-7595.

LIVING GAY IS POSSIBLE in Kingston. Call Terry Watson at 547-2834 Mon. to Thurs. 8-9 pm or write to Student Affairs Centre, c/o Terry Watson.

I NEED PEOPLE to work on concession booths at some or all home football games and hockey games as well as concerts. Pay $2.00/hr. if interested call Bill at 546-4733.

THE 1974 2E ALUMNAE is holding a most tantalizing reunion in the Queen's Pub, Thursday Sept. 19th at 8 pm. "Tantos ganoks" welcome. (non-participants will be abused!)

STOLEN: 1 1963 dark green international Trauball. Engineering initiation week. Sept. 10, 1974. Please call 326-3877 as to location of my truck. I need it!

ALL STUDENTS ARE INVITED regardless of legal knowledge or opinions are welcomed to gain a general idea of the current legislation will be based in part on opinions expressed here and around the province.

FOUND: a set of keys on Wellington St. Call 542-1539.

OMINO THEATRE is holding a "Music Hall" where fun and laughter are on the curriculum. Join in the fun and have a beer. DATES 19, 20, 21 Sept. 27, 28 Sept. 3, 4, 5, Oct. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31. Sat. Matinees or door.

OPEN HOUSE at the home of the Rev and Mrs. Eric Howes (Anglican Chaplain, Queen's University.) Thursday Sept. 19 at 8:00 pm. Apt. No. 1, 148 Barrie St. Coffee and dessert served - all welcome.

More on Pages 3 & 11

Jobs, food, rooms, entertainment

After almost 18 months of hard restoration work, Hotel Frontenac is again fully operational. Our dining lounge, the best in Kingston - featuring great beef and charcoal broiled steaks, is opening in a few days.

We require personable staff capable of serving fine food with flair. Ability to prepare flambe dishes at table desirable. Students able to work a minimum of two evenings per week are invited to apply for work in "The Buttery". Send written resume to Mrs. Anne McConnell at the hotel.

Finnegan's and Muldoon's Pubs are being continually upgraded and will provide a most congenial atmosphere for our favourite customers to meet. We have scheduled great entertainment for the fall and winter in both rooms. Watch for announcements! We require part-time staff for the bars and floor and invite interested persons to send written resumes to Mrs. Anne McConnell at the hotel.

All of our rooms have been redecorated and have new wall to wall broadloom. Each room has a washbasin and telephone. We are installing cable T.V. There are new showers and washrooms on each floor. These rooms are available for rent to Queen's students for the entire year. References required.

Rates are $90.00 for a single and $120.00 for a double per month. (Chamber maid service)

Hotel Frontenac

178-188 ONTARIO
Tel 544-6881

YOUR HOSTS: ANNE AND BRENDAN MCCONNELL

CITY OF KINGSTON

COLLECTION OF GARBAGE

The co-operation of all citizens is requested in improving the appearance of the City by complying with the following sections of:

BY-LAW NO. 181

13. No person shall place out any receptacles on the street allowance before 6 P.M. on the day prior to garbage collection.

14. The receptacle shall be removed from the street allowance prior to 12 midnight on the day of collection.

15. All waste paper in the possession of an occupant who desires to get rid of same, shall be solidly made into a bundle or roll, firmly tied and shall be deposited close to the receptacle reserved for garbage. Dry refuse may be placed out in cardboard cartons if securely tied or fastened with cord, tape or staples. Empty cardboard cartons must be broken down and tied in bundles.

PLEASE NOTE:

Collection Days for South of Princess St.

Monday & Thursday

Collection Days for North of Princess St.

Tuesday & Friday

For further information please call City Yard 542-7474

PLEASE CLIP AND SAVE FOR FURTHER REFERENCE

D. Graham, P. Eng.
Commissioner of Works.

Department of Film Studies
Presents

Contemporary Cinema Series

Tuesday evenings at 9:00 pm
Ellis Auditorium

- Sept. 17 CITIZEN KANE (USA 1941) Directed by Orson Welles. Starring: Orson Welles, Joseph Cotton.
- Sept. 24 SLAUGHTERHOUSE-FIVE (USA, 1972) Directed by George Roy Hill. Starring: Michael Sacks, Valerie Perrine
- Oct. 1 DAVID HOLZMAN'S DIARY (USA, 1967) Directed by Jim McBride. With L. M. Kit Carson
- Oct. 8 8½ (Italy, 1963) Directed by Federico Fellini. Starring: Marcello Mastroianni and Claudia Cardinale.
- Oct. 15 NIGHT OF THE FOLLOWING DAY (USA, 1969) Directed by Hubert Cornfield. Starring: Marlon Brando, Richard Boone, Rita Moreno
- Oct. 22 ZABRISKIE POINT (USA, 1970) Directed by Michelangelo Antonioni. Starring: Mark Frechette, Daria Halprin
- Oct. 29 WEEKEND (France, 1968) Directed by Jean-Luc Godard. Starring: Mireille Darc, Jeanne Yanne
- Nov. 5 SHOOT THE PIANIST (France, 1960) Directed by Francois Truffaut. Starring: Charles Aznavour, Nicole Berger
- Nov. 12 LOVE AFFAIR, OR THE CASE OF THE MISSING SWITCHBOARD OPERATOR (Yugoslavia, 1967) Directed by Dusan Makavejev. Starring: Eva Ras, Ruzica Sokic
- Nov. 19 PASSION OF ANNA (Sweden, 1969) Directed by Ingmar Bergman. Starring: Max Von Sydow, Liv Ullmann, Bibi Andersson
- Nov. 16 HIGH SCHOOL (USA, 1969) Directed by Frederick Wiseman
- Dec. 3 LAST YEAR AT MARIENBAD (France-Italy, 1961) Directed by Alain Resnais. Starring: Ophelie Seyrig, Sacha Pitoell

Tours Of The Douglas Library

Continuing Sept. 16 - 20

Every hour on the hour

9 a.m. - 4 p.m.

The Department of Film Studies and The Division of Concerts
Present

Two Evening Film Series

Series A: Films of Alfred Hitchcock

- Sept. 20 FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT (1940)
Oct. 10 NOTORIOUS (1946)
Nov. 1 I CONFESS (1952)
Nov. 28 NORTH BY NORTHWEST (1959)
Jan. 16 PSYCHO (1960)
Jan. 30 MARNIE (1964)
Feb. 27 TORN CURTAIN (1966)
Mar. 20 FRENZY (1971)

Series B: Films of Francois Truffaut

- Oct. 3 400 BLOWS (1959)
Oct. 24 JULES AND JIM (1961)
Nov. 15 THE BRIDE WORE BLACK (1968)
Dec. 5 STOLEN KISSES (1968)
Jan. 23 MISSISSIPPI MERMAID (1969)
Feb. 14 WILD CHILD (1970)
Mar. 7 BED AND BOARD (1970)
Apr. 3 ANNE AND MURIEL (1971)

Each Series $10.00

All films at 8:00 pm in Ellis Hall
Tickets on sale at Department of Film Studies.

154 Stuart Street

DREAMS

We enter the unknown, the dim and ancient house of shadows

by Wendy Reynolds

When we fall asleep, we enter a dim and ancient house of shadow, unilluminated by any direct ray from the outer world of waking life. We are borne about through its chambers, without conscious volition of our own; we move among images we can't consciously control.

As we emerge into the world of daily life again, for an instant the sunlight seems to flash into the obscure house before the door closes behind us; we catch one vivid glimpse of the chambers in which we have been wandering.

But they soon fade away in the light of common day and if a few hours later we seek to recall the strange experiences through which we have passed, it usually happens that the visions of the night have already dissolved in memory, into a few shreds of mist we can no longer reconstruct.

The study of dreams has fascinated man from time immemorial resulting in the evolution of countless theories to explain them or at least attempt to understand them. One primitive belief, still held among the non-technological peoples at least, was that the body was being invaded by evil spirits during sleep.

The apparent reality of the dream experience is responsible for the ancient notion that dreams are actual experiences of the soul which has become detached from the body during sleep and roams heaven and earth. The dream according to this view is a record of the soul's nocturnal journey.

This wandering soul theory gave rise to several folk customs. It was thought to be dangerous to awaken a sleeping person suddenly since the soul might not have had time to get back into the body, in which case the person would die. A queen of Libya purportedly sought payment from a young man after he confessed to having had sexual relations with her in a dream. She argued that since the man's soul had enjoyed itself carnally with her, he should pay the price for such pleasure.

The sleep metaphor and dream vision have been favorite literary techniques among authors from Chaucer to Yeats. Poetry of the middle English period followed rigid literary conventions; one of these was the dream vision, a kind of poem-within-a-poem.

The narrator of Chaucerian poems typically fell asleep while pondering some perplexing problem. While asleep, he would dream a solution, then awake and find his world had been righted by the dream's answer.

One of Shakespeare's favorite metaphors was the sleeping, dreaming one. In fact, he used it frequently in elaborate constructions to show the contrast between the "normal" world of reality and a dreaming world of suspended beliefs, sometimes, as with "A Midsummer Night's Dream", extending it throughout the entire play.

Through the looking glass

There are countless other authors who have employed the dream as a metaphor. Lewis Carroll in "Alice in Wonderland" is a prime example of the creative genius using the dream to explain a fantasy and relate it to the awakened world in a plausible fashion.

The "stomach-ache" theory of dreams, or the "distemper of inward parts" was a favourite explanation circa the seventeenth century. It was believed that during waking life, the emotion of anger, for example, caused some part of the body to become overheated. When, during sleep, this same part of the body rose in temperature due to internal changes, the effect was to produce a dream in which the dreamer was angry.

More recently, dreams have been described as the "dress rehearsal" for life. As this implies, they cover much varied ground, trying out many possibilities that the future could hold in store before the live performance is acted out once and for all. In a crisis, when life is particularly threatened by outside circumstances or inner stultification, a person usually has the most vivid and meaningful dreams. Dreams are also disconcertingly honest.

They can tell us what we need as well as what we are. Dreaming involves directing the attention especially to whatever is most in need of being ignored or rejected by him in everyday waking attitudes.

Freudian psychoanalysis is based largely upon the dream theory which conceived of the idea that conscious thoughts and feelings would have been submerged without a knowledge of understanding of the patient's dreams. Analysts today, depending on their field of origin, may draw on dream data, but not to the extent Freud contended was necessary. He advocated a strict focussing on every detail of the dream and gave interpretations with heavily sexual connotations.

From a psychological point of view, a dream is a succession of images, predominantly visual in quality, which are experienced during sleep. A dream contains one or more scenes and a sequence of actions and interactions usually involving the dreamer. It resembles a motion picture or the production in which the dreamer is both participant and an observer. Although a dream is a hallucination, since the events of a dream do not actually take place, the dreamer experiences it as though he were seeing something real, people, objects and actions often seem just to the dreamer as they would if seen by him in waking life. Sometimes we even confuse a dream with an actual experience and ask, "Did it happen or was it only a dream?"

The appearance of a dream is also evidenced by the fact we may wake up with pounding heart and gasping or a scream on our lips because some frightened us in a dream. Talking and wakening sleep also tend to confirm the idea that a dream is often experienced as though it were real.

It is not that a dream is a succession of mental pictures for the finding that a dream occupies a brief period of time, perhaps only a few seconds in many instances. A picture is very cool since it manages to say a great deal in a short time.

Biologists, in furthering their attempts to understand the inner workings of the human mind, have divided several stages of sleep. The period at which dreams occur is the rapid eye movement (REM) stage. This occupies about 20 per cent of an average night's sleep.

One goes through each of these stages in sequence throughout the night, but for varying lengths of time. The first dream will usually occur about after falling asleep and will last for a few seconds or minutes. As the night wears on, dreams become longer, sometimes lasting as long as an entire feature film.

REM requires all four stages of sleep and the REM deprivation of any stage leads to acute anxiety and sleep tests performed on subjects that if a person is awakened just before he enters REM, and hence dream, all night for several days in a row, he becomes aggressive to the point of being violent and eventually will not awaken pushed, prodded or yelled at during REM. Furthermore will REM immediately upon waking, skipping the normal first four stages.

The practical application of this for us is the knowledge that when we haven't been getting regular amounts of sleep for a few nights in a row, the first stage which we make up is REM. This seems to point to the theory that dreaming releases tensions which must be gotten rid of in order to function adequately in waking situations.

Because dreams are hallucinations, should we therefore dismiss them as mere derangements of the mind unworthy of serious study and contemplation? If we did this to dreams, then we would have to dismiss all of the great works of art, literature and music, in fact everything that has been created out of the mind of man. For dreams too, are creative expressions of the human mind. They are the portals through which we can view the workings of our minds.

"To sleep perchance to dream"

During sleep the brain continues to function. The sleeping person is capable of thinking, forming conceptions and ideas. The mind is continually engaged in forming ideas. Therefore dreams like language, embody a person's thoughts.

"A dream can be considered a work of genius, and in many respects, perhaps most, especially vividness of imagination, the best example we have," wrote Henry Holt at the turn of the century in "Dream Life is Superior to Waking Life". "We are all geniuses that far. Of all works of genius, a dream is the most spontaneous, constructed with the least effort from the fewest materials, the least restrained and often immeasurably surpassing all works of waking genius in the same department."

There is a difficulty intrinsic in human nature when attempts are made to interpret the "work of genius", a dream. When we state, after a particularly vivid dream, our recollection of it and particularly our account of it to someone else will be bound to contain a further element of elaboration to make it seem just a little less chaotic. If its general emotional flavour was disturbing or alarming, our explanation of it is far more likely to be a rationalization than a true interpretation, which can only be reached with the skill and responsible help of someone else trained to evaluate and interpret our own associations to the material of the dream itself. Self-analysis of dreams can be fun like reading your daily horoscope or reading tea leaves, but probably just as general and as open to vague interpretations.

Dreams provide us with our only direct link to the subconscious. Sometimes we enjoy them, sometimes we fear them, but mostly we're intrigued by them. The fascination of the unknown accounts for it, the land of dreams is one of the few remaining frontiers which we have yet to understand, let alone conquer.

"The whole place around her became alive with the strange creatures of her little sister's dream. So she sat on, with closed eyes, and half believed herself in Wonderland, though she knew she had but to open them again and all would change to dull reality."

"... perhaps even with the dream of Wonderland of long-ago"

A.M.S. PAGE

The AMS Page is to be a regular feature of the Tuesday Journal. Its goal is to stimulate interest in the affairs of the AMS and to be a forum for any person who wishes to present his or her viewpoint on an issue relating to the AMS. All submissions are welcome and they should be placed in the AMS Page box in the AMS office. The deadline for submissions is noon on Friday.

The other function of this page is to advertise events and services sponsored by the AMS. Keep on top of what your student government is doing by reading the AMS Page.

ONTARIO FEDERATION OF STUDENTS CHIEF DELEGATE

The position of Chief Delegate
to O.F.S. for the A.M.S. is open.

Applications should be submitted to the A.M.S.
Office in the basement of the Students' Union
by 5 p.m. Tuesday, September 24, 1974.

Uncle Sam Needs YOU! and so does the A.M.S. Education Commission

Students interested in extra-curricular involvement within the
A.M.S. Education Commission are invited to submit their names for:

I. LONG TERM INVOLVEMENT:

A- Public Relations Co-ordinator Job Description:

—To open communications between the commission and Queen's students. To work with the AMS PAGE editor in planning Education Commission ads and articles, etc. To co-ordinate a central bureau for information concerning the campus to be publicized bi-monthly if possible.

B- Secretary Job Description:

—The taking of all Commission meeting minutes. To be responsible for keeping all Commission files up to date. Current events research of relevant material from campus publications.

C- Academic Advisor Job Description:

—To promote and organize (via sub committees) low cost seminars, discussions, etc., on topics of interest to Queen's students. Organize debates and think tanks concerning Outer Council motions, Ontario Federation of students' activities, university policies and the activities of all five AMS Commissions.

II. SHORT TERM INVOLVEMENT:

—Students are needed to organize individual seminars, discussion groups, panels, or lectures of an educational nature and of interest to Queen's students such as:

- A- Are students of the '70's apathetic or have priorities shifted?
- B- Have modern day entrance qualifications any meaning?
- C- Are professors at Queen's for research or for teaching?
- D- Modern day nutrition: fact or fiction?

III- RESEARCHERS:

Researchers are needed on many topics such as:

- A- Interdisciplinary courses investigation.
- B- Survey of student needs for 74-75.
- C- Changes in Secondary School education and their effect on today's universities and their students.

If you are interested in any of these positions, call GAYE CLEMON at the AMS OFFICE, 547-6165.
Drop in for a chat and leave your name, address and phone number.

Long Range Planning Committee of the Education Commission

MEETING

Tomorrow - Wednesday, Sept. 18

7.00 p.m.

Meditation Room, 2nd Floor
Students' Union

Please be there as we have a lot of really important items to discuss.

If you cannot make it phone
Chris Porter - 549-5241.

A.M.S. TYPING SERVICE NOW OPEN

RATES

50'/double spaced page (8½ x 11)

90'/single spaced page (8½ x 11)

SPECIALIZING IN THESIS WORK

$1.00 per page

ALMA MATER SOCIETY OFFICE
BASEMENT STUDENT'S UNION

A.M.S. TYPING SERVICE

PHOTOCOPYING

XEROX 2400

&

XEROX 1000

5¢ per copy

BASEMENT, STUDENTS' UNION
MONDAY-FRIDAY 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Weissberg and Deliverance: Country music and "corn"

by Kerry White

Eric Weissberg and Deliverance put on a great show Thursday night in Grant Hall. Their sound might best be described as country rock; their talents range from traditional bluegrass and plaintive country ballads to a sort of country boogie. The addition of electric guitar, bass and percussion to the traditional bluegrass instruments (banjo, fiddle, dobro and jew's harp) produces a unique sound which combines that of the great old men of bluegrass: Bill Monroe, Lester Flatt and Earl Scruggs with traditional "country" music and modern rock. The band played as a tight unit and it was obvious that their music gave them as much joy as it gave to their enthusiastic audience. The personalities of the musicians added much to the friendly, back-kitchen atmosphere in the hall. Corny humour abounded - Weissberg introduced the group's song from the movie "Deliverance", "Dueling Banjos" as "a medley of our hit."

Charlie Brown displayed great talent on lead guitar. He played in a traditional country style, but the sustained notes of the electric guitar gave a different character to the music than does the traditional acoustic guitar. Brown showed great dexterity in his instrumental contributions to both bluegrass and country rock numbers. A strong vocal talent was also displayed in such songs as "A Ride in Country".

Richard Crooks displayed no great originality on drums, but originality is unnecessary and perhaps impossible within the framework of such simple music. In any case, he very ably provided a strong and steady beat. Heavy percussion is not common in either country music or bluegrass but it really added to the country rock sound of such songs as "Working Man's Blues". Unfortunately, the drums were not always sufficiently subdued for the quieter country tunes and the bluegrass numbers - the result was often an obscuring of words and harmony.

Tony Brown displayed great dexterity on bass guitar, plus a good singing voice. If his voice was a little harsh, it suited perfectly the songs he sang.

Weissberg picks banjo during solo in Thursday's concert

Eric Weissberg displayed great versatility, playing banjo, fiddle, dobro and jew's harp, and singing during most numbers. He is best known for his playing of the banjo, and he plays it well, but he plays the fiddle with much more skill. His vocal talents also cover a wide range, from the raucous tones of "Working Man's Blues" to the much gentler ones of "Hitchhiker".

The group as a whole epitomizes the concept of bluegrass as a sort of "rural string-band jazz". This was especially evident in the instrumental bridges, where each performer was given an opportunity to carry the group. Crooks performed an impressive drum solo during Country Canyon Boogie; Charlie Brown shone on electric guitar during the same song. Country Canyon Boogie epitomizes the jazz principle at work within this group: it started with simple banjo and guitar picking in the traditional bluegrass style, elaborated this theme by the use of the modern sound of electric and bass guitars, and then returned to the original theme.

Perhaps the central section of the song, especially Crooks' drum solo, strayed rather too far from the initial theme, but the music was always enjoyable.

The group played a variety of songs. It is obvious that they enjoy most the improvisation involved in country rock numbers such as "Working Man's Blues" and "Country Canyon Boogie," but they also display great talent in rendering traditionally plaintive country ballads such as "Thanks for Lovin' Me", and traditional bluegrass numbers such as "Dream Stealer", "Uncle Ben", (by Bill Monroe) and "Foggy Mountain Breakdown" (by Lester Flatt and Earl Scruggs). The traditional country numbers displayed strong vocal and instrumental skills; the bluegrass numbers all the close harmony and "whirlwind magic" of voice and instrument that is so much a part of this musical style.

The concert was totally entertaining. It set toes a-tapping and hands a-clapping, and made us all feel that "corny" country music is not only quaint and folk, but infinitely enjoyable.

Leon Redbone in concert

If you should happen to find yourself interested in a mixture of good music and deadpan comedy, perhaps you should attend the next concert sponsored by High Rollers. High Rollers in collaboration with Queen's Entertainment Association is presenting Leon Redbone in concert with guest artist Thomas Hardy. Hardy calls himself a 'veteran of Queen's coffee houses and concert halls', but at this concert the real feature is Leon Redbone, an artist and showman of whom much and little can be said.

Of his concert performances critics have found much to say, and most of their comment and praise involves comparisons with famous comedians and musicians. Time Canada has compared Redbone's recent rise to fame with that of Joni Mitchell, while other reviewers see him as something of a 'black sheep brother to Dylan'. Redbone usually plays and sings old folk blues and jazz, although frequently resorts to imitations and even nursery rhymes. His comedy has elicited comparisons with Groucho Marx, whom he resembles, and with other comedians from Al Jolson to Martin Mull.

Of his history, however, little is known. Redbone admits to nothing except that he was born in 1910 (which one can almost believe, since he dresses in the style of the '20's). But whereas his past is clouded, his future looks clearly successful. Redbone is expected to release his first record with Atlantic soon, although critics doubt that his recordings can capture much of his showmanship for which he owes his fame.

That showmanship will be displayed on Saturday at 8:30 in Grant Hall. Tickets are $2.50 advance and $3.00 at the door, and are on sale at the Student Union and other outlets.

Queen's University

Music
Department

ANNOUNCES OPENINGS IN THE FOLLOWING PERFORMING GROUPS FOR THE 1974/75 SEASON:

CHAMBER SINGERS:

DR. RUDDLF SCHNITZLER, DIRECTOR. A VOCAL ENSEMBLE FOR THE PERFORMANCE OF MUSIC FROM THE LATE RENAISSANCE TO THE PRESENT. REHEARSALS: 3:30 - 5:00 P.M. MONDAY AND 2:30-4:00 P.M. WEDNESDAY.

COLLEGIUM MUSICUM:

DR. WILBUR MAUST, DIRECTOR. AN ORGANIZATION FOR THE PERFORMANCE OF MEDIEVAL, RENAISSANCE AND EARLY BAROQUE MUSIC, MADE UP OF VOCALISTS AND PLAYERS OF INSTRUMENTS OF THE ABOVE PERIODS. REHEARSALS: (SLOT 13) 1:30 P.M. MONDAY, 12:30 P.M. WEDNESDAY AND 11:30 A.M. FRIDAY.

CHORAL ENSEMBLE:

DENISE NARCISSE-MAIR, DIRECTOR. OPEN TO ALL STUDENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY FOR THE PERFORMANCE OF MUSIC FOR LARGE CHORUS IN ALL STYLES FROM THE BAROQUE TO THE AVANT GARDE. REHEARSALS: (SLOT 12) MONDAYS: 12:30-1:30 WEDNESDAYS: 11:30-12:30, THURSDAYS: 1:30-2:30.

CHAMBER ORCHESTRA:

DAVID KEANE, DIRECTOR. AN ORCHESTRA PERFORMING STANDARD REPERTOIRE FROM THE LATE RENAISSANCE TO THE PRESENT. OPEN TO ALL UNIVERSITY STAFF AND STUDENTS. REHEARSALS: 3:30-5:00 P.M. MONDAY AND 2:30-4:00 P.M. WEDNESDAY

WIND ENSEMBLE:

DR. DUANE BATES, DIRECTOR. OPEN TO EXPERIENCED, WOODWIND AND PERCUSSION PLAYERS, PERFORMING SERIOUS CONCERT BAND AND WIND ENSEMBLE LITERATURE. REHEARSALS: 2:30-4:00 P.M. TUESDAYS AND THURSDAYS.

IMPROVISATION GROUP /NEW MUSIC ENSEMBLE:

A GROUP OF INDIVIDUALS FROM A VARIETY OF DISCIPLINES INTERESTED IN THE PERFORMANCE OF NEW AND AVANT GARDE MUSIC AND DANCE THEATRE IN CONJUNCTION WITH VISUAL ART, FILM AND TECHNOLOGY. INTEGRATED MEDIA. MEETS 4:30-5:30 THURSDAYS.

JAZZ ENSEMBLE:

DR. DUANE BATES, DIRECTOR. A FULL STAGE BAND PERFORMING STANDARD AND NEW WORKS FOR THAT MEDIUM. REHEARSALS: (SLOT 12) MONDAY, 12:30-1:30 WEDNESDAY, 11:30-12:30, and THURSDAYS, 1:30-2:30.

FOR MORE INFORMATION:

PERSONS INTERESTED IN AUDITIONING FOR ANY OF THE ABOVE ORGANIZATIONS OR FOR FURTHER INFORMATION PLEASE CONTACT: MRS. LIN ROWE, MUSIC DEPARTMENT, 547-5783.

Queen's Drama

Comedy Tonight! Shaw, Coward, Pinter

To inaugurate the new academic year, the Queen's Department of Drama is presenting "Comedy Tonight!," a hilarious bill highlighting some of the best British humour of the twentieth century.

David Kemp and Pat Northcott appear in G. B. Shaw's "Dark Lady of the Sonnets", one of three parts in the Drama Department's Comedy Tonight!

The evening begins with "Dark Lady of the Sonnets", a delightfully witty farce by George Bernard Shaw. Combining the renowned Shavian wit with a plot full of surprising twists and broad comic devices, Dark Lady is a tremendously clever sex comedy of mistaken identity.

The first act continues with five Revue Sketches by Harold Pinter. Most famous for his more serious pieces, Pinter proves in these short vignettes that he's not only an acute observer of English life, but also that he's attuned to the occasionally ribald, occasionally poignant, but always funny little moments that occur when we drop our guard and reveal our frailties.

The evening concludes with an excerpt from "Private Lives" by Noel Coward. Its witty dialogue and sound sexual psychology have made this one of the most entertaining and frequently revived high comedies of the century.

Overall, "Comedy Tonight!" tries to capture the many moods of great contemporary British comedy. The gamut runs from high to low, from slapstick to sophisticated repartee, but in the end we realize that we're laughing at our own frailties and foibles.

The plays are directed by Bernard Burkom and designed by Russ Waller. The cast is composed mainly of members of the staff of the Drama Department, the stage crew primarily of Drama students. "Comedy Tonight!" runs Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, September 19, 20, 21 in Convocation Hall on Queen's Campus. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. Tickets are available at the Department of Drama, 547-6291, or at the door. Admission is free but a silver collection will be taken.

Borduas Collection at Agnes Etherington

The large gallery at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre contains at present the Borduas Collection, a travelling exhibition of works acquired by the Federal Government for the Musée d'Art contemporain, Montreal, and circulated by the National Gallery of Canada. The collection is comprised of 46 canvases, plus a number of sketches, water-colours and documents.

Paul-Emile Borduas was the leader of an important Canadian school of art, the Automatists; and the works in this collection, painted between 1942 and 1960, represent milestones in his artistic development. Borduas was greatly influenced by the Surrealist school, which was so important in Europe during the twenties and thirties. The aim of the Surrealists, and of Borduas Automatism, was to create works which expressed the true process of thought, free of the influence of reason, morality and aesthetics. To this end Borduas attempted to move away from the purely objective representation of objects in his work, and it is interesting to follow in his art the steady progress which he made toward this goal. Early in this period his paintings include stylized objects, but the subjects are still recognizable by the merest suggestion of shape. Borduas himself admitted later that these works had not been genuinely surrealist. A later series of paintings, done by the sea, are truer to the ideals of this school.

While there are no actual representations of the sea, the sand and the dunes, the brownish colour of the sand, the washed-out white, the blacks and the salmon-pinks recall the colours of a seashore. During his last years Borduas eliminated the use of all colours excepting black and white hoping to achieve a new spatial dimension by further reducing his visual resources. "There is no longer traditional perspective -- neither aerial nor linear -- but there is nevertheless a third dimension which is expressed without the help of a whole series of planes. In the last paintings, colour really played just this role of intermediary between one plane and another. And since the intermediaries no longer apply, colour doesn't either. Borduas' late paintings are interesting in that they are reversible -- the planes are interchangeable, and it is almost impossible to tell whether black on white or white on black was intended.

Late in his life, Borduas defined the role of the artist: "It seems most urgent that people recognize those committed individuals capable of profoundly transforming the human adventure, rather than joining the despairing multitude."

The exhibition continues until September 29.

E.P. MURPHY & SON LTD.
Sea Food Restaurant
SPECIAL BEAVER and BEAR STEAKS
70 Brock St. 548-7753

ACADEMIC RESEARCH LIBRARY

Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date, 176-page, mail order catalog of 5500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage (1-2 days delivery time).
519 GLENROCK AVE.
SUITE #203
LOS ANGELES, CA. 90024
Our materials are sold for research purposes only

Defense impressive despite opening loss

by Jim LeMesurier

The Golden Gaels managed a good fight by remaining in close contention through three quarters in their season opener Saturday night, stumbling to a 27-7 defeat. Ottawa's more balanced and consistent attack kept them in front all the way while their stubborn defense forced Queen's from sustaining a single drive to the end zone. The 6,000 fans, at Lansdowne Park, saw an entertaining and, despite ill turnovers, a generally well executed game.

As expected, the Gee Gees established their dominance early as they capped their second offensive series with halfback Dave White's rightside sweep for a 29 yard major, after a 62 yard drive. Neil Lumsden's convert made it 7-0 at 8:41. The Gaels looked impressive on their next play from scrimmage as starting quarterback Raold Serebrin hit Greg Anderson at the sideline for a 21 yard gain but couldn't move the ball on the ground and quickly lost possession on a third down gamble. Working from his own 49, sharpshooting quarterback Jim Colton directed the Gee Gees' downfield on 21 and 18 yard tosses to flankers Terry West and Jeff Avery, respectively. But a holding penalty helped the defense stall the Ottawa attack and force Lumsden to boot a 27 yard field goal for a 10-0 lead.

Moments later, Serebrin flooded the right side with his receivers, and a defensive miscue left the deep man, flanker Bruce Pollock, wide open for his first intercollegiate touchdown. Will Kennedy supplied the extra point to make it a 10-7 ball game at 2:59 of the second period. Again Ottawa looked strong

offense lacking consistency

on offense. Colton ran 24 yards on a keeper and Lumsden looked good up the middle, but, when Colton tried to break it open with a long bomb, his floating spiral was a sitting duck for defensive half Peter McNabb who intercepted it at his own 11. The Gaels then drew a pass interference penalty at the Ottawa 38, but as before, the attack died, and forcing Tom Taylor to punt.

Neither team could do much more offensively and the half ended with the Gee Gees in a slim 10-7 lead.

By half-time, it was clear that the Gaels could not rely on their rushing to keep moving the ball. Dave Hadden's foot was hurt and halfback Brian Tilley's timing was off after missing a week's practice. It was equally clear that quarterback Serebrin was getting plenty of pass protection. Under these circumstances, Queen's continued to put the ball in the air in the second half, but paid for it with three more interceptions and again, the inability to mount a scoring drive against a light Ottawa defense backfield. The Gee Gees, on the other hand seemed content with mixing up their plays and establishing a more controlled pattern.

Starting from their 38 yardline, the Gee Gees crossed midfield to the Queen's 37 while running and passing the ball but stalled and Lumsden's 45 yard field goal attempt went wide. An incompletion, a short plunge by Tilley and a short punt after a bad snap, put Ottawa first and ten on Queen's 25 yardline. The Gaels defense then made a break for themselves by sending a linebacker blitz and blindsiding Colton to force a fumble. Al Stretton picked the loose ball out of the air and lugged it to the O.U. 51.

The Gaels saw a 20 yard reception by Anderson called back by a facemasking infraction and couldn't make up the deficit for a first down, but right after giving the ball to Ottawa, defensive half Alex Morris picked off an errant Gee Gee pass to regain possession at the Queen's 41. Serebrin immediately went long but he too was intercepted, this time by Ken Guarrisco. Colton then sent White out of the backfield for a 22 yard reception but followed this with his second interception to Pete McNabb. Tilley then ran for 10 yards to the Gaels 38 and "Beast" Hadden shed two tacklers draped over his shoulders on a 15 yard sweep. This drive to midfield was then cut short by Guarrisco's fumble recovery for Ottawa and the score remained 10-7 as play entered the final quarter.

There were less than seven minutes left in the game when Ottawa's overall dominance started to show on the scoreboard. Bill Harrison ran a counter over from the 1 yardline but McNabb blocked the convert to make it 16-7.

The Gaels continued to look to the airways but their desperation soon cost them another interception. Connie Mineault ended all Tricolour hopes by taking this one back 91 yards for a 22-7 lead at 12:03. Again McNabb charged from the right side to block the convert. The complexion of the game continued to worsen as the clock ran out. Lumsden kicked a 16 yard field goal. Taylor was dropped for a safety while trying to punt, and the last play of the game resulted in yet another Gee Gee interception. To Queen's credit the veteran Ottawa team did not run the younger, less experienced Gaels out of the park but their control and balance left them clear winners and leave the Golden Gaels looking for their first win in next Saturday's clash against the highly rated McGill Redmen.

unclassifieds

WE'VE MOVED but we haven't changed. Yes it's those loveable streakers you've been dying to see again. Our location is changed but we're still got our bodies! One girl is now safely handling the Toronto area and we've expanded our Kingston staff! See you at the Pub. Nancy and Val.

ST. JAMES welcome to students supper (free) Sunday Sept. 22 at 5:30 pm at St. James Anglican Church, the corner of Union and Barrie. All Welcome.

More on Pages 3 & 5

Raold Serebrin back to pass on one of 20 attempts

WE WON'T B.S. YOU

WE'VE SIMPLY GOT THE LOWEST PRICES ON THE GEAR YOU NEED

FAMOUS BRAND NAME CLOTHING
JEANS, JACKETS, SWEATERS, SKIRTS, SHIRTS, SHRINKS, PANTS, OUTERWEAR, UNDERWEAR — WE'VE GOT IT ALL

PLUS

FOOTWEAR — Dress shoes, casual shoes, joggers
LINENS AND BEDDING INCLUDING FOAM SLABS
CDDKWARE AND HOUSEHOLD SUPPLIES
HEALTH AND BEAUTY AIDS
SPORTING GOODS
PAINT AND PAINT SUPPLIES

KINGSTON'S
FAMOUS
BARGAIN HOUSE!

27 Princess Street
at Ontario
Free Parking - Charex

In Concert
LEON REDBONE
with Thomas Hondy

Grant Hall

Sat. Sept. 21st
8:30 p.m.

$2.50 advance
$3.00 at the door

Tickets available at Renaissance Music
326 Princess
Silver Threads
417 Princess
House of Sounds
Vern Napier's
Kingston Shopping Centre

Student Union - 12 - 2 p.m.
a High Rollers presentation

Inflation placed in Trudeau's lap

TORONTO: The next move in the fight to control inflation is up to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau. This was a major point of agreement when the provincial premiers closed their conference on inflation in Ottawa last Friday. In their final communiqué the first request of the Premiers was for a "private discussion" with Mr. Trudeau before the next budget is tabled, in order to work out means of cooperation between the provinces and the federal government on the major economic problems of the country.

The Premiers feel that there are three main challenges to be faced: Public confidence in the economy must be maintained, the continuing price increases must be reduced and jobs must be created at a suitable rate.

Mr. Trudeau has made it clear that he feels that this is not the time for a conference. Ontario premier William Davis hopes that Mr. Trudeau can be convinced to change his attitude. Davis said "I can't passively accept a higher level of unemployment as a penalty of inflation fighting."

In Halifax Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield has made the statement that Trudeau's "putdown" of the provincial premiers is some indication that he has reverted to being somewhat of a cavalier. "The real question is what is the anti-inflationary policy of the Government and when is it going to display it?" he said.

When questioned about this party's economic policy Stanfield said that it has not changed from wage and price control.

MONTREAL: The Montreal Transit strike still continues and the strikers are drawing mysterious supporters. Last Friday a group of about 30 young women prevented bus drivers from leaving on their routes by laying down in front of the garage at 4 a.m.

None of the bus drivers would attempt to leave with their eight ton buses and police were unable to move the women. The strikers deny that these women were their wives. Various people hypothesize that the women may have been nurses from Notre Dame Hospital or Cegep students from the Rosemont Cegep.

At about 1:30 p.m. the women left and the drivers were able to start work. Peace lasted only for about an hour when some drivers soon returned saying that they had been harassed.

This type of mix-up has been going on at many of the bus garages which is now entering its 42nd day.

OTTAWA: CUPE (The Canadian

Union of Public Employees) will possibly get a taste of its own medicine in the near future. The organization's office employees are threatening to strike because of a dispute over wages and contracts.

The employees can legally strike on September 20. Linda Hunter, who is on the employee negotiating committee said "there is a good possibility of a strike if management's attitude continues to be as inflexible as it has been in the past."

One of the issues is CUPE's desire to institute a four-day week. The employees feel that this is not practical since many CUPE offices only have one clerk.

The employees belong to the Office and Professional Employees International union and along with the CUPE administration they are preparing to meet with a provincial mediator.

TORONTO: The rotten egg controversy continues and the Ontario Federation of Labor along with the Consumers Association of Canada is clamouring for the resignation of Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan.

The consumer's association wrote to Prime Minister Trudeau and said that no food product marketing boards could have consumer representatives while

Mr. Whelan was the minister. The association also wants an investigation into the affairs of the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency made by a committee of the House of Commons.

David Archer the president of the OFL while calling for Mr. Whelan's resignation said that when egg prices were continually rising it was amazing that the CEMA allowed 27.9 million eggs to be destroyed.

An Ontario Egg Marketing Board price committee decision to raise the price of Grade A large eggs by three cents was squashed by the Ontario Government.

backpage

TARA NATURAL FOODS

181½ Division Street 546-4439

SILVER THREADS

417 Princess Street 542-4264

renaissance music

326 Princess Street 542-5258

ANNOUNCE THE →

KINGSTON UPTOWN BUSINESS ASSOCIATION

$50° DESIGN OUR LOGO $50°

Design a logo representing the
KINGSTON UPTOWN BUSINESS ASSOCIATION
- Prize value may be claimed in merchandise from any or all of the participating stores

Entries must be at any of these shops by Oct. 14, 1974.

Redmen here tomorrow see p. 11

Queen's

Journal

Volume 102, No. 4

Friday, September 20, 1974

Bus-It not dead yet

Druxerman, Gray may re-negotiate with PUC

AMS Vice-Presidents Peter Druxerman and John Gray want to reopen negotiations with the PUC for Bus-It, despite claims they made Monday night that talks were over and that Bus-It would not be possible this year.

Pending the results of discussions between the AMS Executive and the University this week to re-evaluate their relationship in the issue, Druxerman and Gray say that they plan to propose to the Public Utilities Commissioners that Bus-It begin on October 1, at six dollars per student.

They will include in this proposal an attempt to arrange for a survey of the Bus-It system to be done by the Ontario Department of Transport and Communications. Last year there were great discrepancies between results of surveys carried out by the PUC and the AMS. Druxerman and Gray hope that conclusions arrived at in the poll taken by the Department of Transport, outsiders to the issue, would be accepted by both the PUC and the AMS.

Should the PUC reject this offer, Druxerman and Gray maintain that they will have a Wager bus (painted tri-color red, gold and blue) on the Queen's circuit Monday morning.

There is the question as to whether the three dollars per student charge for Bus-It, included in the non-academic fee can be used to finance the leasing of a bus. Wording of the Bus-It referendum stated that students agreed to pay three dollars for the specific "Bus-It" service.

AMS executive members maintain that in order to best serve the students, this wording could quite legally include a plan such as the one to lease a bus. Druxerman and Gray hope to have an opinion on this point from the AMS Court, by Monday.

Rossignol heads up new printing service

After letting the cobwebs accumulate behind its closed doors for eleven months the room which held the A.M.S. Printing service is once again being used. Larry Rossignol, a 4th year Arts student and partner in Tin Can Moose Designs, has been allotted the room and use of a telephone by the A.M.S.

Open daily (starting yesterday) from 11:30 a.m. - 2:30 p.m., the service offers "convenient" advertising consultation, silk-screening and offset printing, according to Rossignol. He plans to give students free advice on how to promote and advertise their projects. Rossignol claims that both time and cost of printing will be less than students could arrange in Kingston.

While silk-screening and advertising consultation will be done in the office (across from the coffee shop door in the basement of the Students' Union), Rossignol will have offset work done downtown. He maintains that he receives a discount and especially quick service from one of Kingston's printing establishments.

Two nifty new copiers now clicking away in Union

A.M.S. photocopy services have undergone vast changes this year with the installation of two new and improved photocopyers. The Xerox 20 and Xerox 1000 copiers should be in operation this week and the charge per copy is still only 5c.

The changes were made because of the poor quality of copies from last year's copiers. A search was conducted for a way to make good copies available to the students without raising the prices. The A.M.S. felt that a service that was useful to the students should be promoted but they did not want it to interfere with money allocated for other areas. At a cost to the A.M.S. of 4.8 cents per copy both of these objectives have been fulfilled. The extra 2 cents will be used towards the cost of maintenance and the rent of the coin box. A minimal amount of monetary support from the A.M.S. will be necessary.

At present the copiers are located in the A.M.S. office and may be used during office hours, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The possibility of moving the copiers to other more convenient locations is being investigated. Among the places suggested are Douglas Library, one of the Leonard Field Residences or Victoria Hall.

Frosh Week: Let's take it from the top

by Barb Nyland

In just over a month a new Orientation committee will be chosen and preparations will begin for the reception of the class of '79. Before these events get underway it is time to take one last look at Orientation '74.

This year's Artsci Orientation Committee: Linda Le

Seur, Dave Dowsett, Doug Hedden and Wendy Brevner, worked from a philosophy that greater emphasis should be placed on helping the new student obtain a greater awareness of the academic side of the university. Thus more speakers and academic pubs were scheduled and emphasis on drinking parties was toned down. They also attempted to appeal to the students as individuals rather than a group. The gael groups were smaller this year than last with 3 gaelis and 12 to 15 frosh. This hopefully allowed the gaelis to give more personal attention to each member of their group.

Whether these ideals were successfully put into practice is an area of disagreement between gaelis. Some gaelis felt that there was too much emphasis on the academic aspects and said that only a few members were interested in the lectures. An objection to the small gael groups was expressed because this did not allow the frosh to meet as many people. "There should have been more large organized events," one gael said.

The general consensus among frosh is that the week was a tremendous success although one first year student said to his gael that his only complaint was that as so many things were going on at the same time he was not able to do everything that interested him.

Although there was a good turnout at all events, the Sunday morning breakfast by the lake and the evening in Lake Ontario Park were felt to be the most memorable. maintains one committee member. Problems arose when only one bus arrived to take the hundreds of waiting frosh to the park. The other two buses had been caught in Toronto but arrived only half an hour late. Finally, at least 1,000 frosh were gathered for the evening gathering which was centred around three huge bonfires.

Success of some events was limited by the capacity of Grant Hall and the other buildings where they took place. If Grant Hall, Victoria Hall Common Room and Leonard Cafeteria were filled to capacity (as they often were) about 300 people were left out.

The film "The Ascent of Man" which was scheduled to be shown during the week was cancelled due to the death of Jacob Bronowski, the narrator, who was to be this year's Brockington visitor.

Sobriety, although organizationally successful did not appear to appeal to many in the audience. It's emphasis on sex and liquor was only rarely considered amusing according to many gaelis and frosh. The guitar playing and singing in between acts was enjoyed more than the acts themselves, it appeared.

It is still too early to make a complete assessment of the success of Orientation '74 since there has not yet been an official feedback from the gaelis or the participating first year students. The present committee feels that next year's committee might want to make changes in the structure of the organizing group in order to handle the large workload. They also suggest that there be better organization for the Sunday morning breakfast as there was such a turnout this year.

In the past the residences have asked for a night to be set aside in which they could plan an activity. It was unable to be included this year but will be among the suggestions made to next year's committee.

Artsci 78 Executive

President:
Vice-President:
Secretary:
Treasurer:
Social Convenor:
Publicity Convenor:
Men's Athletic Stick:
Women's Athletic Stick:
First Year Rep to ASUS:

Peter Meech
Dan Pearl
Cathy Perryman
Pieter Geerkens
Sarah Edinborough
Keith Crawford
John Houston
Carolyn Clark
Doug Thomson

Friday, Sept. 20

- 12:30 - 4:30 - Collection of books for the ASUS Book Sale will be held in the 2nd floor common room of the Students' Memorial Union.
- 7:00 - 9:00 - Queen's Karate Club registration will be held in the Combatives Room in the Phys. Ed. Centre.
- 8:00 - 1:00 - Dance to the music of Crazy Legs at the Redeye River Ramble in Grant and Kingston Halls. Beer and liquor will be served.
- 8:00 - Queen's Department of Film Studies and the Division of Concerts are presenting a series of eight of Hitchcock's finest films. The first in the series is Foreign Correspondent (1940) and is to be shown in Ellis Auditorium. A series admission is $10, or $15 single admission at the door.
- 8:30 - Queen's Drama Department presents "Comedy Tonight". This is the department's first major production of the season. Featuring Shaw, Pinter, and Coward as playbill headlines, the show will be held in Convocation Hall (the Old Arts Building). Tickets are available at the Drama desk (547-6291) or at the door. Admission is FREE but a silver collection will be taken.

Saturday, Sept. 21

- 12:30 - 4:30 - Collection of books for ASUS Booksale. See Friday for details.
- 2:00 - Queen's Golden Gaels versus McGill Redmen at Richardson Stadium.
- 8:30 - Leon Redbone with Thomas Handy in Grant Hall. Tickets are $2.50 in advance and $3.00 at the door and will be on sale from 12 - 2 in the Student's Union, at Silver Threads 417 Princess St., Vern Napier at the Shopping Centre or at the House of Sounds. Redbone is a superb guitarist and one of Canada's most interesting folk blues and jazz singers. Handy is a veteran of the Queen's coffee houses and concert halls.
- 8:30 - Queen's Drama Department presents Comedy Tonight! See Friday for details.

Sunday, Sept. 22

- 10:30 a.m. - Morning Worship at Chalmers United Church.
- 10:30 a.m. - Folk Mass at Dunning Hall followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House, 164 University Ave.
- 11:00 a.m. - The First University Service will be held in Morgan Memorial Chapel in Queen's Theological College with the University Chaplain officiating. The sermon is "A Religion for Real." University chapel services are held Tuesday to Friday 9:10 - 9:25 in Morgan Chapel. All are welcome.
- 12:30 - 4:30 - Collection of books for the ASUS Booksale will be held in the second floor common room of the Students' Memorial Union.
- 1:30 p.m. - WIC Co-ed Bike Hike. Meet in front of Phys. Ed. Centre. Bring a picnic lunch.

Monday, Sept. 23

- 1:00 - 4:00 p.m. - Registration for recreation programs in the Phys. Ed. Centre. Fee: $4.00.

Pubs and Theatres

- 401 Inn - Better Days
Commodore - Fat Chance
Frontenac - Finnegan's - Paul Kenra
Frontenac - Muldoon's - Old English Music Hall
Townhouse - Lifetime
Manor - Julie Lynn and The Spinning Wheel
Odeon - Friday - Holiday on the Buses
Saturday - California Split

ONTARIO FEDERATION OF STUDENTS CHIEF DELEGATE

The position of Chief Delegate
to O.F.S. for the A.M.S. is open.

Applications should be submitted to the A.M.S.
Office in the basement of the Students' Union
by 5 p.m. Tuesday, September 24, 1974.

Hillel Presents

SIEGE

Award winning Israeli film that won world-wide acclaim at the Cannes International Film Festival in 1972. A movie about the home front in Israel during Israel's continuing fight for survival.

Tuesday Sept. 24

7:00 and 9:00 p.m.

at Dupuis Hall

ADMISSION $1.00

CLARK HALL SMOKER

All welcome

Oct. 26, Thursday

8:00 P.M.

Good Music & Good Times
Once again

JUST ONE PHONE CALL

is all it takes to get involved in

INFORMATION BANK

the volunteer student organization that helps you, the student, keep tabs on your university and community. To keep students in touch, we need staff members who will donate just one hour of time per week.

Interested? Contact Sue Meech or

Kathy Wood

544-2055

Information Bank opens its doors on Monday, Sept. 16th in the John Orr Room (first door on the right inside the Student Union.)

Hyland - Sunshine

Capitol 1 - The Godfather
Capitol 2 - Our Time

Domino Theatre - The first show of the season is Music Hall Playing dates: 19 - 21 and 26 - 28 September and 3-5 October. Tickets will again be available at Mahood's Drug Store, 156 Princess St. (Tel. 542-7307), Mondays through Saturdays, or at the Theatre (Tel. 542-9066) on playing nights. Tickets are $2.50 for adults and $1.75 for students. Grand Theatre - September 21 - 8:30 p.m. - te Groupe de le Place Royale is a vital and dynamic Montreal moderne dance company which combines dance with music, film photography, and sculpture. Tickets are available at the Agnes Etherington Arts Centre for $1.50, $2.50, and $3.50.

Upcoming Events

- September 24 - 26 - Registration for recreation programs in the Phys. Ed. Centre from 1:00 - 4:00. Fee: $4.00. The first session runs from September 30 - November 1. The second session runs from November 4 - December 6.
- September 24 - W. I. C. Athletic Night
- September 24 - Meet the Coaches for men's and women's intercollegiate sports.
- September 24 - A general meeting of all certified Scuba Divers, students, and staff will be held from 7:30 - 9:30 p.m. in Stirling C. Those needing open water dives for certification are also welcome. Inquiries to Jacky 546-9979.
- September 24 - September 26 - ASUS Booksale is being held in the 2nd floor common room in the Students' Union from 12:30 - 4:30.
- September 25 - Student Volunteer Bureau Night is being held in Stirling Hall, Theatres A, C, D at 7:00 p.m.
- September 26 - 27 - 28 - Book Fair '74 is being held by the Kingston Symphony Association at 370 King St. West from 10 a.m. - 9 p.m. This is a sale of used texts, magazines, etc. No admission.
- September 27 - Grand Theatre - 8:30 p.m. Pleasure and Repentance.
- September 29 - A.M.S. Concerts presents Paul Horn in Grant Hall.
- September 30 - Clubs Night in Grant Hall.

Info Bank

The Information Bank is open Monday to Friday 9:30 a.m. to 5:45 p.m. in the John Orr Room of the Student Union. If you want information on any of the following make use of this service. ASUS used book exchange; traveller's guide to O.H.I.P.; drama presentation this weekend; weekend bus service - the Excursion Club; Continuing Education, campus maps; film series; photo contest; times, dates and locations of activities on campus; Arts' jackets.

Information Bank still needs lots of volunteers to help staff the Bank. It only requires one hour of your time per week. If you can't work a regular shift, you would be welcome to join the staff as a researcher to assist in keeping the files up to date. There is an Info Bank Staff Meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 24 at 7 pm in the John Orr Room. All staff are asked to attend and new workers are welcome.

Info Bank phone number: 547-5722.

Bus Service

The students' bus service goes into operation this weekend. Return tickets to Toronto are $9, to Ottawa $6. Tickets are available in the John Orr Room at the Students' Union Tuesday to Friday, 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Phone 544-5777.

One man's politics...

by Doug Bonnell

As more than one cynical citizen has been heard to remark, "There are two truly dirty things in this world, this column, and the press." Thus, this column, hopefully the 'Fraser Kelly' of the Queen's Journal, will be considered in some circles as pure filth.

I maintain, however, that there are increasing signs that the politics of backroom deals and smoke-filled rooms is suffering serious setbacks as a more open and honest political approach slowly emerges.

Earlier this year, Anthony Burgess, author of "Clockwork Orange" remarked, "I hate government. I believe politicians are not only bad people, but incompetent people. I think that if they had any talent, they wouldn't be politicians, but artists, preachers or teachers."

Burgess is both right and wrong. Of course there are those in politics who strive for power for its own sake and not to affix their own ideals on the system, people who seek to enhance their own personal, and low, estimation of themselves. They are the insecure of politics, those who long to brush shoulders with men and women of power, and who sacrifice their souls in the pursuit of such an aim.

Such people have reached the corridors of power. People like Nixon who had great potential warped by an addictive attraction to a repulsive brand of politics that need not have been used. People like Vorster of South Africa and Maurice Duplessis of Quebec.

But there are others. Those who have rolled with the punches and stood firm to their principles and their desire to help. Individuals like M. J. Coldwell who discarded personal ambition to aid in the development of the Canadian labour movement. People like Jean Lesage, or a person with the stature of Robert Stanfield, who on dumping Leonard Jones from the 1974 Conservative ticket remarked, "There are more important things to me than winning an election." Such people stand on the borders of statesmanship.

Recent events have added an optimistic note to the course of politics. The overthrow of Nixon demonstrated the viability of certain institutions in the modern age despite what appeared to be an increasingly powerful Presidency and a weakened Congress. In Ontario, the Davis Government has introduced legislation on conflict of interest and campaign financing. (After all, who's had the most experience in the area?) And even the Trudeau minority was planning extensive electoral reform before July 8th. What will happen now, however, is anybody's guess.

Yes folks, things are getting better. (But then I predicted a Conservative majority in 1974.)

In the upcoming weeks this column will attempt to deal with numerous forms of politics, from the issues and party politics of the federal and provincial levels, to local politics, international problems, and yes, even the AMS. (Oh joy, oh joy.) Bear with me.

NEXT WEEK: Party Politics on Campus

letters to the editor

Let's take P.U.C.

Dear Editor:

I read in your last issue how the AMS has thoroughly screwed the students of Queen's, who live off campus and must use the public transit system. Before the present situation cropped up, former, their heads must be public transit for the insignificant price of five dollars. Now PUC wants seven dollars for one year of transit service which would cost a student living off campus as much as one hundred dollars if he paid regular fare. Bargains like the one the PUC offers simply aren't existent in most other if not all other cities in Canada.

Now I wonder if the acronym, AMS doesn't stand for, Assholes for Mother Stupidity.

What is the AMS doing? Do they think perhaps that they are saving anyone money or are they simply trying to screw the city for charging such an exorbitant price.

If they are attempting the former, their heads must be screwed on backwards. If they are attempting the latter, then they deserve a good swift boot in the ass because I doubt very much the possibility of the PUC sweating very much over the loss of a measly $50,000; after all they will probably make more than twice that much from students who must now pay up to $100 each for this year's use of public transit because they were saved two dirty dollar bills by the AMS.

Now I must reconcile myself to the prospect of shelling out one hundred of the big greens. This is money I can ill afford and I hope the AMS is happy with their brilliance at the negotiating table.

Thanks a million, AMS, you have succeeded in shafting one of the best student busing services ever made. And how do you propose to replace it. Why with one stinking bus that won't offer enough service ....in your eye.

I ask, as a matter of most urgent necessity, that the AMS accept PUC's offer as there appears to be no other way to get reduced fares for those who must take the bus.

If the AMS can't recognize a good thing when they see one, how are they going to be able to serve the student body properly.

Yours lovingly,

Pissed off student.

Guys & Dolls
Elrond College
397 Princess St.
HAIRSTYLING Phone 542-5511

AMS OUTER COUNCIL REPS AND STUDENT SENATORS

are invited to the

RETREAT

to be held in the
HOUSE OF COMMONS
Sunday, September 22
10:00 a.m.
further info. available
in the AMS office

George Baily sporting goods
40 Prince Street
Kingston, Ontario
K7L 1A4
Tel: 542-2393

TENNIS: WILSON, SLAZENGER, DUNLOP, PATRICK, TENNIS SHOES, CONVERSE, ALL STARS

PACKS: EVERYTHING FROM MINI TO EXPLORATION SIZE

SKI EQUIPMENT NOROICA BOOTS; VOLKL AND ATOMIC SKIS, SKI CLOTHING AND ACCESSORIES

10% OFF TO QUEEN'S STUDENTS ON NON-SALE ITEMS

Randy Lee's
TAKE HOME STORE
842 PRINCESS ST
544-9244

FRIED CHICKEN
★ ★ ★ BURGERS

Monday to Saturday 10 a.m. - 10 p.m. Closed Sundays.
Delivery anywhere with City limits .65 extra - and Delivery outside City limits slightly extra.

Royal Tavern
344 PRINCESS
(Between Bath and Clergy)
A good place to sit since opened in 1851
by Sir John A. Macdonald

MACDONALD'S
Take a freshman to lunch.
MACDONALD'S BUTTONS EXPIRE THIS SUNDAY.
LAST CHANCE FOR A FREE BIG MAC
277 Bath Rd. Kingston

unclassifieds

more on page 12

ROOMMATE - mature female, to share 2-bedroom apartment. Very reasonable rent. Park Street area. 544-3902 after 5:30.

BOOGIE TONIGHT at the Redeye River Rumble in Grant and Kingston Halls, 8pm-1am. Live to the music of Crazy Legs, Beer, Iggy and lots of fun. Sponsored by Science '75 Formal Committee. 95c admission.

FOR SALE - Danish couch $40; oak chest $50; coffee table $10; wooden bed frame $10, wooden chest $10. Please call 549-1427 after 5:00 pm.

WARM UP FOR MCGILL tonight at the Redeye River Rumble in Grant and Kingston Halls. The action starts at 8pm with the music of Crazy Legs, Beer, Iggy... 95c adm.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 Ltd. has expanded their processing lab and can now offer 24 hour service on all black and white processing and electronic photo developing. For further information, call 544-7770 or drop by at 33 Brock Street.

CRAZY LEGS is providing the music tonight at the Redeye River Rumble in Grant and Kingston Halls, 8pm-1am. Admission 95c. Beer, Iggy, the old crush is on again. Sponsored by Science '75 Formal Committee.

GAELE GROUP No. 12 and Sue. Thank again for a fabulous week! Look in the Journal for the time and place of our quickly approaching reunion. Hope you all have a good year. Hugh, Annie, Jim.

LOST AT GREASE POLE One ladies watch, gold with black string strap, $5.00 reward. Call Inverary 353-2795.

SPARE TIME? Help the Student Volunteer Bureau and be a volunteer in Kingston. Come to

E.P. MURPHY & SON LTD.
Sea Food Restaurant
SPECIAL BEAVER
and BEAR
STEAKS
70 Brock St. 548-7753

PIC UP YOUR
74 TRICOLOR
FRIDAY (Today)
MONDAY AND TUESDAY
1:30 - 5:00
International Center
Lower Lounge

Queen's SAILORS

Anyone who is interested in representing Queen's in the O.U.A.A. Regatta's this fall please send ones resume to the Queen's Sailing Club in the A.M.S. Office

Stirling Hall A, C and O September 25th at 7 pm. See you there.

LOST 2 silver bracelets in Ross Gym. Great sentimental value. Please call Jane 544-0072. Reward.

ATTENTION ROVERS at Queen's and in Kingston. First meeting on Sunday, September 22 at 8:00 pm. Old members we are planning for clubs night new members are most welcome. Where? Concession St. Scout hall, near the Brewer's Retail. For further info, contact J. Oaloe, 544-9552.

CAR RADIO from 1966 Ford, $10. cheap! Phone 544-4960.

LOST a black wallet, probably on the first floor of John Watson Hall. You can keep the $30. Just send me back my I.O. Call 544-5358 and ask for Kerry.

COME TO THE BONANZO FAMILY YEARLY (weekly?) re-union. Beer for sale for Woody boys 11. Friday night, all night. See you there at 160 Johnson.

SINGLE BEG 36" wide, sturdy steel frame, good mattress, $25.00 complete. Phone 549-1523 or ask for Anne Louise at 549-5262.

COKE, PIERRE the bear and Marissy invite all their friends and relations to their housewarming. Friday, September 20th 7:30 pm (ending April 20th) Welcome at 195, apt. 4 are: All Francis c.p.s. third Leonard boys (featuring Lobbanelli, Twals, the Big C, the Big B, the Big M, Charles, Wild Bill, Bode, Ouse McPhedran, Ford, Pele the Head, McCockmick, Uncks, Chains, Brumberger, 258 Alberi, the Cleo-Hunter Joynt).

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

FOUNO - Queen's (Arts & Science) jacket, found in periodical room, Ouglas Library. Contact periodicals.

meeting Monday Sept. 23 at 7:30 pm at the Church of the Redeemer on Kirkpatrick St. All slawp collectors welcome. For more info call 544-7880 after 5:30 pm.

FOR SALE - a really stud Artsci 76 jacket (with cress if you want it). In mint condition, best offer. Phone 549-5182. Ask for Rob.

LIVING GAY IS POSSIBLE in Kingston. Call Terry Watson at 547-2836 Mon. to Thurs. 8-9 pm or write to Student Affairs Center c/o Terry Watson.

WATERMELON, CANTELOUPE - gael group No. 90 - thanks for a "fantastic" week and for the unforgettable memories - from Ross and J.B.'s waltz to "Wolfe Island Flag Day" from the Sally Ann shopping spree to Horton's late show featuring "the Oughtnut Kid"; right through to the purple Jesus inauguration. You were all terrific. hope you have a great year. We'll be in touch love.

ANYONE WHO MISSED THE BOAT last year in buying their Artsci

liquor p.s. freshette Bacardi, we love you.

3 MEN AND 3 WOMEN need a 7th person to share their spacious home. Co-operative system. Upperclass preferred. Phone 544-5380.

FURNISHED ROOM in house with 5 other girls, two blocks from campus; rent is reasonable, lease until May '75 for details phone 544-6292 after 5 pm.

LOST a small brown purse, made in Brazil, with I.O. etc. If found please call Sally at 549-3965. It would be much appreciated, reward offered.

GAELE the party of week is in Wallace Hall tonight, dinner and dance (Noah is playing) $2.50; booze, an inexpensive extra, begins 7:00 goes to one, dinner from 7:00.

ANYONE WHO MISSED THE BOAT last year in buying their Artsci

liquor p.s. freshette Bacardi, we love you.

3 MEN AND 3 WOMEN need a 7th person to share their spacious home. Co-operative system. Upperclass preferred. Phone 544-5380.

FURNISHED ROOM in house with 5 other girls, two blocks from campus; rent is reasonable, lease until May '75 for details phone 544-6292 after 5 pm.

LOST a small brown purse, made in Brazil, with I.O. etc. If found please call Sally at 549-3965. It would be much appreciated, reward offered.

GAELE the party of week is in Wallace Hall tonight, dinner and dance (Noah is playing) $2.50; booze, an inexpensive extra, begins 7:00 goes to one, dinner from 7:00.

ANYONE WHO MISSED THE BOAT last year in buying their Artsci

liquor p.s. freshette Bacardi, we love you.

3 MEN AND 3 WOMEN need a 7th person to share their spacious home. Co-operative system. Upperclass preferred. Phone 544-5380.

FURNISHED ROOM in house with 5 other girls, two blocks from campus; rent is reasonable, lease until May '75 for details phone 544-6292 after 5 pm.

LOST a small brown purse, made in Brazil, with I.O. etc. If found please call Sally at 549-3965. It would be much appreciated, reward offered.

GAELE the party of week is in Wallace Hall tonight, dinner and dance (Noah is playing) $2.50; booze, an inexpensive extra, begins 7:00 goes to one, dinner from 7:00.

ANYONE WHO MISSED THE BOAT last year in buying their Artsci

liquor p.s. freshette Bacardi, we love you.

3 MEN AND 3 WOMEN need a 7th person to share their spacious home. Co-operative system. Upperclass preferred. Phone 544-5380.

FURNISHED ROOM in house with 5 other girls, two blocks from campus; rent is reasonable, lease until May '75 for details phone 544-6292 after 5 pm.

LOST a small brown purse, made in Brazil, with I.O. etc. If found please call Sally at 549-3965. It would be much appreciated, reward offered.

GAELE the party of week is in Wallace Hall tonight, dinner and dance (Noah is playing) $2.50; booze, an inexpensive extra, begins 7:00 goes to one, dinner from 7:00.

ANYONE WHO MISSED THE BOAT last year in buying their Artsci

liquor p.s. freshette Bacardi, we love you.

THE ARTS AND SCIENCE UNDERGRADUATE SOCIETY IS accepting applications for JUDICIAL COMMITTEE

- update constitutions
- run elections

Other Events Committee
- run social, cultural, educational events for the upcoming year

No experience necessary - applications from 1st year students invited
Call Sue 544-8583 or Ian 549-4783

NOTICE TO ALL ARTS & SCIENCE STUDENTS

STUDENT VACANCIES

On all Arts & Science Faculty Board Committees

Student positions for all Arts & Science Faculty Board Committees are up for election. In an effort to give all interested students a chance to sit on these committees, the Nominating Committee has agreed to consider applications from the campus at large.

The Nominating Committee will attempt to select the most appropriate nominees from those proposed or applying. Students must be undergraduate members of the Faculty of Arts & Science, not necessarily members of the Faculty Board, but with a special interest in the particular problems related to the responsibilities of the Committee. It would be most helpful to the Nominating Committee, in selecting the most appropriate nominees, if the special interests and talents of applicants were to be briefly described on the application form.

Applications must be submitted on or before 5 p.m. September 26.

Committees		Please to Nominating Committee, Arts & Science Faculty office, Mackintosh-Corry Hall
Name	No. of students	Name	Address
Admissions	3	Address	Phone
Curriculum	4 (plus one graduate student)	Department	Year-Rank
Academic Orientation	3	Committee	Qualifications
Nominating	4
Procedures	3
		Signature

editorial

Leased bus no go

It is essential that plans be dropped by the AMS for leasing a Wager bus. This single bus could not possibly provide adequate service along Union Street thus making it a feeble answer to the main transportation concern at Queen's - that of moving students between Main and West Campuses.

Not only would the plan be impractical, but more important, it would tear to shreds the delicate relations between Kingston and Queen's.

A further problem in running the AMS bus is the insecure legality of it. Up to now, the PUC has found no legitimate by-law to refute the running of the bus. However there is a possibility that one may newly be passed or an existing by-law will present itself. In either case, the AMS bus will be forced off the road and students will be left with no alternative but to pay regular PUC prices.

Instead of the AMS spending $18,500 on this inadequate service might they not be better to allow the university to supply buses which would make exclusive runs from West to Main Campuses. In this way, students will not be asked to pay for a service from which they reap little benefit and the AMS will avoid extra costs and unnecessary legal hassles.

In past years a shuttle service between Main and West Campuses operated by the university has proved highly efficient. In the best interests of students, AMS, the university and Kingston, a repetition of this service is in order.

letters to the editor

The AMS can't be that bad

To the Editor,

I feel obligated to answer Ms. McIntyre's letter which appeared in Tuesday's Journal. I am replying to it in order to provide the readers of the Journal some facts which might put Ms. McIntyre's accusations in proper perspective.

The first thing that I want to point out is that, in February when Ms. McIntyre took over the job of the Housing Chairman I had relayed to the members of the Housing Committee that the Business Administrator of the A.M.S. felt that the Business Administrator of the A.M.S. felt that there might not be the need for a Housing Manager to be hired this summer. The reason for this was that the Housing Manager's main activity in the past summers had been to look after the books of the Housing Service and that this function was going to be handled by the Bookkeeper of the A.M.S. who would be here during this summer for the first time. This provoked considerable discussion at the time among Housing Committee members with the result that it was generally agreed that Sheila should go and talk the whole issue over with the Business Administrator. This, however, was never done. It would appear that at no time did either side make any further inquiries on this issue. However, Ms. McIntyre proceeded to work full-time starting May 1, 1974 at a job which she knew might not even exist! Certainly the A.M.S. shares the blame for this breakdown in communications but Ms. McIntyre is equally at fault. I cannot comprehend how someone who knew that their summer job was in question, could do absolutely nothing about it for two months and then one day just start working.

If Ms. McIntyre was told on May 17 that "no one would take responsibility for paying me" and subsequently on May 23 was told that the Business Administrator "had never hired me", then I find it difficult to understand why she would continue to work until the 29th of May. It would seem to me that most people would have reacted much faster to what were obvious warning signals.

It should also be pointed out that it was the A.M.S. that was instrumental in getting Ms. McIntyre another job at a salary which was $20 per week more than she would have been getting if she had been Summer Housing Manager. The fact, coupled with the manager's monthly allowance of $40 per month, which Ms. McIntyre admits was "generally issued only September to April" actually put her in the position of receiving $120 per month more than she would have received from the housing service for the summer. Yet, Ms. McIntyre accuses the A.M.S. of demonstrating "their disregard for the personal financial welfare of individual members of the A.M.S."

Thirdly, the fact that the $1200 was included in the budget for the Housing Service is an unfortunate red-herring. A budget is not a fixed rigid document that must be followed to the letter. It is an estimation of the events for a given financial period. It is a listing of possible expenditures which may have to be incurred in that period. When the housing budget was drawn up the issue of whether or not there would be a Housing Manager hired for the summer had not been resolved. The amount for a summer salary was put in the budget as a provision in case it was subsequently decided that a person should be hired. By doing this the amount and rate were fixed before the committee left for the summer. It avoided the possibility of having to draw the amount out of contingency. Of course I voiced no objections, because I felt it was a sound position to provide for the possibility rather than be scrambling around later looking for some place to draw the money from.

In closing I would like to make one personal comment to the readers of the Journal. I hope you will not let the bitterness of one person who feels hard done by, to colour your attitude toward the area of student government. A lot of organizations need the help of people like you and it would be terribly unfortunate if one person ruined your chance to participate in what can be an unusual learning experience outside of the lecture theatre.

Yours sincerely
Ian Nordheimer

Artsci 78 elections . . . a bit of a farce

Dear Editor,

As you are well aware the elections for artsci 78 executive have already been held. I do however wonder how many Artsci 78 faculty members knew of the elections or even at this point in time know who the executive members are.

On Tuesday the 17th of September a crowd of one hundred plus gathered in an auditorium in Stirling Hall. Very few freshmen knew of the format by which they would elect their executive. I was startled by the small pathetic crowd almost half of whom were on their way to the Pub and were simply an audience. I was further shocked when we were told to vote for the various people contesting the positions.

How can the votes of 100 faculty members justify the executive elect for the rest of the

Queens Journal

Vol. 102, No. 4
Fri., Sept. 20, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario.

Contributors: Ann Robertson and those silly classifieds; and Barb Sieve Loughheed who stuck by who once again descended as Terry in his plush den, Nancy and Connie who plowed through all Elderstatesman: Woodrow Comment: Well, this is our fourth press night and no one yet has fallen asleep - we must be ordering better food at 4:00 a.m. Instead of 1:00 a.m. . . . What would we ever do without the classifieds to pull us through these nights of AMS heavies, no front page pics and a resigned sports editor - we'd probably go home to sleep.

Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone 16131 547-2666. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

faculty. This was not at all a fair election since the votes were prejudiced by the various friends who were around to vote and secondly very few people who contested the elections were really prepared or enthused about their jobs because they had been nominated on the spur of the moment and had taken two full seconds, deciding to get involved.

I wonder. Are these the people who will run my year society to whom many others and I support financially. Can't we even get a decent election where upon the faculty is aware of its executives and the people responsible.

In my opinion Artsci '77 failed in adequately publicizing the elections and should thus take the blame if the year's executive has a poor performance. Regarding the crowd, the small turnout was not due to the hockey game, which is a weak and a feeble excuse, but due to poor planning by Artsci '77. The elections were a farce. It was just a lot of fun for people who had nothing to do on a Tuesday night. I must admit at this time that I was nominated for the position of vice-president. I had asked to be nominated I lost the elections but I know I lost to a better man, because Dan was really enthused about the job and thus had a written speech. It is people like this that we need on the executive. People with a preconceived idea about what their job entails and what can be expected of them. Dan was prepared and he proved it. He won. My support to him.

I still ponder over whether the year's executive is a true representation of Artsci '78. I wish my executive the best of luck and I hope they work hard, for it was that, that they were elected. Surely next year we must do better, surely.

Yours truly

Azin Mohamed

IF YOU CAN'T GIVE HER THE MOON AND STARS, GIVE A DIAMOND

You'd give her the moon. But you're not an astronaut. So give her the moon and the stars in the gift of a diamond. One precious jewel, glowing with thousands of fiery lights, will express from its depths the deep love you feel.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

The Queen's Drama Department announces

AUDITIONS
for NIGHT OF THE IGUANA
by Tennessee Williams

Monday, Sept. 23, 3-5, 7:30-10 in room 106
Tuesday, Sept. 24, 7:30-10 in room 106
Wednesday, Sept. 25, 3-5, 7:30-10 in room 106

Scripts and information will be available at Drama Desk in Theology Hall. Auditions open to all students.

CELEBRATE!
DANCE!
HAVE A BEER!

Come to Lenard Cafeteria

Sat. Sept. 21
8:30 pm - 1 am
Only 50¢ admission

APPLICATION FOR SPEAKER
AMS Outer Council
SHOULD BE SUBMITTED TO THE AMS OFFICE BY 5:00 THURSDAY
SEPT. 26 1974.

INTERVIEWS WILL BE HELD THAT EVENING

ASUS
Book Exchange

Book Collection

Sept. 20, 21, 22
12:30 - 4:30
2nd floor common room
in union

Book Sale

Sept. 24, 25, 26
12:30 - 4:30
2nd floor common room

Book Return

Sept. 30, Oct 1, Oct. 2
12:30 - 4:30
2nd floor common room

ASUS Commission - 20%

Kingston

The quiet dignity of an historic city

by Wendy Reynolds

Kingston - the very name of the city often conjures up an image of greyness in many people's minds. Few are aware of the rich cultural and historical heritage of the place we call home, like it or not, for the duration of our university careers. Too often we think of it entirely in terms of Queen's itself, giving little thought to Kingston as an entity existing outside of the university environment.

The Limestone City, perhaps an unfortunate appellation, is over 300 years old. It became known as such because of the limestone ridge on which it is situated. Later, the riches of the limestone quarries were tapped so that the graceful buildings characterizing Kingston could be built. On grey days, the combined effect of leaden skies and old stone buildings can be overwhelming. Too often one forgets the subdued elegance of the sun's play over the beautifully weathered and softened stones.

In fact, the effect can be stunning. The greyness is an all-encompassing grey which includes shades of violet and blue. The sea-green of the lake shows her to advantage when Kingston is viewed from the distance of such vantage points as Old Fort Henry. Even through the mists of the all-too-frequent rains, the shimmering, ephemeral quality exists for those who have eyes to see it.

The years have been kind to Kingston. She wears her age with a dignity that comes only with experience; she is oblivious to, rather, tolerant of, affronts to her character like Elfrond College.

the French habitation

First known to traders as the Indian settlement of Cataraqui, the "Clay Fort", advantageously positioned on the North shore of Lake Ontario at the junction with the St. Lawrence River, was controlled by the French in 1763. Its 'raison d'être' at the time was as a French fur trading post. Now known as Fort Frontenac, named after the Count who negotiated with the Indians for settlement of the property, the town bustled with the comings and goings of the traders, trappers and merchants who foraged the wooded hinterlands for its natural wealth.

French domination continued for over 100 years. The fort was rebuilt and again by the command of such illustrious and locally important men as Robert, Cavalier de la Salle, and La Barre. Then, French supremacy on the continent waned. The country's forces in North America had weakened to such an extent that by 1758, Colonel Bradstreet was able to awe the city into submission with a display of force that was little more than just that—a display. Three thousand men marched into town, armed with only eleven guns.

Kingston became a British settlement twenty five years later with the arrival of the first United Empire Loyalists. A face-lift changed the appearance of Kingston, so named by the British. A new town was laid out with a flour mill, a court, a whipping-post and Stocks. Its prominence was attested to by its being named the first capital of Upper Canada. John Graves Simcoe acted as governor during the time that the town enjoyed its short-lived distinction as capital. The seat of government was soon moved to York.

The threat of war with the Americans prompted a flurry of growth in the shape of fortresses to protect the dangerously vulnerable position which Kingston occupied, so close to the enemy. Fort Henry, originally a wooden stockade (to be rebuilt as a stone bastion in 1820), was erected during this period of threat.

Although the War of 1812 ended with no attack by the Americans on the city, a network of protective towers were constructed along the waterfront. These still remain. The fear of further Yankee attack was an ever present fear in the mid 1800's. Garrisons were made more necessary when Kingston was named capital of the united provinces of Upper and Lower Canada in 1841.

The first Canadian parliament was held in the building which now houses Kingston General Hospital, convened by Lord Sydenham. In hopes of remaining the capital, several buildings intended to edify the honour went under construction. The classically inspired City Hall, the awesome St. George's Cathedral, St. Paul's, St. Mary's and St. James' churches, and Queen's University date from the 1840's. Many of the beautiful mansions on the lake are from this period, built as the gracious homes of those prominent people who would be moving to Kingston, the capital.

Capital goes to Bytown

Unfortunately, the capital was moved to the less-vulnerable Ottawa in 1844, doubtless to the dismay of the fiercely proud Kingstonsians. The growth inspired by the choice of the city as capital continued, however, with the construction of the Martello towers and the market square.

When the Grand Trunk Railroad was completed by 1846, the pace of life quickened as Kingston became more accessible to travellers and settlers alike. Industry was attracted to the city as it was mid-way between the burgeoning centres of Toronto and Montreal. The excellence of its harbour added to the attraction.

When Confederation was proclaimed in 1867, hearts swelled with pride, for the chief Father of Confederation, Sir John A. Macdonald, had been a native Kingstonsian. Thereafter, the homes occupied by Sir John and his family, notably Bellevue House, became revered as shrines.

Even as the city expanded, the romance of its rich and varied past remained. The market which had been established in 1800, where butcher-meat, poultry, eggs, butter, fish and vegetables might be exposed for sale" flourished and continued, even to the present, as a reminder of the trading-post Kingston had been. Gas-lights, still in operation, which once but dimly illuminated the streets, lend impressions of the ambience of the pre-electric age.

The legends linger on

And though present day Kingston is a far cry from the old swash-buckling days of "the knavish fur trade, the wild escapades of smugglers, and the delightful arrogance and amours of early British military life", the legends still remain.

A fatal duel, presumably the first of such to occur in Upper Canada, was fought on Kingston streets. A church bell in St. Mark's in Barriefield was brought here after capture in Spain by the British troops. A church in Portsmouth known as the Church of the Good Thief was so named because of the convicts of Kingston Penitentiary who aided in its construction. What has been hailed as the first known peace conference of the New World was the meeting in 1693 between Count Frontenac and the native Indians, when gifts of sweets, tobacco and dried fruits were given as peace offerings.

The importance Kingston has attained as an educational centre is a reflection of the city's significance as a military and naval base. The Royal Military College, the first of its kind in the country, opened in 1876. Religious fathers arrived in the early days to establish colleges like Regiopolis (now a high school) and the first Grammar School in Canada. And of course, there's Queen's.

The legends may be dormant, the excitement of the frontier may have died, but the romance of the past lives on in the physical. Kingston may have been consigned by fate to a quiet existence. It could be worse. Graceful elegance has a lot going for it. Dame Fortune has been kind.

Duncan Kerr Mens Shop
350 Princess St.

QUITTING BUSINESS
- SELLING OUT!

We have...

"Queen's" Sweat Shirts - long	3.99 EA
and Short Sleeve - colours	2.99 EA
"Queen's" T shirts - White	5.99 EA
"Queen's" Scarves - 6' long	10.99 PR.
Denim Jeans

544-1227

PIZZA CHALET

PIZZA AND ITALIAN DISHES
TAKE OUT ORDER AND DELIVERY
359 PRINCESS ST.

STUDENTS

We have a large selection of new and used

Beds, Chests, Etc.
At Low Low Prices
Turk's Used Furniture
and Antiques

281 Princess St. — 546-5267
DVER 60 YEARS HONEST DEALING

TONIGHT 'till midnight at Tremblay's

274 Princess

Record Riot and guitar sale

CKLC will be broadcasting from our store
with unheard of specials

Housing: Come out, Come out Wherever you are

For the first time in about five years many Queen's students have experienced serious difficulty in obtaining adequate housing for this academic year. While it is estimated that less than a hundred students are still looking for appropriate housing many more looked long and hard before moving in.

With the policy of "steady state", the enrolment at Queen's is growing only slightly; only about 200 more students have registered this year over last. Nevertheless, it appears that housing availability has not kept pace with even that modest increase, and demand is beginning to outgrow supply. In the opinion of John Richardson, Director of Housing, this year is the forerunner of next year when he expects the squeeze to become a more serious crisis. According to him the situation is a result of more than the usual five year cycle that often characterizes the housing market.

The Queen's student population alone constitutes 12½ percent of the population of the City of Kingston and this demands a high percentage of city services. However, the areas close to campus can only accommodate so many students and it appears now to be close to saturation.

Residence proposal

It is no secret that the University has recently been considering a proposal to increase its residence accommodation. According to Campus Planner Eric Thrift, the university has been monitoring the housing situation since early spring of this year.

Every couple of years Mr. Thrift's office conducts mail surveys of students to learn where they are living and the type of accommodation they found. A partial analysis of their survey of late 1973 indicated some problems for the immediate future, leading to serious discussion by the senate committee on Campus Planning. The result was a proposal that was finally forwarded to the Board of Trustees; it strongly recommended the creation of new residences to accommodate approximately 200 students.

By Ontario Government rule, residence construction cannot be financed by operating grants. Thus private capital is required to finance any new residence construction and the Board is considering their various alternatives.

However, as Mr. Thrift pointed out, high interest rates also apply to Queen's and the time required to complete any such project (even assuming no delays) would be approximately three years.

Mr. Thrift did emphasize that the University was very concerned about the housing situation and had been very receptive to his committee's recommendations. He admitted however that current financial restraints and the high interest rates force the university to plan very carefully before commencing construction of new residence space. "You must remember that residence mortgages are amortized over 40 or more years and we must be sure of a continued need for those bids before we can seriously contemplate construction," he added.

exaggerated by media

According to the City of Kingston Planning Office spokesman Bruce Bourdon, the housing squeeze is exaggerated by local and national media. "Over the last five to ten years," he said "there has been an overall increase in the number of new housing projects started in the Kingston area." He continued by explaining that in recent years the trend has been toward multiple unit housing starts which provide many times the living space of that of single family units. "In other words there are proportionally more new apartments than new houses," Bourdon claimed.

However, Mr. Bourdon did admit that there were a number of factors that were contributing to the tight situation in Kingston. The high cost of borrowing money for new homes has almost stopped construction of new single family units in Kingston and the Townships. One well known city developer stated that 14 percent interest rates almost force him to cease operations. "The average home buyer simply can't afford that sort of interest," he stated. To combat the money situation, he is turning his attention to other projects that require less capital.

But if fewer homes are being constructed, more families will be staying in apartments, leaving less space for students.

The recent problems in Kingston Township also contribute to the situation. The rapid growth in the "suburban" areas has caused serious lags in the servicing of new subdivision sites. Without adequate sewer and water facilities, the Township has severely restricted new building permits.

Understandably, the political problems of the current Reeve J. Earl McEwan are somewhat to blame for this situation. However, Township Engineer Angus Ross underplayed the recent troubles. "Politics or not, we've got a serious problem," he stated in a recent interview. "We can't begin to consider new development when we cannot adequately provide water and sewer service to existing township homeowners." He went on to state that the current restrictions on new building would likely continue until new water treatment facilities were operational.

This building restriction in Kingston Township has undoubtedly slowed migration to the suburbs. Families which are now hindered by high interest and low supply. Both these factors will force families to remain in their apartments, aggravating the student housing situation.

Mr. Bourdon went on to explain that the situation in the older core of Kingston is being affected by the 1973 Reduction in Density By-law. This temporary legislation will be in force for one more year and was intended to slow the rapid rise in housing density in the core area. By limiting the density to 28 units per acre, City Council hoped to allow a stabilization period following the rapid density increase caused by rapid student growth of the late 1960's. No new multiple unit dwellings or conversions are allowed under this by-law. In contrast to the new restrictions, parts of Kingston already have densities over 80 units per acre.

The result of the by-law, according to Mr. Bourdon, is a freeze on new dwelling units in the popular student areas. Under the by-law it is not even allowed to convert old houses into apartments if the area is over the 28 units per acre maximum.

By plotting where students live street by street the planning office is able to trace a definite pattern in student housing. Over the last five years students have gradually taken more housing farther and farther from the main campus. Noting that students aren't really any more mobile than in previous years, Mr. Bourdon feels that the housing closest to the periphery of the campus is simply saturated and students have to move farther out to find a place to live.

across the province

Recent news reports have stated that the housing squeeze is acute at most Ontario universities. In most cases careful research has indicated that many such reports have been exaggerated. Some observations:

Toronto and Ryerson reported problems early probably as a result of the Transit strike in August. However, the situation appears to be easing. U. of T. officials admit that downtown housing is available and expensive but that most of their students are commuters anyway and are not affected.

Wilfrid Laurier (formerly Waterloo Lutheran) managed to compound their problems by converting much of their residence space into faculty offices. Past years had produced large vacancies in rooms while faculty had no new offices constructed. A spokesman admitted that this was the worst year to pick to do the conversions.

University of Guelph boasts the highest percentage of residence beds per student population and now reports no vacancies and a long waiting list. However, off-campus housing appears to be increasing and the University expects the situation to improve. Laurentian reports no housing shortage at all with residences filling up for the first time in recent years. Officials there estimate that they have picked up students who might have gone elsewhere but couldn't find housing.

Ottawa reports a tightening of an already taut housing situation in the Capital city. Not only is it scarce but it is also expensive. University of Ottawa officials have written to all staff and faculty encouraging them to put up students in any available vacant rooms.

University of Waterloo officials down play the tents that have appeared on their campus. While their residences are full, it seems that off-campus housing is readily available in the Kitchener-Waterloo area. Much of the student protest was directed at local landlords who are insisting upon year leases; in past years 8 month leases were easier to obtain. The tents were put up by the student Federation only to dramatize their point; no students were actually living in them.

York and McMaster report no serious problems. Both have full residences for the first time in several years.

On the whole it appears that the housing market is tight but not yet anywhere near crisis status.

Explanations of this sudden problem are not many. The Ontario Student Housing Corporation admits that there have been very few recent student housing starts. They claim, however, that this was a result of an oversupply of housing that resulted in many university residences being unfilled in recent years. They now admit that the tide may be turning back and that they will watch the situation closely.

One explanation may be that many officials have been talking about university enrolment declines in recent years. This plus high residence vacancy rates may have led universities and governments to conclude that there was no need for more student housing.

In fact enrolments never declined across the province. Only the rate of increase in enrolments declined. The university student population continued to increase slightly since 1971 only at a reduced rate than was experienced in the late '60's. Thus we may have been lulled into a false sense of security and that bubble shows signs of bursting.

Coupled with this continued increasing demand is a change of preferences among students. Many are no longer satisfied with rooming or boarding houses; full houses or apartments are now most popular and until recently those were within the reach of an increasing number of students. However, this puts increasing pressures on the housing market in the city, pressures that are quite acute considering the size of the base population.

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT

in our Lounge

THIS WEEK

Fat Chance

Amateur Night every Wednesday
Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

"Vibrant Stage!"

music, film, and dance

The Division of Concerts' "Vibrant Stage" series begins this Saturday evening with a presentation of modern dance by "Le Groupe de la Place Royale". The evening promises to be a truly unique experience; this young dance company formed in 1966, is very much an experimental group. Its artistic directors Peter Boneham and Jean-Pierre Perreault have stated a belief in "a dynamic approach to creation and an attempt at breaking down the boundaries between the arts by intermingling them." To this end recent experiments have related dance to image by combining photography, film and choreography. But although the company is relatively young, it has been together long enough to lose the sharpness and the anarchy which seem to characterize modern dance companies seeking to do things never before done, simply for the sake of being different.

Critics have acclaimed "Le Groupe de la Place Royale" since its early months.

"New forms in dance, like new forms in painting, require dedicated exponents capable of rising above the contempt of the Philistines. Such dedication is clearly the driving force behind the Groupe de la Place Royale. There is an excitement and a refreshing originality about the works they are presenting which is stimulating and always fascinating. I found the evening an engrossing experience."

"None of the movement jars.

Lois Siegel

All of it is kept in a minor key, graceful, sinuous and always appropriate, the sort of work one could go on watching for hours without tiring."

The company of seven dancers will do three separate presentations this weekend: "13 choreographies," 13 pieces created by seven choreographers; "I Must Say; il faut bien le dire," and "Mirage", a collage of film, music and dance. The evening sounds full and very entertaining, a proper beginning for this exciting new series.

Tickets for this production and for the rest of the series are available at the Box Office in the Agnes Etherington Art Centre.

'Kane' begins series

Sandra Bernstein "Citizen Kane" is a film which has become as much an American institution as the Horatio Alger mythology it undercuts. Almost everyone has seen the powerful, enigmatic Orson Welles classic more than once, and, like most of his productions, they have found it as contemporary today as it was upon release in 1941.

The film traces the career of Charles Foster Kane, a newspaper magnate who accumulates vast stores of wealth but is unable to reciprocate the love he needs from others.

Because of intentional parallels with the Hearst publishing empire, the film was the subject of much legal controversy in the forties.

It also stunned directors of the time, pointed out Film Studies professor D. J. Kites, with Gregg Toland's new deep focus photography, and Welles' use of silhouettes, ceilings on sets, and flashbacks.

Add to this the haunting, complex psychological investigation of the character of Kane, and we have the main reasons why this is considered "the first modern American film."

Welles' hallmark, perhaps, is the dramatic use of black and white photography: the sharp contrasts, eerie lighting and unusual camera angles which are the most striking features of later films such as "Othello", are already in evidence here.

Certainly, also, the character of Kane was of a type which was to predominate in Welles' productions. It is intriguing to conjecture the cause of this fascination in so remarkable a man. Possibly, suggest Kites, Welles linked Kane to the classical tragic hero. On the other hand, the best features of Kane's megalomania, as displayed particularly in the scenes of him as a young man, remind us of a Welles who had already astonished an entire continent by the age of twenty-two.

In any case, the film was an apt choice to begin the 1974 Film Studies Series, "Contemporary Cinema". These movies are screened Tuesdays at nine, in Ellis auditorium. Members of the general public are welcome to buy individual admissions at $1.50, or season passes for $10.00.

The series includes twenty-three films. Next Tuesday the feature is Slaughterhouse-Five, a close rendition of the book by Kurt Vonnegut. Other films will include Antonioni's "Zabriske Point", Godard's "Weekend", Truffaut's "Shoot the Piano Player", Berman's "Passion of Anna", the Canadian "Going Down the Road"; Peter Sellers' science fiction classic, "Dr. Strangelove"; and Gene Kelly's "Singin' in the Rain"; Jack Nicholson will be seen in "King of Marvin Gardens", and Cloris Leachman in "Diary of a Mad Housewife".

Complete lists of films are available from the Film House on Stuart St., or at Agnes Etherington.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 9 AM TO MIDNIGHT

Abramsky
259 Princess St.
Unfinished Furniture
Ready to paint or stain
Choose from our wide selection of 3, 4, 5 and 6 - Drawer chests, Double and Triple Dressers, Desks, chairs etc
All reasonably priced

Office of Housing
And Property Management has moved to
25 Union St.
547-2890
weekdays 9:00 am - 5:00 pm

QUEEN'S SNAPS

"Star light, star bright, first star I see tonight,
I wish I may, I wish I might, get the Journal out tonight."
Towne House Pub
THE SEAWAY HOTELS
TORONTO - WINDSOR - KINGSTON - OTTAWA - MONTREAL
A Seaway Hotel

BOOK REVIEWS

Patterns of Isolation
by John Moss
McClelland & Stewart, 1974

by Bert deVries
Following recent studies by D. G. Jones, Margaret Atwood, and others, Mr. John Moss has given us yet another thematic guide to Canadian literature. We might reasonably have expected an advance in insight and comprehensiveness over the promising earlier works. Unfortunately, we have been disappointed. For example in Survival, Margaret Atwood charmingly brushes off the literature of Quebec by admitting that she doesn't know much about it. Along the same line it "appears" to Mr. Moss in his inroduction, "that English and French Canadian fiction participate in distinctly separable traditions which only occasionally converge. While this premise does not affect the study itself, it is the basis for my decision to deal with one side of dual entity". This is an amazing assertion, which I have never seen demonstrated anywhere. In fact, a reading of some representative novels from Quebec gives me the opposite impression. Yet Mr. Moss gives us not a shred of evidence to support a statement which, if true, would seriously undermine any progress towards the "national being", "positive identity", and "Canadian community" for which he professes a great interest.

Part II of his book is largely an attempt, successful in some ways, to banish the term "regional" as a pejorative description of such novels as The Nymph and the Lamp. As for Mr and My House, and The Channel shore. He does this by demonstrating how these novels use their specifically local settings to express universal themes, especially themes of isolation and alienation. And yet, with his curt dismissal of French-Canadian literature (which one suspects he has not read, as the works he does mention in passing are all readily available in translation) he is doing to the literature of one third of his countrymen the very thing that he condemns other scholars for doing to the literature of the Prairies and the Maritimes. We have had enough Westmont Rhodesians writing about Canadian literature.

Furthermore, Mr. Moss has trouble writing comprehensible English sentences. A few examples: "It is left to the centripetal tensions within the whole work to achieve their synthesis into a coherent art equivalent. Perhaps a pair of brief sketches will more succinctly demonstrate what I mean, and escape the aridity of theoretic abstraction." And so on throughout the entire book. If form and content are really linked, as literary critics say, then judging from Mr. Moss's form, his content is nothing to be proud of.

He does make some interesting points about the difference between literary works written under conditions of garrison, frontier, colonial and immigrant exile, and the significance of bastardy as a symbol of dislocation and discontinuity in our literature, but these are not enough to remove the bad taste of poor prose and contradictory premises. My advice to Professor Moss, who teaches, of all places, in Montreal, is to learn to read French and to write English.

Commerce Student Services. They're tops!

At the Commerce, we offer a complete range of student services, to help you with your banking needs. Services that you'll need now, and after graduation.

Like savings accounts, to help your money grow. A variety of loan programs, including Bankplan and student loans. Charge, and more.

Get to know the people at the Commerce on or near your campus. Drop in and ask about opening a savings account with us.

We think you'll find our people are tops, too.

AMS CONCERTS URGENTLY NEED PEOPLE

FOR: Technical Manager Promotion Manager
Ticket Sales Manager
House Manager

"TO PUT ON A SHOW WE NEED WORKERS"

Also Required Are People Who Would Be Interested in Running Lights for Shows.

Leave Names, Addresses & Tel. Numbers in Teams. Addressed to Dave Finlay or Richard Hann!

Alfie Sez...

PARADE TO WEST CAMPUS with Queen's Bands

meet at Victoria Hall at 1:00 pm, Saturday Sept. 21

ROUTE: Victoria Hall, Albert, Union, Sir John A. McDonald, Richardson Stadium
OUAA Football Queen's vs McGill

Gaels, Redmen renew rivalry

by Chris Boon

The Golden Gaels go after their first win in OUAA competition here tomorrow when they host the McGill Redmen in a renewal of a traditional rivalry dating back to the turn of the century. The Gaels dropped their opening game 27-7 to Ottawa U. last Saturday, while the Redmen notched 28 points in the final five minutes to upset the Loyola Warriors 35-21 in Montreal.

The Redmen, College Bowl finalists last season, are led by diminutive veteran QB Uldis Auders, a man who likes to put the ball in the air. He hit on 21 of 42 attempts against the Warriors, but Loyola has been vulnerable to the pass for some time, and the Gaels, who grabbed three interceptions last week, have top-notch deep backs. Look for some turnovers tomorrow. On the ground, McGill has a fine fullback in Don Cowie, a reliable short-yardage runner, but have suffered losses at the halfback spots. Wide Receiver John Morgan is a good one with super hands; he caught a 20-yard strike from Auders for one TD, and helped set up three more with clutch catches.

Defensively, the Redmen are missing a lot of faces from last year, but play a very aggressive style. Their deep umbrella picked off three passes in the late stages of the Loyola match to set up the Tribe's resurgence.

The Gaels have to produce some offence this week, and will be any easier for them. Fullback Dave Hadden is out for at least one week with ankle damage sustained against Ottawa, and several other key players are nursing sore spots. However, Brian Titley, who arrived in Ottawa from PHE camp school just as the team was preparing to leave for the stadium, has had a week to work on his timing and should be an effective runner at one halfback spot. Look for Murray Buchanan, a 215-pound rookie from Havelsack, to get the call at fullback, with either Jamie Domanski, or Kerry Powell, at the other half. Bruce Pollock will start at flanker, with Bob O'Doherty behind him. Raold Serebrin will be the QB, and if last Saturday was any indication, the air could be full of footballs.

Along the line, the only change could come at guard, where Peter Sabiston could move ahead of Doug Lowry, who suffered some ankle damage when he was clipped covering a punt. Lowry will play, however.

Defensively, the Gaels will be missing Norm Hagarty, who is out for an indeterminate period with a broken forearm suffered last Saturday. Look for John Tovee to move to the outside, with tough rook Steve Thompson taking over Tovee's inside 'backing spot. The rest of the defense is intact, and if it can keep up the production of turnovers started last week, the Gaels should have some good chances. The offense has to do the job, though, especially when it comes to hanging onto the ball. If it doesn't, Saturday could be a long day.

Dave Hadden - out for 2 weeks

Look, read, think and inwardly digest

by Jim Fergusson

It may be observed that there is a distressing state of ignorance on this campus concerning rugby. One girl, upon being asked by a stalwart rugby player if she would like to see a rugby game, replied she would, only if he played goal. Needless to say, that blossoming relationship abruptly defoliated. Rugby has a long tradition at Queen's. In an attempt to refresh this heritage, I would like to state a few facts about the game.

The origins of rugby date back to the early stages of British history. Although no set of rules was formalized before the nineteenth century, there are many descriptions of games as far back as Roman times, which contain the essence of rugby. The common element is the attempt by two teams to place a leather ball over each other's goal line. In early games there were few limitations on the means by which this was done. There are some descriptions of whole parishes forming teams and playing over a three mile long field. These forerunners were extremely popular and played on festive occasions.

In the public schools a more organized form of this past-time emerged. One early rule prohibited handling the ball. Modern rugby can be dated from 1823, when William Webb Ellis at Rugby School picked up the ball and ran with it. At the time his behaviour was condemned, but handling of the ball soon became a regular practice. Soon other schools took up "the game played at Rugby" and thus the name was derived. Clubs were formed to play the game and rules were formalized although few clubs had the same sets of rules. In 1871 representatives of 17 clubs and three schools met at a restaurant and formed the Rugby Football Union. This body appointed a committee to draw up rules which eventually became universal, although undergoing continual change. From these beginnings "rugger", the popular term for the game, grew and is now played in dozens of countries around the world.

North American football is the offspring of rugby and resembles it in many respects. The object of both games is to get the ball over the goal line, but in rugby it must also be touched down. The basic skills of running, kicking and tackling are common to both games. A major difference in rugby is that the forward pass is not allowed. The only way to gain ground is to run or kick. You must not throw or knock the ball forward. Instead of the staccato play of football the laws of rugby are designed to keep the play moving. The main difference which achieves this end is the fact that the ball does not die when someone is tackled. What usually happens is that a "loose ruck" forms to get the ball back into play. A "loose ruck" consists of any number of players of each team simultaneously trying to push the opposing team off the ball and "heel" the ball back for their own team. If a stoppage of play does occur a "set scrum" is formed to start up the play. The set scrum is like the loose ruck except instead of players just flying in anywhere, the positions are formalized into eight for each team.

When watching the game, the most common infractions one will see are the "knock on", when the ball is unintentionally knocked forward, and the "offside", receiving the ball in a position forward of the team-mate who passed it. An integral part of the game is the "beer-up" where both teams get together to exchange anecdotes and sing delightfully innocent rugby songs.

The continual action and physical nature of the game make it enjoyable for most athletes. The Queen's Club practices at West Campus at 6:15 most weekday evenings. Although official practices have already started, the team is never formalized so any individual who perseveres has a chance to make either the first or second teams. For anyone who is just interested in watching, the first home game is on Oct. 5 at West Campus.

WIC-ly News

WIC (Women's Intramural) Activities start this Sunday. All you early bird tennis players can play to your heart's content on Sunday morning from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. on the roof of the Phys. Ed. Centre.

Want to join a Bike Hike? Meet in front of the Phys. Ed. Centre at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, September 22nd. Bring your bike and a picnic lunch. This is co-ed, so guys are welcome on the bike Hike as well. Also, there will be donuts and freshie at the Phys. Ed. Centre when the Bike Hike is over.

WIC Athletic Nite will be held Tuesday, September 24th from 7:8 p.m. in the Bartlett Gym. Come and find out what Women's Intramurals are all about.

DANCE TONIGHT!

AT

The Redeye River Ramble

in

Grant and Kingston Halls

MUSIC BY "CRAZY LEGS"

8 pm - 1 am

Beer, Liquor, Admission 99¢

WE WON'T B.S. YOU

WE'VE SIMPLY GOT THE LOWEST
PRICES ON THE GEAR YOU NEED

FAMOUS BRAND NAME CLOTHING
JEANS, JACKETS, SWEATERS, SKIRTS, SHIRTS, SHRINKS, PANTS, OUTERWEAR, UNDERWEAR — WE'VE GOT IT ALL

PLUS

FOOTWEAR — Dress shoes, casual shoes, joggers

LINENS AND BEDDING INCLUDING FOAM SLABS

COOKWARE AND HOUSEHOLD SUPPLIES

HEALTH AND BEAUTY AIDS

SPORTING GOODS

PAINT AND PAINT SUPPLIES

YOUR HEADQUARTERS
FOR

KINGSTON'S
FAMOUS
BARGAIN HOUSE!

27 Princess Street
at Ontario
Free Parking - Charge

unclassifieds

more on page 4

RIQE WANTED TO Montreal Willing to help with gas, drive if necessary. Would be regular customer if possible. Call Barrie at 544-4153.

LOST - one pair of wire rim glasses at greaser dance. If found please call Kevin, 549-2447.

FOR SALE - Size 42 Aris jacket in superb condition. Phone 542-6462. Best offer.

BITE THE BONE The Brock Boys are "doing it" again this Saturday night at 435 "Cum one, cum all" FOR SALE - Sony STR-6045 AM-FM receiver. One year old, in excellent condition. Phone 544-9895.

Gael Group No. 20: Mary, Jane, Joanne, Joanne, Mary, Mary, Pat, Gave, Gave, Robin, Catherine, Kim, John, Heidi, Eleanor, Ali, Jan, Melony, Janice (and of course Henry) it's time for a major warm-up party at 159 Alford at 11:00 am on Saturday, September 21. Bring your own poison.

MIKE, JOY AND AL want to thank Gael group No. 7 for a great week. Watch for future developments re: survival party.

FOR SALE - Records and the following 1st year books: Industrial relations in Canada, Irtan IV with Walter and Watliv, Fundamentals of Marketing, The Canadian Political Process. Phone Duncan 549-4423.

WANTED TO BUY - one tiling cabinet. Phone Duncan at 549-4623. LOST - Watch at greaser dance Grant Hall. Cheap Times. If found please call 544-7121.

FOR SALE - Girl's ski equipment, Reiker ski boots (approx. size 7) and press, also Hakuba (Ogilby, F and P) 165 skis and poles, $75, 546-2196.

BEO AND DESK wanted. Please phone Steve 549-4423 if you have merchandise or information.

PARTY FOR PISTON! Read on... Friends and acquaintances wishing to help Piston (Pete Fedyczko) celebrate his 23rd birthday are cordially invited to a Party (surprise) to be held at Jim's this Friday night (the 20th), 3 Alberden St. (upstairs). BYOB. Y'all come! Jim and Faye.

FOUND - 3 keys at sobriety. Call Fern at 544-5122.

LOST - Silver Medallion. Sentimental value high. Please call 548-8205 if found.

WANTED - History 121 books. Phone Jan Neudman, 548-4871 during the day.

CHUCK, EVAN and Nancy would like to thank everyone in Gael Group 99 for being who, what and how they were and are. One helluva bunch! Thanks for a great week.

DOMINO THEATRE is holding a "Music Hall" where fun and laughter are on the curriculum. Join in the fun and have a beer. Dates: 19, 20, 21 of September; 27, 28 of September; 3, 4, 5 of October. Tickets $1.75 Thurs., $2.50 Fri. and Sat. Mahoods or at the door.

Gael Group No. 27: Now you know what Queen's is really like. Good luck and keep smiling. Keep a close eye here, we'll have a reunion later. Rod, Cairnie, Arlo, 185 PER MONTH - Rooms in 340 Frontenac St. for male students. No less! Call at house during evening. Also basement apt. $110 per month. Ideal for young married couple.

STOLEN - 1965 dark green International Traveller, Engineering initiation week, Sept. 10, 1974. Please call 376-3877 as to location of my truck. I need it.

WOULD THE FIRST year engineers who were able to reach the top of this year's grease pole please contact: Public Affairs Director, CFRC radio, Caruthers Hall, 547-6477.

LOST - 1 gold male watch with brown strap, make - Bucer, at the greaser dance Frosh week. Would very much like it back. Thanks, 549-2703.

ST. ANDREW'S young people's Society extends an open invitation to all who might wish to join them in their opening banquet this year. Supper is at 5 pm, Sept. 24, Corner of Princess and Clergy - and it's free! Come and bring a friend.

ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE in luxury apartment for sincere masculine, clean cut and discreet gay student. Call 549-2276 evenings.

SACRIFICE of a 1972 Kawasaki 350 in excellent shape being held at 544-

5796. Best offer. HAVE LARGE VAN and will move anything within 25 mile radius of Kingston quickly and cheaply. quotes for longer distances. il convenient. Noel Smith 544-5316.

CAMERA CLUB MEETING The Queen's Camera Club will hold its first general meeting next Wednesday, September 25. Students and staff interested in learning to develop B & W film and to make enlargements are invited to join. The Camera Club provides all necessary facilities and necessary teaching. Interest is all you need. Come to the meeting on Wednesday the 25th at 7:30 pm in the third floor common room in the Students' Union.

USED TEXTS, RECORDS, music and magazines Fantastic bargains at Annual Book Fair, Kingston Symphony Association, 370 King St. West (just three blocks west of Brockington). September 26-7, 10 am - 9 pm; September 28, 10 am - 5 pm.

BE A VOLUNTEER How? Find out by coming to SVB night, Wednesday, September 25 at 7 pm. Stirling Hall A, C and D. See you there.

URGENTLY WANTED: Pianist for Ballet School. Please contact Mrs. M. Ingman after 6 pm. 546-9158.

BEGINNER ADULT BALLET class - Sydenham Public School. Ballet Master - Mr. L. Slepianick formerly of National Ballet of Canada. For information please call 544-4860 - Mrs. M. Jarrett.

SCUBA DIVERS - general meeting of Queen's Scuba Club for all certified divers 7:30 - 9:30 pm. Stir "C"

Tues. September 24. All those who need open water certification dives asked to come. Phone Jacky 546-9979 for enquiries.

Gael Groups 94 & 14, Fast Freddie, Sue "THE ZOOMER" fellows. Thanks a lot for making it so hard to leave this place. We'll Z.S.P. again in '75. Buck.

Gael Group No. 95, you were a real great bunch. You were easy but you weren't pigs. Sorry about that. Best of luck Jan, Rose and what's his name. Watch for re-unions.

You could go to Monte Carlo to see it. Or Germany. Or Italy. Or only 50 miles from Toronto.

LABATT'S 50 GRAND PRIX OF CANADA

Mosport Sept. 20, 21, 22

Organized by C.R.D.A. Sponsored by C.A.S.C. F.I.A.

THE RACE Grand Prix is the absolute ultimate in car racing. This is the one they write novels about, the one they make movies about. It happens only once a year in countries around the world, and it's happening in Canada at Mosport, September 20, 21, 22.

THE DRIVERS The best drivers in the world will be here, including former World Champions: Graham Hill, Emerson Fittipaldi and Denny Hulme. Other top international drivers include Mario Andretti, Niki Lauda, Ronnie Peterson and Jody Scheckter.

THE CARS You'll see and hear the ear-shattering scream of the world's most sophisticated machinery: Ferrari, McLaren, B.M. JPS Lotus, Brabham and Tyrrell.

THE WEEKEND FUN You can make it a great camping weekend. Practice and qualifying days are on September 20, 21 with Race Day on the 22nd. Mosport offers free camping, firewood and water. Special SuperTickets include everything for all three days - entrance fees, grandstand and pit passes. It's an experience you'll remember for a long, long time.

TICKET LOCATIONS:

participating MAC'S MILK STORES participating VOLKSWAGEN/AUDI/PORSCHE DEALERS
Frontenac Mall

MacIntosh-Corry

Cracked concrete peeling paint and not enough johns

by Barbara Nyland

Cracked concrete and peeling paint. These words are not referring to Grant Hall or Kingston Hall. They are applied to Queen's newest structure, the arts and social science complex, MacIntosh-Corry. It is only necessary to walk into the entrance near Watson Hall and down to the bottom floor to observe a jagged crack in the concrete stairs. A few steps into the main level of the building will show you white, unpainted spots on the walls. "When the posters from a summer conference were removed the paint was removed too," ((the Journal)) was told.

These defects do not appear to bother the majority of professors, university employees and students using the building. "The open spaces and bright colors give a great feeling of freedom," said one first year Arts and Science student. A professor commented, "The short corridors don't give the oppressive feeling which results in other buildings."

When pressed to expand on their likes and dislikes, a main problem emerged. "When I am working in this office I can hear the photocopy which is around the corner and at the other end of the hall," said one secretary. Another person stated, indicating a nearby classroom, "When working in this office we can hear everything that goes on in the lecture. Incidentally it would be nice if there were more washrooms. We are often very busy here but have to stand in line with the students at the washroom."

The problem of noise does not extend to the graduate student offices on the fifth floor. Three students share a good sized office with a combined air-conditioning and heating system. A student working on his masters degree in economics commented that it was in immense improvement from the carrels in Douglas Library or the offices in the old houses around the university. Another student said, "We have everything: quiet to study, food facilities and common rooms on each floor to relax in."

A graduate political science student summed up his opinion in the words, "Cheap and efficient but not attractive." Is he one of the few who have noticed the unfinished concrete, the holes where nails have been pried out of the concrete, the obvious use of coarse gravel in mixing the concrete or the holes left by the rods which supported the concrete while it was hardening?

MacIntosh-Corry is directly attached to Dunning, MacDonald and Richardson Halls. "It's convenient but the architecture of this structure clashes with the adjacent buildings," remarked a student.

Convenience is indeed a major asset for those using this building. "We will have a small cafeteria near the concession machines which will serve hot food," said D. Ellis, of the Arts and Science Office. There is a large quiet study room on the main floor, as well as an area with comfortable chairs for relaxing and meeting friends.

Hopefully, when the building officially opens on October 18, the workmen will have finished filling the holes in the concrete and repainting the walls. But it is too late to straighten blocks of cement; and additional washrooms that are badly needed would pose a major installation problem.

And a way we go...

Soph halfback Stacey Merritt, who picked up 132 yards in the Gaels' 19-8 win over McGill, heads outside behind a solid block by Peter Sabiston (73), who was converted to tight end this week to help the running game. Guards Doug Lowry (62) and Keith Taggart (54) and fullback Brian Titley (29) lead the play downfield, while halfback Kerry Powell looks for a target to the inside.

The Gaels' ground game, combined with a rock-ribbed defense that stopped the Redmen three times on third and short and forced seven turnovers, gave Queen's their first win of the season. Since Varsity dined Ottawa 30-26 Friday night, next Saturday's tilt in T.O. is going to be a classic.

Queen's

Journal

Volume 102, Number 5

Tuesday, September 24, 1974

Bus-It to start Monday

A Peek Inside...

attempt to revive DSC

page 3

SVB wants you

page 3

opening of Bitter Grounds

page 5

Career Planning and Placement

page 5

Arts extravaganza

pages 9-12

Gaels scalp Redmen

page 17

A Star is born

page 13

Tuesday, Sept. 24

12:30 - 4:30 p.m. - A.S.U.S. Booksale in the second floor common room of the Students' Union.
 1:00 - 4:00 p.m. - Registration for recreation programs in the Phys. Ed. Centre. Fee $4.00. The first session runs from September 30 to November 1. The second session runs from November 4 to December 6.
 7:00 p.m. - W.L.C. Athletic Night in Bartlett Gymnasium. All welcome.
 7:00 and 9:00 p.m. - Hillel presents Siegfried, an award winning film in Dupuis Hall.
 7:30 - 9:30 p.m. - A general meeting of all certified Scuba Divers, students and staff will be held in Stirling C. Those needing open water dives for certification are also welcome. Inquiries to Jacky 546-9979.
 8:00 p.m. - Meet the Coaches for men's and women's intercollegiate sports in the upstairs lobby of the Phys. Ed. Centre.
 9:00 p.m. - Department of Film Studies presents, Slaughterhouse-Five, (U.S.A., 1972). Directed by George Roy Hill. Starring: Michael Sacks, Valerie Perrine. This will be shown in Ellis Auditorium.

Wednesday, Sept. 25

12:30 - 4:30 p.m. - A.S.U.S. Booksale in the second floor common room of the Students' Union.
 1:00 - 4:00 p.m. - Registration for recreation programs in the Phys. Ed. Centre. Fee: $4.00.
 7:00 p.m. - Student Volunteer Bureau Night is being held in Stirling Hall, Theatres a, c, d.
 7:30 p.m. - The Queen's Camera Club will hold its first general meeting in the third floor common room in the Students' Union. Students and staff interested in learning to develop black and white film and to make enlargements are invited to join. The Camera Club provides all necessary facilities and necessary teaching. Interest is all you need, so come to the meeting.

Thursday, Sept. 26

10:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. - Book Fair '74 is being held by the Kingston Symphony Association at 370 King St. West. This is a sale of used texts, magazines, etc. No admission.
 12:30 - 4:30 - A.S.U.S. Booksale in the second floor common room of the Students' Union.
 1:00 - 4:00 p.m. - Registration for recreation programs in the Phys. Ed. Centre. Fee: $4.00.
 7:00 and 9:30 p.m. - Cineguild and the A.M.S. present Lady Sings the Blues in Dunning Hall Auditorium. Admission $1.00.
 7:30 p.m. - Queen's Debating Union Meeting and Debate in Meeting Room, Ground Floor, International Centre. Everybody welcome.

Pubs and Theatres

401 Inn - Six Pack
 Commodore - Fat Chance
 Frontenac-Finnegan's - Inez Platenius
 Frontenac - Muldoon's - Old English Music Hall
 Townhouse - Shadowfax

Manor - The Manillas
 Odeon - Holiday on the Buses has been held over.
 Hyland - Sunshine
 Capitol 1 - The Godfather
 Capitol 2 - Our Time
 Domino Theatre - The first show of the season is Music Hall. Playing dates are: September 19-21, 26-28 and October 3-5. Tickets are available at Mahood's Drug Store, 156 Princess St. (tel. 542-7307) or at the theatre on playing nights, (tel. 542-9666). Tickets are $2.50 for adults, $1.75 for students.

Upcoming Events

Sept. 27-28 - Book Fair '74 continues from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. at 370 King St. West.
 Sept. 27-28 - At 8:30 p.m. in the Grand Theatre, England's prestigious theatrical troupe, the Royal Shakespeare Company will perform Pleasure and Repentance. The stellar cast is headed by Richard Todd who has been acclaimed in live theatre productions on three continents. The songs, accompanied by lute and guitar are performed by Martin Best. Tickets are available at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre for $3, $4, $5.
 Sept. 27 - African Club. New and old students will be meeting at the International Centre at 8:00 p.m.
 Sept. 28 - A.M.S. Concerts presents Paul Horn in Grant Hall.
 Sept. 30 - Clubs Night in Grant Hall.
 Sept. 30 - Life Science Rounds - "Hypothyroidism" Etherington Auditorium.

Info Bank

The Information Bank is open Monday to Friday, 9:30 a.m. to 5:45 p.m. in the John Orr Room of the Students' Union. Info Bank still needs lots of volunteers to help staff the bank. If you can't work a regular shift you would be welcome to join the staff as a researcher to assist in keeping the files up to date. There is an Info Bank Staff meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 24 at 7 p.m. in the John Orr Room. All staff are asked to attend and new workers are welcome.
 Info Bank phone number: 547-5722.

Phys. Ed. Centre

These hours will be in effect throughout the academic term except for holiday periods:
 Monday to Saturday: 8 a.m. to 11:30 p.m.
 Sunday: 2 p.m. to 10:30 p.m.
 The building will close one half hour after these times.

Coffee Shop

The coffee shop is located downstairs in the Students' Union and is open at the following times:
 Monday to Thursday: 7:30 a.m. to 10 p.m.
 Friday and Saturday: 7:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.
 Sunday: 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

TUITION FEES REMINDER

The first installment of fees due by September 30, 1974, can be paid in person at the Accountants Office, Richardson Hall.

If you find it more convenient to mail your cheque to the Accountant's office, please record your student number on the face of your cheque.

VAN'S GIFTS and BOOKS LTD.
 282 Princess St.
 KINGSTON 542-6676

COMICAL POTTY POSTERS
 Super Special Reg. $2.00 Now 99c
 Poster "Hang-its" 25 in. 1 pkg.
 At the Old Price 39c
 Just arrived-huge shipment of
 "PITRE" POSTERS
 Regular photographic paper $2.95
 Heavy artist paper $4.95

MON.-FRI. STORE HOURS 9:30 a.m. - 10 p.m.
 SATURDAY 9:30 a.m. - 9 p.m.
 SUNDAY OPEN 12:00 - 9 p.m.

TORONTO FOOTBALL WEEKEND

FRIDAY SEPT. 27

Buses leave Friday 4 pm and 8 pm
 Buses return Saturday, 6 pm and Sunday 8 pm
 Tickets on sale in John Orr Room
 Tues.-Fri. 10:30 - 4:30
 Cost: $9.00 (return)

CAMPUS MOVIES

presented by CINEGUILD and the ALMA MATER SOCIETY
 Dunning Hall Auditorium
 7 & 9:30 P.M.
 Admission: $1.00/ person

THURS. SEPT. 26 - LADY SINGS THE BLUES with Diana Ross as Billie Holiday
 THURS. OCT. 3 - DYNAMITE CHICKEN a collage of the 60's with Peter Max, Sha Na Na, Lenny Bruce and others
 THURS. OCT. 10 - TWO LANE BLACKTOP by Monte Hellman with James Taylor and Warren Oates
 THURS. OCT. 17 - PAPER MOON, by Peter Bogdanovich with Ryan and Tatum O'Neill (This Night Only Ellis Aud.)
 THURS. OCT. 24 - GIMME SHELTER, by the Maysles with the Rolling Stones
 THURS. OCT. 31 - PLAY MISTY FOR ME by Clint Eastwood with Clint Eastwood
 THURS. NOV. 7 - THE CONFORMIST, by Bertolucci with Jean Louis Trintignant
 THURS. NOV. 14 - ACT OF THE HEART, by Paul Almond with Bujold and Sutherland
 THURS. NOV. 21 - FELLINI ROMA
 THURS. NOV. 28 - PLAY IT AGAIN SAM, by Woody Allen featuring Bogie
 THURS. DEC. 5 - AND NOW FOR SOMETHING COMPLETELY DIFFERENT...by Monty Python

DSC: efforts made to cure its bewildering, stuffy impotency

by Debbie Coyne
 Elections for Departmental Student Council representatives, as they crop up within the next two weeks, might seem farcical. Ever since its creation in 1968 by a Faculty Board by-law, the DSC has awed especially first-year students, appearing to be yet another example of stuffy, impotent bureaucracy at Queen's.

The Arts and Science Undergraduate Society is particularly concerned about the present ineffectiveness of the Council, according to ASUS Vice-President John Ronson. He stressed that there is great scope for DSC involvement both within each department and within the faculty as a whole, in shaping educational opportunities facing students.

Each class in every department elects representatives to sit on the DSC. From these representatives an executive is elected, as well as students to represent it on the Arts and Science Faculty Board.

The Council is designed to improve Faculty-student relations and to allow students to participate in departmental and Faculty Board decisions. Thus DSC representatives are invaluable to the Faculty, primarily in voicing student concerns. After all, it is students who first notice that a certain professor is not suitable for teaching a first year course or that certain textbooks are considered unnecessary or obsolete.

Student opinions or decisions are also needed on such things as the merit of televised lectures in the Biology department. Proposals to restructure discussion groups or seminars with regard to different approaches may also come from students. One example of this might be found in the Psychology department, where some people feel more emphasis should be placed on the clinical rather than experimental approach to the subject.

Some DSC representatives have, in the past, been able to offer seminars and bring in speakers, and last year the history department representatives held some very effective career seminars.

The Faculty Board also consults students on promotion and tenure decisions, and within departments, committees are established to deal with such matters as quality of instruction. This year ASUS seriously intends to improve the Council. It will be holding a workshop during the third weekend in October, for all the elected DSC chairmen (one from each department). In the workshop the different areas of involvement open to the Council will be discussed.

Better communication between the DSC representatives and their class is critical so they will be encouraged to become more "visible" to the students. Some, in the past, have published newsletters which have proved effective.

ASUS, this year, has also provided for three Divisional Councillors within their executive, to be elected in mid-October and to represent the areas of Natural Sciences, Social Sciences and Humanities. The Councillors will be elected from the DSC representatives in these particular areas to aid ASUS in coordinating the subject areas. The ASUS budget also allots $1600 which is available to Council for any activity or program they might pursue within the educational sphere.

An Arts Council is being organized by ASUS to bring together the Arts senators, AMS representatives, the ASUS executive, and all DSC chairpersons and Faculty Board representatives. This Council will have a coordinating and communicating function, in which monthly reports will be presented by all those involved. Also, Ronson asserts that a full-time secretary-researcher will be available to coordinate and research topics under discussion in the Arts Council. This person will be available to DSC representatives as well, to help them set up desired programs and such things as course evaluations.

ASUS hopes to improve the continuity of the Departmental Student Council by changing the election of Chairmen to the Spring, so that they will be available starting September of the following academic year. This will ensure the Council more effective organization from the very beginning and better coordination with ASUS. More involvement in Orientation, particularly in the course counselling aspect, would likewise be possible. Thus if DSC representatives realize their responsibilities, perhaps this year Ronson hopes that the Departmental Student Council will become what it should be—an integrated and active council representing effective student participation in faculty and departmental decisions within their academic sphere.

Wanted: helpers and people lovers

by Sue Bennett
 An interest in the community, love of children, the prison scene, recreation and in general, people, all lead you to one organization here at Queen's—the Student Volunteer Bureau.

Relatively new on the Queen's campus, the SVB began in 1969 when volunteers organized through canvassing agencies and interested people here who formed an executive, went to the North Kingston Parish, then ran the Bureau as a placement agency. This initiated involvement in the community versus the isolation that had for so long been evident. An awareness of the SVB was soon created in Kingston by this executive who advertised, and made it known that Queen's was ready to volunteer help where it was needed. Requests soon began to arrive from interested agencies, ranging in needs from playing bridge with prisoners in the penitentiary to taking the mentally ill skating. A part-time secretary was hired to relieve some of the duties of the executive, enabling them to devote more time to creating rapport between Kingston and Queen's.

Each agency's request for help is studied before the process of finding a suitable and interested volunteer begins. Both parties are required to fulfill obligations and if one is not happy then the agency is dropped or a careful "investigation" is begun as to why it failed. The Bureau has outlined these obligations in written form and explains this carefully to both parties.

The Bureau maintains contact with some 35 regular agencies and also handles "one shot" deals. The long term agencies include Day Care Centres, tutorial programs, drug and birth control centers, hospitals, psychiatric care, penitentiaries, Boy Scouts, swimming programs, Big Brothers-Sisters, Outlook and TAK. Each is outlined in a booklet entitled "The Book" put out by the Bureau. These projects can be challenging and rewarding but one must be willing to put forth the effort and continuous assistance.

For those interested in the Student Volunteer Bureau, an SVB night is being held in Stirling Hall, tomorrow at 7:00 p.m. There will be representatives from each of the agencies, who will be willing to answer your questions or calm your fears of working with people you have never before contacted. By supporting the SVB, you are showing the community of Kingston that Queen's students can do more than drink, cause traffic jams and create public disturbances.

LONDROY'S DRUGS

Special rates
 to Queen's Students

471 Princess of University Ave.
 464 Princess
 Reddendole
 Losolle Pork
 Amherstview

Delivery Available
 546-3696
 OPEN 7 AM TO 11 PM DAILY

THE BOOK BIN

225 Princess
 (next to the Capital Theatre)

WE BUY and SELL
 Paperbacks, Textbooks and Antiquarian Books USED RECORDS
 Sold on Consignment

ART REPRODUCTIONS POSTERS

Please Bring US Your Books and Records

SPECIAL SALE TYPEWRITERS

- Used Underwood and Remington
 - Stondord
 - Office Size
 - Good condition

Phone or Visit Commercial Director
 Loyalist Collegiate and V.I.
 153 VanOrder Dr.
 Office: 546-5575 Home: 546-1580

ALL STUDENTS! HELLO,

It's a wonderful experience to see all of you young people in our downtown area.

I hope you'll find your way to "my" store, a new gift shop, at 264 Princess.

We have a lot of Scandinavian giftwares, and more will come this fall.

Drop in and see me, Mrs. Berit Johansson, I will show you around.

10% off to Queen's students except on sale items and cards

Mrs. Johansson

Nordic
 ART SHOPS

264 Princess 549-2340

unclassifieds

More on page 15

DOING ANYTHING tomorrow at 7 pm? Come and meet the Student Volunteer Bureau Gang at Stirling Hall (A.C.D.)

SVB NIGHT Tomorrow at 7 pm Stirling Hall, A.C. and D. Come and hear what you can do as a volunteer.

EARN $1,000+ organizing ski trips this winter. Ski Vermont! Free all season. Call 417-413-9122.

STOLEN 1963 dark green international travel. Engineering Initiation week Sept. 10, 1974. Please call 376-3877 as to location of my truck. I NEED IT.

QUEEN'S STUDENT CHRISTIAN MOVEMENT Fall programme will be screening N.F.B. films on Hinduism, Buddhism and examining generally the parallels between Eastern and Western religions. Politically, we're looking at China and showing films on the Chinese Revolutionary figure of the Canadian Dr. Norman Bethune. If you're interested or curious about helping organize these or other activities please drop by the Bookroom (Union basement west side door) on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons and evenings or call 542-7010 anytime.

Gael Group 93 remember the warm-up party Saturday at 11:30 at St. John's place. See you there!

ATTENTION those students wishing to see Queen's Bus Service extended to Montreal please come to the John Orr Rm. Students Union. Tue-Fri 10:30-3:30.

MISTRESS WANTED young, intelligent, attractive woman needed to keep mildly chauvinist, intelligent, attractive male happy during long winter days and nights (experience not prerequisite but recommended) call Peter 542-8735.

LOST 1 large, brown leather purse. Contains no money. Does contain some important papers - like my passport and visa. Any information, please call Meg, 544-0401.

BRANCHING OUT Canadian magazine for women. Fall issue features interview with SFU president Pauline Jewett, children's literature, dance photographs, art, poetry, fiction, book and record reviews. Single copies $1.00, subscriptions $5.00 for one year (six issues) or $9.50 for two years. Back issues available. Write to Box 4098, Edmonton, Alberta, T6E 4T1.

OLD TAK VOLUNTEERS - welcome back! Come and see us or give scheduling a call at 544-1376.

SVB - Student Volunteer Bureau. LOST: navy blue quilt jacket, size medium, lost at dance in Grant Hall on Friday night. Please call Rob Beattie at 544-7643.

COKE, PIERRE THE BEAR, AND HARTLEY want to thank all their friends for their successful housewarming special thanks to Pillow, Freshette Bacardi and Cocktails; Leslie, Sue, Linda, Chris, Joan and Finnegan, and 258 Albert P.S. who was number 487.

Dawson, who ever you are - we have your last year's books - don't ask me how we got them. If you want them, call 544-2013.

NEEDED one desk or table, reasonable condition, and not older than 14th hand or 17th century piece - which ever comes first. Phone 549-4753.

FOR SALE Danish couch $40, oak chest $50; coffee table, $10; wooden bed frame $10; wooden chest $10. Please call 389-1427.

HAVE LARGE VAN and will move anything within 25 mile radius of Kingston quickly and cheaply - quotes for longer distances if convenient.

THE NIGHT CHICAGO OIED, and let's not forget Barb's contribution. Without Pam there is no party. Jane cleaned up. We love you. The boys from 385 Earl.

QUEEN'S BUS SERVICE is now in operation. Tickets on sale in John Orr Rm. Student Union (544-5777) Toronto $9.00, Ottawa $4.00, Montreal $10.00 (return).

ARTS CL 75 desperately need participants for Bowls Inframur. Anyone interested please contact Peter Wilkins 544-6744 or fill out form in 102A of Phys Ed Complex.

LOST A brown purse loaded with I.O. cards was lost in campus on September 19. If found please return to registration office or call Chun 542-3989.

LOST 1 brown suede jacket at McArthur Hall in Room B219. If found please call Sylvia. 389-1749.

SCIENCE '44 CO-OP is a student-run organization. Members of science '44 are part of a community of 201 people living in 20 houses which are divided into 3 virtually autonomous divisions. Each member has a voice in his house, his division, and in the functioning of Science '44 as a whole. 544-4306.

HOW 'BOO! an eighteenth birthday party at Harvey's little brother's Big sister will treat you.

LOST watch at Greaser dance Grant Hall, Cheap Times. If found please call 544-7121.

ST ANDREW'S YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY extends an open invitation to all who might wish to join them in their opening banquet this year. Supper is at 5 pm. Sept. 29, corner of Princess and Clergy - and it's FREE! Come and bring a friend.

ACCOMMODATION available in luxury apartment for sincere, masculine, clean cut and discreet gay student. Call 549-2274 evenings.

USED TEXTS, records, music and magazines. Fantastic bargains at Annual Book Fair. Kingston Symphony Association. 370 King St. West just three blocks west of Brockington. September 28-7, 10 am - 9 pm. September 28, 10 am - 5 pm.

INTERESTED in canoeing, backpacking, snowshoeing? and generally having a good time outdoors? If so come to see what the Outing Club can do for you, Wed. Sept. 25, 7:30 Jeffery 114.

GAELE the party of week is in Wallace Hall tonight, dinner and dance (Noah is playing) $3.50; booze, an inexpensive extra. Begins 7:00 goes to one. Dinner from 7:30.

LIVING GAY is possible in Kingston. Call Terry Watson at 547-2836 Mon. to Thurs. 8-9 pm, or write to Student Affairs Center, c/o Terry Watson.

UNIVERSITY CHAPEL SERVICE Tuesday to Friday 9:10-9:25. Queen's Theological College "Morgan Chapel" all invited.

SCUBA DIVERS General meeting of Queen's Scuba Club for all certified divers 7:30-9:30 pm Stirling Hall, September 24. All those who need open water certification dives asked to come. Phone Jacky 546-9979 for enquiries.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. has expanded their processing lab and can now offer 24 hour service on all black and white processing and etichrome slide developing; for further information, call 546-7779 or drop by at 33 Brock Street.

ARE YOU A GIRL? Friendly? Homeless? If you can answer yes to these questions, have we got a place for you! Science '44 co-op, phone 542-5205 or 544-4506.

ATTENTION GIRLS of Arts '76 and Arts '75: I am your Athletic Slick

this year. My name is Anne Brown. I may be contacted at 404 Brock St., Tel. 549-2614. Since I won't have your addresses 'til What's Where comes out, please come to W.I.C. Athletic Night this evening at 7:00 in the P.E.C. and leave your names with me. Participate for fun!

"GIG-IN" for last year's animal squad on Sunday Sept. 29 starting at 4:00. Please phone Don or Lynne for arrangements.

G. 57, Brian, Moose and Hilary command the reappearance of the Gay Sarah, Joyce Ellen, Dr. Janie, Sarah from Kingston, Roberto, Tiny, Bob, Glen, Lindsay and Sivarito, Gerbil and Pickle. (It's at your house boys) It's a dinner and beer bash out on Queen Mary Road on Sat. Sept. 28. We'll all go together and meet - guess where - Richardson steps. For more info phone Moose, 548-3035 before Fri.

BUY THE BEST - Maramba 720 receiver - one year old, 2 years warranty left - perfect condition. This years list price $160. Buy mine for $290-no tax - phone 544-0459.

MALE LOOKING FOR FEMALE to share large 2 bedroom apt. close to Elms. Reduced rent for small domestic duties, if desired. purely platonic relationship. 548-4254.

INTERESTED IN THE MUSIC of the '30's and '40's in the big band sound for your dance? If so contact W.J. Babe (542-1920) or D.G. Hallam (542-9740) for bookings. Also more modern stylings, latin, etc. available.

OSAP Reminder

Those students seeking assistance through the Ontario Student Assistance Program for a full academic year must submit their applications to their Student Awards Officer before September 30, 1974. Applications received after this date will be assessed for half a year's need only.

FREE BIC PEN

Take this ad to your campus bookstore and get a BIC medium point "crystal" pen, free, with the purchase of any BIC product including the new BIC BUTANE disposable lighter.

Offer expires March 31, 1975

For every writing need!

People at 121 Union will help land you a job, plan your life

by Sandy Naiman

Career Planning and Placement, at 121 Union Street, begins to get very busy as soon as the students come back in September and it continues to be busy until they leave in April. But more goes on in the old and rather ugly red brick building on the northwest corner of University Avenue and Union, than the name implies.

The main activities of Career Planning and Placement are assisting students to find part-time, summer and permanent employment and career counselling. Aid is available to students interested in learning to write resumes, take interviews and become involved in the on-campus recruiting programme, and as well there are several other services related to what has become known as "life-planning".

What is life planning? It is related to a career, most strongly, but it also involves a student's awareness of the real world, as opposed to the academic world, and his ability to be flexible.

At a professional development conference recently held with other University and College placement personnel, this flexibility was particularly emphasized since recent statistics show that the average length of time a person holds one job is about 4 years.

Thus, orientation and awareness is a good portion of the activities of CP & P. Specifically, orientation to the work world, business world, whichever you prefer is carried out through a series of group seminars and sessions in the curricular and extra-curricular programme. Seminars on "Finding a Job", as well as sessions with graduating engineering, commerce and MBA students are being held starting next week and throughout the school year.

Awareness is not as easy a process to define, since it involves the student's interest as well as the counsellors' and the big question is, awareness of what? And how can one judge awareness?

This is where a programme known as ACT plays an important role and where certain seminars featuring speakers from various professions can be very helpful.

ACT is a catch phrase for Alumni Counselling Team and basically it uses alumni who are now successfully employed in various fields as counsellors to students seeking employment or information about a profession.

There are alumni counsellors across the country who are interested in helping recent grads or undergraduate students, and on-campus discussions with visiting professionals serve a similar need.

Basically, this process of "taking the rose coloured glasses off" can be accomplished right in the CP & P office. A resource centre containing information on over 800 companies and 300 government departments and non-government agencies, is available to any student for perusal. There are many directories which can answer almost any question, like "what oil companies have head offices in San Francisco" or "what opportunities are there for summer work in Italy?" or "What are all the social welfare agencies in British Columbia." Students come in asking more specific questions, like how to register for part-time, summer and permanent jobs. And so various forms are constantly being filled out amidst strange and often exotic searches for information.

Perhaps the most important part of the Resource Centre is its personnel, since each member of the CP & P staff has specific duties related generally to life planning and specifically to either part-time, summer, permanent employment, on-campus recruiting and career counselling.

There really is no main thrust of the CP & P office. Its functions range from providing comforting shoulders to lonely students to registering students for Public Service Commission examinations.

There is one thing that cannot be denied. It is an office where anyone is welcome and where people are interested in students. There are really no barriers at 121, the approach is always honest, often to excess.

And so, if you're interested in your life, and where it's going, you may want to drop into Career Planning and Placement.

Naturally, the staff of CP & P offer no guarantees, but, if you walk into the office you'll see all kinds of information regarding job opportunities, recruiting dates, part-time positions and current employment trends posted on bulletin boards throughout the office. One thing is almost always insured. If you are willing to work, then the staff of CP & P are willing to help.

Live talent, liquor at Bitter Grounds

Returning to the Queen's campus after a short revitalizing break, Bitter Grounds will be moving from the Student's Memorial Union to the newly renovated lounge in Clark Hall. In an attempt to make the idea of weekly live entertainment more presentable without losing the intimate coffee house atmosphere, alcoholic beverages will be served along with assorted teas and coffee.

The reorganized Bitter Grounds, while not forgetting its debt to folk music, will attempt to attract a larger cross section of the campus population by offering a greater variety of musical styles. To this end, blues, folkrock, bluegrass, country rock, rock and ragtime are being considered.

In addition, Grounds hopes that it will be able to continue the established practice of offering Queen's talent as an entre to the professional talent, possibly expanding it to the point where campus groups or individuals could provide the entire fare for the evening. Any person or group interested in performing at or helping to organize Bitter Grounds should leave their name, address, and phone number in the Engineering Society offices above the Campus Bookstore.

The nights of October 4 and 5 mark the reopening of Bitter Grounds.

Here's the scoop on Classifieds

The scoop on classifieds is: We need someone to handle them. Urgent no less. Anyone with a few hours of spare time on their hands a week (who am I trying to kid) and would like to work for the grand ol' institution "The Queen's Journal" come down to the Journal office and tell us about it. See you there.

Commerce 78 Executive

President:
Secretary-Treasurer:
Social Convenor:
Athletic Stick:

Katie Thompson
Kathy Stewart
Karen Croft
Hal Hannaford

DUNCAN KERR MEN'S SHOP QUITTING BUSINESS SALE

These Prices This Week!
"Queen's" "Sweatshirts" - mostly short sleeve - some long...ONE Low PRICE $2.99 EA.

"Queen's" "T-shirts" - limited sizes and quantities $1.99 EA.

"Queen's" "Scarves...." $4.99 EA.

Denim jeans and cords - mostly smaller sizes - were $15.00. NOW $8.99 pr.

SWEATERS...SHIRTS...SUITS...JACKETS...TIES...BELTS...WINTER COATS

ON SALE!
Duncan Kerr Mens Shop 350 Princess St.

QUEEN'S SKYDIVING CLUB

TONIGHT
7:30 Stirling "D"

Films
Real Live Skydivers

Everybody Welcome
(Yes - Girls Too!!)

One Man's Politics...

by Doug Bonnell

So you want to join a political party. Well kids, here at Queens we offer a wide variety of such organizations from the essentially apolitical Monarchist League to the slightly more radical Revolutionary Marxist Group. Today's column will focus on the three more established parties, the Liberals, the PCs, and the NDP.

The Liberal Party on campus is entering a period of regeneration, attempting to build a base for the 1975 provincial election while recovering from the bumbings of last year's executive. Its new president and sole executive member is Gus Itzcek, a second year politics student who will be trying to plug the organization into the provincial wing of the party in hopes of breaking ground for the Grits in Eastern Ontario. His own personal viewpoint is that Nixon will "not be able to pull it off" in 1975, but that the seat gains in that election may be enough to topple the Tories in 1979. Interested Liberals should attend a club meeting on September 25 and answer the skill-testing question, "Where is Alberta?" Fifty percent and you're in. Seventy-five percent and you're a cabinet minister. Gus can be reached at 546-6378.

Then there are the Queens' P.C.s, the most influential and largest Tory campus organization in Ontario, with an on-paper membership of over two hundred people. A six-member executive runs the association which squeaked Syl Apps back into power in 1971 and ensured the nomination of Flora MacDonald some five months later.

The organization could, however, be entering rough waters. A former vice-president openly admits that association memberships are slower in selling this year, possibly due to a disastrous federal election loss and a general but waning, dislike for the Davis government.

The PC president is Ross Drummond, a third year politics student whose main concern is building an effective political machine for the provincial election slated for next fall. Remember, membership can be a stepping-stone to the upper echelons of student politics. One of the last to use it as such was John Gray (that's Gray, not Grey) who went on to become, uh, vice-president of the AMS.

If you join the NDP you do not become a club member but rather a member of the existing riding association. "It is," as Wendy Hughes, the main force on campus behind the NDP, says, "Anachronistic to have a separate organization."

Why NDP? Wendy continues, "The party's 1974 slogan most adequately reflects its reason for existence, 'People Matter More'. The NDP stands for the working-man-but not just the working-man-any set of individuals excluded from government, any group that gets the raw end of the deal. It's a humanitarian party."

This year the NDP will attempt a massive membership drive and a series of provincial speaking tours centred at Queens. Wendy can be reached at either 546-1423, or 549-0194.

Remember, membership can be

Communication-Context

by Aloysius Salverbum,
Pantology College

Note: The following is the second in a series of articles concerning communication. The first appeared in the Lictor, written by Angelette Pantophant, and introduced the series. Synchronics: Context, the parts which immediately precede or follow any particular passage or text and determine its meaning...the jocular tone translating "you old bastard!" into "old friend"...the bench marks of everyday communication, the nod, the slight frowning of brow.

Diachronics: Our bodies communicate the context of our speech. The liar often has hand over mouth, "Attention, I'm lying". Yet we are not normally conscious of these context-creating modes of communication. This is due to the secondary nature of such communication, it occurs outside of the frame of the ostensibly communicated message. For this reason it is sometimes referred to as metacommunication; its function is to create the context, or channel, for communication.

Important concepts to do with context communication are paralinguistics, tacit knowledge and the Double Bind. Paralinguistics is the study of the grunts and disgruntled snorts which convey our essential selves. Facial and bodily movements are also included and more subtle phenomena like pauses and syllable stress. Tacit knowledge is everything that we know but can't describe. Most skills are based on tacit knowledge, things that are "just known". Similarly, though we are incapable of analysing all the small gestures and expressions of sociable conversation, we can "feel" our way through such situations with great skill, skill that cannot be conveyed verbally. The Double Bind is the heads-you-lose tails-I-win situation. It can best be illustrated with an example: Wife: Tell me you love me. Husband: I love you. Wife: Why do you only say that when I ask you.

A simple model for a general two-way conversational process could be defined as follows: 1) two persons, A and B, are verbally communicating via some mutually defined communication channel. 2) the communication channel, or context, is defined by metacommunicational signals by both A and B (paralinguistics). Though neither is aware of it, there are a definite set of constraints agreed upon in the definition of the channel 3) in the process of conversation there is rational information exchange between and within each person. There are also non-rational, usually tacit, reactions to the channel itself. On the basis of these reactions there is a continual, unconscious re-definition of the context (channel). Using this model, a Double Bind may be viewed as the abuse of communication contexts, or channels. Such abuse is the basis of Gregory Bateson's Double Bind theory of schizophrenia.

Context communication is affecting you through each and every day. But let us put an end to these words.

"Gays for Equality"

Queen's at Conference

Roland LeBrasseur

The group "Gays for Equality" of the University of Manitoba hosted the National Gay Conference from Aug. 31 to Sept. 2. Twenty-two groups from across Canada were represented; Queen's Homophile had three representatives present. This was the second national conference; last year's was at Quebec City.

On the first day, after registration and procedural formalities, a Gay Pride March of 100 persons took place in downtown Winnipeg, ending at the Provincial Legislative Building where the crowd was addressed by speakers. Except the odd outraged citizen and the unappreciated egg-tosser, the march was considered successful.

A number of varied workshops followed, such as "Gays and the Media" and "Youth Sexuality" Motions were passed at both the "Setting a National Direction" workshop and at the closing plenary session. One motion reiterated the priority of struggling for the inclusion of the term sexual orientation in the provincial human rights codes. Without this protection, a gay person has no recourse if discriminated against on sexual grounds. Two other motions dealt with sexism within the gay movement. One of them specified that men had no place in determining the overall priorities of women and that the exclusion of men from gay women's activities cannot be construed as anti-male or sexist. It was understood that the motions were not binding to the groups represented at the conference; the delegates would present them to their respective memberships for adoption.

SALE on all camping equipment
20% OFF

cotton's
sporthouse

399 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON K7L 1B9
TELEPHONE 544-1066

Royal Shakespeare Company
in Pleasure and Repentance
a light hearted look at love
With Richard Todd, Prunella Scales, Hugh Sullivan, and Martin Best
Friday & Saturday,
September 27 & 28
Grand Theatre 8:30 P.M.
Tickets: $2, $3, $4 students
Division of Concerts Box Office
Agnes Etherington Art Centre
547-6194
A Division of Concerts Event

Letters to the editor

Grease about the grease pole

Dear Editor,

In the interest of Mr. McClelland's peace of mind we feel it our duty to acquaint Queen's public with a few facts about the grease pole.

The grease pole has a printed set of regulations, something which appears to be unknown to the majority of the students attending this university. These rules specify not only the depth of the pit but also the means by which the tam is fastened to the pole.

Inspection of last year's pole revealed five nails two with a beer cap in the place of a washer and two with inch washers underneath them a firmly secured piece of tam. This latter is ample evidence that the tam was solidly fixed to the pole last year. We however understanding the physics of the system (tam and pole) realized that the removal of the tam would require an upward force. Hence, for the strength in its shoulders and biceps, a champion wrestler was chosen to remove the tam and was provided with firm support. Another one of Science 78's oversights!

Any difference between last year's pole and this year's can be attributed only to the replacement of the rotted top of the pole by a new piece of cedar wood and the fact that we used three real washers, which in cidentally, were also used by Science 74.

We fail, however, to see the point of your article "Clean up your act, Frees", as Science 78's greasepole climb was declared successful without their having to remove the tam.

Your comment that rules should be more stringently enforced is a valid one though. A number were broken during the climb. Spectators hurled not only the standard tomatoes but melons, oranges, and other hard objects as well as forcefully capturing and holding two Frees. Both these acts are strictly against all rules of fair play.

In the hope of clarifying the issue,

Marjorie Powell
Joyce Richardson
Mark Thomas

What's with Tricolor pictures?

To the Editor:

For the second year in a row, I have noticed an abundance of completely unnecessary pictures in the Tricolor. What is the purpose of 18 pages of concert photos? I haven't a clue who those guys are anyhow.

My suggestion is to use these valuable 18 pages for pictures of Queen's people. Where are photos of law-meds-rehab-nursing-education-MBA (etc) in action? I don't mean grad pictures. Where are sports team pictures anyhow? Why not make use of student artwork, poetry, even posters.

Another question I have is why do you put pictures in the yearbook which have already appeared in the Journal or Golden Words.

D. Scott

P.S. Congratulations on getting the Tricolor out so early. It was nice for a change.

Ed. Note - The Tricolor is designed to reflect the previous year at Queen's. The abundance of concerts last year deserved such notice (this year performers will be identified).

About team pictures: It is felt that the year in sports can be represented in a much more sophisticated manner than that.

We tried last year to get student artwork, but there was not enough interest shown. We will try again this year.

The reason for repeating some pictures: Those photographers who work for Tricolor also work for Journal, and since Journal publishes first it generally gets the pictures first.

... but I like Bus-It

Dear Editor,

If Druxerman and Co. are capable of changing their stolid minds they might consider the following points a significant number of students have accepted housing further from campus on the unreasonable assumption that Bus-It will exist. These same students will not be appraised by either two extra dollars or by one bus shuttling back and forth to West Campus, anyone who was awake at 8:30 last year, especially during the winter months, could hardly have failed to notice the five or six buses depositing students at Union and University. One bus would just manage to move that many students during the entire hour, never mind those students using alternative routes.

So Druxerman et al, will you consider your ferocious statements of the past and try to serve the students rather than some obscure notions of toughness you collectively seem to possess. We are not impressed. Not yours
J S Readshaw

Queens
Journal
Vol. 102, No. 5
Tues. Sept. 24, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Editor-in-Chief: Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager: Terry Collins
Managing Editor: Dan McClelland
News Editor: Sarah Yarnell
Features Editors: Wendy Reynolds, Laurie Gibson
Entertainment: Kerry White, Peter Haworth
Photography: John Cameron, John Bottomley, John Wilmer, Keith Bours
Contributors: Barb Nyland, Nancy Flood, Connie McLeese, Sue Bennett, Val Cotton, Debbie Coyne, Sandy Naïman, Jane Culleridge, Ann Robertson, Elderstatesman: Woody

Founded in 1973 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, incorporated Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (613) 547-2606. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

AUNT LUCY'S
Restaurant - Tavern
1394 Princess (West of Portsmouth)
Surf 'n Turf

Commerce Society
EDITOR
The position of editor for the publication of

"THE GRAD BOOK" is open.

Applications should be submitted to the Commerce Society Office, Dunning Annex (use campus mail) by Friday, Oct. 4, 1974.

DDS BARCH
OD BENG CA
BSCP PHARM
DVM LLB MD

With your initials and Now that you have your degree you're anxious to get your capital, we can help you shingle up. But as you know it's not as simple as that. First you need money to start a practice. Which is where the Royal Bank can help you. Because we'll loan up to $25,000 (or more) to help you bridge the gap until you become established. You see, we believe in your earning power in the years to come. So we'll tailor your repayment to fit that - we'll even defer your first payment if it helps. To find out more, drop into your local branch of the Royal Bank and pick up our brochure - "Money - and more - to help you start your Professional Practice". Or talk to a Royal Bank manager who's a professional too. And before you know it, you can have your name out front like you always knew you would.

ROYAL BANK
the helpful bank

A.M.S. PAGE

HAVE ANY QUESTIONS ABOUT BUS-IT?

Why not ask them at the A.M.S. Outer Council meeting on Thursday night?

A.M.S. OUTER COUNCIL MEETING

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1974

7:30 p.m.

McLAUGHLIN ROOM -
STUDENTS' UNION

AGENDA ITEMS INCLUDE:

- 1) SUMMER REVIEW
- 2) HONORARIA REPORT
- 3) CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

Don't read this

Unless, of course, you are one of those organizers who need to reserve a room for a spring term social event.

All campus groups wishing to sponsor a social function next spring must fill out an application form in the AMS office by October 18, 1974. Applications received after this date will be considered on a first-come first-serve basis for any remaining dates.

Approved applications may be picked up in the AMS office on October 31, 1974.

Information Bank Meeting

Tuesday, Sept. 24 - 7:00 p.m.

John Orr Room

All Present and Aspiring Volunteers are urged to attend

INFORMATION BANK

547-5722

APPLICATION FOR SPEAKER

AMS Outer Council

SHOULD BE SUBMITTED TO THE
AMS OFFICE BY 5:00 THURSDAY
SEPT. 26 1974.

INTERVIEWS WILL BE HELD
THAT EVENING

ONTARIO FEDERATION OF STUDENTS CHIEF DELEGATE

The position of Chief Delegate
to O.F.S. for the A.M.S. is open.

Applications should be submitted to the A.M.S.
Office in the basement of the Students' Union
by 5 p.m. Tuesday, September 24, 1974.

Long Range Planning Committee of The Education Commission MEETING

Tonight - Tuesday, Sept. 24, 1974.

7:30 p.m.

3rd Floor Common Room Students' Union

AGENDA:

- 1) Preparation for first term speakers
- 2) Discussion of second term speakers

XEROXEROXEROX Photocopying

5¢/copy

Basement, Student's Union
Manday-Friday 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

AMS, TYPING SERVICE

50¢/double spaced page (8 1/2 x 11)
90¢/single spaced page (8 1/2 x 11)

SPECIALIZING IN THESIS WORK
A.M.S. Office - Basement,
Students' Union

The Arts at Queen's

Drama Department continues long tradition

Dramatic productions are a long-established tradition at Queen's. A Drama Guild was founded in the university in the late 19th century and this group operated until 1920 when another group took precedence. This group was the Faculty Players - members of the university faculty and their wives. These two groups concentrated on drama in production, rather than on drama studies. Although there were a few "drama" courses in the English Department during the thirties, the Drama Department as a separate entity did not come into existence until 1938. With the institution of the Drama Department, the Drama Guild again became important - the group began with Shakespeare and moved to comedies and farces such as "Charley's Aunt". It also organized a summer theatre which began the summer radio which in turn developed into CFRC. Facilities were meagre in these days - present facilities in Theology Hall were almost entirely occupied by the biology department, and Convocation Hall had only uncomfortably crowded wooden seats.

Fred Euringer, who was appointed head of the Department in 1964, worked hard to enlarge and improve these facilities, and to broaden the scope of courses offered by the department. Euringer, who came from the avant-garde theatre of Toronto must have made quite an impact on traditional Queen's. During his first years here, such plays were performed as Tennessee Williams' "Glass Menagerie" and Edward Albee's "The American Dream". With this added concentration on the department, the Drama Guild became less important and the Faculty Players completely dissolved, most of the members going to the newly organized Domino Theatre. The drama Department itself became the main producing group on campus, and the number of courses offered increased.

The department is still growing rapidly. Two more staff members have been added this year, making a total of eight. Courses are offered in acting, directing, design, creative drama, textual analysis and criticism, theatre history, contemporary drama, and experimental theatre practice.

Productions have expanded this year also. In the recent past, the department has offered two major productions a year, plus four smaller plays, called "Chronicles". This year three or four major productions are planned; two of these are "The Night of the Iguana" (November 14-16) and David Pinner's "Drums of Snow" (January 20-25). Six "Chronicles" are planned for this year; the first is Cue for Treason, written and directed by John Reeves. All productions take place in Convocation Hall; major productions involve an admission fee, but the "Chronicles" are free. Tickets are available at the Drama Department Office before each production. In addition to these formal productions, a new series of Sunday workshops are planned; these will be for the purpose of allowing staff and students of the department to present experimental productions in an informal atmosphere.

Auditions for the productions of the Drama Department are open to any student of the university, and there is always a need for people to do work back-stage.

The Drama Department often sponsors theatre tours - one is planned for November 21-24 to New York. Information is available at the departmental office in Theology Hall, 547-6291.

Film Department expanding rapidly

The Film Department began in 1967 as part of the English Department. It offered only one course, but this course was so popular that in 1969 Robin Wood arrived to assist in the setting up of a separate Film Department.

The Department has grown quickly - at present four professors and instructors offer 9 or 10 courses a year. This year for the first time, the department is offering a first year course; the waiving of a first year English course as a prerequisite for film courses will allow more students to study film as an option.

Because of its connection with the English department, the Film Department in its early years concentrated attention on the feature film, but over the years it has extended its range of concern to experimental and documentary films as well. The courses in the Department concentrate primarily on criticism and aesthetics, but there are also two popular courses in film production. These are taught by Nicholas Kendall, a film-maker himself. Kendall is working on a number of films for the department, one a history of the city entitled "Heritage Kingston". His operation, "Quarry Film Productions", works very closely with the AMS group "Cineguild", a group which sponsors the Dunning Flicks on Thursday nights and turns the profits back into film-making ventures of its own.

The Film Department is offering three film series this year, plus several weekend film festivals. These ventures are attempts to create a more structured atmosphere for film-viewing. To this end, two of the series are retrospective studies of particular film-makers (François Truffaut and Alfred Hitchcock), while the other is built around "Contemporary Cinema". The weekend festivals too take a particular theme as their basis; some of these are "Canadian Cinema", "Women in Film" and "Film and Rock Music". Other plans for the year include lectures and workshops by prominent Canadian film-makers. These film series and lectures are open to the general student body; information is available at the "Film House", which is located on Stuart Street near Adelaide Hall.

The Film Department has grown very quickly and still feels itself to be very much in a transitional stage. Long range plans include more of the sort of structured film series offered this year, and of course a major in film studies.

Modern Dance Company blends dance and drama

The Queen's Modern Dance Company, under the direction of Miss Sandra Aitken, first began its activities two years ago presenting two very popular programs of modern dance. The first program, 'The Twice-Born, a Modern Interpretation of the Myth of Dionysus' utilized the techniques of dance theatre to develop a single dramatic theme through the medium of pure movement. The second show was an evening of wide variety, including samples of many different techniques and styles of modern dance.

Sandra Aitken, director of Queen's Modern Dance Company

This year, Aitken intends to continue experimentation by developing new forms of dance, forms which will combine the elements of dance and theatre to an even greater extent. (Actors, acrobats, poets, writers, musicians, and artists in all mediums are invited to take part in these new creations, and may contact Miss Aitken through the School of Physical Health Education.)

The company is moving towards the ultimate eclecticism, whereby the most successful elements of all art forms may be combined to create an integrated form which is capable of satisfying the complex modern sensibility. In this sense the company is strictly modern, and does not merely adopt the techniques of "modern" dance which originated in the thirties with Martha Graham. Neither does this mean a reversion to the formlessness which characterizes many so-called modern art forms. Modern dance is a rigid discipline whose freedom and fluidity of expression are the result of hard work and strict adherence to a demanding schedule.

Much can be said about modern dance, but finally it must be experienced to be fully understood. Not until recently has modern dance been seriously represented in Canada, but now with the emergence of new companies and a high standard of achievement, the popularity of dance in this country is increasing. The Queen's Modern Dance Company is Kingston's contribution to this trend, and with the interest and support of the university community promises to develop into a significant cultural force.

Queen's Musical Theatre enjoys past success

To those of you who are new at Queen's this year, the mention of "Queen's Musical Theatre" doesn't mean much, but what about "The Boyfriend," "Cabaret" or "bye 'bye Birdie?" These are just a few of the productions staged by Q.M.T. in the past five years.

Q.M.T. has its roots in the formation of Queen's Glee Club, a men's choral group, some thirty years ago. The glee club expanded its repertoire to include selected operetta largely of the works of Gilbert and Sullivan. Up until 1969, this group was under the direction of Dr. Graham George of Queen's Music Department. In 1969, its modern history began with Dr. Duane Bates (also of the Music Department). The name was changed to "Queen's Musical Theatre" and the move was made to Broadway musicals, starting with The Boyfriend (1970), Pyjama Game (1971),

Cabaret (1972), Wonderful Town (1973) and bye 'bye Birdie (1974).

Q.M.T., as an organization, requires no membership fees or registration. Once the year's production is decided upon by the stage and musical directors with the student executive (elected the previous year) auditions are held and show preparations get under way. In addition to performers on stage and in the orchestra pit students are needed in areas of wardrobe, make-up, set design and construction, and publicity. A decision of this Year's production and audition information will be announced this fall. Queen's students in any area of study are welcome to come out and participate! The show is put on after second term begins. Come out and support Q.M.T. but be prepared for a lot of hard work and time spent, loads of fun and great people.

Queen's Musical Theatre's production of 'bye 'bye Birdie'

CFRC- "The Alternative Sound"

CFRC and CFRC-FM are two of the few on-air radio stations in Canada operated by university students, and the CFRC Student Radio Club intends to continue its efforts to provide the Queen's and Kingston area community with an alternative to Top-40 background noise. Queensradio is a non-commercial operation, and is therefore freed from having to cater to the mass market at all times. Rather than the slick, high pressure approach designed to grab your ear and hold it during a few records and a few commercials, CFRC provides a low-key but unpredictable sound.

The Queensradio studios are near the heart of the Queen's campus, in the basement of Caruthers Hall, with the transmitters next door in Fleming Hall. The AM transmitter pumps 100 watts into the 120 foot high "clothesline," erected in 1936, which you can see strung between Fleming and Ontario Halls. The AM signal can be picked up about 20 miles in all directions on a good day, compared to over 25 miles for a high-quality FM signal, from an aerial driven by 1270 watts.

The AM frequency of 1490 is restricted to radio stations with low-power "local" coverage, and there are 175 stations broadcasting on this frequency in North America. On the other hand, 91.9 FM is an unrestricted frequency, and if CFRC-FM acquires a stereo transmitter a substantial power increase would be necessary to maintain the same coverage area.

Queensradio recently received a letter from a gentleman who picked up its AM signal on his radio in Marion, Ohio. In the early 1930's, when there were fewer stations around the world and CFRC's power was 600 watts, the signal was heard as far away as Australia.

Programming has changed greatly since those days, although some traditions have been maintained, such as Golden Gael sports broadcasts. In 1968 and 1970, CFRC carried play-by-play football from Winnipeg as the Queen's team sought the Canadian championship.

Besides sports, there is comedy, poetry, prose and public affairs, but a majority of hours on the air are devoted to music, primarily to types of music neglected by other radio stations in their quest for the lowest common denominator.

Because its transmitters interfere with Electrical Engineering experiments in the same building, Queensradio only broadcasts four days a week (Thursday through Sunday), but with the resumption of separate AM and FM programming in October, there will be room for something for everybody. For example, classical music for several hours each day, folk music each evening at 9:00, a choice of jazz or rock each evening after 10:00, and many other specialized programs throughout the schedule.

New members of the CFRC Student Radio Club are given training each year by more experienced members, and students interested in getting involved this year are invited to call the station.

Since the club members are all volunteers, it is vital that they be allowed to do the style of program that appeals to them, and this freedom is assured within the varied format of the stations. At times Queensradio lacks professional polish, but it makes up for this with a freshness and a real desire to communicate with the listener to produce an "alternative sound."

CFRC
am-fm

Music Department combines study and pleasure

Queen's Chamber Orchestra in rehearsal.

From 1935 to 1964 the Music Department was a one-man operation which offered three elective courses in analysis, traditional harmony and counterpoint. A second professor was added in 1964, and the number of courses grew. The library was built up and regular performances began. In 1969 three more staff members were added and the Bachelor of Music program was initiated. At present the department has 11 full-time faculty members, 4 resident artists (The Vaghy String Quartet), and over 30 part-time instructors. There are 160 full-time undergraduates in the Bachelor of Music program, plus a number of B.A. students doing minor and medial concentrations in music.

The department offers courses designed to develop insight from the points of view of the composer, the listener, the performer, the educator and the scholar. B. Music students study history, theory, composition, and music education. They perform singly and in various ensembles. Professor Anhalt, head of the department, is very interested to have non-B.Mus. students play in the various ensembles of the department as well. These ensembles are the Choral Ensemble, the Chamber Singers, the Collegium Musicum, the Wind Ensemble, the Queen's Band, the Chamber Orchestra, Queen's Musical Theatre and the Queen's Improvisation Group. All are open by audition to any student. These ensembles, plus a number of other single student performers, put on a total of 50 recitals and concerts last year. An equal number are planned for this year; all are open to the public with no admission charge. Non-B. Mus. students are also welcome to take courses in the department; Anhalt feels that they have a great deal to offer in terms of different perspectives.

The Music Department is beginning its first full year in Harrison-Caine Hall, its new building on Queen's Crescent. The department was previously housed in cramped quarters scattered widely across the campus. The new building contains improved library, practice and classroom facilities, plus a great deal more office space for the staff of the department.

Division of Concerts: tradition and innovation

The Division of Concerts was established in 1965 as a programming office for the performing arts at Queen's. Its major concern is music, sponsoring the two major classical concert series - the Grant Hall and Dunning Hall series.

These are open to the Kingston community as well as to Queen's students. Barry Cole head of Division of Concerts, states that audiences are usually evenly divided between the two groups and the agency seems to provide an important cultural link between Queen's and Kingston. Concerts are always well attended. The Dunning Hall series this year offers five concerts, among them the "Beau Arts Trio", a chamber ensemble of violin, cello and piano, and "Camerata", an instrumental ensemble in residence at the Shaw Festival. The Grant Hall Series, which also consists of five concerts, offers the Moscow Orchestra.

The Division of Concerts also arranges other events. The concerts of the Vaghy String Quartet, artists-in-residence at Queen's, are arranged through this agency. A number of special concerts, workshops, and other events are arranged every year.

Two special events already arranged for this winter are a concert by "The King's Singers", a choir from King's College, Cambridge, on November 29, and a concert by Cococo (Concert of Canadian Opera Company), on January 26.

The newest venture of the Division of Concerts is an attempt to bring professional theatre to Kingston on a more regular basis. Before this time, professional theatre has been limited to single events at the Grand Theatre and Grant Hall. A new series "Vibrant Stage", promises theatre, mime and dance to the highest quality. Among the productions offered are Toronto Workshop Productions' "Ten Lost Years", a musical adaptation of Barry Broadfoot's best-selling novel about the Canadian Depression; and "Pleasure and Repentance", presented by London's Royal Shakespeare Company; and a presentation by the Paul Gaudline Mime Company. There are four productions in the series, and two additional productions, one the much renowned "Anne of Green Gables" presented by the Charlottetown Festival Company.

The Division of Concerts box office is located in the Agnes Etherington Art Centre, and tickets and information about this year's events may be obtained there.

Bruce Chown of the Division of Concerts states that his office will welcome any suggestions for further programming. Students wishing to perform in an informal atmosphere such as that of the Ban Righ fire-sides will be especially welcome.

Elmer Iseler, one of the many guests at last year's Division of Concerts.

English Department encourages new poets

Extra
Special
Thanks

Materials and photographs were compiled, written, and edited by Kerry White and Peter Haworth. Thanks to Sandy Naiman, Francis Smith, John Bottomley, Dr. Anhalt, Prof. Kiteses, Bill Barnes, Sandra Aitken, Brian Beatty, Sharon Keates, Anne Ketcheson, and Liz Beth Haworth.

The English Department has in recent years organized some very interesting lectures and poetry readings. Plans are indefinite as yet for this year, but staff members Claudette Pollock and W. J. Barnes are hopeful that they will be able to provide us with a number of events of this nature. One poet who will definitely be giving a reading is Tom Wayman, a young man from western Canada. Poet and film-maker Michael Ondaatje will very likely give a reading of his work when he visits Queen's this winter to lecture in connection with the film department.

Quarry Magazine is closely associated with the English Department. It is a quarterly literary magazine which prints poetry, prose, plays and book reviews, most by Canadian writers. Although the magazine prints the work of established writers and poets, its essential aim is to discover new talent; numerous young poets have had much of their early publication in Quarry. These include such people as Joy Kogawa, bp Nichol, Christopher Priestley, and of course some of the editors: David Helwig, Tom Marshall, and Michael Ondaatje. From the beginning the emphasis has been on poetry, but plays, stories and criticism are published as well. Quarry reviews most new books of Canadian poetry.

The close connection between Quarry and the English Department is maintained by the fact that many of its editors, including W. J. Barnes, present editor, have been faculty members. Quarry was the student literary magazine at Queen's from 1952-65, before it became a quarterly and opened its doors to contributions from poets and writers outside the university community.

Agnes Etherington Art Centre

The Agnes Etherington Art Centre was established in 1957 in the brick house on the corner of University Avenue and Queen's Crescent. The house had long been the family home of the donor, Agnes Richardson Etherington. The University in accepting the generous bequest of the house for use as an Art Centre assumed the responsibility of operating it both for the University and the community, in the spirit of the donor's wishes - a dual role that has been continued ever since.

In 1962 the Art Centre was enlarged to increase the gallery space and to provide the Centre with studios and office space. However the very success of the enlarge Art Centre precipitated problems. The Centre received considerable gifts including valuable collections of contemporary Canadian paintings and sculpture, all of which additions and purchases have made further expansion of the Art Centre a matter of urgency.

The National Museums of Canada and Queen's University are financing the latest addition, already in progress. This will consist of building three stories south of the present main gallery (one floor below ground level) and will provide storage and gallery space for the Art Centre, separate packing and shipping areas, and workshop space.

Originally financed completely by Queen's University, with some annual support from the George Taylor Richardson Memorial Fund, The Art Centre has received grants from the Canada Council on an annual basis since 1967 towards programming, and occasional support in recent years from the Ontario Arts Council for specific projects. Since 1965 it has had much welcome support from the Gallery Association in terms of voluntary help and financial input into community oriented programmes.

It has from the beginning seen its role as that of a community and regional gallery, open without charge to all visitors and planning as diversified a programme of exhibitions as funds and availability permit, supplementing it by lectures, recitals, films and studio classes. It was guided first by Andre Bieler, Resident Artist and Professor of Art at Queen's for some 27 years and Director of the Art Centre from its opening in 1957 until his retirement in 1963; Ralph Allen, who succeeded Bieler as Director and Professor of Art from 1963 to 1972, and Frances K. Smith, on the Art Centre staff since its opening and who was Acting Director from September 1972 until the appointment of Michael Bell as Director in May, 1973. Michael Bell comes to the Art Centre from a five year period as Head of the Painting, Prints and Drawings Department of the Public Archives of Canada.

Attendance at the Art Centre has reached an annual figure of about 70,000 (1973), rising steadily from about 3,000 in its first year of operation. The capital grant support of the National Museums of Canada for the forthcoming extension is a direct result of the community service the Art Centre has been offering.

A forum of exhibitions

As many as 24 different exhibitions are offered in an average year and an effort is made to provide a balance between the traditional and the contemporary, and to include some work from the local and regional areas. Some exhibitions are prepared by the National Gallery of Canada, by the Art Gallery of Ontario, or by other major galleries and we can share in their expert planning. Others are prepared by the Agnes Etherington Art Centre staff and often, in turn, circulated to other galleries as for example, the David Milne and Andre Bieler retrospective exhibitions of 1967 and 1970-71 respectively. The Spring Exhibition an annual juried show, has been held every year since 1957, with the exception of 1973 when the whole gallery space was committed to HERITAGE KINGSTON for a 5 month period, to coincide with the city's Tercentenary celebrations. This contribution to the community also involved the publication of a major exhibition book, Heritage Kingston copies of which are still available.

bottomley

The installation of exhibitions in the Art Centre is done by Bill Mysson, Assistant Curator.

From 1957 to 1970 classes in painting and drawing were offered to the community in general in the form of regular evening classes and a six-week Summer School. This pattern gradually changed due to various factors: the pressure on studio space for academic credit courses had to take priority; the opening of Extension classes in Art at St. Lawrence College provided community opportunity where there was ample studio space; the demand for such courses was changing in nature. Instead of long-term courses, from 1970 a series of shorter concentrated workshop situations, often at weekends, have been planned in specific areas such as life-drawing and modelling, and have proved popular. These have continued on a reduced scale, with some emphasis on the high school age group. As studio space and equipment becomes more available, this programme will be reconsidered.

Public illustrated lectures and film programmes are planned from time to time, using the facilities of lecture theatres on the campus to provide for a large audience. Often these are sponsored in cooperation with the Department of Art History or with the Gallery Association and are part of the community programme. Occasional music recitals are held in the Art Centre, open freely to the public and are sponsored by the Richardson Memorial Fund. These are always very popular.

The Association was formed in 1965 to bring together a wide cross-section of citizens interested in furthering the development and appreciation of art in the community in cooperation with the Agnes Etherington Art Centre. The Association augments the basic programme of the Art Centre by an interesting one of its own, frequently related to the theme of the exhibitions. Study groups, visits to other galleries, demonstrations, film programmes, special family and children's events are typical examples, some open to the whole community, others planned for members. A guide service is organized under the chairmanship of a member of the Association and drawing on interesting members who receive briefings on each exhibition by the Art Centre staff. The guides are responsible for school groups visiting the Art Centre at pre-arranged times. The cost of this service (the guides receive a small payment for each tour) is shared by the Gallery Association and the Art Centre as a community educational service.

The affairs of the Gallery Association are planned by an active Executive Committee with a larger advisory council, in close liaison with the Art Centre. The Association handles its own finances, independently of the Art Centre. Annual membership fees were originally $5 for families, $3 for individuals and $1 for University or high school students. These were increased in September 1972, due to increased expenses, to $10, $6 and $2 respectively. Patron fees have remained at $25.

Monthly information bulletins are published by the Art Centre from September to May or June, with one issue covering the summer period. The programme of the Gallery Association is included in the Bulletin, which is mailed to all members of the Association schools in the city and region, the news media and civic bodies, the Chamber of Commerce and University departments.

The permanent collection of paintings, drawings and sculpture is predominantly Canadian and a catalogue, prepared by Frances K. Smith in 1968, included 373 works. Copies are still available. Since that time, over 200 works have been added and about 850 graphics have been catalogued (internal reference only), over 700 of these European schools.

Important gifts have enhanced the collection, notably the Zacks gift of contemporary Canadian works (90) in 1962; the Douglas Duncan bequest of Canadian works (50) in 1970; the Daniel Fowler watercolours given by Mr. E. C. Gill in 1966; the Silver Collection given by Dr. Stuart and Dr. Fred Houston, and the continuing gifts of works of early European schools by Dr. Alfred Bader.

The collection is being used more extensively by the Department of Art History for teaching purposes and there are continual requests for loans to other galleries for exhibition purposes. More gallery space will allow changing selections from the collection to be more frequently exhibited for the community.

bottomley

A superstar is born

...or how I spent my summer vacation

by John Sweeney

(Ed note: In keeping with the theme of the Arts section of this paper, the Features Department decided that a recount of the summer adventures of a budding actor would be terribly a propos. John Sweeney is an ex-student-turned-actor who worked with the Shaw Festival for the summer and will be with Stratford in its upcoming season. Hence and forthwith, we present the first and last of a series on "How I Spent My Summer Vacation".)

In a small way, it was a dream come true. I mean, it wasn't anything like winning a sun-filled, action-packed vacation in places like Millhaven or even Napanee but a summer job at the Shaw Festival was very close to an ideal pastime for the summer of '74.

Though I didn't have any lines and the thought of holding a musket for one hundred performances of The Devil's Disciple had about it an aura of absurdity, while the real acting was going on all around me. It was, I kept telling myself, a hell of a lot better than four months of interminable midnight shifts at the factory, coloured only by stale sandwiches for lunch and, if I was lucky, a free pair of safety glasses to take home with me when it was all over.

It would be my first job in professional theatre, a chance to find out what it was really like to be making a living at something which had always been graded A.B. or C plus.

Of course I was late for the first rehearsal. These things just can't be helped. After all, some are born losers, some achieve it, and others might as well stay in bed in the morning. I decided that they were already in progress, so I squeezed through a squeaky door and cleverly, and with practised agility, knocked over a wooden staff which was leaning against the wall and which in turn knocked over four others, sending them crashing to the rehearsal room floor, thereby interrupting the entire rehearsal of the climactic execution scene and establishing once and for all that the Shaw Festival had risked disaster by hiring what they thought was a harmless piece of atmosphere in a red soldier's coat.

I tried to stay out of the way for the rest of the rehearsal, but before leaving, I managed to enter (and exit) in the wrong place in the brief scene I was in, as well as ringing the bell (my other major duty) in the middle of Tony Van Bridge's lines.

Shaw's only melodrama, The Devil's Disciple, takes place in 1777 in the American colonies and centres around the character of Dick Dudgeon; a dashing young anti-hero who exchanges identities with a Presbyterian minister in order to save the pastor from his own execution at the hands of the Third Reich. It is, as most people in the production realized, not one of Shaw's top ten. But handled properly, it brings out in a light, amusing way the playwright's penetrating view of issues as diverse as the stupidity of Her Majesty's armed forces and the powerlessness of women in a male-dominated military society.

The action and the laughter come to a head in the third act as Dudgeon (on trial as Pastor Anderson) makes a verbal mockery of the systems that surround him. It is also where I come in with musket shouldered and, standing motionless, (at my best achieving the effect of a breathing piece of scenery), I stand in the background protecting the generals and majors from any George Washingtons who might be lurking outside the courtroom, as well as from any more immediate attack from the Buffaloniens, who offended by Mr. Shaw's barbs ("I wouldn't dream of hanging any man by an American clock"), might leave their $7.50 seats (Canadian currency) and rush the stage in anger.

Unfortunately, nothing as dramatic as that ever happened. Confidentially, the life of a British private stationed on the stage of the Shaw Festival is pretty quiet. As it turned out, the third act was so funny that my greatest task was keeping a straight face, as all good soldiers do, while every one of the 830 faces I was staring into, was roaring back at me. For a while it was really hard, but you learn the tricks eventually, like staring at the exit signs or counting the number of pairs of men's white shoes in the orchestra seats.

When that didn't work, I'd use St. Mary's cement instead of make up before the show. It usually did the trick. There were four of us playing soldiers and we quickly became known as the "Mod Squad" as a result of our avant-garde on-stage dress and our neatly coiffured pony tails. I never had a request for an autograph from any one all summer, but I knew people in town recognized me, especially the cute high school crowd in front of the malt shop who used to stand at attention when I walked by on my way to get a banana split. James Dean thought he had it bad. How does he know what it's like to be a new kid in town like Niagara-on-the-Lake? I was a "rebel without a line" and my musket wasn't even loaded. Dig?

Niagara-on-the-Lake may be a gas on a Sunday afternoon when you're a tourist in town only for the show, and then you go back home, but when you work at

Shaw, what else is there to do besides work?

Some of the company became gamblers and either mastered the art of all-night poker or ended up owing the Shaw Festival enough in quarters and dimes over the summer to pay the taxes on the building for the next two seasons. But I'm the world's worst card player. I once lost my only copy of "Bing Crosby Sings Hey Jude Live at the Manor" to my six year old brother playing Old Maid (and I was cheating). So I don't play cards to keep busy. It doesn't pay.

The other alternative is that old actors' favourite - second only to polishing mirrors - drinking. I'm sure that more liquor is consumed by actors and audience together in Niagara-on-the-Lake than by any other species of fish in non-salted waters.

Being the biggest fish of all, my snappy "march on" at the first of Act III degenerated to a slow "stagger-on" five minutes after the curtain went up.

I must admit at this point that I am of course exaggerating for dramatic effect, and that being a serious actor I would never touch a drink before a show. Especially not in this show where both critics and theatre lovers were clutching at the seat ahead of them while sitting on the edges of their own waiting in eager anticipation for my every word!

All this "Shawdiness" aside, however, I must admit with all humility that never once, whether performing on the world famous stage of Belleville's Centennial High School Auditorium or at our own theatre in Niagara-on-the-Lake, did I fall asleep on stage or drop my musket. If Stratford only knew what they're gaining.

HOUSE OF SOUNDS
and
Columbia Records
Of Canada Ltd.

PRESENT
This Week's Specials -
All Albums By:
Murray McLaughlin
Bruce Cockburn
Syrinx
Crowbar
$3.97 each

Alfie Sez...It's the BIG T.O. WEEKEND!

Join Queen's Bands at the Pep Rally.
Nathan Phillips Square, Toronto. 11 pm Friday Sept. 27
OUAA FOOTBALL - Queen's Golden Gaels vs Toronto Blues
- 2 pm Saturday Sept. 28, Varsity Stadium
GO GAELS GO!

Due to the success of
our last coupons,
Finlay's Sport Shop
Presents
Coupon Series No. 2

$2 off any tennis, badminton or squash
racquet.

Free pair of white sneakers
with any pair of Tretan
Adidas, Puma or Tiger Shoe

$2 off any racquet restringing

$5 off any pair
of skates or ski boots

Offer good until October 3, 1974 and coupon must be presented

PAUL HORN IN CONCERT

Review in Journal '73:

"...one of the great jazz musicians..."
"...the music of Paul Horn, warmed the hearts of everyone in attendance."
"Paul Horn is an entertainer who is appreciated by every kind of music fan, and this was demonstrated on Sunday night. A first class gentleman and a first class entertainer, we hope to be able to see Horn again in the next few years at Queen's".

A.M.S. Concerts Agree!

Sunday
Sept. 29
tickets $3.00
Grant Hall
8:00 pm
Returned by request

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY
ENTERTAINMENT
in our Lounge
THIS WEEK
Fat Chance
Amateur Night every Wednesday
Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

Comedy Tonight!

A charming and witty beginning

by Sandy Naiman
If Comedy Tonight is in any way a forecast of the Queen's Drama Department's coming season, then indeed, this year we are in for a treat. I don't often rave, but rave I will, for this sampling of Shaw, Pinter and Coward was one of the most enjoyable evenings spent in the theatre for quite a while.

Director Bernard Burkom, whose penchant for Brecht in the past few years has not been entirely successful, seems to have found his niche. It's comedy. It's all kinds of comedy but it's particularly cool, crisp comedy. It's comedy that sizzles and crackles and believe me, it's good.

In all fairness, I must mention that Burkom in this production, has an excellent troupe working with him, actors and actresses who are seasoned and experienced. But nevertheless, his direction is reflected in a smooth, clean production, with only a few minor technical problems, no doubt, first nighters.

Comedy Tonight is an anthology of short playlets and skits, including the first act of Private Lives, by Noel Coward.

The first act consists of Bernard Shaw's charming satire, Dark Lady of the Sonnets, a piece about a fledgling Shakespeare in the dawn of his career, who goes around madly writing down lyrical phrases, like a thief in the night. He is particularly enchanted by an inconspicuously nightshirted lady who turns out to be Elizabeth I and the dialogue culminates in young Will's plea for a National Theatre. Anachronistic, of course, but fascinating with phrases from the Shakespearean canon sprinkled throughout and William having a terrible time getting them all down right.

Christopher Cunningham as Shakespeare, gives the character a lot of humour and energy. Although his accent sometimes borders on American Deep South, this can be easily overlooked since for the first time Cunningham is playing his role with what appears to be genuine focus. His mannerisms are appropriately mock grandeur and he doesn't overplay what could be too easily a larger than life stereotype.

As Elizabeth, Norma Edwards is the epitome of the virgin queen, sparing in movement, slightly breathy and vocally very commanding. Her parle with Cunningham is cleverly controlled and she is always a queen, despite her simple garb. Shakespeare's lady, played by Patricia Northcott, a creature who he apparently treats like dirt, becomes a sniffing little thing at the hands of Miss Northcott. This works very nicely, to counterpoint Mrs. Edwards' elegant queen and the three together make for a hilarious bit of business in the satirical frame that Shaw has drawn.

David Kemp, who plays the guard, a small but nicely drawn characterization, speaks one of the funniest lines when he bemoans the current plays at the Globe as being impossible to understand.

The next section of Comedy Tonight is a series of five short Pinter sketches featuring Mrs. Edwards, Carolyn Hetherington, Russ Waller and again, Kemp.

In this section, Mrs. Hetherington does a fabulous old lady opposite Mrs. Edwards and Kemp is particularly amusing as a rather dull and foppish old fellow marveling at a man in a sandwich board. Waller plays, and rather well, a pornography entrepreneur, being interviewed on television by Kemp, who ultimately indicts all pornography enthusiasts as being communists. And Kemp and Waller team up again as employer and employee in a rather strange manufacturing firm, where petcock's and other strange items seem to have turned all the workmen off.

The highlight of the evening, though, as far as I am concerned, was the second act which was Noel Coward's first act of Private Lives.

Here two sets of honeymooners are pictured side by side, in adjoining balconies, each discussing their previous marriages. To be specific, Sibyl now married to Elyot seems overly concerned about Elyot's first wife Amanda and coincidentally next door, Victor now married to the aforementioned Amanda is very curious about her first husband Elyot.

Enough said about the situation. The acting is first rate all round. Cunningham is a suave and debonair Elyot and Barbara Edwards a very persistent Sibyl. Mrs. Hetherington is the cool and sophisticated Amanda that Elyot describes in the initial sequence and Victor, played beautifully by Rod Robertson, his stage appearances are entirely too rare, is the opposite of Elyot, somewhat older, and methodical, clearly a man who appears to be more suited to Sibyl.

They all play masterfully and at consistently well paced levels. The talk is quick without being cute, witty without being side-splitting. The set in this, and all the sketches, is clever and simple, the costumes again simple and yet tasteful.

There are some nice touches in Comedy Tonight. Barbara Edwards does an entertaining and rather risqué set change between two of the Pinter sketches. Because the basic set does not change these transitions take very little time, thus the show does not drag. In fact, I could have easily stayed for the rest of Private Lives, I was sorry there wasn't anymore.

It isn't often I leave a theatre feeling that kind of remorse, so many times there's another feeling of remorse, a sadder kind. But with Comedy Tonight, I was sorry it was over so soon. This is a show with charm and wit, with excellent acting, clever material, and fun in all varieties.

Chris Cunningham as William Shakespeare

unclassifieds

More on page 4

FOR SALE Toshiba SA-400 receiver 15 watts rms per channel AM-FM phone Ken 548-8511.
TO ALL THOSE WHO MISSED the Bonanza family grand opening - 800: ... don't worry Wens. L. MacF., C. White, Nord and his secretary, the jew and damn the stud will be holding more.

SVB NIGHT

What can you do as a volunteer?

Come to Stirling Hall, A, C & D
Sept. 25 at 7 pm
And Find Out!

ATTENTION

All Queen's Organizations

Queen's bus service will make free arrangements for field trips, excursions etc.

contact: 544-5777
or John Orr Room, Students Union

CAMPUS MOVIES PRESENT

Diana Ross as Billie Holiday
IN

Lady Sings The Blues

with Billie Dee Williams and Richard Pryor

DUNNING AUDITORIUM

THURSDAY SEPT. 26 7-9:30 P.M.
$1.00/person.

Organizers

All campus groups wishing to sponsor a social function next spring must fill out an application form in the AMS Office by October 18, 1974. Applications received after this date will be considered on a first-come-first-serve basis for any remaining dates.

Approved applications may be picked up in the AMS Office on October 31, 1974

Procedure for booking all rooms

For meetings, smokers, dances and concerts:

1. Obtain a Student Activity Application Form from the A.M.S. Office in the basement of the Union.
2. Complete the Form and hand it in at the A.M.S. Office.
3. When the Application has been approved, "Form C" will be issued. You must pick up this form from the A.M.S. and take it to the Specific booking office concerned. This will be indicated to you when you pick up the "Form C".

Redbone:

"a musical porcupine"

by Paul Luke
Saturday night's Thomas Handy-Leon Redbone concert was characterized by a disregard for the niceties of conventional folk music. Both performers disdained to pander to either the predictably romantic or disaffected portions of their audience and chose instead to interpret writers and periods who are either little known or all but forgotten. This refusal to toe the line of familiarity was only rarely disconcerting, providing for the most part a rich and novel musical experience.

Thomas Handy played a relaxed, meritable set which ran a musical gamut from Doug McArthur to Mose Allison. The two McArthur tunes were given careful, sensitive readings and Allison's "Smashed" was the best example of Handy's preference for light, jazzy numbers. The most easily recognizable tune of his set, "Eyesight to the Blind" received a bluesy, whimsical adaptation very different from the sideshow swagger of the Who's version. If Handy's set lacked great dynamic range or seemed a little short on intensity and inspiration it was also refreshingly free from forced excitement or mawkish posturings. The set's last song was a nice transition to a mood of mystic contemplation but Handy was most convincing in his humorous presentations, as epitomized in his encore's depiction of low-life tragedy "Ripped off For my Shoes."

The music of the droll 1930 relic who called himself Leon Redbone was initially eclipsed by his fascinating and quirky mannerisms. One's eye fixed upon an unlikely combination of Brakeman's cap, tinted glasses, Groucho Marx nose and moustache casually firing up a cigar and sipping from a glass of Ballantyne's scotch. Clearly this was not the sort of man who could be counted on to evoke tender ballads or beat his chest over social injustice. His few remarks to the audience were intoned in a voice interspersed with a wicked, disquieting laugh.

Redbone's songs, obscure rural blues and jazz of an early vintage were possessed of lyrics which were rendered unintelligible and almost incidental by his deliberately garbled delivery. Two songs that did stand out from a largely unidentified and indistinguishable set were "Ditty Wa Ditty" and a Fats Waller standby "Ain't Misbehavin'". The spare, self-assured guitar interludes during these songs, sporadically punctuated by chopped off exclamations and snatches of outrageous scat, were among the best of the evening. Throughout the night Redbone's guitar carved terse, economical lines about his singing and featured offbeat accents and frequent staccato.

It was Redbone's voice, however that wreaked the greatest havoc with his performance. He possesses an impressive vocal range, nonetheless, at times his voice would threaten to break down altogether, scratching high notes and gutting low ones, contorting itself in corrosive, searing atonal heaps of notes that reminded one of a kind of comic John Coltrane. The crawling pace at which some of the songs were performed would have been suicide for most musicians but Redbone's vocals lent them a weird and sinister animation.

By coolly tuning up in the midst of a song, spraying his guitar with an aerosol can, and playing with a red handkerchief over the fretboard, Redbone prevented the audience from guessing what would come next. However behind all the hysterically funny deadpan and apparent flaunting of musical convention Redbone exhibited a sure respect for the form he was practising, a respect that was never reduced to a subdued, intimidated reverence, but a respect that could be hilarious even as it was brilliant in its realization. One can only hope that the forces of time and success do not erode the essential eccentricity of the man, truly a musical porcupine among men.

Le Groupe de la Place Royale: visual beauty and humour

by Sue Denim

This year, for the first time, the Division of Concerts has introduced a dance and theatre series called The Vibrant Stage. Four regular events are offered in the series plus two special features, the first of which played at the Grand Theatre Saturday night. Le Groupe de la Place Royale was a superb opener.

Peter Boneham began the three act show by coming out on stage and introducing his seven man troupe very informally. He got the audience involved in the first number, 13 Choreographies by passing out cards, each with a dance title and then had the audience call these out in arbitrary order so that each one was executed in surprise order.

Many of these involved the dancers talking while they danced, many were comical, and none used conventional music, but instead sound which the dancers made themselves using various instruments, like drums, a xylophone, a recorder or their own throats gargling water in what was called the "Persian Gargyle".

The effect was impressive with its uniqueness. The dancers were supple and athletic and their routines were startlingly different, like no other modern dance show I have ever seen.

The second number, which was perhaps the most conventional of the three was entitled I Must Say: il faut bien le dire, and was based on the traditional pas de deux, but herein the similarity ends. Again the sound was a combination of shrill musical blasts and taped sound effects. Three pairs of dancers slipped easily and gracefully through their routines which explored the deepest human emotions that can be experienced. But as is quickly realized about this troupe, humour is a major part of the act and the last couple, Boneham and Janet Oxley came out dressed as motleyed clowns and their dance was verbal as much as physical. Boneham berated Oxley for her bad breath, her dirty feet and other faux pas in her demeanor and then was ably put down by his partner when he missed a step and she continued to dance on without him. It was a rather shocking finish to what had begun as a very serious and beautifully executed dance.

The last number, Mirage, used a film backdrop and four dancers in tribal costume and make up. It was an effective routine, but the film seemed to distract me from watching the dancers on stage. As is the case with all the routines Le Groupe performs, none is supposed to tell a story, but instead to explore different lineal and aesthetic landscapes, human emotions and visual patterns.

Although this number was, as were all the others, performed with acute precision and expertise, my eyes were drawn onto the screen where bleak images and barren rocky landscapes were projected on the stage. Although the dancer in the film, Jean-Pierre Perreault participated in the dance on stage it was almost impossible to follow both activities.

Nevertheless, the overall impression was fascinating. Unlike the Royal Winnipeg Ballet's use of film in The Ecstasy of Rita Joe, this film didn't augment any story but provided a rich visual curtain against which the dancers moved, not necessarily in harmony, but always somehow in step.

Le Groupe de la Place Royale gave a superb performance which was in its humour and visual beauty a perfect way to open a theatre season. Boneham's down to earth approach to this art form and what is evidenced by a constant search for the experimental and innovative in movement and dance proved to be both worthwhile and intriguing. We were able to see a group expanding to encompass new forms and it was exciting to be in on the act.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY

SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD

TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)

OPEN 9 AM TO MIDNIGHT

Attention Gaels

Because all bills have not been finalized, we are unable to return to the Gael groups the 50¢ per Freshman at this time. Our apologies. Watch Journal for further notice.

Orientation '74

AMEY'S
TAXI
546-1111

ASUS Book Exchange

The SALE of texts
will be on:

September 24, 25, 26
12:30 pm - 4:30 pm

Second Floor Common Room
Student's Union

The RETURN of texts and money
will be on:

September 30, October 1, 2
12:30 - 4:30 pm

Second floor common room,
Students union

Public Service Canada
Fonction publique Canada

Careers in the Federal Public Service

This year, the Federal Government will hire university graduates in all disciplines for a wide variety of professional and administrative positions.

Find out career possibilities in:

Administration
Pure Sciences
Applied Sciences
Health Sciences
Social-Economic Disciplines

We will be on campus on October 3, 1974.

Come and talk to us.

Information is also available at your campus placement office.

All positions are open to both men and women.

Defence stars

Gaels scalp Redmen 19-8

by Jim LeMersurier

Saturday's incessant rain had little dampening effect on the fired up Golden Gaels who dominated play throughout the 19-8 decision over the visiting McGill Redmen. The 4,000 Richardson Stadium fans who braved the elements witnessed three dramatic 3rd down stands by the defense while the offense did its part by grabbing an early lead and not relinquishing it.

The defense were faced with their toughest test on McGill's first offensive thrust. Poor punt coverage enabled return man Gary Meyers to romp 65 yards before being hauled down at the Queen's 10 yard line and two plays later the Redmen were third down on the one. Quarterback Dis Auders then sent fullback Don Cowie off tackle but the Queen's defense drove him back just inches short of the goal line and the Gael offense took over.

On second and four from his own six quarterback Roald Serebrin caught the McGill linebackers cheating to the inside and sent sophomore running back Stacey Merritt wide on a sweep. Following key blocks by guard Doug Lowry and flanker Bruce Pollock, Merritt sprinted down the sideline for a 71 yard gain. Three plays later, it was Merritt's turn again as the Thunder Bay native ran a counter over from the McGill 3 and Will Kennedy supplied the convert for a 7-0 Queen's lead.

Finding the flanker reverse, run by Pollock, surprisingly effective, moments later, the Gaels were closing in again. After making 40 yards off various rushing plays Randy Edgeworth put a faltering Queen's drive back together at the McGill 17 by falling on the first of three punts fumbled by the Redmen. The Gaels moved the ball to the 5 for another first down but were held twice and Kennedy's 10 yard field goal attempt was blocked.

The Gael defense continued to manhandle the Redmen attack which was suffering from an uncertain pass attack caused chiefly by the steady drizzle and the offense, wisely shying away from the air, were running effectively even without the services of Dave "the Beast" Hadden.

Will Kennedy's 17 yard field goal boosted the Gaels to a 10-0 lead at 13:50 of the second quarter after the team had moved in from center field behind a 30 yard pass and run play to Pollock, and a 12 yard toss to Merritt.

The Golden Gaels had now made 9 first downs to McGill's 2. It was thus indicative of their icy confidence that when defensive half Bill Melver intercepted Auder's pass on the very next play, head coach Frank Tindall directed Serebrin to run the clock out at midfield rather than try for an even more comfortable half-time bulge.

Statistically the second half

Gaels' Peter McNabb (22) picks off his third Darrell Penner (25). McGill flanker Don interception of the year over the leaping Meehan (25 also) looks on in shock.

may have belonged to McGill, but Queen's lead and inability of the Redmen to truly explode left the tempo of the game to the Gaels.

The Redmen came out hitting and had an impressive march underway on their first offensive series, but again he defense made a magnificent stand on a 3rd down gamble at the Queen's 26. The Gaels' offense then had two chances and couldn't move the ball, but neither could McGill. On the ensuing Redman kick, Pollock broke a punt return for a 60 yard major. The agile flanker didn't even use his return wall, as he headed straight for a gaping hole down the middle of McGill's punt coverage before cutting into the clear at the sideline. The ensuing 18-0 lead (Taylor had booted a single earlier) provided a great mental lift for the Gaels and virtually eliminated any cause for panic in the Tricolor ranks.

Now the name of the game was contain. The sturdy defensive machines were once more reliable, as they conceded relatively short gains while maintaining a throttlehold on anything deep and potentially damaging.

McGill's first drive, after Pollock's TD notched 3 first downs and 43 yards but scored only a single point on Pierre Lasimier's punt while consuming valuable minutes from the clock.

It was early in the fourth quarter before the frustrated Redmen finally completed a scoring drive. Working against a prevent defense Auder launched a superb aerial assault in completing 6 of 7 on an 82 yard march capped by fullback Down Cowie's 3 yard plunge for 6 points. Castellani's convert closed the margin 18-8 but McGill came no closer. The short passes over the middle got first downs but as McNabb's and Melver's first half interceptions had taught the Tribe, the long bomb or even deep sideline pass were out of the question. They had to respect the Queen's deep backs and work on the less mobile linebackers, but this took time, and the Redmen simply didn't have enough at their disposal. Taylor added another single in the 4th to close the scoring at 19-8 and complete a satisfactory upset of last year's College Bowl finalists.

A great team effort saw numerous individual standout performances. Tackles Darrell Craig and Mike O'Shaughnessy went both ways again. Greg McNamara was responsible for two quarterback sackings, defense and Peter Ostrom made some great tackles and Stacey Merritt rushed for 132 yards.

If the Gaels can get by Toronto, who beat Ottawa 30-26 on Friday, they should be well on their way to a good finish in the OUA east division. Last year the Queen's team was hammered in Varsity Stadium and there is every indication that the Blues are stronger this year. The Gaels have improved considerably since the Ottawa game but they will have to show even more polish if they are to hand U of T their first loss next Saturday.

"Keep it on the ground, Raold", says Gaels veteran headman Frank Tindall as he confers with his QB during Saturday's action. Serebrin did, throwing just five times as the offence ate up the clock all game.

Fittipaldi wins at Mosport

-cameron

Hockey Gals off and running

by Kathy Keely

This past weekend in Montreal, both the Senior and Intermediate Women's Field Hockey Teams played in their first exhibition tournament of the season. Rookie coach Karen Carson certainly did "get her feet wet" as the teams played throughout the day in the pouring rain. To add to her troubles, the teams played simultaneously in the first game. Coach Carson is a veteran of four years of Intercollegiate Field Hockey at Queen's and was the Captain of the Ontario Field Hockey Team at the Canadian Summer Games in 1973. The new role as coach proved to be no problem for her as she received good performances from both her teams.

The Intermediates showed good speed and scoring punch on the way to one win and two ties. They tied McGill 2-2, Bishop's 2-2, and beat Ottawa 1-0. Lyn Atwood had three goals while rookie Marg Bartlett scored two. Other members of the team include veterans Suzanne Jackson, Linda Fisher, Betty Dickie, and rookies Colleen Maloney, Deb Watson, Deb Gelsel, Carolyn Broadhurst, Laurie Gallagher and Pearl Dixon.

The Seniors did not score quite so well on the score board as they lost three games. They lost to St. Lawrence U. 0-1, to McGill 0-2, and Quebec Seniors 0-1. The team looked good defensively and played offensively but just could not find the net. Rookie goalie Cathy Smith made some exceptional saves. Other rookies include Nanette Cuddy from the Ontario Junior Team, Jennifer Jones from University of Victoria, Gini Honeyman from Montreal and Janice Wagner from Queen's Intermediates. These players along with returnees Leslie Ferrari, Gail Thompson, Cathy Curwain, Barb McDermott, Paula Luck and Sue Moffat make up an enthusiastic team with lots of potential.

Next weekend there will be a tournament at Queen's including teams from Trent, McGill, the Quebec Seniors, and another team from Montreal. This will be held all day September 28 on the lower campus field. Come out and watch both Queen's teams in action. They are looking forward to successful seasons and deserve your support!

lyn atwood

Soccer Gaels down R.M.C. in exhibition

by Mike Barnes

The Golden Gaels Soccer Team opened their season with an exhibition win over R.M.C. on Saturday.

The game was played under very wet conditions and the final score was 1-0 for Queen's. The only goal was scored by Rochus Klug from a centering pass by Nick Drysdale. Although the score doesn't indicate it, the Gaels dominated and the R.M.C. attack was virtually neutralized. Numerous close calls around the R.M.C. net including two goal post drives might have resulted in a more accurate summary of the play.

After all, this was the first time the team has played as a unit, and they looked very promising. Ron Heidebrecht and Chris Clark played strong games on defence while Don Barager had a fine game in the forward line. Many new faces are in the lineup this year and indications are that the team will be a contender for the Provincial O.U.A.A. honours. The league opener is this Saturday with York University, a perennial powerhouse moving into town.

Game time should be 2:00 p.m. at the West Campus Field. Check Friday's Journal for details. Spectators are welcome to attend. The Soccer Gaels have only lost 4 league games in four years indicating the calibre of play to be seen. Enjoy soccer, the world's most popular game, with your team this Saturday.

A Giant Beer Bash with "Kelly J. and Crowbar" formerly Crowbar and Devotion

Thursday Night

Sept. 26

8:00 - 1:00 pm

Tickets $1.50

John Orr Room

Students Union

A presentation of AMS Concerts and Science Formal

Rugby Gaels promising

by Jim Ferguson

This week, the Queen's Rugby Club got their fall season underway with the first XV chocking up two wins. On Wednesday last, Queen's managed a decisive 24-12 win over the Kingston Rugby Club. Mike Dyer touched down two tries early in the game to put Queen's well ahead. Tries by both Rick and Jeff Evanson secured the victory. Later in the game, the Kingston Club made what appeared to be a threatening comeback move, when Higgins and Andy Page, a former Queen's player, scored tries. This challenge was answered by a stunningly long run by Dave Bowker late in the game. Kicking by Peter Kopp accounted for the other Queen's points.

Unfortunately, the team lost the playing services of forward Drummond MacDougall due to injuries sustained in this game. Such an experienced player will be sorely missed by the club.

With this win under their belts, the 1sts went to Toronto on the weekend to face a more challenging foe. In weather which was cold and blustery with a slight rain falling, U of T and Queen's battled to a 8-7 Queen's triumph. The score was 4-4 at the half. Early in the second period Andrias Kantelli drop kicked for 3 points to put Toronto ahead. The drop kick, an effective yet rarely seen scoring play, always has a negative psychological effect on the opposing team, but the Gaels, led by Dave's second try of the game, came back to down Varsity by the 8-7 score.

The 2nd's also had a game against Toronto which they lost 11-4. Toronto maintained a lead throughout the game despite the efforts of acting captain Eastel to get the Queen's team moving. With a few exceptions, such as Don Johnson, the other forwards may be criticised for "lagging after the ball." Even though their first game was a loss we can expect good results from this team in the future when some of the new talent gains experience.

Gaels take line-out in weekend action

Wic-ly News

Women's Intramurals Activities got rolling (quite literally) with a Bike Hike on Sunday afternoon. Tonight (Sept 24) Athletic Night will be held from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. in Bartlett Gym. Come and join the fun and find out what WIC is all about. P.S. Bring running shoes. Activities starting this week are Flag Football, Tennis and Basketball.

Applications are invited for the following positions open at this time on Women's Intercollegiate Athletics:

FENCING COACH
BADMINTON COACH
ASSISTANT EVENTS MANAGER HOSTESS
PUBLICITY
INTERMEDIATE BASKETBALL COACH

Direct inquiries and application to:

Miss Anne Turnbull
Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Director

Room 101 Physical Education Centre
547-6973

Commerce Society
EDITOR

The position of editor for the publication of
"THE COMMERCEMAN" is open

Applications should be submitted to the Commerce Society Office, Dunning Annex
(use campus mail) by Friday Oct. 4, 1974

Bew's '78 Sports

All interested mole Artsci '78 students wishing to porticipote, cooch ond/or monoge Bew's
sports, please conctoct

John Houston 544-7659

or

Tom Box 544-7098

os soon os possible

Dover's

FOR YOUR

OFFICIAL

QUEEN'S ARTSCI JACKETS

QUEEN'S SWEATSHIRTS

QUEEN'S T-SHIRTS

109 PRINCESS ST.

backpage

Lewis suggests unscrambling of eggs

Toronto (CP) - Last Friday the Ontario Egg Producer's Marketing Board stated that the wholesale price of a dozen eggs would be hiked five cents. Stephen Lewis suggested that an effort to relieve the pressure on the consumer might be achieved through a federal subsidy of eggs. Mr. Lewis also felt that if the farmers' costs were so high that it would be wise to initiate an investigation into the retailing procedures in order to discover if there is a consumer 'rip-off'.

While the egg prices have been increased the Marketing Board has also set out more controls in an attempt to solve the dilemma of overproduction of eggs. In the future not only will the number of hens per farmer be limited but the farmer will be required to have a license to purchase chicks.

briefly...

Belfast: Patrols of the British Army have reportedly picked up a Kashnikov rifle and a Simanov rifle in the Roman Catholic areas of Belfast. Both types of rifles are made in China under Soviet license. It would appear that the Irish Republican Army has obtained these from the Chinese. There have also been unconfirmed reports of Arabic writing found on the bullets used in the Simanov rifle.

Reno, Nevada - In Nevada's upcoming state assembly elections there is an unusual assortment of candidates - and they stand a good chance of being elected. Among the candidates running for political office are a madam, a cabby, a former Ziegfeld girl, a waiter, and a casino operator.

Beverly Harrell, the proprietress of one of the legal brothels in Nevada, decided to stand for election as a state legislator because of a "vendetta" against the federal bureau of land management, which wants to evict her from her four acres of land. Her platform advocated state control over free enterprise for the ranchers and farmers of the state as well as increased relief for senior citizens. She would also like to sponsor a statewide educational program on venereal disease. The general consensus of opinion among the voters is that she will win - thereby becoming the first madam in the history of the United States to win a legislative seat.

Ken Vandell, a waiter, decided to enter the political arena and run for governor in response to non-payment by the National Guard for damages to his car. Two days after paying his filing fees he received a check for the damages from the National Guard.

Brussels (AP) - Twelve western oil consuming countries have agreed to stockpile oil supplies for sharing in the event of another crisis similar to the Arab oil embargo of last year. Following six months of negotiations, the United States, Canada, Japan, Norway, and the European Common Market Countries, (with the exception of France) have agreed upon an oil pooling scheme designed to safeguard the stocks of the individual countries.

Toronto - In keeping with rising prices everywhere, cigarette prices are going up again. Prices will be effective September 30, 1974. Benson and Hedges, Rothman's of Pall Mall (Canada) and Imperial Tobacco Products have all announced increase which will amount to two cents on a package of 20 or 25. Other manufacturers have indicated their intention to follow suit.

Canadian to face fury of Soviet firing squad

Ottawa - A 58 year old Canadian from Montreal has been condemned to death in front of a firing squad. David Geldiashvile was sentenced by a Soviet military tribunal in Krasnodar for alleged war crimes.

According to Soviet authorities, he was arrested as Georgi Tsinaridze, an ex-Batumi butcher and watchman who was accused of treason while serving with the Caucasian SD Company - a German extermination company. The company is alleged to have massacred 4000 men, women and children in a 48 hour span. On August 3, this year, his sentence was passed, however his execution has been held up because of a pending appeal. The appeal cannot be launched until the necessary legal documents have been sent from the Caucasus to Moscow.

Geldiashvile was arrested in July 1973 when he went back to visit his family, after spending one year in prison. Geldiashvile was brought before the tribunal which spent two weeks examining nineteen volumes of evidence and heard more than forty witnesses. It appears Geldiashvile-Tsinaridze was turned in by one of his two children by his previous marriage, although there is no official report to support this information.

Canadian journalists were not informed of the legal proceedings in the Soviet Union because Geldiashvile's present wife did not want the publicity, although Soviet officials were willing to permit Canadian press coverage. Canadian officials did not inform newsmen of the trial.

The Soviet Union applied to Canada in 1968 for extradition of Geldiashvile-Tsinaridze and three other men but were refused because no extradition treaty exists between the two countries. The Soviet officials feel that they have an open and shut case. Geldiashvile-Tsinaridze was identified both by his fingerprints and his own family and there is mountainous evidence of his crimes.

In view of the east-west détente, the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet could conceivably commute the death sentence to 10-15 years imprisonment - as prescribed under Article 64 of the Criminal Code of the Russian Republic.

Turner checks out European inflation

Paris (CP) - John Turner, the Finance Minister of Canada, has completed his tour of three European capitals: London, Bonn, and Paris. The purpose of Mr. Turner's tour was to attempt to gain some appreciation of how the European politicians are approaching the problems of inflation and payment imbalances before he sets forth his budget. Turner stressed the aim of the Canadian government was to maintain the highest possible level of employment. This statement was in reference to a growing consensus among European economists that relatively high levels of unemployment may have to be maintained in the fight against inflation. Turner added that he doubted that "any government in the modern world" could sustain such a policy in order to bring down demand and prices.

Turner also advocated that Canada desired to see the strengthening of such associations as the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

sweven

the magazine of the queen's journal needs fiction/ poetry/ artwork/ photographs/ anything else you can think of

for its first issue, whose deadline is Sept. 30th

submit to JIM SMITH at either

P.O. Box 1355, Kingston, Ont., or c/o Queen's Journal, Journal Office.

Meeting for all those interested Monday, Sept. 30, 7:00 in the Polson Room.

Volunteers needed by the Student Volunteer Bureau
Come to SVB night
Wed. Sept. 25th at 7 pm
Stirling Hall, A, C, & D

*****

THE TIME IS RIGHT FOR THE

200 M.P.G. SOLEX!

miles per gallon

Solex, a well engineered, motor-assist bike, built for economical transportation. Pedal for fun and exercise or turn on the motor to take you around the traffic. This popular European bike performs at over 200 miles-per gallon. Quiet, easy to operate, great for parking, the Solex bike is ideal transportation to work or school.

ONLY $259<sup>95</sup>

at Firestone STORES

900 Princess St. Kingston K7L 1H1

*****

Queen's not a campus for the handicapped

by Nancy Flood

Heavy doors, snowbanks, stairs and more stairs. Every year we return to these and complain but we manage. Most of us manage. It is a fact however that some are unable to take these things 'in stride' and find them impossible to navigate. Wheelchairs and crutches become useless when confronted with several flights of steep stairs or heavy doors with spring mechanisms so tight they are hard to open even when standing on two good legs.

Perhaps you have noticed the new ramps in front of Ellis Hall and Ban Righ, the former built to accommodate two wheelchair students there and the latter assuring that a summer student in a wheelchair got her meals in Ban Righ cafeteria. They are evidence of a desire on the part of some to accommodate the needs of the physically handicapped on campus. Yet it is apparent that this desire is not sufficient to make the university truly open to students with special requirements.

Queen's Physical Plant and the office of the University Planner have cooperated to produce a map which is riddled with orange points each indicating a difficulty or barrier for a wheelchair. Curb cuts are a major problem as are buildings with no level access and/or no elevators inside to provide transportation between floors. Only Goodwin and Miller Halls (and the as yet unfinished addition to Agnes Etherington Art Centre) possess washroom facilities that meet the National Building Code requirements for door width, etc., which make them useable by wheelchair patrons.

There is definitely a problem. Eric Thrift, the University Campus Planner, who himself uses a cane and thus appreciates the difficulties, remarks on the difficulty of handling doors and stairs when a cane or crutches are required and cites the need for many things such as handrails, etc., which are lacking in many places around campus.

No money?

There are, in effect, two diverse views on the reasons for this lack of facilities. The administration contends that the primary difficulty is financial. It is a problem of balancing the needs of and the amount to be spent on the 498 out of 500 healthy students against those of perhaps two who are in wheelchairs. Russ Kennedy, Vice-Principal of Administration, told the Journal Funds are low and though there is a desire to accommodate those special needs whenever possible, there is no concrete long range program for such improvement in existence. The 'official policy' was described by Kennedy as one of including facilities such as washrooms for the handicapped and ramps in the plans of buildings still to be built, and of making small alterations in existing buildings only when other renovations are being carried on in the same area; thus cutting down on costs. The financial problem is described as "acute". For example, elevator shafts which could provide access to floors presently unreachable remain empty because there is no money to install the cars.

Yet others on campus share a different view of the real cause of the situation. Barbara O'Shea of the School of Rehabilitation Therapy referring to Kennedy's statement, suggests that the question of making a 'choice' between walking and 'riding' students is a fallacy subscribed to by those who do not really understand the situation. Handicapped people, she says, are capable of participating in most of the activities on campus if they are provided with a few extras that help them cope with problems we don't have. And, she suggests, those 'extras' which are useful for the handicapped are just as useful for the rest of us. Electric eye doors which are the easiest for a wheelchair to deal with are equally helpful for anyone with an armful of books. In addition she claims that it is not only those in wheelchairs who benefit from elevators and ramps but that those with "hidden disabilities" - heart conditions, respiratory problems, bad backs - would also stand to gain.

In essence, O'Shea sees the financial argument as "safe" but invalid. She stressed that, "the problem is not with architects and builders and planners but with us - with society. Handicapped persons are a minority who, like any minority, need the pressure of the masses to achieve their ends". She cited the Music building and the Mackintosh-Corry complex, both new and both sadly lacking in facilities for the handicapped as causes for skepticism about the existence of an 'official policy' which claims to be ready to install the necessary ramps etc. in 'new buildings'. However, she does see improvement, noting the cooperation of Physical Plant in building ramps and the excellence of the facilities in Goodwin Hall, at least.

It is indeed true that some steps are being taken. The ramp to Ellis and the fact that some classes were relocated in Ellis to make them accessible to the wheelchair students using that building are evidence of that. Those in wheelchairs, O'Shea offers, are most often young, previously active people who still have normal life expectancies and for whom education for a professional career has become doubly important because of their disability. Without the education they are often denied, these people can become the drain on society through welfare, etc., we complain about so bitterly.

No concern?

So where does the fault lie? Mr. Thrift suggests that it is us who are to be blamed. "When our collective attitude says 'worry', something gets done. When the collective attitude is lack of concern, nothing happens". O'Shea holds much the same opinion, whereas other university officers cite finances as the most important barrier. Whatever the cause, the problem remains. Until something else happens, those of us with two legs get to use the front door of Douglas Library while those in wheelchairs are relegated to the service entrance through the basement in back.

Law 77 Executive

President James C. Avis (acclaimed)
Vice-President Kathrine Dunsmore (acclaimed)
Secretary-Treasurer Elizabeth Forster
Social Convener Nick Bala
Athletic Stick - Paul Findlay (acclaimed)
Faculty Board Reps. - Allan Mandell
Bill McAndrew

What, besides construction of this ramp outside Ban Righ and another outside Ellis Hall, is being done to make this campus accessible for the handicapped. See story opposite.

United Way soon to crusade with ribbons, drink, dance

by Mary Snelko

The Queen's University Division of the United Way campaign is aiming at $62,000 this year. Of this it is hoped that $3,700 will be collected by the students themselves. The campaign at Queen's officially begins on October 5th, and continues for three weeks; however, unofficially, events have already begun. Along with the ASUS book sale, the United Way had a rummage sale sponsored by the AMS. There will also be events supporting the United Way during homecoming weekend beginning October 17.

The AMS is planning an October 26th dance to support the cause and there will be Pub night and ribbons sold at football games as well. According to the co-chairmen for the Queen's Student Community, Paul Bitove and Ron Knox, actual events have not yet been organized but we will be informed of them very shortly. Last year Kingston's short objective of $327,000 was not reached as only $314,000 was collected. However, Queen's surpassed their goal of $57,300 and managed to bring in $58,300 - 101.7 per cent of the objective. Most of the money collected is channelled directly back into the community. Some of the agencies to receive help are the blood bank of the Canadian Red Cross and the arthritis research programme of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society. A few other supported agencies are the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, The Kingston Day Care Incorporated, the Association for the Mentally Retarded, Kingston Telecare Centre, the Salvation Army, the Social Planning Council of Kingston and District and the Family Counselling Service.

Queen's

Journal

Volume 102, No. 6

Friday, September 27, 1974

wat's hapnin'?

Friday, September 27

2:30 p.m. - The first Catriona Gibson Memorial Lecture will be delivered by Harry W. Arthurs, Dean of Osgoode Hall Law School of York University. The title of Dean Arthurs' lecture is "Barristers and Barricades: Prospects for the Lawyer as a Reformer". The lecture will be held in Theatres D & E of Sir John A. Macdonald Hall. The lecture is open to all members of the university community and the public. Besides being the dean of Canada's largest law school, Dean Arthurs is a leading Canadian authority on Labour Law and on the legal profession. He has taught courses on the legal profession at Osgoode Hall Law School for some years and has published extensively in the area.

8:00 p.m. - African Club Meeting for new and old members in the International Centre.

Saturday, Sept 28

2:00 p.m. - Queen's Vs. York in the O.U.A.A. Soccer League Opener at West Campus Field.

8:30 - 12:00 p.m. - "The Carpenter's Inn" Coffee House opens in Vic Hall E. wing basement common room. John and Hugh Greenwood from Waterloo will be featured. Admission is 75 cents and coffee and doughnuts will be served. Bring a friend and listen to some great music sponsored by the Queen's Christian Fellowship.

Sunday, September 29

10:30 a.m. - Morning Worship at Chalmers United Church.

- Folk Mass at Dunning Hall followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House, 164 University Ave.

6:00 p.m. - A Sunday Night Buffet will be held at Hillel House. Admission is $1.50.

7:00 p.m. - In the Victoria Hall Upper Common Room, Galerie Victoria will present Julia DuPrey accompanied by June Richards, performing a recital of Contemporary American Song.

8:00 p.m. - Paul Horn will be in Grant Hall. Tickets are available in the John Orr Room or at the House of Sounds for $3.00.

Monday, September 30

Monday, September 30

7:00 - 8:30 p.m. - Women's Intercollegiate Basketball Tryouts will be held in Bartlett Gym. Tryouts will continue Tuesday, October 1 from 9:00 - 10:00 p.m. in Ross Gym. Wednesday, October 2 from 7:00 - 8:40 p.m. in Bartlett Gym and on Thursday, October 3 from 5:30 - 7:00 p.m. in Ross Gym. Come on out if you are at all interested. The senior coach is Maureen Bouris and the intermediate coach is Steve Seabrooke.

7:00 - 11:00 p.m. - Clubs Night in Grant Hall.

7:30 p.m. - Life Sciences Rounds "Hypothyroidism" will be held in the Richardson Amphitheatre.

8:30 p.m. - A Piano Recital by Ireneus Zuk, of the Queen's Music Department will be held in Dunning Auditorium. Music by Prokofiev, Beethoven, Chopin, Liszt.

Pubs and Theatres

401 Inn - Six Pack
Townhouse - Shadowfax
Commodore - Fat Chance
Frontenac-Finnegan's - Inez Platenius

Frontenac-Muldoon's - Old English Music Hall
Manor - Manillas
Hlyland - Eleven Harrow House
Capitol 1 - Laughing Policeman
Capitol 2 - Machon County Line
Odeon - California Split
Domino Theatre - Music Hall is showing September 26 to 28 and October 3 to 5. Tickets are available at Mahood's Drug Store, 156 Princess St. or at the theatre on playing nights. (tel. 542-9066). Tickets are $2.50 for adults, $1.75 for students.

Grand Theatre - September 27 and 28 at 8:30 p.m. England's prestigious theatrical troupe, the Royal Shakespeare Company will perform Pleasure and Repentance. The stellar cast is headed by Richard Todd. The songs accompanied by lute and guitar are performed by Martin Best. Tickets are available at the Agnes Etherington Art Center for $3, $4, $5.

Upcoming Events

October 1 - Ban Righ Fireside. Pianist Valery Lloyd Watts performing works by Beethoven, Chopin, Liszt, and Pinter. Coffee and dessert at 5:45. Music 6:00 to 6:45. Admission free. Everyone welcome to the Ban Righ Common Room.

October 1 - Queen's Amateur Radio Club first meeting for '74-75 at 7:30 p.m. in 454 Goodwin Hall. All members and anyone interested in joining please attend. The movie "Ham's Wide World" will be shown.

October 2 - Beginning this Wednesday and every Wednesday thereafter, three of the university chaplains will be present at the Student Affairs Center, 51 Queen's Crs. (547-6995), throughout the day for conversation or counselling. 9:00-11:00 a.m. - Rev. Eric Howes (Anglican); 2:00-4:00 p.m. - Rev. Ed Shea (Roman Catholic); 6:30-8:30 p.m. - Mr. Ken Gies (Lutheran).

October 2 - The first meeting of the Queen's Astronomy Club will be held in Room 323 of Ellis Hall at 8:30 p.m.

October 3-10 - Picture Rental and Sale at Agnes Etherington Art Centre. Rentals daily. Preview for gallery association members October 3, 5:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. Open to the public at 7:00 p.m. Student membership $2.

October 3 - The movie Dynamite Chicken will be shown in Dunning Hall Auditorium at 7:00 and 9:30 p.m. Admission $1.00.

October 4-5 - Great Sneezy Waters will appear at the Bitter Grounds Coffee House in Clark Hall 8:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.

October 4 at 7:00 p.m.; Oct. 5 at 2:30 p.m.; Oct. 6 at 2:30 p.m. - An original story by Alan Argue, The Straw Princess is a Canadian production for the whole family, filled with song, dance, comedy, color and magic, for the 'young' and 'young-at-heart'. The music and lyrics were penned by Alan Argue, Carol Argue and Ernest Whyman. Musical arrangements and accompaniment will be by the Tony Frazao Trio. Tickets are now on sale at the Grand Theatre box office. Adults $2.00; children $1.00.

October 6 - Queen's Musical Theatre will begin their 1974-75 season with a series of workshops aimed at helping interested individuals with dancing, singing and acting. These workshops will be conducted in the Dance Studio at the Phys. Ed. Centre. Come on down for an hour or so. No experience is needed.

October 6 - Bike Ride and Corn Roast. To be held on Wolfe Island. Leaving Hillel House at 1:00 p.m. Bring a bike if you can. Followed by a Sunday buffet in the Succah at the Synagogue.

TUITION FEES REMINDER

The first installment of fees due by September 30, 1974, can be paid in person at the Accountants Office, Richardson Hall.

If you find it more convenient to mail your cheque to the Accountant's office, please record your student number on the face of your cheque.

Queen's Mixed Curling Club

Interested Curlers Welcome

No Experience Necessary

Information Available

At

CLUBS NIGHT

Vaghy String Quartet with Phyllis Mailing, sax and William A. 'Thurs' CANCELLED DUE TO ILLNESS. $2 general admission. Art Centre 547-6194. A Division of Concerts event

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT in our Lounge

THIS WEEK : Crazy Legs

Amateur Night every Wednesday
Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

Bursaries: help for the bright but broke

Many students are unaware that each year Queen's gives a total of from $25,000 to $30,000 to students in need of financial help. This is done through bursaries - money given to the university for this purpose by individuals or groups. The amount given to a qualifying student varies but is at its highest about $300. A complete list of bursaries is given in the calendar for the faculty of Arts and Science and the funds are also published in the Queen's Gazette along with their due dates, which is almost without exception December 1. "Students who apply for these bursaries must have at least 65 percent," said Dave Ellis, Assistant Registrar in charge of Student Awards, "but then the decision is left up to a committee. Need is the major factor in determining who receives the award."

Mr. Ellis also said that from year to year the bursary position is weak. "Uncertainty lies in the fact that most of the money comes annually from industry. This year the fund lost the interprovincial pipeline bursary but gained one from Beaver Foods."

john cameron

You can't ride free . . .

john cameron

. . . until Tuesday!

Oops! We made a nasty blunder. Bus-It does not start til Tuesday (Oct. 1); we were wrong to say in the latest issue, that it would begin on Monday. When's Easter, anyway?

Attention: Lois Lane, Clark Kent

Journal needs reporters, someone to operate a Telex (we'll teach it's easy), hunky males and layouters. Come to the office in Union basement on Sun. p.m. Layout session 2:30 today, Journal office.

Bite the one you love

STEAKS & STUFF
Licensed dining room 1399 Princess
Near the Station
Aunt Lucy's Restaurants Ltd.

Attention to Arts & Science Grads

Those interested in playing Bews hockey

contact Ron Sisk
in the Recreation Office Room 102A of the Phys Ed Complex before October 9

Kingston Women's Centre

110 Queen St.
542-5226
open 9 - 3

Are you interested in the women's movement?

We need your help

253 Princess St.
UNISEX HAIR DESIGN
Appointments available for your convenience
542-7637

Auld promises no tuition fee increase this year

TORONTO (CUP) - There will be no tuition fee increase for Ontario students for at least another year, says Ontario Colleges and Universities Minister James Auld.

Auld made the statement in a meeting with representatives from the Students' Administrative Council in a closed meeting at the University of Toronto last week.

But Auld wouldn't commit himself beyond the 1975-76 academic year, telling the Students' Administrative Council (SAC) he could not plan that far in advance.

The meeting with Auld lasted about 45 minutes, and dealt with questions specified ahead of time.

Smile ..Say cheese

For the first time the Queen's Camera Club will give a photography course this year which is of interest to everyone. It will be a ten lectures series on the non-technical aspects of taking a picture, i.e. on what to do "before pressing the button".

During the course, colour slides will be used to illustrate all these points and some notes will be distributed. The lectures will be given by Erich Unteregelsbacher and will last approximately 40 minutes. There will be a $2.50 registration fee for the entire course, registration to follow the first lecture. Classes will be held in Theater A, Stirling Hall every Wednesday evening at 7 p.m. starting October 2nd. For more details check Tuesday's Journal.

For Machiavellis only

On Clubs night this coming Monday, Queen's students and faculty will have the opportunity to join the new Queen's Diplomacy Club. Diplomacy is a game of power politics for seven players who command the seven great powers of Europe in 1900: England, Russia, Germany, Turkey, Austria-Hungary, Italy and France. Although Diplomacy has a historical setting it is in fact an abstract pure skill game requiring strategic decisions and the ability to manipulate one's opponents through eloquent diplomacy and negotiation. It has been said that Diplomacy elevates lying to an art. If this appeals to you, drop by the Diplomacy booth on Clubs night, or check the next Journal for details.

by SAC president Seymour Kanowitch

Kanowitch said that while Auld and other ministry officials present admitted the present Ontario Student Award Plan living allowance of $32 per week was inadequate, they were not willing to remedy the problem. This was the "greatest disappointment" for SAC. "They recognize there is a problem but they refuse to do anything about it," said Kanowitch.

This comes despite the recommendations of individual student awards officers, who all recommended weekly allowances of $40.

The Ontario Federation of Students (OFS) will be holding a conference later this fall mainly to deal with the problems of OSAP and plan a province-wide campaign to put pressure on the province for changes.

Kanowitch feels direct pressure from SAC and OFS has prevented fee increases, since OFS is stronger than when the last tuition fee increase was made in 1972. "The minister is well aware of that strength," said Kanowitch.

Editor-in-Chief: Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager: Terry Collins
Managing Editor: Dan McClelland
News Editor: Sarah Yarnell
Features Editors: Wendy Reynolds, Laurie Gibson
Entertainment: Kerry White, Peter Haworth
Photography: John Cameron, John Bottomley, John Wilmer, Keith Bourns
Walt's Haunt: Rosemary Knight, Jennifer Hunter
Elderstatesmen: Woody and Booner
Contributors: Barb Nyland, Connie McLeese, (who's going to fall off those shoes), Nancy Flood (seagulls?), Jane Gutteridge Bennett (your pinkies must be sore), (wherever you were), Ann I mustn't forget Steven L. and his Robertson, Lela (my backpage ace), lovely copadre (can't remember the classified gals, Katherine and names, sorry), not to forget David, Linda, Glenna and Michael (who this list is growing)

Founded in 1973 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (613) 547-2656. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

Clubs Night

MONDAY

SEPTEMBER 30

in GRANT HALL

FROM

7:00 P.M. TO 11:00 P.M.

Can you play ping pong? . . .

If not, we need you as a sports writer and reporter. A promising career awaits you and you will be personally trained by the immortal (not to mention infamous) Booner. Come down to the Journal and talk to us.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 9 AM TO MIDNIGHT

QUEEN'S SNAPS

No, you were the one who asked for the drinkin' contest.

KINGSTON'S FINEST NIGHTCLUB
TOWN HOUSE PUB
686 PRINCESS ST.

LOVE IS A MANY FACED THING

And a superbly cut diamond is the ultimate expression of your love. Give a timeless and traditional gift of diamond jewelry... from our dazzling collection. Love and diamonds... a tradition that transcends the ages.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

Letters to the editor

Let's just sleep on it for now

Dear Editor:

I read with interest the article by Wendy Reynolds on 'Dreams' in the Tuesday, 17th September edition of the Journal. However, there are some errors of fact and emphasis which I should like to draw to your attention.

While Ms. Reynolds' description of the Rapid Eye Movement (REM) cycle is essentially correct it is inaccurate to say that a dream occupies "perhaps only a few seconds". The best evidence available to us suggests that the activity of the dream lasts the length of time that would be necessary to carry out the activity in waking life. It may be true that a dream may involve, for example, a long journey covering a span of several hours or days that could not be accomplished in the time of the REM period. I believe, although I have only anecdotal evidence to support it, that this is accomplished by a 'cutting' from one scene of the dream to the other much as is done in a film. In this way actions over very long periods of time may be compressed into the span of the dream although any actual activity takes the same time as in waking life.

Another assertion in the article is that activities such as waking in fright, talking in one's sleep and sleep walking all "tend to confirm the idea that a dream is often experienced as though it were real". While the evidence is not absolutely one-sided, in the sense that some imagery does occur outside REM periods, it is quite clear that sleep walking and sleep talking do not occur during REM sleep when 'dreams' typically occur, and are usually not accompanied by the detailed recall of dream material when the sleeper is awakened. A feature of REM sleep contributing to this is a profound relaxation of the major muscles of the body making gross movement or speech unlikely if not impossible. While it is true that many of us have had the experience of waking in panic from a most unpleasant nightmare it is also true that the most extreme degrees of physiological arousal and subjective fear occur on awakening from what might be described as an 'imageless dream' which is not associated with REM sleep. On these occasions the sleeper wakes with a feeling of the utmost dread, perhaps of imminent death; this may be accompanied by a heart rate of from 180 to 200 beats per minute, a cold and clammy sweat, and a feeling of difficulty in breathing. In spite of the dramatic and frightening nature of these symptoms the condition is a normal part of development and in most instances, does not indicate any deep underlying psychological problem.

Finally, I should like to draw attention to the recent evidence regarding the effects of deprivation of the REM stage of sleep. While it is true, as Ms. Reynolds points out, that early evidence led to the notion that REM deprivation gave rise to many types of psychological and behavioural abnormality, the first studies of this subject contained many methodological inadequacies and more recent work indicates that deprivation of REM itself has no special effects other than those caused by a general disruption of sleep. It remains true to say that increases in REM do follow periods when REM sleep has been reduced by awakening or by the ingestion of certain drugs; these increases are often accompanied by vivid, unpleasant and frightening dreams. The significance of these changes, and of changes of other aspects of the sleep cycle, remain an object of intensive investigation.

In conclusion, I should like to echo Ms. Reynolds' fascination with the subject matter of the dream and agree with her that the dream, and sleep in general, is one of the "remaining frontiers which we have yet to understand, let alone conquer".

Yours faithfully,
A.W. MacLean
Sleep laboratory
Department of Psychology

Gray: The tale of Bus-It

Dear Editor:

Contrary to published reports and letters, Peter Druxer and myself tried our damnest to represent the financial interests of the entire student body in the Bus-It negotiations.

The Kingston PUC refused to renew the contract for the same fee as last year which was five dollars. They insisted on two dollars more per student, a 40 per cent increase, to seven dollars per student. We became alarmed because in real terms this means that Queen's students would be asked to pay nearly $20,000 more for exactly the same service.

Many students would still think of this as merely a drop in the bucket...providing they received the transportation they desired. In representing the entire student body however, we attempted to balance the interests of both those students who use Bus-It rarely, with those who find it as a valuable service on a daily basis.

This was the arrangement in which we studied in detail the present Bus-It contract. Was the 7 dollars actually a realistic figure considering the fact that so many students subsidized so few? For this reason and that a 40 per cent increase in one year is inflationary, we decided 7 dollars per student was just too much to pay.

Therefore the compromise of six dollars per student was submitted to the Public Utilities Commission (P.U.C.) who objected that this was not negotiable because the city would not subsidize students. Unfortunately, they forgot to consider that Queen's students only spend some 5 million dollars up town on records and clothes, etc.

Then we decided to explore the possibilities of our own bus program strictly for Queen's students and with the prime objective of saving money but yet providing a service to students.

Realizing the legal implications of running our own bus line as outlined by Mayor Spill (who by the way was against the plan at 6 dollars per student), we decided to stick with the PUC plan which we recognized all along as being the most comprehensive Bus-It program.

In closing, I feel confident that Peter and I acted in good faith attempting to get the fairest contract for providing a bus service. In holding firm to our decision of six dollars per student (no additional money was available anyway; many students were inconvenienced, which I apologize for. The fact is however, we attempted to look at the situation realizing that many students never used the Bus-It service but yet paid into the program anyway. For the interests of these students whom we also represent we could not justify the Bus-It service at 7 dollars per student.

If further information on Bus-It or other AMS affairs concern you please don't hesitate to call me for further details.

Truly,
John L. Gray
547-6165

It's better to give
than to receive

October 1st, 2nd, and 3rd
Lower Vic

afternoon evening
11 am - 2 pm 5.00 - 8.00

Blood Donor Clinic

G.S.S. Film Club
Friday Fall Series
presents

(Anne of the Thousand Days)

with Genevieve Bujold & Richard Burton

Ellis Auditorium

Friday Sept. 27 8:00 p.m.

Series Ticket or $1.00 at the door

ASUS Book Exchange

The RETURN of texts and money will be on:

September 30, October 1, 2

12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Second Floor Common Room,
Student's Union

Due to the success of
our last coupons,
Finlay's Sport Shop
Presents
Coupon Series No. 2

$2 off any tennis, badminton or squash
racquet.

Free pair of white sneakers
with any pair of Tretan
Adidas, Puma or Tiger Shoe

$2 off any racquet restringing

$5 off any pair
of skates or ski boots

Offer good until October 3, 1974 and coupon must be presented

Queen's Media: turn on and tune in the QTV tube

Lights, camera, action! Although it may look confusing, Queen's Television studios in Earl Hall are in fact very compact and organized, and among the best in Ontario.

by Wendy Reynolds

Operating out of small, but highly compact and technically sophisticated headquarters in Earl Hall is Queen's TV. A small group of professional technicians whiz about the studios, flicking switches here, training the spotlights there, in preparation for an early morning taping of a Bio 200 lecture. Several hundred students will, with more or less attention, watch the finished tape but few will question its origins.

That particular tape is but one of several hundred produced annually by QTV. Although there is not one course offered at Queen's which uses tapes to the exclusion of live lectures, there are several, particularly in the sciences and applied sciences, which operate on a system of one lecture per week video, the other live.

They have their work cut out for them. This entails the production of a large number of tapes, hence schedules are tight. Between the time spent on videos being made and videos being played, there is little to spare for going out in the mobile unit to catch and preserve events of educational importance.

So it's a full-time, year-round job these people in the biology building have. Beverly Lazier directs QTV, looks after the personnel, arranges the productions and decides policy. She works with a team of five full-time technicians, 1 part-time technician and a roster of 36 student operators, who are paid, incidentally about three dollars per hour for on-the-job training of a practical nature under the supervision of professionals. A good package deal for a few hours of your time each week. Mrs. Lazier urges anyone, particularly those interested in a career in communications, to contact her at the QTV office. Students in their second year are especially welcomed, since these people will be around the campus for, hopefully, three full years and will provide continuity for the system.

The television broadcasting system has been an offspring of the university's administration since 1969, although it was on campus in a more limited capacity for the preceding five years. The Biology Department initiated the idea of taped lectures in 1964, but when it could no longer afford to maintain the increased operational costs, QTV became the campus-wide facility that it is today.

It is completely funded by the University at a cost, in Mrs. Lazier's estimation, of a little over a case of beer per student per year. Each faculty is doled out a certain number of QTV dollars annually, which are carved up among departments according to the need.

The science and business departments would seem to take full advantage of the service provided by QTV, but this is not so in the case of the faculty of education, who seem uninterested or unaware of facility's potential.

This is in part attributable to the unfortunate location of the broadcasting studio at the extreme east end of the campus. QTV is hoping to be relocated more centrally in the near future and Mrs. Lazier hopes more departments will take advantage of the television network at this time. Only a few buildings are equipped with cable equipment necessary for taped lectures to be shown, buildings which include McPherson, Etherington, Frost Wing, Jacand and the Phys. Ed. complex. The lines been installed across to Dupuis, but not yet hooked up. Facilities to Dunning required so that the new MacIntosh-Complex can be accommodated.

Since QTV has no capital, the installation of new cable lines is to be a piece-meal affair. Whenever a hundred dollars turns up unexpected additional footage of cable is added to presently existing lines.

Perhaps ignorance of the scope of QTV's facilities can be cited by way of explanation for their underuse. Only can lectures be taped and re-played those so inclined at exam time, but also slides and films are available. As part of the program of the Ontario Education Communications Authority, which was established by the Ontario provincial government to be responsible for the non-media educational system in Ontario, QTV is available film series are provided. These are professional quality films, like "Descent of Man" series which can be of great usefulness or general appeal. Unlike books, which are often outdated before they are even printed, these films have the advantage of being immediately updatable, in addition to applying graphic illustrations of ideas of interest.

The School of Business at MacIntosh-Corry Hall has a new simulation room with eight rooms and a taping system which dates back to a major control room. Although recently installed and not yet in full operation, this will eventually simulate labour relations problems for the budding business world.

Less expensive and smaller studios are often used by faculties such as for purposes of self-improvement. The recordings of moot court, for instance, are recorded on these lower quality machines so that the infant lawyer can watch his performance retrospectively. The equipment used for lecture taping and the like are of the highest quality however. These instruments are highly sophisticated gadgets, able to reverse images, split screens and superimpose and erase writing in a variety of ways by pressing a button or pressing a lever.

Sports events on campus are covered by QTV. The Canada-Russia hockey series will be pulled in off the air and shown over the university cable system on any available screens on October 1 at 12:30 p.m., and the same on October 3. They have a powerful antenna with a good signal, capable of getting all that is available in the area from the commercial networks, both Canadian and American.

Events off-campus which are considered to be of educational interest have been taped on occasion, a recent example of which was the concert given by the Kingston Symphony Orchestra in co-operation with Old Fort Henry. Conferences and seminars delivered by outside lecturers, ceremonial openings of new buildings and special visits of royalty, for instance, will be recorded, but not all of these tapes can be saved. Some are destroyed selectively, others removed through a process of attrition, while others become archival material. Mrs. Lazier admits that this requires a certain amount of second-guessing on her part, in trying to decide what should be saved for posterity and what should go by-the-by.

QTV is definitely non-competitive with the commercial stations, although some work is done for educational institutions in the area when the work schedule permits. Formats, again for educational institutions, will be dubbed by Queen's television. Some of their tapes have even been sold to institutions in the United States, which brings in a small amount of revenue.

A mobile unit is part of the studio's equipment. Use of this is often confined to weekends, exam periods, and the summer because the equipment and technicians must be around for lectures during the school term. An open-heart surgical operation at KGH was caught on film in the recent past. This was difficult to capture from a technical point of view, Mrs. Lazier laments, because some of QTV's equipment, due to prohibitive cost, is not of broadcast quality, even from as close a range as the hospital. Although they have professional quality in the audios and the cameras, the videos do not come up to the same standard, hence the signal is not stable enough for broadcasting.

As a consequence, Mrs. Lazier eagerly anticipates the day that QTV "gets a feed" from the Kingston cable system. An edict from the CRTC to the local cable people has ordered that Queen's TV be given the feed at no cost and although it has yet to occur, it is expected in the near future. This would allow a two-way system so that signals from outside the area could be received. This would be of especial benefit to departments such as French who would like to set up cable to bring in broadcasts and acquaint French students with programmes in the language of their study. Hooking up with Kingston cable would alleviate the weak signal problem as well, so that broadcasts of acceptable quality would be possible.

Interest in a university news programme for students has been sparked, but as with everything else, this requires special funding and is not feasible at the present time.

In comparison with other Ontario universities, QTV rates highly. Toronto, Windsor and Carleton have full-colour facilities, but outside of that, Queen's equipment is probably just about the best you'll find in the province.

Statistics show that 60 percent of the public get their news from TV. Television's importance as a vital modern medium cannot be denied. It is unfortunate that so many people at Queen's and in the 1970's at that, ignore or are unaware of the potential of QTV's excellent facilities and services.

Vibrant Stage!

"A light-hearted look at love"

The "Vibrant Stage" series continues this weekend with the presentation of "Pleasure and Repentance" by London's Royal Shakespeare Company. This production is "a light-hearted look at love," a collage of romantic moments from poets past and present.

"Love may be witty, bawdy, deadly; love may even be, and sometimes is, blue. With the words of Ogden Nash, Tennyson, Keats and Dickens, and the romantic jottings of D. H. Lawrence, W. H. Auden, George Bernard Shaw and Shakespeare, the production is illuminated with the lyrics of Lennon and McCartney and the Rolling Stones, with music composed and arranged by Michael Best."

This light-hearted production is a little different than the usual style of the company, for although they conduct occasional experimental productions, their central concern is Shakespeare the company is responsible for most of the major Shakespearean productions seen in Great Britain. This particular experiment has been very well received:

"A Royal Delight... see these Royal Shakespeare anthologies—they really do present a different kind of theatre" - Clive Barnes, New York Times

"Hilarious... jubulant... a celebration." - The London Times.

Tickets for "Pleasure and Repentance" are available at the Division of Concerts Box Office in the Agnes Etherington Art Centre. Admission is $3, $4 and $5 general; and $2, $3 and $4 for students and senior citizens.

CFRC Hi-Lites

Friday, Sept. 27, 1974

10.00 Nocturne: the Progressive sound of CFRC's rock show.

Saturday, Sept. 28, 1974

2.00 Golden Gael Football: CFRC and CFRC-FM broadcast live play by play from Toronto, as the Queen's Golden Gaels meet the Varsity Blues.

2.00 a.m. Nocturne Request Show: Call CFRC at 547-6677 for your favourite rock music.

Sunday, Sept. 29, 1974

10.00 Musical Panorama: Classics for morning listening: Bach, Bacon and Eggs????

Thursday, Oct. 3, 1974 (CFRC-FM 91.9 only)

8.00 Drama in Music: Music written for stage, including ballet, opera, operetta, and other dramatic works. Tonight: Gilbert and Sullivan's "Ruddigore".

10.00 Jazz FM: A real alternative for late evening listening is the sound of jazz until midnight.

unclassifieds More on Page 10

GREYED: one desk or table, reasonable condition, not older than 10th hand or 17th century piece - whichever comes first. Phone 549-4753.

TO ROB THE "JOURNAL" AND "WHIG" PHOTOGRAPHER: I waited 1 1/2 hours at the VW Gates for you. There were many Queensmen there at the race who I could have asked for a ride, but I relied on you—stupid of me! So I had to return to T.O., borrowed $ for an EXPENSIVE bus ride & missed 3 classes Monday morning. No need to tell you, you have no manners at all!!! Maureen A.

FOR SALE: chair (59) slide rule ($5) and Bowmar MX40 calculator ($80) Also looking for a vacuum cleaner in good working order. Phone 542-2002 or drop by 288 Earl St.

GAEL GROUP 88: For those who walked on the trail at Kingston Mills, that was a basswood and not a birch as I said. Sorry. To all G88s—drop in or phone any time. Jay 401 Leonard. Be on lookout for further ads here. More enjoyment to come, hopefully. Be good!

"PIG-IN" CANCELLED. Unfortunately, too many people will be in Toronto this weekend. The pollack reunion for last year's annex squad will be Oct. 4 at 4.00 p.m. instead.

PAUL HORN IN CONCERT

Review in Journal '73:

"...one of the great jazz musicians..."

"...the music of Paul Horn, warmed the hearts of everyone in attendance."

"Paul Horn is an entertainer who is appreciated by every kind of music fan, and this was demonstrated on Sunday night. A first class gentleman and a first class entertainer, we hope to be able to see Horn again in the next few years at Queen's."

A.M.S. Concerts Agree!

Sunday

Sept. 29

tickets $3.00

Grant Hall

8:00 pm

Returned by request

George Bailey
sporting goods
40 Parkside Street
Kingston, Ontario
K7L 1A4
Tel. 613/542-2303

TENNIS: WILSON, SLAZENGER, DUNLOP, PATRICK TENNIS SHOES, CONVERSE ALL STARS.

PACKS: EVERYTHING FROM MINI TO EXPOITION SIZE

SKI EQUIPMENT NOROICA BOOTS, VOLKL AND ATOMIC SKIS, SKI CLOTHING AND ACCESSORIES

10% OFF TO QUEEN'S STUDENTS ON NON-SALE ITEMS

Artsci '78

presents

A Roman Orgy

an evening of

Dancing, Drinking and Decadence

featuring

MRQ

Friday Oct. 4 Admission $1.50

8:30 - 1:30 $1.00 with Artsci

78 card

Only Romans in Togas Allowed!

Staff member to give recital

The first of the current season's musical events presented by the Department of Music at Queen's University will take place on Monday evening, September 30th at 8.30 p.m. in Dunning Auditorium. Mr. Ireneus Zuk, who has recently joined the Music Department's staff will give a piano recital for which there is no admission charge.

The program will include works by Prokofiev, Beethoven, Chopin, Liszt and Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

Ireneus Zuk, who was born in West Ukraine, is a graduate of the Conservatoire de Musique de Quebec, McGill University, and the Royal College of Music in London, England. He holds a Master of Science Degree from the Juilliard School in New York and is presently doing post graduate work at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore under renowned American concert pianist, Leon Fleisher. In addition he was a scholarship student at the International Summer Academy of the Mozarteum in Salzburg and the University of Alberta Banff School of Fine Arts.

Mr. Zuk is the winner of an impressive number of prizes and scholarships which include: a Canada Council Arts Scholarship, four Quebec Government post-graduate scholarships, two Martlet Awards and the Ellen Ballon Piano Scholarship at McGill University, the Montreal Scholarship and the Hopkinson Silver Medal at the Royal College of Music. He has held Teaching Fellowships at the Juilliard

Mr. Ireneus Zuk

School and Peabody Conservatory and is currently continuing his studies on his fourth successive Doctoral Fellowship from the Canada Council.

He has given numerous public and radio recitals in Canada, Europe and the U.S.A., as well as appearing as soloist with various orchestras, for which he has received most enthusiastic reviews. Monday evening's recital will be Ireneus Zuk's first public appearance in Kingston and precedes a concert tour in October during the course of which he will give a recital in London's famous Wigmore Hall.

Reviewers needed

The Arts section of the Journal urgently needs good writers to review concerts (classical and rock) books, films, art exhibitions, and records. Anyone interested should inquire at the Journal office, or contact Kerry White (544-5358) or Peter Haworth (544-7739).

ASUS

2 ASUS Reps on AMS (1 yr. term)
(term runs until spring elections)

2 ASUS senators (1 yr.)
(term runs until August, 1975)

Nominations to be submitted by 12 noon, Friday, October 12 in ASUS box in AMS office, and must have nominee's signature plus signatures of 25 other Arts and Science students

ABRAMSKY

Visit our onnex - King and Borrock St.
(across from Dominion)

We have a large selection of good used furniture

- sofas and chairs

- desks

- tables

- lamps

- beds (all sizes)

all at reasonable prices

St. James Church

Union and Barrie Streets

Sunday Sept. 27

9:00 am - Holy Communion

11:00 am - White Gift Family

Service

Preacher - The Rector

Wednesday

7:45 am Holy Communion

book review

And Some in Fire
Dorothy Farniloe
Alive Press Ltd. Guelph
$3.00

by Michael McCann
Dorothy Farniloe has written a splendid study of a woman's struggle to assert herself as an individual in a small community in Northern Ontario, during the middle of that drab decade, the Fifties. The north here has lost the romance of the Group of Seven. It has been raped, and dressed in the gray dullness of poverty. Its inhabitants have been reduced to courting the favour of theory plunderers, the yearly influx of wealthy American hunters. With deft strokes of her pen, Farniloe reveals the shabbiness and senseless brutality which prod the novel's heroine, Vanessa Norden, into rebellion.

Vanessa has sought to find in her husband's home, an old rambling lodge, a womb to protect her from the memory of a harsh childhood, only to find that the womb threatens to suffocate her. Finally, through an encounter with tragic death, she is able to find the courage to break away. The north is not so fortunate. It remains in the hands of its torturers. Farniloe writes with skill, and with deep understanding of both the novel's characters and their land. It is a frank and honest work, stripped of all the false sentimentality that permeates so many novels of the Canadian North.

Queen's University

Music
Department

PIANO RECITAL

by

IRENEUS ZUK

of Queen's music department

Prokofiev

Beethoven

Chopin

Liszt

Moussorgsky

Dunning Auditorium Mon. Sept. 30 8:30 pm

ADMISSION FREE

I dreamt I was a triple thick shake.

277 Bath Rd.
Kingston

unclassifieds

More on Page 8

ONE VERY NICE person needs someone to share an apartment with her. Successful applicant will have the following qualifications, female (moderately liberated), not allergic to noise or parties and willing to live with a psych major. Call Val at 544-5627.

ANY STUDENT interested in buying a barely worn Science '77 jacket is asked to phone 544-6276 and ask for John.

MADE TO ORDER: Beautiful posters in italic script on parchment paper $1.50. Order now to avoid the Christmas rush! Clip this ad for future reference. Call 542-4637.

TO THE PARTY who stole the blue Le Jeune 10 speed from 196 Stuart Street Sunday night. Unfortunately you were spotted and followed and it not returned by Tuesday October 1st charges will be laid.

SPECIAL: One wildwater canoe - slightly used and in only two pieces. For further information on it and the people behind it see the Queen's Wildwater Club at Club's Note Sept. 20 Wawa forever.

HAVE LARGE VAN and will move anything within 25 mile radius of Kingston quickly and cheaply. Quotes for longer distances if convenient. Call 544-6316.

TO A E K Sorry about the extra 'E' in T A Q acknowledgements. Force of habit.

THE GUY who lost his red, white and blue pen case can find it at Brockington-Gordon desk.

IF YOU found a Parker fountain pen the first day of classes, phone John at 544-7720. Reward offered.

LOST: One blue cord jacket at Leonard Hall last Friday night. It's in a safari style and I really need it. 544-7297.

LOST AT QUEEN'S MCGILL FOOTBALL GAME: A drunken U.B.C. student lost his friends "Lee" tennis hat. The return of this family keepsake would be greatly appreciated. It has great sentimental value. A reward will be offered if the hat is returned by a female student before next home game, please. Phone 546-7045 Ask for Webster.

FAR UP 401! And we thank you all for the dinner and festivities on Monday. Far and up will never forget the fun we had. Oh, and remember "We are Gael Group 40, for our reunion, L.J. and H. ROOM AVAILABLE for a drunken U.B.C. student lost his friends "Lee" tennis hat. The return of this family keepsake would be greatly appreciated. It has great sentimental value. A reward will be offered if the hat is returned by a female student before next home game, please. Phone 546-7045 Ask for Webster.

AR AND MRS. FINLAY and their 7 children Jim invite you to a party at Jim Finlay's, Julie, Judy, Wendy C., Dave W., Dave B., Chris M., Lucier, Grace and ANDREA W. will also be there. For all friends, Doctors and Constables. Friday Sept. 27 at 239 Alfred. Come!

Sal, Sept. 28th Come on in to 'The Carpenter's Inn' Coffee House in Vic Hall basement E wing. Follow the signs coffee, refreshments, and live music. Featuring John and Hugh Greenwood from Waterloo. Get in on some of their music before their new album's full release. 8:30 p.m. to 12 p.m. Admission is 75c. Bring a friend. Sponsored by Queen's Christian Fellowship.

FOUND: Green fountain pen on Earl between University and Aberdeen. Call 544-2633.

LOST: Cardinal wrist watch gold coloured with brown wrist band. Call Jim 544-2633.

SEX has nothing to do with the Queen's diplomacy Club. Diplomacy is the game of power politics and international intrigue. See our stand on Club's Night and the article on page 57.

G.O. 57: Brian, Moose and Hilary command the reappearance of Gay, Sarah, Joyce, Ellen, Ol, Janie, Sarah from Kingston, Roberto, Tiny, Bob, Glen, Lindsay and Stuart, Gerbil and Pickle. It's at your house, boys! It's a dinner and beer bash out on Queen Mary Road.

ATTENTION Movers and Groovers: Queen's Musical Theatre Workshops will begin Sunday, October the sixth at 1:30 p.m., in the Dance Studio at the Phys. Ed. centre. Accent will be on dancing, acting and singing. No experience needed. ALL WELCOME.

SECTION C: Large photos are ready. Be at Engineer's Pub Clark Hall today 4:30 to 6:00 50c is the cost for one. Look for Joe. 8 x 10 photos.

CHEM GRADS: Interested in Bews's Sports? Please contact me David Gray, Rm. 401, Frost Wing, Chemistry Department. Fill out an information sheet and leave in the Chem Grads Box, Rm. 102A in the Athletic Complex. Baseball players needed.

WANTED: A female or male to share a 2-bedroom apartment with 2 other Queen's Students. Spacious, clean, carpeted and quiet. Available immediately. (No lease!) Approx 544-mo. Call 549-5621 after 5 p.m.

TO THE GUY'S OF 2nd Leonard East and center: Thanks for the terrific warm-up party Sat. The next one's on us. (Homecoming) The girls of 2A and 2E (This is late, just like us!)

LIMITED NUMBER of Brand name full scientific portable electronic calculators. $119 ea. plus tax. 1-414-855-8264.

LOST: A navy-blue blazer at Grant Hall last Friday night (Sept. 20) Would the finder please call 544-8335.

ATTENTION S.S. and V.S. from D.S.I.S.: call JED at 549-5350.

FREE 3 male kittens. Take your pick 7 weeks old. Ph. 547-2776. Ask for Ray.

DROP IN Meeting of all volunteers tonight at 7:30 at 372 University. GAEI GROUP 40: AN YAOOWI by order of the insurance salesman and the Ph.D. of smoke, you are all commanded to be at a meeting this Friday night (Sept. 27) at midnight at Nathan Phillips Square in Toronto. P.T.O.W. (I prepare to get wrecked).

OUTING CLUB MEETING Tuesday night at 7:30 in Room 118 Jeffrey Hall. For all new members and for those interested in going on Thanksgiving weekend canoe to Algonquin.

LOST: 1 brown suede jacket at McArthur Hall in Room B219. If found please call Sylvia 389-1749.

LOST: Navy blue golf jacket, size: medium. Lost at dance in Grant Hall on Friday night. Please call Rob Beattie at 544-7643.

UNIVERSITY CHAPEL SERVICE Tuesday to Friday 9:10-9:25 Queen's Theological College. "Morgan Chapel" All invited.

LOST: WATCH at Grassier Dance Grant Hall. Cheap Times If found please call 544-7121.

TO THE MEO STUDENTS who were at the Health Science Picnic: Thanks for an absolutely fantastic Sunday afternoon. We will long remember the slimy eggs, the sharp toothpicks, the hairy twine, the cold teaspoons, and the two soccer balls. We look forward to inviting you all to a return engagement. Let's keep up the spirit. Three cheers for Health Science! Linda Reiche, Vice President, Candace Phibbs, Senator, (on behalf of the Nursing Science Society) P.S. Thanks for the pop too!

FOR SALE: One portable washer-spin dryer: good condition, ideal for students, small family etc. Cheap! Please call 544-3682 after 5:00 p.m.

ST. ANDREW'S YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY extends an open invitation to all those who might wish to join them in their opening banquet this year. Supper is at 5 p.m. Sept. 29th, corner of Princess and Clergy--and it's free! Come and bring a friend.

TO WHOEVER TURNED IN MY WALLETT, bank book, cheque book, meal card and tuition cheque in the campus bookstore on Sept. 17: Thank you very much -- Cher Mowat.

FOR SALE CHEAP: 1 single bed, 1 single bed frame, 1 T.V. stand, and one large wardrobe. Call Iris Stratis ANYTIME after 4:30 on Friday or on to 45 Nelson St.

LOST: 1 gold coloured Savoy (I think) watch with Speidel band in the shortcut beside the Union -- of great sentimental value and little worth.

FOR SALE: 1 Pioneer SA-9100 stereo amp, 1 Pioneer PL-12D turntable, 2 Altec 990C's, 1 Warranz 1060 stereo amp, 1 dual 1214 turntable,

2 JBL 100's and 4 cheapo speakers also. Call 544-4197.

HAVE a large van and will move quickly and cheaply anywhere within 25 mile radius of Kingston. Quotes for longer distances if convenient. Call Nigel Smith, 544-4314 anytime.

T.O. WEEK-END TRANSPORTATION: Travel down with the Queen's band. $7.00 round trip. $5.00 one way. 1st come first served. Tickets sold starting 5:20 p.m. sharp! Accommodation not provided.

FOR SALE: 30" electric stove, $40.00 plus single door refrigerator, $45.00. Both in good running order. For details call 542-7783.

MISTRESS WANTED: Young, intelligent, attractive woman needed to keep mildly chauvinist, intelligent, attractive male happy during long winter days and nights (experience not prerequisite but recommended) Call Peter, 542-8725.

308 ELROND: Maurice, Gary, Dennis, Geoff, Wayne, Phil, Heather, Jim, Rob, Pat, and Penelope Leir. A nice Jewish girl says hello, asks you to keep the noise down to prevent tears, and to not be so gross in front of the girls. Watch our stairs: the last one's a mother! (Yucca-dew!)

ANNOUNCEMENTS: Geoff's in love again. Steve's changed his mind, we hope this one works. Duncan was kissed by a girl and turned into a load. Jerry has died. Will continue his work at the Journal. Birth: to Bob Turner, his second set of teeth, 4 lbs. 3 oz., sparkling white. The boys of 385 wish him all the best.

S.V.B. Student Volunteer Bureau. STOLEN: 1 1963 dark green International Traveller. Engineering initiation week Sept. 10, 1974. Please call 376-3877 as to the location of my truck. I need it: ARTSCI 75 desperately need participants for Bews Intermural Anyone interested please contact Peter Wilkins 544-6746 or fill out a form in 102A of Phys Ed. Complex.

FOR SALE: One Commerce jacket, size 49. Excellent condition. Phone 546-7289.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 Ltd. has expanded their processing lab and can now offer 24 hours service on the black and white processing and Ektachrome slide developing. For further information call 546-7770 or drop by at 33 Brock Street.

TEXAS SR-10 CALCULATOR for sale. Almost new. Phone 549-4813.

mother! (Yucca-dew!)

ANNOUNCEMENTS: Geoff's in love again. Steve's changed his mind, we hope this one works. Duncan was kissed by a girl and turned into a load. Jerry has died. Will continue his work at the Journal. Birth: to Bob Turner, his second set of teeth, 4 lbs. 3 oz., sparkling white. The boys of 385 wish him all the best.

S.V.B. Student Volunteer Bureau. STOLEN: 1 1963 dark green International Traveller. Engineering initiation week Sept. 10, 1974. Please call 376-3877 as to the location of my truck. I need it: ARTSCI 75 desperately need participants for Bews Intermural Anyone interested please contact Peter Wilkins 544-6746 or fill out a form in 102A of Phys Ed. Complex.

FOR SALE: One Commerce jacket, size 49. Excellent condition. Phone 546-7289.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 Ltd. has expanded their processing lab and can now offer 24 hours service on the black and white processing and Ektachrome slide developing. For further information call 546-7770 or drop by at 33 Brock Street.

TEXAS SR-10 CALCULATOR for sale. Almost new. Phone 549-4813.

mother! (Yucca-dew!)

ANNOUNCEMENTS: Geoff's in love again. Steve's changed his mind, we hope this one works. Duncan was kissed by a girl and turned into a load. Jerry has died. Will continue his work at the Journal. Birth: to Bob Turner, his second set of teeth, 4 lbs. 3 oz., sparkling white. The boys of 385 wish him all the best.

S.V.B. Student Volunteer Bureau. STOLEN: 1 1963 dark green International Traveller. Engineering initiation week Sept. 10, 1974. Please call 376-3877 as to the location of my truck. I need it: ARTSCI 75 desperately need participants for Bews Intermural Anyone interested please contact Peter Wilkins 544-6746 or fill out a form in 102A of Phys Ed. Complex.

FOR SALE: One Commerce jacket, size 49. Excellent condition. Phone 546-7289.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 Ltd. has expanded their processing lab and can now offer 24 hours service on the black and white processing and Ektachrome slide developing. For further information call 546-7770 or drop by at 33 Brock Street.

TEXAS SR-10 CALCULATOR for sale. Almost new. Phone 549-4813.

mother! (Yucca-dew!)

ANNOUNCEMENTS: Geoff's in love again. Steve's changed his mind, we hope this one works. Duncan was kissed by a girl and turned into a load. Jerry has died. Will continue his work at the Journal. Birth: to Bob Turner, his second set of teeth, 4 lbs. 3 oz., sparkling white. The boys of 385 wish him all the best.

S.V.B. Student Volunteer Bureau. STOLEN: 1 1963 dark green International Traveller. Engineering initiation week Sept. 10, 1974. Please call 376-3877 as to the location of my truck. I need it: ARTSCI 75 desperately need participants for Bews Intermural Anyone interested please contact Peter Wilkins 544-6746 or fill out a form in 102A of Phys Ed. Complex.

FOR SALE: One Commerce jacket, size 49. Excellent condition. Phone 546-7289.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 Ltd. has expanded their processing lab and can now offer 24 hours service on the black and white processing and Ektachrome slide developing. For further information call 546-7770 or drop by at 33 Brock Street.

TEXAS SR-10 CALCULATOR for sale. Almost new. Phone 549-4813.

mother! (Yucca-dew!)

ANNOUNCEMENTS: Geoff's in love again. Steve's changed his mind, we hope this one works. Duncan was kissed by a girl and turned into a load. Jerry has died. Will continue his work at the Journal. Birth: to Bob Turner, his second set of teeth, 4 lbs. 3 oz., sparkling white. The boys of 385 wish him all the best.

S.V.B. Student Volunteer Bureau. STOLEN: 1 1963 dark green International Traveller. Engineering initiation week Sept. 10, 1974. Please call 376-3877 as to the location of my truck. I need it: ARTSCI 75 desperately need participants for Bews Intermural Anyone interested please contact Peter Wilkins 544-6746 or fill out a form in 102A of Phys Ed. Complex.

FOR SALE: One Commerce jacket, size 49. Excellent condition. Phone 546-7289.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 Ltd. has expanded their processing lab and can now offer 24 hours service on the black and white processing and Ektachrome slide developing. For further information call 546-7770 or drop by at 33 Brock Street.

TEXAS SR-10 CALCULATOR for sale. Almost new. Phone 549-4813.

mother! (Yucca-dew!)

ANNOUNCEMENTS: Geoff's in love again. Steve's changed his mind, we hope this one works. Duncan was kissed by a girl and turned into a load. Jerry has died. Will continue his work at the Journal. Birth: to Bob Turner, his second set of teeth, 4 lbs. 3 oz., sparkling white. The boys of 385 wish him all the best.

S.V.B. Student Volunteer Bureau. STOLEN: 1 1963 dark green International Traveller. Engineering initiation week Sept. 10, 1974. Please call 376-3877 as to the location of my truck. I need it: ARTSCI 75 desperately need participants for Bews Intermural Anyone interested please contact Peter Wilkins 544-6746 or fill out a form in 102A of Phys Ed. Complex.

FOR SALE: One Commerce jacket, size 49. Excellent condition. Phone 546-7289.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 Ltd. has expanded their processing lab and can now offer 24 hours service on the black and white processing and Ektachrome slide developing. For further information call 546-7770 or drop by at 33 Brock Street.

TEXAS SR-10 CALCULATOR for sale. Almost new. Phone 549-4813.

mother! (Yucca-dew!)

ANNOUNCEMENTS: Geoff's in love again. Steve's changed his mind, we hope this one works. Duncan was kissed by a girl and turned into a load. Jerry has died. Will continue his work at the Journal. Birth: to Bob Turner, his second set of teeth, 4 lbs. 3 oz., sparkling white. The boys of 385 wish him all the best.

S.V.B. Student Volunteer Bureau. STOLEN: 1 1963 dark green International Traveller. Engineering initiation week Sept. 10, 1974. Please call 376-3877 as to the location of my truck. I need it: ARTSCI 75 desperately need participants for Bews Intermural Anyone interested please contact Peter Wilkins 544-6746 or fill out a form in 102A of Phys Ed. Complex.

FOR SALE: One Commerce jacket, size 49. Excellent condition. Phone 546-7289.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 Ltd. has expanded their processing lab and can now offer 24 hours service on the black and white processing and Ektachrome slide developing. For further information call 546-7770 or drop by at 33 Brock Street.

TEXAS SR-10 CALCULATOR for sale. Almost new. Phone 549-4813.

mother! (Yucca-dew!)

ANNOUNCEMENTS: Geoff's in love again. Steve's changed his mind, we hope this one works. Duncan was kissed by a girl and turned into a load. Jerry has died. Will continue his work at the Journal. Birth: to Bob Turner, his second set of teeth, 4 lbs. 3 oz., sparkling white. The boys of 385 wish him all the best.

S.V.B. Student Volunteer Bureau. STOLEN: 1 1963 dark green International Traveller. Engineering initiation week Sept. 10, 1974. Please call 376-3877 as to the location of my truck. I need it: ARTSCI 75 desperately need participants for Bews Intermural Anyone interested please contact Peter Wilkins 544-6746 or fill out a form in 102A of Phys Ed. Complex.

Gaels, Blues meet in crucial clash

by Chris Boon

When the Golden Gaels square off with Varsity in the opening round of their traditional home-and-home classic tomorrow afternoon in Hogtown, both teams will have a lot on the line. The Blues lead the O-QAAs's eastern division with a 2-0 mark, while a veritable herd of schools, including Queen's, McGill and Ottawa U. are hard on their heels with 1-1 records. A win for T.O. would give them a near-stranglehold on first place come playoff time, while a loss to Queen's would put the eastern division title up for grabs, with the Gaels in a position of growing momentum towards the top.

However, Langley can throw, and the Blues have a choice selection of receivers, starting with his old batterymate at York, Steve Ince, the leading receiver in the east last year. Also back there back, there again have been relatively few changes from last season, but those missing, such as LB Hartley Stern and deep back Rone Raine, were quality ball players.

Along the line, tackle Mike Sokovinn has returned after a year of academic problems and all-star guard Bruce Parraack has departed, but there have been minimal changes elsewhere. This has undoubtedly contributed to the rejuvenated running attack.

On defense, super-quick tackle Ken Hussey is out with knee problems (at last report), but the Blues are usually deep along the front wall, and his absence won't be crippling. From there back, there again have been relatively few changes from last season, but those missing, such as LB Hartley Stern and deep back Rone Raine, were quality ball players.

For Queen's, it is unlikely there will be many alterations to last week's winning combination. Unless Dave Hadden's ankle undergoes something akin to faith healing in the next couple of days, the big fullback will have to miss this game. The Beast will be missed, but better a game than the season.

On offense, look for a front seven of Peter Sabiston and Greg Anderson at end, Mike O'Shaughnessy and Darrell Craig at tackles with Keith Taggart and Doug Lowry at the guards spots. Jim Murphy will start at Centre. Behind them will be Randy Edgeworth, at guard, and Sabiston who will move inside if injury strikes.

In the backfield, Raold Serebrin will start at QB, with Brian Titley or Murray Buchanan at full back. Stacey Merritt holds down one halfback spot on the strength of last week's performance, with either Jamie Domanski, Kerry Powell or

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

Weather could play a big role in tomorrow's match, especially rain. The Gaels can sustain a running game when they make the effort, but it will be harder without Hadden, who excelled in sloppy going. Toronto's running looks better, but is something of an unproven quantity. It should be one hell of a ball game.

by Carl Fitzpatrick

Bews this year has a new face and a new system. The new face is that of Sue Bolton, the new Director of Intramural Sports at Queen's. She has given all her time and energies to her new job, and has been able to mold a core of people to work as convenors for each sport. In this way, she hopes to coordinate the Bews program more efficiently. We wish her the best of luck and hope she will continue to do a fine job.

The Bews program opened this year with the annual Golf tournament. The

Lalonde threatens to ban "bubbly" from the Tube

Ottawa: Health Minister Marc Lalonde has threatened to ban beer advertising on television barring improvements in the calibre of advertising. He urges the companies to educate the public about the use of alcohol rather than glorify the "good life". He feels the potential harm of beer is not something that can be ignored.

He was addressing a meeting of the Brewers Association of Canada when he stated that given the brewers' position of being the only ones given permission to advertise "mind-altering" drugs on the broadcast media, the brewers have a responsibility connected with this privilege. Lalonde takes exception to the so-called "beautiful people", rich enough to own boats and live in an atmosphere of perpetual sunshine, unpolluted lakes, and white beaches. Even more than this, he objects to the suggestion by some manufacturers that a beer will make you forget office pressures or make you more outgoing, because he feels this leads to the encouragement of using beer as a psychological crutch. In urging the industry to act more responsibly in their advertising, Lalonde cited Statistics Canada figures on alcoholism in Canada, consumption figures and cost of consumption, and figures on who buys the alcoholic beverages consumed. He said the government could not be indifferent to these figures.

Boston: Edward Moore Kennedy has formally stated to the Democratic Party that he does not intend to seek the Democratic nomination for the 1976 presidential election. Although he cited family reasons in his official statement, there are many people who feel that the 5 year old ghost of Chappaquiddick still haunts both Kennedy and the American voters. It is the general consensus of opinion that that is what prevented his nomination by the Democrats in 1972.

Kennedy, 42, found out just how strong feelings about Mary Jo Kopechne's death in 1969 are last week while campaigning in Hobart, Indiana. He was heckled and picketed by demonstrators who called him "The Hero of Chappaquiddick".

Along with the New York Times magazine, two other magazines, as well as several reputable newspapers have assigned reporters to reopen the story.

His decision for 1976 is irrevocable but that does not preclude his deciding to run in 1980, when he will be 48, or in 1984, at the age of 52. The presidency is an honor Edward M. Kennedy has often said he would like.

Long Beach, Calif. (AP - Reuters) - Former President Richard Nixon entered the hospital Monday afternoon for treatment of phlebitis. He was expected to stay for at least a week. Wednesday, however, a blood clot was discovered in his lung which will prolong his hospital stay. His physician, Dr. John Lungren, says that although Nixon's condition is potentially serious, there is an excellent chance for complete recovery, given time. Nixon is supposed to have testified next week in the Watergate coverup trial of John Dean.

Vienna: In defiance of President Ford's call for a cut in world oil prices, the major oil producers have vowed to keep prices at their current level. Despite Ford's predictions of worldwide depression, the twelve members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, who produce 85 percent of world petroleum exports, have voted to increase the price on a barrel of oil to $9.74. That represents an over 400 percent increase in the price of crude oil in the past year. Abderraham Khene, the Secretary-General of the Organization said, "We increased our prices to protect purchasing power. We did not do anything with the aim of destroying the economy of the world."

Toronto: In one year, the price of food in the Ontario Food Council's food basket rose 20.7 per cent. The food basket, made up of 147 items from five major supermarkets in Metro Toronto, now costs $88.74, up over $15 from a year ago. September 1974's figure is 33 cents higher than August's figure, largely as a result of increased prices of ice cream, sugar and cooking oils.

Columbus: Supreme Court Judge Robert Elliot overturned an unconstitutional conviction of former Lieutenant William Calley in Columbus Georgia on Wednesday. He gave as reasons, the inability of Calley's defence to call favorable witnesses, too much pretrial publicity, and their inability to obtain access to various pertinent transcripts. Ken Hanson, Calley's defence attorney, says he hopes that Calley will be released within a week. Calley was originally sentenced to life at the military prison in Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, for the murder of 10 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai, a sentence which was later commuted to 10 years. The army has the right to contest the decision.

backpage

ALL ELROND COLLEGE members for 1974-75 are hereby given notice of a general meeting to be held on

Wednesday Evening
October 9, 1974

Watch the Journal for precise time and location

544-1227

PIZZA
CHALET

PIZZA AND ITALIAN DISHES
TAKE OUT ORDER AND DELIVERY
359 PRINCESS ST.

NAVAL RESERVE Officer Training Program

HMCS Cataragui is recruiting under-graduates to undergo training leading to an officers commission.

Call 545-5872 (daytime) or better yet come to the Naval Reserve Booth
at Clubs Night, Monday night in Grant Hall.

Science '77 Presents BOAT IN A BOTTLE

1000 Island Boat Cruise

Oct. 10 8:00 - 12:00

Bar - Band - Dancing

Two enclosed decks

Tickets - $5.00 single

$9.00 a couple

on sale next week

John Orr room 3 - 5 pm

Who's Where Listings...

Mistakes can happen! When compiling names and phone numbers and addresses and other data on 10,000 students and staff they are bound to happen. So stop in at the John Orr Room (Information Bank) on Monday and check your listing...make sure that what is going to be printed in Who's Where is correct. Monday is your only chance; drop in and help us out. Check your listing.

Only chance!

Queens

Journal

Volume 102, Number 7

Tuesday, October 1, 1974

John Cameron

Look out...it's falling!

Does a meteorite from the sky threaten the destruction...could be!! Have you seen any boys in Victoria Field with impending of these fellows lately? disaster? Are they fated for inevitable

Student positions open on Senate Committees

Vacancies exist for student members on the following Senate Committees: Academic Development (1 year term); Academic Development (2 year term); Appointment, Promotion, Tenure and Leave (2 year term); Campus Planning (1 year term); Fine Arts and Public Lectures (1 year term); Nominating (1 year term); Operations Review (1 year term); Scholarships and Student Aid (1 year term); and Agenda (1 year term). Only senators are eligible for the Nominating,

Operations Review, and Agenda positions. Full-time students in any year are invited to apply for positions, and members of the university community are invited to submit to the Secretary of the Senate the names of those whose interests, knowledge and experience seem to qualify them for such positions. Nominees need not be members of the Senate, but should have a special interest in the particular problems related to the responsibilities of the committees. It would be helpful to the Senate Nominating Committee, in selecting the most appropriate nominees, if the special interests and talents of applicants or prospective nominees were to be briefly described on the application form. The Nominating Committee would also be willing to interview any prospective nominee who might wish to appear before it.

Applications should be submitted to the Secretary of the Senate before Wednesday, October 9th, 1974

Arts Festival may be doomed

by Barb Nyland

Unless greater interest is shown by the students this year, we are going to lose our annual Arts Festival; a collage of cultural events which has run each year since 1967 for four or five days. So far there has not been sufficient response to go on this year.

Gaye Clemson, the Education Commissioner for the A.M.S. feels that Festival reached its high peak between 1969 and 1971. She said that it appeared that by 1972 students assumed that Festival would exist even without their support. "My biggest concern is whether we will find enough people to do all the jobs which go along with an event of this size. When we advertised last year for this year's convener there was very little response. Finally we found somebody to fill the job but he didn't return to Queen's this year."

Despite organizational difficulties, last year's Festival was a great success. It lasted for five days and in this time there were art and Photography displays, silver workshops, demonstrations of silk screening and batik. Concerts of all types were held, from Ban Righ Firesides to a Grant Hall Concert featuring Spirit & Brutus.

Last year's co-ordinator, Ann Dowsett commented "I feel Festival is primarily a showcase for the students; secondly a showcase of outside talent." According to Clemson, the extent of professionalism in this year's Festival (if there is one) will depend on the ideas of the co-ordinator.

Originally, Festival was completely funded by ASUS but now the AMS makes the greatest contribution is willing to give a maximum of $1500.00 this year.

The decision as to whether Festival will live or die now falls to the students. Clemson said "I'm hoping we will get people from all faculties. Maybe the students will realize that they need to broaden their horizons, that it's rewarding to become aware of something other than their isolated disciplines."

Huge hikes proposed in student honoraria

"Student volunteerism is an important and desirable facet of this university's life but personal bankruptcy is not. As the AMS grows, if it wants to continue having students control its affairs, it must be willing to provide the necessary means to achieve that end." These were the conclusions of the Honoraria Review Committee, made in their report released at Thursday's meeting of Outer Council.

The report proposes tremendous increases in amounts of money paid to students working for the AMS, to clear up the present situation of "asking individuals to handle increasingly complex jobs at their own expense." These raises would bring Queen's as much in line with other universities as finances in a university of this small size would permit, according to Ian Nordheimer, Chairman of the Honoraria Review Committee.

Money in return for service would fall into one of three categories - token, honoraria or salary - depending on the position involved. The report states "that a token is comparable to a reward, a salary is a straight business transaction, and an honorarium is intended as compensation."

Recommended to receive a salary are the Journal Business Manager, QSA Director, Director of Job Bank, Housing Manager, AMS office staff, Pub staff, constables, Editor of Who's Where, Secretary of Outer Council and the Chief Returning Officer.

Recommended to receive a token are the AMS Court Justices, the Queen's Bands staff, Outer Council members and Speaker, and the AMS Board of Directors

The report proposes that these people receive honoraria: Housing Committee members, AMS Executive, Commissioners, Journal Editor, Managing Editor and senior editors, QSA Director, Tricolor Editor, Concert Committee Chairman and Technical staff, Queen's Bands Manager, Clubs Manager and Information Bank Director.

A peek inside...

Health Centre
relocates page 3

A look at Clubs

page 5

CFRC - an alternative sound

page 8, 9

Paul Horn review

page 11

Blues thump Gaels

page 13

wat's hapnin'?

Pubs and Theatres

Frontenac - Muldoon's - Two Plus One
Frontenac - Finnegan's - Thom See
Commodore - Crazy Legs
401 Inn - Family Brown
Townhouse - London
Odcon - California Split
Capitol 1 - The Laughing Policeman
Capitol 2 - Machon County Line
Hyland - Eleven Harrow House
Domino Theatre - October 3 and 5 - The first show of the season is Music Hall. Tickets are available at Mahood's Drug Store, 156 Princess Street (Tel. 542-7307) Mondays through Saturdays, or at the Theatre (Tel. 542-9066) on playing nights. Tickets are $2.50 for adults and $1.75 for students.

Tuesday, October 1

11 a.m. - 2 p.m. - Blood Donor Clinic will be held in Victoria Hall.
5 p.m. - 8 p.m. - Blood Donor Clinic will be held in Victoria Hall.
5:45 p.m. - Coffee and dessert will be served in the Ban Righ Common Room.
6:00 p.m. - Ban Righ Fireside featuring pianist Valery Lloyd-Watts performing works by Beethoven, Chopin, Liszt, and Pinter. Admission is free and everyone is welcome.
7:00 p.m. - The Kingston Group of Amnesty International will hold its next meeting at Stirling Hall in room 401.
7:15 p.m. - 9:15 p.m. - Woman's Intramural Basketball will be held in the Bews Gym.
7:30 p.m. - Queen's University Amateur Radio Club will hold its first meeting in Goodwin Hall in room 454. All members and anyone interested in joining please attend. Movie Man's Wide World will be shown.
8:00 p.m. - Showing of Amnesty International Film Vietnam: A Question of Torture in Theatre C of Stirling Hall. All are welcome to attend and there is no admission charge.
9:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m. - Women's Intercollegiate Basketball Team Tryouts will be held in Ross Gym.
9:00 p.m. - David Holzman's Diary directed by Jim McBride will be presented in Ellis Auditorium by the Department of Film Studies. Admission is $1.00 at the door.
9:00 p.m. - Queen's Judo Club registration will be held in the Combatives Room at the Phys. Ed. Centre.

Wednesday, October 2

9:00 a.m. - 11:00 a.m. - Rev. Eric Howes (Anglican) will be at the Student Affairs Centre, 51 Queen's Crescent, phone number 547-6995 throughout the day for conversation or counselling.
2:00 p.m. - 4:00 p.m. - Rev. Ed Shea (Roman Catholic) will provide counselling or conversation at the Student Affairs Centre.
5:00 p.m. - Queen's at R.M.C. in soccer.
6:30 p.m. - 8:30 p.m. - Mr. Ken Gies (Lutheran) will be available for conversation or counselling at the Student Affairs Centre.
7:00 p.m. - 8:40 p.m. - Women's Intercollegiate Basketball Team Tryouts will be held in Bartlett Gym. Come on out if you are interested. Senior Coach - Maureen Bouris and Intermediate Coach -

Steve Seabrooke.
7:30 p.m. - Queen's Debating Union, International Centre General meeting.
8:00 p.m. - Guest speaker, Dr. Morton Shulman, Dunning Aug.
8:00 p.m. - Tak meeting will be held in the second floor common room of the Students' Union for new volunteers.
8:30 p.m. - Queen's Astronomy Club will hold its first meeting in room 323 of Ellis Hall.

Thursday, October 3

5:00 p.m. - 7:00 p.m. - Preview for gallery association members of the pieces available in the Picture Rental and Sale. Student membership $2.00. The sale and rentals will be held at Agnes Etherington Art Centre daily until October 10.
5:30 p.m. - 7:00 p.m. - Women's Intercollegiate Basketball Team Tryouts will be held in Ross Gym. Come out if you are interested.
7:00 p.m. - Picture Rental and Sale will open to the public at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre. Rentals daily until October 10.
7:00 p.m. - and 9:30 p.m. - Dynamite Chicken, a Collage of the 60's with Peter Max, Sha Na Na, Lenny Bruce and others will be presented by Cineguild and the Alma Mater Society in the Dunning Hall Auditorium. Admission is $1.00.
8:00 p.m. - Francois Truffaut's 400 Blows will be presented by the Queen's Department of Film Studies and Division of Concerts. A Hitchcock influenced movie 400 Blows is an intensely personal portrait of a child who has managed to survive, deprived of all endearments.
9:00 p.m. - 11:00 p.m. - Woman's Intramural Badminton will be held in Ross and Bartlett Gyms.
9:00 p.m. - Queen's Judo Club registration will be held in the Combatives Room at the Phys. Ed. Centre.

Upcoming Events

Friday, October 4 - An original story written by Alan Argue, The Straw Princess is a Canadian production for the whole family filled with song, dance comedy, color and magic, for the "young" and the "young at heart". Tickets are now available at the Grand Theatre Box Office for this Bucksaw Hollow Musical Production. Admission is $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for children. The performance Friday night will begin at 7:00 p.m. Other shows are on Saturday, October 5 at 2:30 p.m. and on Sunday, October 6 at 2:30 p.m.
Friday, October 4 and Saturday, October 5 - The Bitter Grounds Coffee House will present The Great Sneaky Waters from 8:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m.
Friday, October 4 - Artsci '78 will present A Roman Orgy featuring MRQ in Leonard Cafeteria from 8:30 p.m. - 1:30 a.m. Admission is $1.50 or $1.00 with an Artsci '78 card. Note: Only Romans in Togas will be allowed.
Saturday, October 5 - P.H.E.S.A. will present Jock Hop featuring Octavian Place - Grant Hall and Kingston Hall. Everyone is welcome. Admission is $1.50. Beer will be sold - 2 for $1.00 and 5 for $2.00.
Sunday, October 6 - Bike Ride and Corn Roast to be held on Wolfe Island. The ride will leave Hillel House at 1:00 p.m. and will be followed by a Sunday buffet in the Succah at the Synagogue.

Flair
PHOTOGRAPHIC
Has A Limited
Number of Appointments
Available for Graduation Portraits
or visit
Phone 542-7733 94 Brock St.
(Corner of Brock & Wellington)

VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S
GIFTS and BOOKS LTD.
282 Princess St.
KINGSTON 542-6676
Canadian made "TRYPIS"
BRIAR SANDBLASTED PIPES
Regular $11.95 AT VAN'S $8.88
1974 TIMEX SUPER SPECIAL
10 PER CENT DISCOUNT from 400 different watches to choose from, at Van's of course.
ADULT POCKET BOOKS regular $6.00 for 2, at Van's 2 for $2.98
STORE HOURS
OPEN Mon.-Fri. 9:30 am - 10 pm
Saturday 9:30 am - 9 pm
Sunday 12:00 noon - 9 pm

Vaghy
String Quartet
artists-in-residence at Queen's
SPECIAL CONCERT
Thursday October 3 Grant Hall
Works by Ives and Schoenberg
Guest Artists: Phyllis Mailing, soprano
& William Aide, piano
Tickets: $1 students
at Art Centre 547-6194
a Division of Concerts event

COMMODORE HOTEL
840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT
THIS WEEK: in our Lounge

Amateur Night every Wednesday
Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

Student Health Centre: relocated and improved

by Diane Provan
Queen's people can bid farewell to the Student Health Services at 187 Stuart Street. By October's end, the medical centre will be relocated in the new St. Lawrence building, directly opposite Victoria Hall.
The new clinic boasts such improvements as an extra spacious waiting room, fifteen individual offices reserved for medical and psychiatric consultations, three treatment rooms (eg. for immunizations), several bathrooms, medications and supplies rooms, staff lounge and library, and a group therapy room, plus a definite emphasis on over-all cheerfulness and comfort concerning decor. The nine medical offices extend along the left side of the building, and the six psychiatric (which also have wall-to-wall carpeting) along the right. The reception counter is extra-long so as to deal with those students who require medical or psychiatric consultation and others who simply seek information (eg. concerning medical insurance) at opposite ends.

In spite of the increase in space and facilities, the present Health Service staff will not be enlarged. It includes three full-time doctors, four part-time General Practitioners, two full-time psychiatrists, two resident psychologists, and a couple of psychoanalysts. Of the five nurses, one visits the Victoria Hall infirmary each morning, while a senior medical student is available at all times in the Leonard Hall Infirmary.
It is hoped that the new clinic will provide better access to specialists and quicker referrals. Dr. H. W. Greenidge hopes to have a couple of specialists (gynecology and orthopaedics) come to the clinic once a week. At the moment, Dr. Gauthier, an ophthalmologist, holds an eye clinic, once weekly. The Health Service offers comprehensive outpatient care, and everything is strictly confidential. Declared Dr. Greenidge, "We try to give them exactly the same service as we give our private patients." (All doctors at Health Services have private practices too.) The psychiatric services include counselling, psychotherapy, and aptitude and vocational testing.

Mr. Jack Armstrong could not emphasize enough that "students MUST HAVE their own insurance at age 21, no matter WHO is paying the premium." According to Mr. Armstrong, many Queen's students "think that because they're students OHIP's free." When asked if there were a large number of students lacking medical insurance, Mr. Armstrong replied, "There are more than there should be." To obtain insurance, Ontario students should apply within one month after their birthday, to avoid a three-month gap in their insurance coverage. Further information is available at Health Services.

Health Services are open from 9:00 AM to 11:30 AM, and from 1:30 to 5:00 PM. The medical services telephone number is 546-6106 (24 hours). The psychiatric services number is 547-2889. For ambulance service call 544-5555.

The 'X' Collection

by Steve Gareau
Those who are already getting buried in weekly assignments and term essays should take a break to the second floor of Douglas Library. A look into the special "X Collection" in the room behind the service counter of the Periodicals Department might provide an afternoon of sound reading enjoyment.
For the budding political or revolutionary types, the magazines Last Post, Ramparts, Realist, and Young Worker will prove invaluable. More underground types of papers such as Rolling Stone, Georgia Straight, Guerilla, Grape, Berkeley Barb, Root, White Power, Western Voice, Anarchy, and Alternate Society can also be found.

For those in the sociological or biological sciences, all of Playboy, Ms., Vogue, and Body Politic (a Gay Lib newspaper) are at one's disposal.
Mad, Harvard Lampoon, and Punch all provide reading with a more comical base. There is also a series of science fiction periodicals which includes Magazine of Fantasy and Science Fiction, Galaxy, as well as

Take a Beaver to lunch

Hearing the derogatory comments, especially regarding residence food, would lead one to believe that nothing positive occurs on campus. The major "beef" seems to be general poor organization on the part of Beaver Foods.

There are legitimate reasons for the long line-ups and wait for trays and food. Anita Dobbs, the manager of the Queen's franchise, commented that the new meal card system, instituted by Beaver Foods, is the main hold-up. Cards must be punched individually to cut down on free loading which posed a considerable problem last year.

The general shortage of things to work with also slows down the system. Ban Righ, as of Aug. 15, had only five hundred plates and a limited amount of cutlery. Utensils are on order from Great Britain but they will take six weeks to three months to get here. Students chatting with friends over dinner augments the problem.

The management of Beaver Foods feels students are reluctant to make suggestions or complaints, and welcomes any "feedback" from the residents.

Don't be late.....

Submissions for the design contest for the Kingston Uptown Business Association. $50. in merchandise is the first prize.

Tara Natural Foods.....
181 1/2 Princess St.
Silver Threads.....
417 Princess St.
Renaissance Music....
326 Princess St.

It's better to give
than to receive

October 1st, 2nd, and 3rd
Lower Vic

afternoon evening
11 am - 2 pm 5.00 - 8.00

Blood Donor Clinic

NAVAL RESERVE OFFICER TRAINING PLAN

After seeing us at Clubs Night have you given a thought to taking up the challenge? If you are interested, contact:

HMCS CATARAQUI
at 545-5872 (daytime)
or come down to the Kingston Armoury
Montreal St., on Tuesday nights
Think Naval Reserve
for a satisfying part-time career

Artsci '78
presents

A Roman Orgy an evening of

Dancing Drinking and Decadence
featuring
MRQ

Leonard Cafeteria Admission $1.50
Friday Oct. 4 $1.00 with Artsci
8:30 - 1:30 '78 card.

Only
Romans in Togas Allowed!

One man's Politics... is another man's folly

by Doug Bonnell

Criticizing the AMS makes good press. The student body relishes the latest resignation or controversy with masochistic delight. The Student Union rings with cries of, "Hit me with another Sheila McIntyre Affair". Kevin Van Koughnett's column "My Opinion" (but who cares anyway?) reeks of his own immediate, and most often unsubstantiated distaste for the AMS, almost as much as this column reeks of my distaste of Pete Trudeau.

It's time Queen's stopped treating it's heavies as ambitious egotists and started paying them not only a little more respect, but a lot more money. This university has one of the lowest rates of pay for student politicians in the province. On top of this is the need to realize that most heavies enter their jobs with little or no previous political experience or understanding of their position and spend the first three to four months experimenting with areas of influence and the established institutional relationships.

xxxx

AMS Vice-President John

Gray is one executive member who did come to office with previous political experience. In this case in the Conservative Party, and it shows. Gray is one of the most astute politicians on Council, handling himself superbly under fire and completely avoiding controversy, the only one of the three-member executive to do so. For example, if you disagree with the handling of Bus-It who do you blame—Druxerman, right? Most people were not even aware that Gray was in it up to his neck until his name snuck into print just recently.

xxxx

The (s) election of Marv Bloos as Speaker of the Outer Council, following the supposed resignation of John Duncan, raises some interesting questions as to the role of the Speaker. It is possible to categorize Speakers three ways. First the person who lacks the confidence to control a meeting despite his knowledge. Second, the person who through knowledge, calm determination and complete impartiality runs a meeting with the total respect of his colleagues. Lucien Lamoureux, the former Speaker of the House of Commons fits into this grouping. Finally there is the person who through wit, knowledge and sheer confidence converts the chair into a powerful political organ. Bloos, one of the most talented of all Queen's politicians fits in here. He may be one of the best Speakers we've had—but I don't agree with his interpretation of the position.

xxxx

The highlight of Thursday's meeting was the following exchange:

Mr. Gray: Mr. Speaker, I move that all profits from the vending machines in the Union washrooms be turned over to the Abortion and Birth Control Centre.

Mr. Druxerman (V-P, Operations): Mr. Speaker I move that the word vending be changed to prophylactic should the AMS set up pinball machines in the washrooms.

Mr. Huehn (External Affairs): How do you spell that?

Ms. Harper (ASUS President): P-r-o-p-h-y-l-a-c-t-i-c.

Mr. Stasiuk (Eng. Soc.): Point of order, Mr. Speaker. There is no such creature as a prophylactic machine. The word machine was changed to dispenser.

confuse words with realities. In particular, words appear to induce typological thinking. Since there are the words plant and animal, anomalous organisms, like slime molds, become somehow incomprehensible. Further a class of objects is often disposed with a simple label. Thus there are supposed to be "blacks", "students" and "politicians" irrespective of the fact that caucasians may be dark in colouring, a student is anyone who learns and we all behave in a political fashion at one time or another. And the fact that all persons lumped together as "blacks" and "students" and "politicians" are individuals, fundamentally dissimilar, seems to be ignored. 3) Generalizations, though they may be useful, are always false. False in the sense that there is usually at least one contradiction to the general rule. Protoman was a peculiar ape, an exception. But this misfit has become quite important. 4) All things are in process. What was "true" yesterday may not be "true" today. Thus in scientific journals all references are dated. 5) There are many values to things, not just good or bad, yes or no. Biology has taught us that there are many "good" ways to live as many as there are species. Each has a different norm. Some have many norms. Similarly we must realize that there is no single human ideal, rather there are many, many possible ways of life which are equally worthwhile.

But words are our best recourse when we must participate in the always difficult, often maddening, process of human communication. There is no exact truth to be expounded by you or I. But the convergence of our lies may in some hopeful, synergistic fashion contain the elements of a shared reality.

Allred Korzybski has termed such responses to words "semantic disturbances". During the thirties and forties Korzybski attempted "To purify the dialect of the tribe" of such reactions; his movement was termed General Semantics. Some of the basic tenets of General Semantics may be summarized as follows: 1) The map is never the territory. Any set of symbols can never impart as much information about the objects represented as they actually contain. Thus all symbolic descriptions are, in a sense, lies, being gross simplifications. 2) However, most people seem to

by Aloysius Satverbum

Synchrony: a "knife" isn't a knife; a "rose" isn't a rose; "reality" isn't reality; "truth" isn't truth. Diachrony: Words are always false. Their only use is their value in conveying shared falsehoods. This article is an attempt to make you believe the above falsehood.

People adapt to their environment on the basis of what they have learned (retained information). The information retained by each individual is of two kinds: tacit knowledge. Tacit knowledge, defined last week, isn't communicable in words. Symbolic knowledge is usually verbal, mathematical or diagrammatic. Mathematical and diagrammatic knowledge may be conveyed exactly; such communication methods being taught formally.

Verbal knowledge is communicated with relatively less rigor. This is because the preverbal child must acquire the ability to speak and think in verbal symbols through tacit learning, the only kind he is capable of. Thus infants couple tacit and symbolic responses as they learn language. Mathematics and diagrams are not subject to such confounding because they were learned on a symbol equals symbol basis, being explained using the already established verbal symbolic medium.

The coupling of unconscious cues (i.e., tacit knowledge) to language renders language a highly untrustworthy method of

STUDENTS

We have a large selection of new and used

Beds, Chests, Etc.
At Low Low Prices

Turk's Used Furniture
and Antiques

281 Princess St. — 546-5267
OVER 60 YEARS HONEST DEALING

THANKSGIVING
Going home to Momma
with

Queen's Bus Service
Buses:
Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal
Tickets:
John Orr Room ( Union)
544-5777

General Meeting for Queen's Student Liberals

Oct. 2, 8 p.m.
Stirling 501

Tom Trogton,
guest speaker

253 Princess St.
UNISEX HAIR DESIGN
Appointments available for your convenience
542-7637

Health without wealth

by Connie McLeese

If the amount of alcohol and beer you've been consuming during the past three weeks is beginning to show, or your weekends aren't quite as raucous as you hoped for, the Queen's Physical Education Complex may offer a few solutions.

Depending upon your skills, motivation and interests, there is a diversified selection of activities to choose from. The Recreational Clubs range from modern dance groups (to catch your plumber) to the martial arts (to slow down your plumber).

If you're weary of signing your life away to one of the clubs, you can embark on a short term (five week) agreement under the auspices of the Sports Skills Instruction Program. Qualified instructors will teach various physical activities (within the bounds of decency) such as swimming paddle ball, squash, classical ballet, trampoline, skating et cetera. This session is already filled. The next opportunity to sign up will be Jan. 6 to 9.

Perhaps classes and meetings are too regimented for your life style. Nearly all facilities are open at Queen's students and affiliates with a reservation. These include squash and tennis courts, dance studio, gymnastics mezzanine, weight training room, and projectile range. The Theological and West Campus tennis courts operate on a first come first "serve" basis. The pool and arena (opening Oct. 10) have regular free hours which are posted. Your lovely esoteric university existence won't be disturbed by the prying public since outside of special groups, only people with Queen's student cards are allowed to use the facilities. Friends can obtain temporary memberships for one dollar per day provided they're over 18 and well trained.

For further information regarding programs and reservation procedures call the Athletics Office at 547-2713.

Phor photo phreaks:
Classes on How-To

A camera is only a tool and it is the proper use of it that produces good pictures. When we see a picture we lack the following components of the original "life" appearance: three dimensionality, motion, scale, surrounding space and time and other senses and emotions, all of which were influencing the viewer's mind at the time of the taking of the picture.

The course offered will teach how many of these deficiencies can be overcome by correct use of a camera. It will also explain another potential source of problems - the difference between what the camera lens sees and what the human eye sees (or appears to see).

The Queen's Camera Club photography course starts at 7 p.m. on October 2nd, in Stirling Hall Theatre A.

THE BIGGER... THE BETTER? A DIAMOND FABLE

The moral of our story is simple - don't judge a diamond by size alone. Quality not quantity decides the value of a diamond. We can show you how cutting, clarity and color determine the worth of a diamond. You'll dazzle with pride knowing you've chosen the best like the experts do - and that's no fable!

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE

JEWELLERS

168 PRINCESS STREET

KINGSTON, ONTARIO

Learning network:
the illusive idea

A group of Queen's students will be meeting on October 3rd to plan the development of a learning network. A learning network is an ad hoc structure joining persons who are interested in aiding one another pursue their intellectual interests. Such aid primarily consists of sharing books, references and friendly proffs (alias, "resource persons"). In addition, two or three-person discussions are also important facets of a learning network, though individual curiosity is always at the core.

The topics covered by a learning network depend entirely on the interests of the individuals involved. Generally, past inquiries have concerned the frontier areas of both the humanities and science, especially at the interface.

Last year a learning network was started at Elrond College. This year the second-generation learning network will be open to all Queen's students and will operate with the cooperation of both Elrond College and the Canadian Centre for Integrative Education. These cognate organizations will provide speakers, books and other learning materials.

The meeting is to be held Oct. 3, at 8:00 pm on the sixth floor common room of Elrond College. (The common room is visible from the elevator stop on 6.) The idea of the learning network will be explained more fully, a schedule of speakers and other events will be discussed. One and all are cordially invited.

Do you like yourself and other people?
Are you sensitive?
Are you a good listener?
If so-we need you.

Come to our introductory meeting.
Wed. Oct. 2 at 8 pm.
Old Common Room -2nd floor
Student's Union.

Editor-in-Chief - Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager - Terry Collins
Managing Editor - Don McClelland
News Editor - Sarah Yarnell
Features Editors - Wendy Reynolds, Laurie Gibson
Arts Editors - Kerry White, Peter Haworth
Contributors - John Gibson, Paul Luke, Michael Kregan, Leslie Guikroder, Nancy Flood, Sue Bennett, Connie McLeese, John Edwards, David Selander, Steve Gareau, Diane Provan, Stu Beck, Barb Nyland, Jane Gutteridge, Ann Robertson, Steve Loughhead, Alison Dickey, and Thanks, Robin! Photo Editor - John Cameron
Photography - John Butterfield, Peter Cass, John Wilmer, Keith Bours, Fred Van Driel
Backpage - Val Cotton

Comment: What can be said at 4.00 A.M. NO COMMENT!

Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (413) 547-1484. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

STUDENT SALE
of NORTH STAR JOGGERS

MEN'S
first quality genuine suede
JOGGERS

Navy upper, non-kid, non-mark sole sizes 6½ to 12
Regular 16.95
9.99

LADIES'
first quality
genuine leather
JOGGERS

White with blue stripes
sizes 5-10
Regular 15.95
9.99

FREE!
White Gym Socks
with the purchase of these men's or ladies' joggers

You must present your student identification card.

A.M.S. PAGE

What's the purpose?

The purpose of the AMS is often stated as being "to serve the needs of the students". What are the needs of the students? Are they just the needs of services such as the typing service, the Pub, the newspaper, or are they something totally intangible?

Certainly students look to the AMS for help with their housing, financial and legal needs, but what about those needs which students never articulate and demand because they are unaware that they truly need them?

Marcuse, in his book One-Dimensional Man, expands on this idea. He states that the 'productive apparatus', or in other words, the modern, technocratic society "determines not only socially needed occupations, skills, and attitudes but also individual needs and aspirations." Too often society imposes a system of living and thinking onto people so that they become so immersed in the system that they never escape from it to see what values and attitudes they should have in order to better their lives, or for that matter, society.

In getting back to the university scene, what are these unarticulated and unconscious needs of the students? What many students need is to be exposed to as many different viewpoints, interests, and lifestyles as possible. I believe that most of the trouble in the world stems from the fact that people lack empathy and understanding of other people. People become so wrapped up in their own interests, goals, and lifestyles, that they can not and will not accept any people who deviate from themselves. The result is misunderstanding and unnecessary hatred and suffering.

University is the only place in one's life where one is surrounded by such a diverse set of people in a concentrated space. If people used the university to openly expose themselves to as many different people and ideas as possible, I believe we would have intelligent, openminded and understanding citizens leading the community. Not only would these graduates know the technicalities of operating facets of society, but they would be working with the best interests of most people in mind. For the betterment of society we do not need intelligent, self-centered, and narrow individuals, but broad-minded and sympathetic intellectuals.

Paradoxically, the university has the capability of creating both types of individuals. Because universities demand students to specialize in particular fields, many students are channelled into talking with the same people about the same subjects, often with the similar viewpoints and goals. This can lead to a very one-dimensional outlook on life. If at the same time however, students took the time and energy to explore beyond their specialized disciplines and friends, and university scene could become a viable pathway to the betterment of society.

But how does the AMS fit into all of this? To me, the AMS can be the spoon in the big pot. The AMS should try to mix up and stir the different people of the various disciplines together. Because most students are unconscious of the need to be exposed to various interests, the AMS is the one body which oversees all interests of students, and which is responsible for satisfying this unarticulated need. Forcibly, slyly, or otherwise, the AMS should be creating situations where students will find it almost impossible to remain untouched in their self-centered shell.

The Last Lecture Series and Speakerships have been successful in exposing students to new ideas. However, a lot more can be done towards this goal. A few more ideas are as follows: to have open debates or forums where a variety of subjects can be discussed, whether it be academically, politically, or socially based, among students involved in a variety of fields; have an exchange of professors for a day; or something which might be more feasible would be to have displays by different departments around campus, i.e. have an engineering or medical display in the Arts and Science complex. This list could grow much longer if the people of the AMS would free themselves of their petty technical duties and apply their energies to this line of thinking.

I am not advocating that the AMS should abandon those needs which are articulated and conscious to the students, but once a system is set up to provide a service, then other students who are skilled in that particular operation can take over. This would free the student-elected members of the AMS to devise ways to satisfy the intangible needs of the students.

All in all, we must realize that university is one of the most unique situations that life can offer anyone. Therefore, when we are among the lucky few who can experience it, we must milk it for all its worth.

Arts Festival Convener

Under the Education Commission, the position of coordinator of the 'FESTIVAL OF THE ARTS' is open.

Please submit names to the AMS Office in the basement of the Students' Union by 5 p.m. Friday, Oct. 4.

Those interested in working with the festival are also asked to leave their names with the Education Commission as soon as possible.

Outer Council Meeting

Thursday, Oct. 3
McLaughlin Room
Students' Union
7:30 p.m.

Agenda Items:

- 1) OFS Report
- 2) Honoraria
- 3) Budget Debate

CLUBS FACULTY ORGANIZATIONS DEPARTMENTS AND OTHER PEOPLE PLANNING SPECIAL EVENTS:

PLEASE CONTACT INFORMATION BANK CONCERNING YOUR EVENTS, KEY PERSONNEL AND CONTACT METHODS.

ADDRESS TO: INFORMATION BANK
c/o ALMA MATER SOCIETY STUDENTS' UNION
OR DROP INTO THE JOHN ORR ROOM IN THE STUDENTS' UNION. CALL 547-5722 FOR MORE INFORMATION.

24K

Announces their 1974-75 Volunteer Training Program. TAK will hold its first training session on Wednesday October 2nd at 8:00 pm. in the second floor common room, Students' Union. All those interested in becoming a volunteer and all continuing volunteers must attend this session. We welcome everyone. For further information concerning TAK, phone 544-1771 and ask them. See you on Wednesday.

Guest Speaker

Dr. Morton Shulman, M.L.A.

8:00 PM

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 9

DUNNING HALL AUDITORIUM

QUEEN'S DEBATING UNION

General Meeting - Wed. Oct. 2
International Centre - 7:30 pm.

All active and prospective members welcome.

This week's Topic: 'Resolved that every man has his price'

letters to the editor

Cruddy Coffee, Red Tape

Dear Editor:

AMS Slum Landlords, Clean Up Your Act!

Two weeks ago we received a letter from the AMS Housing people informing us that the boat sitting in our front yard must be moved as it contravened our lease agreement with them. Yes, we are one of those groups of people who were lucky (?) enough to have won the AMS lottery two years ago. At that time it was commonly believed that the AMS were the best landlords in town as not only did they charge the least of any landlord, but being students, they were able to sympathize with student complaints concerning the various problems which arise

unclassifieds

More On Pages 10 & 16

DO YOU LIKE TO NIBBLE? Come ready to pick some grapes at the Roman Grapes this Friday, October 4th, in Leonard Cafeteria. Once starts at 8:30 but only true Romans in proper togas need come. Admission is $1.00 a head for ARTSCL '81 cardholders. Others $1.50.

BITTER GROUNDS IS BACK! The Great Sneezy Waters and his excellent band appear this Friday and Saturday night upstairs in Clark Hall's new lounge. Tickets are $2.50 and go on sale in the John Orr Room and Eng. Soc. office today. Liqueur, Beer, Coffee, and Tea.

WED. 2 OCTOBER 8:00 p.m. TAK starts its 1974-75 Volunteer Training Program: Second Floor Common Room, Union. All potential and old volunteers must attend this session. For further information call TAK 544-1771.

TO THE GUY WHO tried to run me over Saturday night at Union and University as I was taking care of a wounded cat. Don't worry - it's dead (and buried).

ORGIES ARE RARE, wine at dances is rarer, and slave auctions are rarest. We promise you them all, so come one come all and have a ball. At Leonard Hall, Friday, Oct. 4, 8:30.

WHERE WERE YOU when the lights went out during the Roman Orgy? Bidding for an attractive slave, and dancing to the music of MRQ? or putting your legs back on? Find out in Leonard Hall, Friday Oct. 4 at 8:30.

FOR SALE: Texas Instrument SR10 calculator. Price negotiable. Call Kathy at 549-5750.

FOUND: One black dog - part Cocker Spaniel in the vicinity of 13 Sydney St. Call Kathy at 549-5750.

THE LADIES OF 221 Collingwood (Linda, Sharon, Jennifer, Nora, Kathy) wish to invite all their friends and patrons to a housewarming party on Fri. Oct. 4. We're selling beer or BYOB.

SCIENCE '44 COOP is an independent co-ed student-run organization embodying co-operative ideals. The practicality and success of these ideals are demonstrated in the operation of the three central kitchens where each member works for 2-2 hours a week 544-5506.

GAEL GROUP 50 - Reunion time! Saturday, Oct. 5 at 11:00 A.M. - Warm up for the football game at Tom's - 195 Collingwood. Beer Available. See you there!

JELLO WAR to be waged Oct. 5, 8:30 p.m.; Oress Formal. Ammo compliments of Beaver Foods Inc.

from time to time. In this letter we plan to set the record straight.

Early in September, before classes started, we made up a list of about 15 repairs which should be made on our house, some of which were on last year's list. Little things like a back door which won't lock because it's frame is rotten, a missing pane of glass in the front door which allows icy winter winds to circulate freely throughout the house, missing tiles in the kitchen floor, a water heater which pollutes the water with chunks of crud, an antique electrical wiring system and walls with holes big enough to put your fist through were all included. To date one fixture in the kitchen has been replaced.

Upon inquiring about why further action hasn't been taken we have been told that the AMS executive is holding up on the repairs until the housing service issues are settled. Well at least when Shiela McIntyre was in charge of things, she came around and looked at the house and tried to do something about it.

Therefore we would like to welcome you, Messrs. Druxer, Wolman and Gray to drop around 187 University anytime for a tour and free cup of crud coffee. Wear a heavy coat and don't worry we'll use the stove to heat the water instead of the kettle because we're running out of fuses. If you're really brave enough to showup, bring some of your red tape. We hear that it has amazing strength properties and sounds just like what we need to hold the walls up.

Sincerely
Norman Bruce, Steven Zelikovitz, David Austin, Derek Beamer, Lorne Carson, 187 University Ave. (enter at your own risk!)

Oppressed Majority

Dear Editor:

What is normal?

We represent what we would like to believe is a majority of the students on campus in that we are not Jesus freaks, homosexuals or communists. We are, however, getting tired of reading about or being pestered by those who are one of these persuasions. We do not dispute their right to think or behave in a perverse manner, but we believe that they have been receiving proportionately excessive publicity.

It is time that the HEALTHY members of the student body were heard from. Now you have heard from us!

Sign
(We'll print our names if you'll print your's Terry!)

ASUS

2 ASUS Reps on AMS (1 yr. term)
(term runs until spring elections)

2 ASUS senators (1 yr.)
(term runs until August, 1975)

Nominations to be submitted by 12 noon, Friday, October 12 in ASUS box in AMS office, and must have nominee's signature plus signatures of 25 other Arts and Science students

WANTED:

People to work on

HOME COMING '74

Semi formal

Cartooning ability and enthusiasm most welcome call SUE SEARLE at 544-8679 or PETE ROSE at 544-1671

AMEY'S TAXI

546-1111

CAMPUS MOVIES
present

DYNAMITE CHICKEN

a collage of the 60's with Lenny Bruce, Joan Baez, Sha Na Na and many more

Thursday October 3

Dunning Hall 7 and 9:30 pm

Admission $1:00 per person

LONDY'S DRUGS

Special rates
to Queen's Students

471 Princess at University Ave.
464 Princess
Reddendale
Lasalle Park
Amherstview

Delivery Available

546-3696

OPEN 7 AM TO 11 PM DAILY

Division of Concerts

INTERNATIONAL CONCERTS SERIES
(Grant & Dunning Halls)

BUY SERIES TICKETS NOW

Grant: $7, $11, $15 students
Dunning: $9 students

Five Concerts in each series

Box Office at Art Centre
547-6194

A·S·U·S· ORIENTATION FEEDBACK

Wed. Oct. 2 7:30-9:30 pm.

Third Floor Common Room (Union)

Anyone with suggestions, criticisms, ideas, etc. whether you were a Gael, Frosh, Helper or Onlooker-

PLEASE COME

Queensradio:

the varied format

and

alternative sound

CFRC
am-fm

- richard bronskill

by Wendy Reynolds

One of the oldest radio stations in Canada, student-run or otherwise, broadcasts from Queen's University. That, of course, is CFRC. Billing itself as "the alternative sound to Top-40 background noise", Queensradio has been providing such a service since 1922. Actually, the date of the first broadcast is open to some dispute. Apparently the first official broadcast was a football game, but somehow previous to that, an aspiring musician managed to shanghai the equipment to serenade listeners with a coronet solo. There is no record of what listeners' response was.

CFRC has a pretty impressive set-up, and one that is unique in several respects. Aside from the fact that it is the third-oldest broadcasting station in the country, it is distinct among other university stations. As one of the four student-operated stations in Canada, CFRC holds the honour of being the only AM on-air campus radio. The other three, at the universities of Toronto, Edmonton and Saskatoon, broadcast on FM frequencies only, but CFRC sends out the waves in both. Other universities have stations of sorts, but these are all established on a carrier current set-up, which means that the broadcasts are fed through a cable to given areas of the campus and received in these specific places by speakers. This sort of arrangement is now licensed by CRTC and many of these universities are hoping to go FM with full broadcasting capabilities in the near future.

The Canadian Radio and Television Commission frowns on student-run broadcasting stations on the premise that they provide no continuity from year to year. Queensradio has managed by and large to escape much criticism from the Commission, however, as it is not funded by the student's council as other campus stations are and as well is run by salaried personnel. Steve Cutway, the station manager of CFRC is a full-time employee who acts as an intermediary between the University and the station.

There have been problems with government agencies in the past nonetheless. In 1970, the governmental powers decided that no agency of the provincial government could hold a private licence. Queen's, however, had royal charter dating back several years which denied CFRC as a provincial agency. Initially, the Ontario government would not honour the charter as superseding the more recent decision, but eventually they were persuaded to regard it in this light. Queen's University owns CFRC's licence, so it is they who are responsible to the CRTC and other government agencies for the station's operation. Cutway, directly responsible to the Principal of the University, must control what goes on over the air so that nothing which could be construed as slander or libel or the like is played or spoken by one of the student broadcasters. "Our job", says Cutway, "is to help service part of the public relations arm of the University".

The station was established in the twenties as an offshoot of the electrical engineering department to give students practical training in their field. The technical work is still handled by students of this department, so that the volunteer student broadcasters can devote themselves entirely to the production of their shows. Within the flexible framework under which the station operates, the club members can do the kind of show which appeals to their own specific interests. As a result, the format is varied, ranging from classical programming through folk and jazz to rock music, with several specialized programmes interspersed throughout. Often, one or two hours will be devoted entirely to one performer or group of musicians, if they have produced enough records both quantitatively and qualitatively. In the recent past, a special Rolling Stones feature was presented, giving hours of listening pleasure to fans of the Devil In Carnate Jagger and his assistant Lucifers.

Broadcasting hours are limited by the fact that the station's transmitters in Fleming Hall interfere with experiments of the Electrical Engineering students in the same building. Through an agreement with that department, CFRC can broadcast Thursday through Sunday only. If anything deemed worthy of broadcast should happen outside of these imposed time limits, special permission must be gained from the Electrical Engineering Department to do so. Although these people are generally lenient in granting such permission, and rearranging their schedules to accommodate it, Cutway feels that "CFRC is a thorn in their side" and wishes the University would take steps to eliminate the thorn. Such steps, however, would entail the removal of the station from its present location in Carruthers Hall to a new site somewhere off campus and the cost of this is prohibitive, in the University's view, at the present time.

Often administrative personnel make requests for special broadcasts without the knowledge that this requires permission from an outside source. A recent request exemplifies this problem well. The Macintosh-Corry complex will be officially opened within the next few weeks and the administration wishes this to be broadcast. Dr. Watts' installation as Principal and fall convocation are also upcoming later in the term, events which warrant coverage. One administrative official made plans for CFRC to be there, while unaware of the fact that contact with the Electrical Engineers was necessary first. While the official was apologetic when his error was pointed out, it is this sort of thing which causes tension between the station and the Engineering Department. Cutway was glad in one sense that the incident occurred, though because it drew attention to the problems faced by CFRC and as the station manager points out, "we need university support at the level where it matters."

Expansion really is necessary at the station. The operation was moved to Carruthers Hall in the fifties, and the entire bottom floor was taken over by last year. This enlargement of their operable space was accompanied by an updating of their facilities. There are separate broadcast rooms for AM and FM, and several storage rooms for housing the massive record collection. All of the records are albums, never singles, since CFRC doesn't cater to the musical taste implied by a collection of 45's. They have a collection of upwards of twelve thousand albums which is considered the largest private collection between Toronto and Montreal. About half of the albums are given to the station gratis by the various distributors.

Where Cutway and company would like to see growth is in the addition of stereo facilities. Currently there is a stereo console at the station which will be hooked up by Christmas hopefully. But this does not mean that broadcasting will start in stereo at this time, since such a move requires the purchase of special transmitters which would necessarily have to be located off-campus. This would involve as well a large financial commitment from the University which they are unable or unwilling to provide at the time since it would require over four times the annual budget which CFRC now has to establish. Pending the day when the University hands over the one hundred thousand dollars, two years of CFRC red tape would have to be waded through before stereo broadcast could begin. For this reason, CFRC is hoping to get the financial commitment soon. If the transmitter site was moved, they could broadcast twenty-four hours a day, all day, because there would be no interference with Fleming Hall. In short, operation would begin on a much grander scale.

Financial problems are plaguing operations at the moment as well. CFRC is financed through the University's trust funds, which make up about four per cent of Queen's annual budget. A small percentage of this goes to Queensradio, but it doesn't seem to be enough. No money accrues to the station from the annual student interest fees, although they are hoping to get about twenty-five cents per student in the future. One of the big costs the broadcasting of football games from other universities. Phone lines must be set up so that the sportscasters phone in their play-by-play of the games. Renting open lines from Ma Bell must be done on a monthly rate, rather than just for the specific day in question. It costs close to one hundred and twenty-five dollars for each game, exclusive of travel expenses for the announcers. Since the broadcasting of away games of the Golden Gaels is tradition with CFRC, the first broadcast way back there in '22 being a football game, the station is unwilling to let financial problems interfere with or even prohibit completely such a service. They depend completely upon student donations to finance these games, but often not enough revenue comes from this source.

Queensradio itself is a tradition on this campus, and with the community as a whole. Discriminating listeners in a twenty mile radius of Carruthers Hall can pick up the AM signal put out by CFRC. Derek Redmond, one of the student announcers, aptly describes the service they provide when he says, "at times Queensradio lacks professional polish, but it makes up for this with a freshness and a real desire to communicate with the listeners - to produce an 'alternative sound'".

- ion willmer

unclassifieds

More On Pages 7 & 16

INTERESTED IN THE MUSIC of the 70's and 80's in the big band sound for your dance? If so contact W. J. Babe (542-1920) or D. G. Hallam (542-9740) for bookings. Also more modern stylings, Latin, etc. available.

LATERAL THINKING: Do you have an interest in Lateral Thinking? Are you interested in being associated with the Cognitive Research Institute? If so, drop us a line telling us about your interest in Lateral Thinking. To: Cognitive Research Institute, R.R. 3, Wakefield, Quebec.

STUDENT FLIGHTS to Vancouver at Christmas.

Dec. 21-Jan. 03 $159 round trip
Hurry! seats are limited.

Contact: AOSC
Contact: 44 St. George St.
Contact: Toronto, Ont. M5S 2E4

Contact: Tel: 962-8404

or your local Student Council office.

FLIGHTS TO EUROPE at Christmas

$249.00 and up-Youth Fares Group

Flights.

Contact: AOSC

Contact: 44 St. George St.

Contact: Toronto, Ont. M5S 2E4

Contact: Tel: (416) 962-8404 or your local student council office.

FOR SALE: REMOVABLE Black

hardtop for any year MGB sports car $175 or best offer.

CHRISTMAS FLORIDA TRIPS are coming. watch for Queen's Ex-curtion Club notices or visit us in the John Orr Room in the Union.

542-5777.

PISTIL CLUB: Meets Wednesday nights 9:00-11:00 and Sunday afternoons 2:00-4:00. Anyone interested is welcome.

BEING HOMOSEXUAL OR

LESBIAN need not be a problem.

Call Terry Watson, 542-2836 or write Student Affairs Centre c/o

Terry Watson.

FOUND: 5 keys at last Thursday night

beer bash at arena. Call John, 546-9464, when I'm in.

SCIENCE '84 CO-OP has nothing to do with science. It's an exciting chance to have a say in policies affecting their living conditions. The members of Science '84 are their own landlords in effect. This gives them a great deal of freedom in deciding how the co-operative is run. If you'd like to know more please call 544-4506 weekday

mornings.

SKI ASPEN from $269.00 week tours-

January, February, March.

Contact: AOSC, 44 St. George St.,

Toronto, Ont. M5S 2E4, Tel: (416)

962-8404, or your local student Council Office.

Gael Group 41: Have a good year.

Susan, Karen and Bruce.

QUEEN'S RIFLE CLUB 1st meeting and practise Thurs. Oct. 3 in Projectile Range in the Phys. Ed.

Centre.

WANTED ARTIST: 1/2 JACKET size

40. Must be in good condition. Call 544-3339.

TAK VOLUNTEER TRAINING

Program starts tomorrow, Wed.,

Oct. 2. All old volunteers and those interested in becoming volunteers should attend. Second floor common room, Union. 8:00 p.m.

INGO: WE STILL THINK you have a clue bum... From the "Be Kind to your Friend" fans.

BOOST THE GAELS! Get your official

Booster hat, ribbons, pennants and stadium bags, all at the Campus

Bookstore.

QUEEN'S OUTING CLUB MEETING

Tuesday night at 7:30 in Room 224

Jeffrey Hall. For all new members and for those interested in going on Thanksgiving weekend canoe trip to Algonquin.

FREE: THREE MALE KITTENS.

Take your pick. 7 weeks old.

Phone 542-2778 and ask for Ray.

BABYSITTER FOR THURSDAY

morning 9:00 - 12:00. One child, $1 per hour. Phone 542-4294.

TUTORIAL PROGRAMME: urgently needs volunteers to tutor children on a one-to-one basis. Only one and a half hours are required each week. Please come into the S.V.B.

office if you are interested.

VOLUNTEERS ARE NEEDED to befriend people recently released from KPM and who are now working in the community. Hours flexible. Come into the S.V.B.

office in the Union (University ave, entrance) and find out more about the programme.

TWO MOTORCYCLE HELMETS for sale. Phone Bob at 544-9988 lunch time or evenings.

FOR SALE: SINGLE BED and mattress (in excellent condition). Please call 542-4825.

ALL P.H.E. STUDENTS want to meet P.H.E. students! Mixing Bowl is the happening. Oct. 1 is the night. McArthur Pub is the place. 50c is the charge with a P.H.E. card and $3.50 without. A live band and all P.H.E. students will be your entertainment.

CAMPUS KITS now available at the Campus Bookstore. Only 99c

FOUND: Green fountain pen on Earl between University and Aberdeen. Call 544-2823.

ROOM AVAILABLE FOR GIRL in large luxurious and furnished house with three other friendly, charming, tidy, etc. girls. Rent very reasonable - large kitchen, dining room and living room. Please call 542-4825 or drop by for a free tour. 404 Albert St.

FOR SALE: 1 Pioneer SA-9100 stereo amp, 1 Pioneer PL-120 turntable, 2 Altec 890C's, 1 Marantz 1860 stereo amp, 1 Dual 1216 turntable, 2 JBL 100's and 4 cheap speakers also. Call 544-4197.

ANY STUDENT INTERESTED in buying a barely worn Science '77

THUMBS UP FOR the orgiastic rituals and rituals of our glorious forlathers. Wear your leas to the Roman Orsy this Friday October 4th. The cost of debauchery runs a mere dollar for ARTSCI '78 cardholders. Non-cardholding members $1.50.

FOR SALE: 1 Pioneer SA-9100 stereo amp, 1 Pioneer PL-120 turntable, 2 Altec 890C's, 1 Marantz 1860 stereo amp, 1 Dual 1216 turntable, 2 JBL 100's and 4 cheap speakers also. Call 544-4197.

ANY STUDENT INTERESTED in buying a barely worn Science '77

THUMBS UP FOR the orgiastic rituals and rituals of our glorious forlathers. Wear your leas to the Roman Orsy this Friday October 4th. The cost of debauchery runs a mere dollar for ARTSCI '78 cardholders. Non-cardholding members $1.50.

FOR SALE: 1 Pioneer SA-9100 stereo amp, 1 Pioneer PL-120 turntable, 2 Altec 890C's, 1 Marantz 1860 stereo amp, 1 Dual 1216 turntable, 2 JBL 100's and 4 cheap speakers also. Call 544-4197.

ANY STUDENT INTERESTED in buying a barely worn Science '77

jacket, is asked to phone 544-4276, and ask for John.

WHAT HAPPENED TO YOU on the way to the Roman Orsy, Your toga all off? Someone swiped your fig leaf? If any of these happened to you, barter for a slave and get her (or him) to replace them for you: 8:30 Oct. 4 Leonard Hall.

PURPLE JESUS: For the degenerates in gael groups 33, 45, 54, 56 and 97 - a giant warm-up party next Saturday mornin We'll phone you sometime week.

THUMBS UP FOR the orgiastic rituals and rituals of our glorious forlathers. Wear your leas to the Roman Orsy this Friday October 4th. The cost of debauchery runs a mere dollar for ARTSCI '78 cardholders. Non-cardholding members $1.50.

FOR SALE: 1 Pioneer SA-9100 stereo amp, 1 Pioneer PL-120 turntable, 2 Altec 890C's, 1 Marantz 1860 stereo amp, 1 Dual 1216 turntable, 2 JBL 100's and 4 cheap speakers also. Call 544-4197.

ANY STUDENT INTERESTED in buying a barely worn Science '77

Hoechst thinks ahead

Helping Build Canada

Products and ideas from Hoechst have touched and improved the quality of people's lives in every area around the world in a hundred countries on six continents. As an affiliate of the worldwide Hoechst organizations Canadian Hoechst Limited has a full century of research and achievement to draw upon. In Canada, Hoechst is an autonomous company employing Canadians to serve Canadian needs.

Hoechst in Canada concerns itself with supplying both the present and future needs of Canadians. The range of products and services covers the spectrum through industrial chemicals, dyestuffs, plastics, printing plates, human and veterinary medicines, pharmaceuticals, and textile fibres. Hoechst products and know-how in these fields, combined with a large international fund of experience, have given the company a reputation for expertise which takes constant striving to live up to. Hoechst thinks ahead.

Imagination steers the ship

Imagination is a prime source of the new ideas Hoechst uses constantly in order to keep developing better products — more effective medicines, better chemical and industrial materials. Imagination is only half the battle, but when good ideas are properly teamed with the discipline of applied research, they constitute a formidable force in the search for improved products in every area of modern life.

HOECHST

Canadian Hoechst Limited
4045 Cole Valley
Montreal 383 Quebec
40 Lesmill Road
Don Mills, Ontario

Ideas: The spark we run on

Hoechst develops a constant stream of new ideas to keep its research pointed in the right directions. Ideas about what is needed, ideas about what is possible, ideas about what is probable in the light of a constantly changing, ever-increasing body of basic knowledge.

Paul Horn: A serene and graceful artist

by Paul Luke

Paul Horn and his band brought a pleasing if ever so slightly starched brand of jazz to Queen's on Sunday Night. Horn's musical idols are serenity and grace and these qualities permeated all of his music although he was assuredly not insensitive to other varieties of infection. Although the concert did not attain any awesome heights of technical virtuosity and any intensity was carefully muted, the bright tranquility of the playing forgave all.

Horn's concert was very much a collective success. The band's playing was generally skilful and self-assured although Horn and his pianist Ron Johnston cast longer musical shadows than the rest. Tom Hazlett on bass, Kat Hendrix on drums and guitarist Terry Frewer thrust things along in an agreeable unobtrusive manner, while Horn and Johnston shared the most memorable solos.

A composure and a reluctance to strain characterized the greater body of the group's stylistic ramblings. Horn toched on a lot of bases without becoming a master of or a slave to any one of them. The two Chick Corea renditions were blessed with brisk, even treatments and a polished foray into reggae was equally praiseworthy. An unaffected recreation of Bill Evan's "Children's Song" captured all the inherent child-like beauty of that composition. The second flute sonata of Bach was unexpected and delightful.

There were two points at which one might venture to ascribe something of brilliance to the concert. One was an unaccompanied flute solo by Horn which filled Grant Hall with a multitude of silver voices. The haunting, early morning shiver of that performance suggested that Horn has had serious conversations with bel canto loons as well as killer whales.

The second set culminated in an improvised work of quiet and intimate murmurings. The song moved along in a series of thoughtful melodic parries, ably presided over by the rich tones of Horn's bass flute. Horn himself seemed most at ease in the slower reflective songs and some of his most clear and incisive statements were made at moments when tempos decelerated.

There were a few low points of comparative insignificance. In a general effort to avoid extravagance and overstatement the band occasionally descended into a kind of complacent noodling. Frequently the solos by the respective instruments seemed to recover a lot of the same ground and repetition was especially a problem with Terry Frewer who exhibited an over-reliance on trills and one note stutters. Horn acknowledged the youth of his audience and his band without grovelling before it in his selections from younger composers like Corea but his one concession to overt rock, "Long Time Gone" was a sadly castrated thing, redecorated but not recreated. The polite whimsy smoothness of the performance grew a trifle predictable as did the group's close allegiance to traditional major and minor modes but on the whole even the least successful numbers had something to recommend them.

Horn's concert was a soothing, peaceful experience and within its own limits was eminently enjoyable. It was a warm, special smile and there can never be very much wrong with that.

record review

Eric Clapton
161 Ocean Blvd.

by Mike Creagan
Eric Clapton's latest album 161 Ocean Blvd. will probably be a great surprise to most people as it presents a new musical style for the 30 year old guitarist. And to those who have followed him since the days of the Yardbirds: brace yourselves.

Clapton has recently stated that he wishes to take the spotlight away from his guitar in order to play within his new group. The album reflects this ideal as Clapton winds out for only a minimal number of solos. The music has the feel of a group effort and is more relaxed and less intense than anything Clapton has previously created. As a result, the overall sound of the record is pleasant. The most successful number is "Give Me Strength", a slow hymn that highlights Clapton playing dobro (1). It effectively sums up the placid mood of the music.

Unfortunately, this listener finds the album musically unsatisfying. Clapton's mode of expression throughout his career has been the bitter sweet cries of his guitar and their absence is sorely missed. Instead he relies on his voice more than ever before, and while it may be smoother to suit his new style, it no longer has the gutsy and emotional qualities that are so vital to his music, especially the blues. Clapton is able to express himself more effectively with his guitar than by any other means. His songs, singing and music are all taken to higher creative and emotional levels by his fills and punctuations, and of course, his solos. Without these embellishments, the album sounds half finished in a creative sense and leaves one hanging on for more. By fading into the group, Clapton seems uninspired and the music suffers.

This past summer, I attended Clapton's Montreal concert where he played with the same group that made this album. There, however, he stepped forward to take the lead and relied on the band almost exclusively for backup. He showed little evidence of maintaining the ideal he pursues on 161 Ocean Blvd., but instead blinded us with solo after solo. I hope that this album is only a short lapse in Clapton's career and that his future efforts will be a return to his former level of creativity.

Paul Horn plays flute during Sunday's concert

John Bottomley

Truffaut's personal cinema

The Department of Film Studies' second evening series for 1974-75, "Films of Francois Truffaut" begins Thursday, October 3, with the screening of "400 Blows" at 8:00 p.m. in Ellis Auditorium. Made in 1959, "400 Blows" is Truffaut's first feature-length film — a film which won the prize for best direction at Cannes and the American Critics' Award for best foreign film that year.

In "400 Blows" Truffaut introduced the semi-biographical character of Antoine Doinel (played by Jean-Pierre L aud), a character who re-appears in subsequent films, always acted by L aud. Here, Antoine is a child in Paris, a child seen in his daily activities and milieu and observed as a part of the world around him. As Graham Petrie points out, in The Cinema of Francois Truffaut, the intense involvement with Antoine which Truffaut achieves comes less through the use of subjective shots than through close-ups of Antoine's reactions to his experiences, "his face by turns puzzled, hurt, joyful, bewildered, shrewd, apprehensive, sly, expectant, bored or desperate help to make us part of him and what he is going through." In a memorable scene with a psychiatrist, the camera focuses entirely on Antoine as he reacts to the questions, pauses to think, smooths the blotting paper on the desk in front of him, his face continually expressing a subtle range of emotions which he can mask and reveal in turn, adapting himself for survival.

The important settings in the film — his home where he sleeps in the hallway, the school with its cramped and dreary classrooms, the night streets, the jail and reformatory — each seem terribly restricting, confining, expressive of the forces with which he must cope in a young life decidedly lacking in moments of youthful exuberance, such as a scene in which the boys of the gym class, following their master through the streets, gradually sneak away until only three boys remain in step behind him — a scene shot at a distance and quietly observing this temporary subversion of the school's tyrannical attempt at order.

"400 Blows" is a powerful film, an intense experience. With it, Truffaut, established himself as a leader in the "new wave" of French Film-making.

Science '77 Presents
BOAT IN A BOTTLE
1000 Island Boat Cruise
Oct. 10 8:00 - 12:00
Bar - Band - Dancing
Two enclosed decks
Tickets - $5.00 single $9.00 a couple
on sale next week
John Orr room 3 - 5 pm

ACADEMIC RESEARCH LIBRARY

Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date, 176-page, mail order catalog of 5500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage (1-2 days delivery time).
519 GLENROCK AVE.
SUITE #203
LOS ANGELES, CA. 90024
Our materials are sold for research purposes only

Pleasure and the Royal Company

by John Gibson

The Royal Shakespeare Company offered Kingston a look not only at love but at the way love is treated by various writers. Director Terry Hands extracted the raw material script and songs from such sources as the Book of Genesis, William Shakespeare, Charles Dickens, E.E. Cummings, and the Rolling Stones, and arranged them so as to give different views of love from all conceivable perspectives. There is the pre-pubescent yearning of the cub-scout for the brownie, the bawdy "May I Feel Said He", "A Bachelor's Complaint about Married People", the tragedy of a husband finding out his wife's infidelity, and a long list of others.

One of the most amusing skits of the evening was a monotone recital of the Stone's hit, "Satisfaction". Prunella Scales, jaw outthrust, mouthed the lyrics in proper rock-style, but the lack of music demonstrated the weakness of those lyrics without adequate amplified music to bolster them. Hands was able to avoid chops and breaks by having the actors deliver their lines in a combination of recitation and drama. The result was a simple production which drew attention to the material and its qualities, leaving the audience to judge the relative merits of the authors' arguments.

Apart from an occasional tendency to "ham", the actors were all that might be expected of the Royal Shakespeare Company. They spoke in a casual, unforced manner, a refreshing change from typical Drama Department expostulations. They were relaxed and managed to convey that feeling to the audience, adding to the general air of informality.

Pleasure and Repentance was one of those rare dramatic feasts at which the audience may really tuck in and enjoy the fare.

Martin Best provides musical element in "Pleasure and Repentance".

New home for Carpenter's Inn

They have relocated but haven't left us: The Carpenter's Inn sponsored by the Queen's Christian Fellowship held its first coffee house of this year on Saturday, in E Wing of Lower Victoria Hall, instead of the Student's Union where they were last year.

"We're trying to provide a service for those students who don't enjoy the atmosphere of the pub," said Marilyn Culin, the organizer of the coffee house. "We hope to provide quality music in a relaxed atmosphere." The Carpenter's Inn was given that name to emphasize this hospitality.

The Saturday evening coffee house was a great success and if the entertainment provided is any indication of what is to come, more students will be taking advantage of this opportunity to drink coffee, tea, hot chocolate while listening and talking.

On Saturday, the entertainment was provided by John Greenwood who sang while his brother

Hugh played lead guitar. The two musicians have been working together for a year. They recently auditioned for the Tommy Hunter show and hope to play in the warm up for an up-coming Bruce Cockburn concert in Waterloo. John's own songs, sometimes moving, sometimes amusing and often satirical, appeared to go over well with the students.

"We hope to continue to bring in good entertainers," said Culin. There are a number of local entertainers who are willing to play and a number of possibilities from Montreal and Toronto."

Although the organizers hope to present their coffee house every second Saturday, definite plans can only be made when they know where their permanent location will be.

The next coffee house is scheduled for the first Saturday after Thanksgiving.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY

SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD

TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)

OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT
SUNDAY 10 AM TO 8 PM

Students:

Support the preservation of Historic Kingston

The Bank of Nova Scotia

will demolish the

Mowat Building

built in 1841 at the corner of Princess and Bagot St.

Support preservation

by transferring your account.

P. H. E. S. A. PRESENTS

JOCK
HOP

FEATURING
octavian
ALL CAMPUS DANCE - EVERYONE WELCOME

GRANT & KINGSTON HALL

Advance Tickets $1.25 ($1.50 at door)

AVAILABLE 10 AM-4 PM Tues.-Fri. at Phys. Ed. Centre

Saturday October 5

Blues thump Gaels 32-9

by Jim LeMensurier

The undefeated Varsity Blues took advantage of a non-existent Queen's running attack and added a bruising one of their own, as they buried the Golden Gaels 32-9 Saturday in Toronto. It was a battle of the trenches and after an early Queen's touchdown, it became a near rout, with the Blues taking command of the injury-ridden contest. The U of T. win puts them in comfortable control of first place in the OQUAA's Eastern Section and leaves Queen's in a four-way tie in the division's cellar.

The game opened with U of T being stopped cold on their first offensive series and a bad punt and no yards penalty set the Golden Gaels up at the Blues 27. Quarterback Raold Serebrin hit flanker Bruce Pollock for a 14 yard advance and then found tight end Peter Sabistan for 11 more. Serebrin then sent his motion right and bootlegged it around the left side for 6 points. Will Kennedy's convert attempt at 2:45, fell short.

Both teams then moved the ball sporadically with Toronto enjoying the edge, but Varsity failed to put points on the scoreboard while missing two early field goal attempts by Don Wright. When the Blues did finally make the board, it was on a drive typical of their game-plan. They ran the ball. Six hard blasts up the middle, including 18 and 10 yards by rookie Mark Bragagnolo, brought Varsity to the Queen's 10, where an incredible third down and eight gamble paid off with Brent Elsey acting as the safety valve, taking a swing pass in the flat and scampering in for the major. Wright's convert gave Varsity the lead with five minutes remaining in the half.

A booming kick-off was returned by Peter McNabb to the Queen's two yardline and with the offence unable to get the ball out of the ten, the coaching staff directed punter Tom Taylor to concede a two point safety rather than give the Blues good field position. Three plays later, however, a bad snap into the endzone forced Taylor to give up two more for an 11-6 halftime deficit.

By halftime, the Blues had not yet run away with it but were in control and had successfully set up the balanced attack, which amassed over 500 yards during the course of the afternoon. As quarterback Dave Langley pointed out after the game, "We showed a lot of outside stuff against Ottawa and thought we could go down the middle against Queen's". This strategy may have surprised the Gaels to some extent but it wouldn't have been nearly as effective had veteran interior linebackers John Tovee and John Waddell not been badly hampered by injuries. Tovee, reinjured torn neck muscles early in the game as did Waddell who has shoulder damage. Rookie Steve Thompson and fan Anderson, who shifted from his normal middle guard spot tried to help out but were exploited by Varsity's ruthless execution, which kept exposing an increasing number of weaknesses.

Too many tackles too far downfield spelled doom for the Gaels on Saturday, but nobody as many battered starters were replaced by fresher recruits from the bench. Toronto's fine team effort was sparked by the brilliant performance of Bragagnolo, who made 145 tough yards while breaking tackles and finding holes where none seemed to exist.

U of T appeared to be getting stronger by halftime and Queen's was looking weaker. The Gaels had notched just one first down in their last 7 offensive series and had shown absolutely nothing on the ground. There was no one to replace the injured Dave Hadden and the paltry 32 yards which the Gaels collected on the gridiron put a lot of pressure on the passing game. Queen's prefers to run the ball but when this was taken away from them and they were forced to the air, the Blues backs, led by tiny Rick Nakatsu, were waiting and punished Queen's receivers, sending Pollock to the hospital with a mild concussion and giving the usually surehanded Greg Anderson a bad case of juggles. During halftime, the University of Toronto, in recognition and appreciation of Frank Tindall's great contribution to Canadian College Football over the past 40 years, presented the Gaels' Head Coach with an engraved silver platter at centre field. The tribute, presented jointly by Blues coach Ron Murphy and their captain Brent Elsey, was greeted by a standing ovation.

The Gaels' chances of victory were dwindling at the half and had just about hit bottom, by the 3 minute mark of the third period. That was how long it took U of T to march 84 yards in 8 plays to take an 18-6 lead.

The Tricolour responded with an impressive drive of their own, but it stalled at the U of T seven and Kennedy's 14 yard chip shot provided Queen's last points while narrowing the spread to 18-9.

To the delight of most of the fans at Varsity Stadium, the rest of the game was all Toronto.

Greg Anderson gets grabbed after one of his 8 catches against the Blues

Need Help With Reading and/or Study Skills Problems?

Queen's Student Counselling Centre is offering a series of 4 sessions, one hour per week to aid students having problems with their reading and/or study skills.

The first series starts the week of Oct. 6th.

If interesting please call the Centre at 547-2893

"Welcome and Good Luck"

ABRAMSKY'S MEN'S WEAR

259 Princess Street

Open Thursday & Friday 'til 9

Full line of men's fashion clothing & furnishings

10% discount on regular price merchandise.
Master Charge, Charge, & Charge Accounts
Welcome

10,000 STUDENTS READ
THE JOURNAL TWICE WEEKLY
ADVERTISE IN THE

Queen's
Journal

Import Jane Petterson (foreground) checks McGill opponent as Leslie Ferrari (16) looks on Field Hockey

Gals survive tourney

by Kathy Keely
Queen's hosted a women's field hockey tournament on Saturday and had maybe better chalk this past weekend up to experience. What with teams cancelling out at the last minute, torn-down goal posts and rain, it's a wonder that the tournament survived at all! However, Coach Carson kept smiling and managed to get everything under control. A big thank you goes out to all officials and cole-slaw makers.

The first game was between the Queen's Seniors and the Intermediates. The Seniors won 4-1, with Leslie Ferrari getting two goals and Janice Wagar and Sue Moffat one apiece. Pearl Dixon, the left inner, scored the only intermediate goal.

The other two teams in the tournament were McGill and the Quebec Senior Provincial Team. Both of them proved stiff competition for the Intermediates. McGill won 6-0, and Quebec scored a 8-0 victory. It should be noted, however, that Quebec scored only two goals in the second half. That speaks highly of the Intermediate's defensive work.

The Seniors did not fare well against Quebec either as they lost 9-0. Things looked much better against McGill though. They won 1-0 by virtue of a goal from import Jane Peterson. Jane played field hockey last year and kindly agreed to play on Saturday. Again this weekend, Cathy Smith was good in goal.

Next weekend both teams travel to Guelph for an early bird tournament. Queen's will be hosting another tournament on Oct. 25 & 26. This is Part I of the O.W.I.A.A. Championships (East) so keep that date in mind, as the girls would appreciate your support.

Students Affairs Centre

There will be a general meeting for those who wish to volunteer for The Centre for Drug Education and Counselling programs on Thursday, Oct. 3 at 8:00 p.m. in the Grey House (51 Queen's Cres.) Come on out and get involved in your community!

COME ON OUT AND GET INVOLVED

SALE on all camping equipment 20% OFF

cotton's sports house

399 PRINCESS STREET,
KINGSTON K7L 1B9
TELEPHONE 544-1066

Who's Where Listings...

Mistakes can happen! When compiling names and phone numbers and addresses and other data on 10,000 students and staff they are bound to happen. So stop in at the John Orr Room (Information Bank) on Wednesday and check your listing... make sure that what is going to be printed in Who's Where is correct. Wednesday is your only chance; drop in and help us out. Check your listing.

Only chance!

Organizers

All campus groups wishing to sponsor a social function next spring must fill out an application form in the AMS Office by October 18, 1974. Applications received after this date will be considered on a first-come-first-serve basis for any remaining dates.

Approved applications may be picked up in the AMS Office on October 31, 1974

Procedure for booking all rooms

For meetings, smokers, dances and concerts:
1. Obtain a Student Activity Application Form from the A.M.S. Office in the basement of the Union.

2. Complete the Form and hand it in at the A.M.S. Office.

3. When the Application has been approved, "Form C" will be issued. You must pick up this form from the A.M.S. and take it to the Specific booking office concerned. This will be indicated to you when you pick up the "Form C".

Soccer Gaels drop two

In terms of winning soccer games, this weekend did not shine kindly on the Gaels. They dropped both the league opener on Saturday against York (2-0) as well as a Sunday exhibition contest with St. Lawrence University from New York State (3-1). Recalling both games from a tactical viewpoint, the Gaels had numerous good opportunities and were not outclassed by superior opposition. First we'll deal with Saturday's affair which was the league's opener for the O.U.A.A. season. As described in last weekend's Journal, the "perennial power house" from York certainly hadn't lost its punch. This punch later resulted in the referee handing out two yellow cards (cautions with next offence ejections from the game) and one red card (immediate game ejection) to York offenders. Both goalies were tested and both rose to the occasion, especially our Peter Dickie, who was not responsible for either goal. The first York marker came off a breakaway when the Queen's defense was caught outside and the opposition was given a free shot which Pete dove for and partially deflected but in vain as the ball's forward momentum carried it over the line.

The York team seems to

It was a rough match against York, as the above clearly shows prefer a very physical type of game as they have shown in all past matches. While it might lead to momentary success, it destroys the spirit of the game, and it augers well that the Gaels did not stoop to so base a level of play.

On Sunday, Queen's hosted St. Lawrence University in what is known as "friendly" game. Starting off with a solid attack which lead to an early 1-0 advantage netted by Dave Robertson, the attack seemed to stagnate. St. Lawrence continually carried the play and the game was soon tied. A second half penalty shot and a very close to offside goal rounded off the scoring.

With a host of games looming up in the near future (Thursday 4:30 p.m. at R.M.C.; at Saturday 2:00 p.m. Trent), an effective solution is needed to correct the mediocre play.

To conclude this article, expressing the Gael's gratitude for the very pleasing support at Saturday's game despite the inclement weather. Hopefully in their next outing, a more jubilant report can be concocted.

Saves like this went to no avail for Gaels

Gaels take R.M.C. Crosscountry

Queen's "A" team captured the R.M.C. Invitational Cross-country meet for the first time in years here Saturday, overcoming stiff competition from perennial favorites York and Guelph. The Gaels had a very large contingent entered with three teams and a total of 17 people competing.

The "A" team captured first place with a total of 42 points while the "B" team placed fourth. Bill Bryden had the highest Queen's standing, coming in 5th, while Mike DeGauda, a freshman, had a solid 7th place finish. Coach Walter Eadie indicated that DeGauda is the best new addition to the team. Dave Tanerault, Bob McCormick and Dieter Stein placed 8th, 9th and 10th respectively.

Track successful at Mac

Queen's combined track and field teams made a successful foray to McMaster on Saturday to take part in an all-comers University meet. For the men Mark MacAuley picked up a pair of firsts in the 110 and 400 hurdles, while rookie Kevin Thompson won the shot put and Bob McCormick the 800 metres. In other field events, Joe Austin took second in discus, with veteran Jack Ongarato collecting a pair of thirds, in shot and discus. Mike Forsythe was third in high jump.

For the women, Pam Scothern had seconds in both shot and discus, and versatile sprinter Mary Ann Drinkwater added two thirds in the 100 and 200 metres. The women had a large contingent competing this weekend, and entered three teams in the 4 x 100 relay. These finished 3rd, 4th and 5th.

Queen's will next be in action Friday night, when they host a small invitational event at the stadium in conjunction with the Track Alumni Homecoming Weekend. The meet will start at about 6:00 p.m.

Bite the one you love

STEAKS & STUFF
LICENCED DINING ROOM 1399 Princess (near the station)
AUNT LUCY'S RESTAURANTS LTD.

Valery Lloyd-Watts, pianist
Tuesday October 1st works by Beethoven, Chopin, Reger and Pinter coffee and dessert at 5.45 music from 6-6.45
San Rich Common Room
Everyone Welcome
ban rich fireside

Queen's Riding Club

Gallop through the autumn leaves with the Queen's Riding Club. Membership of $1.00 includes transportation from the union door this Saturday morning at 9:00.

Rental Rental fee is $2.50 per hour.

For those who enjoy English instruction, group lessons are available.

For further information-

Drop into the John Orr Room on Friday or phone 544-1519 after 5:30 pm.

Hillel Presents

SIEGE

Award winning Israeli film that won world-wide acclaim at the Cannes International Film Festival in 1972 A movie about the home front in Israel during Israel's continuing fight for survival

Wednesday Oct 2

8:00 and 9:30

at Dupuis Hall

ADMISSION $1.00

10,000 STUDENTS READ THE JOURNAL TWICE WEEKLY
ADVERTISE IN THE

Queen's
Journal

briefly from the world . . .

Ottawa: Former R.C.M.P. Security Men Don McCleery and Gilles Brunet withdrew their appeal against what they considered an unwarranted dismissal. They were dismissed quite suddenly last December but were given no valid reason for the action. The two men withdrew their appeal in an attempt to keep "top-secret" documents connected with their case, from being made public. Early last week the court ruled that the documents should be available as public evidence in the case. Justice A. L. Thurlow felt that it was the right of the public to inspect the documents. Thurlow questioned whether the documents could be declared non-public after they had been ruled public. As of Friday the Federal Court of Canada ruled that they would not be made public. The documents were returned to the R.C.M.P.

The Star has reported that the documents contained discussions of a fear that the R.C.M.P. had been infiltrated by organized crime, that the United States intelligence were working secretly in Canada and that quite frequently the R.C.M.P. used illegal telephone taps.

Barnsley, England: Last week a man perched in the back of a truck, rode along generously distributing ten pound notes to the world. The drivers following the truck stopped and were shocked to find that the gentleman had been throwing away money. The motorist collected the notes and handed them into the local police. The total value of the bills was $2,750. The police are trying to locate the mystery benefactor but if the money is not claimed in two months it will go to the people who collected it.

Cambridge Bay, N.W.T. (C.P.): The Eskimos in the Northwest Territories have joined the Indians and the Metis in registering claims for land, based on aboriginal rights. The twelve thousand Eskimos are claiming more than 800,000 square miles of territory. The area demanded by the Indians and the Metis of the MacKenzie plus the Eskimos covers nearly all of the Northwest Territories. The land involved is abundantly rich in oil, gas, and mineral deposits.

Washington: President Ford's amnesty program is now in effect. Draft Evaders will be allowed to return to the United States without any punitive action being taken. A board has been established to review such action already taken against Vietnam draft evaders and deserters. The 19,000 evasion cases which are under investigation by the FBI will be discontinued immediately.

Athens: Greece may consider rejoining NATO if its allies find a "just" solution to the Cyprus dilemma. When Turkey invaded Cyprus in July and successfully partitioned the island republic, Greece withdrew from NATO. Greece claimed that its allies had failed to do their best in heading off the invasion. If they do not rejoin NATO Greece may have to go to war with Turkey. In the event of a war, Greece will ask the United States to withdraw its military resources from Greek territory, inferring that Greece will seek assistance from Moscow.

Buenos Aires (AP-UPI): Terrorist action continues in Buenos Aires. Last Friday the brother of the former president

Arturo Frondizi was assassinated. Silvio Frondizi was dragged from his apartment by the gunmen and was later found in the bushes riddled with bullets. Frondizi's son-in-law was killed and his daughter was wounded in the raid.

The right wing Argentine Anti-Communist Alliance claimed that they were responsible for the killings. Frondizi apparently was killed because he had been the founder of the Marxist People's Revolutionary Army, a guerrilla group presently carrying on a campaign to execute sixteen army officers.

The terrorist actions by the rightist and the leftist radical are in protest of the government of President Isabel Peron.

Jerusalem (AP): Israel is experiencing one of the after effects of a war. The mid-east war of last year has been the cause of a recent baby boom. The baby boom is considered to be a consequence of the soldiers returning from the front lines last winter. "We had 29 births on Thursday alone, the day of Yom Kippur, about three times our average rate," said a spokesman for the Gates of Righteous Hospital.

Commerce Student Services. They're tops!

At the Commerce, we offer a complete range of student services, to help you with your banking needs. Services that you'll need now, and after graduation.

Like savings accounts, to help your money grow. A variety of loan programs, including Bankplan and student loans. Chargex, and more.

Get to know the people at the Commerce on or near your campus. Drop in and ask about opening a savings account with us.

We think you'll find our people are tops, too.

CANADIAN IMPERIAL BANK OF COMMERCE

Queen's

Journal

Volume 102, Number 8

October 4, 1974

All justices now chosen, court ready for action

by Karen Alison

For the past two years Queen's Students have had to function without the A.M.S. court, the backbone of their policing system. Although there was a Chief Justice last year four other positions for justices remained unfilled.

What effect did the court's absence over the past year have on the campus (if any)? According to Internal Affairs Commissioner, Ian Nordheimer, "It was a bad situation when the court was not functioning because of the gap left in the university disciplinary process." Without a court, the A.M.S. constables had no backing and therefore were forced to take their cases to the Kingston city police, although during '73-'74 there were no charges considered serious enough to be pressed in the civil courts.

Appeals begin with the A.M.S. court itself, and if necessary proceed through the "Filter" and Ultimate Tribunals to the Senate. Basically, the concept behind this system is to protect the private interests of the university, as opposed to protection given to the public

Continued on page 3

Oh ho Who's Where

Who's Where, where are you? It is heading into the final stages of the printing process according to Managing Editor Robert Wood. He predicted that the book would be available much earlier than last year, probably around the end of next week.

The Who's Where staff have encountered some snags in the production process: the data provided by the university for the student listings were not available until only Wednesday (five days late) and posed a real threat to meeting deadlines. Nevertheless, the book should be published next week.

Who's Where is essentially an encyclopaedia on the university, lists the "vital statistics" of all Queen's students and staff.

Voting now on to see if MBA will leave GSS

by Ian Jarvis

On Wednesday afternoon Queen's M.B.A. students voted in a referendum to decide whether they should withdraw from the Graduate Student Society to become an autonomous member of the A.M.S. As this paper went to press the results had not been confirmed but two of the prime motivators behind the referendum, M.B.A. President John Steacy and Vice-President Gail Campbell, were confident that the students would decide to withdraw. Should this be the case a general referendum would then be held sometime in November since according to the A.M.S. constitution any expansion or reallocation of seats on council must be approved by the student body at large.

The M.B.A. program is like Law in that it is a closely-knit community that tends not to have much in common with other graduate students. Therefore as Campbell explained, the G.S.S. doesn't really represent much that the M.B.A.'s are interested in.

As described by Campbell the argument in favour of withdrawal is twofold. Firstly, it is felt that a separate society would better express M.B.A. interests. Secondly, the money now going to the G.S.S., which amounts to about $1500, could be used to help fund activities arranged exclusively for M.B.A. students, which in the past have received no financial aid. Right now, the M.B.A. feel they are subsidizing G.S.S. functions which in most cases are duplicating M.B.A. functions. An example of this is the G.S.S. formal which is not attended by M.B.A.s since they have their own, paid for by themselves.

The idea of forming their own society was brought up last year, when due to a great increase in enrolment, M.B.A. had for the first time the numbers to make the creation of an M.B.A. society feasible in terms of the money and manpower needed to operate it. Unfortunately general apathy resulted in the idea being shelved until the beginning of this year when it was picked up by the new M.B.A. II executive.

The effect of such a withdrawal on the G.S.S. is likely to be very small since M.B.A. involvement in this organization has in the past been minimal. The only criticism of the withdrawal scheme is that the M.B.A.s are presently lacking the needed organizational structure and experience. This weakness is conceded to by the proponents of the scheme who expect to experience the growing pains common to any fledgling society. They believe, however, that lack of experience is hardly criterion for squelching the move if it has the support of the people it concerns the most, namely the M.B.A.s.

unclassifieds

More On Pages 7 & 10

MENS FIELD HOCKEY We need players! Practices are every Friday, behind Vic Hall at 4:00 p.m. Sticks are provided. Games with Toronto teams. Play indoors during the winter. What more could one want? If you're interested, Phone 544-5987 or 546-6759

LOST FRIDAY Faded light denim jacket in Princess-Clergy Union Sts. Phone Dick 544-0517 after 6 p.m.

THERE WILL BE A practice tonight for all members of the Pipe Band, 7:30 in Rm. 301 Kingston Hall. This includes snare drummers who showed up for the general meeting.

WE NEED A third person to share our apartment very close to campus-downtown, $45 a month. Call Howard at 544-6882.

DESIGNS FOR THE ARTSCI '78 CREST are now being accepted. Phone Keith Crawford at 544-7718. Entry date closes October 24, 1974.

GUITAR FOR SALE: Satisfied owner needs cash. Yamaha, 6-string, hard-shell case, excellent condition. Call 542-3780 around dinner hour.

WANTED: CROSS-COUNTRY SKIS: One mens (size 18 boots approximately) and 1 women's (average size boots) 544-1361.

BRIDGE: Opposite Bridge every Mon. and Wed. 7:30 P.M. Steelworker's Hall. Partnerships 389-2344.

PARADISE is now on Campus. Guys, call Eve anytime at 544-8883.

DEAR PICKLE AND STEVE: Apologies from Bud for any adverse affects that may have resulted from the picture in the last issue of the Journal. P.S. Benji says hi!

SEX We can't promise you, but really good time we can. Come to the Roman Orgy with more than a dollar in your hand. You can barter for a slave (male or female), buy a beer, and/or recline, sipping wine. So go to the ROMAN ORGY DANCE. Friday October 4, Leonard Hall.

TO OUR FRIENDS ON 2nd McNeill, Thank you for the fantastic Sunday, and we hope there will be many more. (Love), the girls in Ban Righ.

HELP! Lost all my I.O. this week, in or near Ellis Hall on Monday night. If found, call 544-8664.

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT Friday and Saturday night at Bitter Grounds in the New Clark Hall Lounge with The Great Sneaky Waters and His Excellent Band. Liquor, beer, coffee, and tea. Tickets go on sale today in John Orr Room and Eng. Soc. office. $2.50.

DON'T FORGET !!! The "Ladies" are waiting at 2211.

DO YOU LIKE TO DRINK? DANCE? ROLL? Roll!! The Orgy wants you in your Total Slaves will be sold. Grapes, wine and beer will be in full abundance.

LISTEN TO THE MUSIC OF MRO at the Roman Orgy as they play such fabled tunes as "The Beat Goes On" and "Easy To Be Hard". Lots more clean fun this Friday October 4th. Admission $1.00 for Artsci '78 cardholders. Others $1.50. Place is Leonard Cafeteria. Must wear a legal

BROCKINGTON PUB Thursday, Oct. 3 (8:00-1:00) all past Brockington members invited.

wat's hapnin'?

Friday, October 4

- 7:00 p.m. - The Chinese Club has reserved the International Centre Meeting Room every Friday night. All members are invited. Bridge, chess, free refreshments.
- 7:30 p.m. - Diplomacy Club meeting in the McLaughlin Room in the Student Union. For information call Michael Small, 549-0741.
- 8:00 p.m. - The Great Sneezy Waters and his excellent band. This promises to be the first of many great folk, jazz, rock and blues weekends at the all new re-opened Bitter Grounds in Clark Hall. Admission: $2.50. Tickets are available daily in the John Orr Room and Engineering Society Office (above the bookstore).
- 8:00 p.m. - Chinese Christian fellowship weekly meeting at the Christian Youth Centre, 260 Barrie St. All are welcomed.
- 8:00 p.m. - Department of Film Studies presents Rock Music Film Festival: Woodstock in Ellis Hall. Admission: $1.50.
- 8:30 p.m. - 1:30 a.m. - Artsci '78 presents A Roman Orgi - an evening of dancing, drinking and decadence in Leonard Cafeteria. Wine and beer served. Admission: $1.00 with Artsci '78 card; $2.00 otherwise. Note: only Romans in togas will be allowed!

Saturday, October 5

- 3:00 p.m. - Department of Film Studies presents A Hard Day's Night in Ellis Hall. Admission: $1.00 at the door.
- 8:00 p.m. - F.H.E.S.A. presents Jack Hop featuring Octavian in Grant and Kingston Halls. Beer will be sold - 2 for $1.00 and 5 for $2.00. Admission: $1.50. Everyone is welcome.
- 8:00 p.m. - Bitter Grounds Coffee House with The Great Sneezy Waters in Clark Hall. Admission: $2.50. Tickets are available daily in the John Orr Room and Engineering Society Office.
- 8:00 p.m. - Department of Film Studies presents Performance with Mick Jagger in Ellis Hall. Admission: $1.00 at the door.

Sunday, October 6

- 10:30 a.m. - Morning Worship at Chalmers United Church.
- 10:30 a.m. - Folk Mass at Dunning Hall followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House, 164 University Ave.
- 1:00 a.m. - The University Service, Morgan Memorial Chapel, "Influence". The University Chaplain officiating.
- 1:00 p.m. - Kingston and district Kennel Club all breed Sanction Match at St. Lawrence College Gym. Entries taken at door 12 noon to 1:00 p.m. Spectator admission: 25c. For further details call 546-9283.
- 1:00 p.m. - Bike Ride and Corn Roast to be held on Wolfe Island. The ride will leave Hillel House at 1:00 p.m. and will be followed by a Sunday buffet in the Succah at the Synagogue.
- 2:00 p.m. - Queen's Musical Theatre begins its series of workshops in the dance studio at the Phys. Ed. Centre. These workshops are aimed at cultivating the singing, acting and dancing abilities of people interested in musical theatre. All welcome. No experience is necessary.
- 4:30 p.m. - 6:00 p.m. - The pool will be closed due to the holding of the Men's Intercollegiate Waterpolo Invitational.

Monday, October 7

- 7:00 p.m. - The Hon. Robert Welch, Secretary and former Justice and Attorney General of Ontario, will be at KCVI Auditorium to answer questions regarding Family Law and other matters concerning his Ministry.

8:00 p.m. - Blood of the Condor. The first in the "Third World Images; Conflict and Underdevelopment" feature film series will be shown in Etherington Hall; followed by coffee, donuts and informal discussion. Everyone welcome. Absolutely free.

Division of Concerts Box Office: Tickets now available for the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir concert on October 25th. Agnes Etherington Art Centre.

Phys. Ed. Centre

The Physical Education Centre will be closed on Thanksgiving Day, Monday, October 14, 1974. The tennis courts on the arena roof will be open for play on that date and reservations for court use may be made on Saturday, October 12.

Agnes Etherington

The Agnes Etherington Art Centre is a community and regional art gallery. It is supported by Queen's University, the Canada Council, the Gallery Association and the National Museums Canada. Student memberships are available for $2.00. A sale and daily rentals will be held at the Art Centre from October 3 to 10. The gallery hours are: Monday - Friday: 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday: 1 p.m. - 5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday evenings: 7 p.m. - 9 p.m.

Upcoming Events

- Wednesday, October 9 - The Queen's P.C. Club will be holding its first general meeting of the 1974-75 year in the Upper Common Room of the Student's Union at 7:00 p.m. Everyone is welcome.
- Wednesday, October 9 - The A.M.S. Education Commission presents a public lecture - Morton Shulman in Dunning Hall at 8:00 p.m.
- Wednesday, October 9 - A Day in the Life of Sri Chinmoy will be shown in the Upper Meeting Room of the International Centre at 8:00 p.m. Admission: $1.00.
- Wednesday, October 9 - 8:30 p.m. in Grant Hall - Inaugural Organ Recital. The first recital, on the new organ in Grant Hall, by Hedwig Bilgram, Professor for organ at the State Academy of Music in Munich. Music of Bach, Mozart, Duruflé, Reger.
- Thursday, October 10 - Two Lane Blacktop in Dunning Hall Auditorium at 7 and 9:30 p.m. Admission: $1.00.
- Thursday, October 10 - 8 - 12 p.m. - Science '77 presents Boat in a Bottle - 1000 Islands evening boat cruise. tickets on sale in the John Orr Room 3-5 p.m. all next week. $5 single; $9 a couple.

Pubs and Theatres

Commodore - Crazy Legs
401 Inn - Family Brown
Manor - Sharon Lyons and Spike
Frontenac - Muldoons - Two Plus One
Frontenac - Finnegans - Thom See
Townhouse - London

Odeon - California Split
Hyland - Tamarind Seed
Capital 1 - China Town
Capital 2 - Machon County Line
Grand Theatre - The Straw Princess is a Canadian production for the whole family filled with song, dance comedy, color and magic, for the "young" and the "young at heart". Tickets are now available at the Grand Theatre Box Office for this Bucksaw Hollow Musical Production. Admission is $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for children. Performances are Friday at 7:00 p.m., Saturday at 2:30 p.m., and Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

THE QUEEN'S MODERN DANCE COMPANY - under the direction of Miss Sandra Aitken

announces AUDITIONS for DANCERS

Mon. Oct. 7 4:30 pm - 7:30 pm

Tues. Oct. 8 9:30 pm - 11:30 pm held in the PHE Center Dance Studio

The Company also requires the services of actors, gymnasts, writers, artists, technicians. Interested people contact Miss Aitken at the school of PHE.

A.S.U.S. DIVISIONAL COUNCILLORS Elections

Wed. October 9

7:00 pm

Stirling 'D'

All DSC Reps must attend

Queen's Mixed Curling Club GENERAL MEETING

Tuesday Oct. 8 7:00 pm

Stirling "D"

Membership fees due then.

If you can't attend and haven't told us, call 544-3530 or 544-9355

Third World Images; "Conflict and Underdevelopment" Feature Film Series

Oct. 7 'Blood of the Condor' (Bolivia)
Oct. 21 'Who Invited Us?' (S.E. Asia)
Oct. 28 'Mexico: The Frozen Revolution' (Mexico)

Nov. 4 'Swamp Owellers' (Nigeria)
Nov. 11 'Bombay Talkie' (India)
Nov. 18 'When the People Awake' (Chile)
Nov. 25 'End of Dialogue' (South Africa)
'Who is Vasco Mutwa'

FREE ADMISSION!

coffee and donuts, informal discussion
after each film.

8:00 pm DUNNING AUDITORIUM

Monday evenings

EVERYONE WELCOME

Grads remain unexcited over unionization issue

by Nancy Flood

Unionization of Teaching Assistants here at Queen's is not the hot issue it is at other universities according to Graduate Student Society President Kate Bindon. It is a problem, she suggests, of finding someone with enough "time, opportunity, and energy" to devote to study and publication of the issue. In the non-political atmosphere prevalent at Queen's, Bindon notes, "unionization" with its unpleasant connotations when applied to the academic world is likely to be skirted as an issue for study, in favour of "grads" more encompassing problems such as tuition, living conditions, etc. In effect she says, though some involved grads are "interested", the limited appeal of the issue (not all grad students are teaching assistants and the short duration of their stay here does not encourage participation on a large scale basis) dampens enthusiasm and a lot of study and dissemination of information would be necessary to effect any support for it.

The concept of unionization on any or all levels of the university community (student, professor, technician, etc.) is presently under consideration on at least some of Canada's campuses as evidenced by recent action in Manitoba and elsewhere. The Ontario Labour Board granted the Graduate Students' Association union status for 42 Victoria College Teaching Assistants this summer, making the University of Toronto the first in Canada to unionize.

At Queen's, however, deliberations on any such plan have been limited to the required consideration of two OFS motions regarding graduate students, among which was a mention of the subject. The resolutions, as proposed by OFS and included for approval on the agenda of the A.M.S. Outer Council meeting of Thursday September 26, included a protest against attempts by the Ontario government to increase tuition fees paid by graduate students to $900 per year (passed) and a proposal that OFS members support a policy of guaranteeing grad students a minimum income of $3,000 a year plus tuition fees, exclusive of teaching assistantships (defeated). As well, a motion was presented for support of a unionization plan for teaching assistants (defeated). The resolutions were spoken for by Bob Moore, A.M.S. rep to the Graduate Student Society but as indicated, the latter two were defeated.

and study rooms in the basement of Vic Hall. "We always hope that we'll take those students into residence within the first few weeks," commented Reid.

Vice-Principal Jim Courtright's view of the housing situation is that it is a "relative" problem, compared to other universities across Canada. Says Courtright, "We've been spoiled - our problem is one of affluence and proximity."

Forty per cent of Queen's population lives in residence and university housing. (AMS houses accept only students, while Elrond and Science '44 Co-op give students top priority). Thus the greater majority lives in private housing of its own choice.

The Vice-Principal also termed BUSIT "a wonderful idea", because it has the potential to extend the present radius of available housing. Mr. Courtright considers Queen's to be unique in that, for a campus this size, the predominant percentage of students lives within walking distance.

cases to go before court

continued from page 1

interest by the municipal courts. While academic grievances generally are directed to the "Filter" or the Academic Grievance Officer: Professor Willes, the A.M.S. court deals largely with campus offenses of a non-academic nature. The court is considered one of "justice" rather than "law" although the appeals system maintains rights of sentencing, fining, censure, probation, restitution, suspension and expulsion (the latter being under jurisdiction of the Senate.)

What exactly happens when a case for the A.M.S. court comes up? First, the charges are brought to the attention of the Commissioner of Internal Affairs - the prosecuting attorney - which office is presently unoccupied - and relayed to the Chief Justice, who sets a date and holds the hearing. The court consists of five justices: Associate Chief Peter Wells, in second year law; and three Junior Justices: Doug Pritchard, John Andrew, and Marg Dolenzensky, upper year students from various faculties. Three, including either the Chief or Associate Chief Justice, must be present to form a court, and these act as both judge and jury:

deciding on and pronouncing sentence.

Perhaps not surprisingly, only one case, concerning the W.R.C., is pending from the preceding year. There was some contention at one point as to whether the BUSIT problem should be taken to the A.M.S. court, however just one appeal seems to have been scheduled for the near future. It will deal with the question of the quorum at Outer Council meetings.

The A.M.S. court is able to perform a vital function as a necessary and basic link in the appeals system at Queen's. Protection is provided to the student in the sense that, by appealing to the University disciplinary process, he can avoid the hassle and expense of the civil courts. The court is needed to make decisions on non-academic problems within the structure and constitution of the A.M.S. in its role as trustee of student funds. As the court provides one of the few outlets for a student to make formal protest or effect change on campus, it is hoped that the disappearance of this institution last year will not be repeated.

Bite the one you love

STEAK & STUFF

LICENCED DINING ROOM 1399 Princess (near the station)

AUNT LUCY'S RESTAURANTS LTD.

Kingston and District Kennel Club All Breed

Sanction Match St. Lawrence College Gym on Sunday Oct. 6 at 1 p.m.

Entries taken at door 12 noon - 1 pm
Spectators admission 25c

For further details phone 546-9283

All Elrond College Members for 1974-75

are hereby given notice of a general meeting
to be held on Wednesday evening
October 9, 1974
at 7:00 pm
in the Cathedral School Auditorium, Corner of Brock and Barrie

Department of Film Studies Presents

A ROCK MUSIC FILM FESTIVAL October 4 and 5

Friday Oct. 4 Woodstock

8:00 pm, Ellis Hall
$1.50 at the door

Saturday Oct. 5

A Hard Day's Night (with the Beatles)

3:00 p.m. Ellis Hall
$1.00 at the door

Saturday Oct. 5 Performance
(with Mick Jagger)

8:00 pm Ellis Hall
$1.00 at the door

Disney characters hold stage at Homecoming

by Mary Smelko

The secret, which has been kept from public knowledge for so long, has at last been revealed. This secret is of course the theme of this year's Homecoming weekend, which Peter Rose, chairman of the Homecoming Committee, has successfully kept quiet since its beginnings sometime last April. The theme is Disneyland from the appearance of things it should prove to be a really great theme. In the parade (starting at 9:00 o'clock Saturday, Oct., 19) Disney characters will be decked out in costumes professionally made. Mickey Mouse, Disney's very first character, will lead the parade, followed by a procession of floats and people from Disney's world.

The theme will also be a major part of the semi-formal which is at Grant Hall on Saturday Oct. 19. Peter Rose hopes that this year's semi-formal will be as efficiently run as possible. He says, "A lot of time is wasted waiting in long line-ups. This year our committee hopes to avoid this problem." They are doing this by placing three bars around a room in which there are no chairs. The bartenders will be professionals and should therefore provide quick, efficient service.

Although, according to Rose, the committee knew in April

Stamp Club on campus

The Queen's Philatelic Society has recently come into being. In the hundred and some odd years of Queen's existence, no stamp club has existed. One might well ask: "Why collect stamps?" It is time consuming and can be very expensive. But philately has held a great appeal for millions of people. Stamps are primarily collected as a hobby—a sublimation of other life styles. In terms of history, culture and geography, much can be learned from these scraps of paper. The Canadian government is presently making use of stamps to raise funds for the up-coming Olympics in Montreal.

For those who are not enthralled by collecting for the mere enjoyment of it, philately has now entered into the field of investment. The Toronto Star, during the past summer, has referred to stamp collecting as the third most popular investment field (next to land and stocks). In a recent auction in San Francisco, an investor paid $650 for a set of eight superb copies of a 1908 commemorative set which only catalogued at $170. In Toronto and in the USA, businessmen have formed buying cooperatives in their search for choice materials for investment purposes.

Surely there must be more people than the original 12 to come to the club's first meeting. The next meeting will be on Mon., Oct. 7, in the Red Room.

exactly what entertainment was needed for the semi-formal, as yet nothing has been done about it and he is quite unsatisfied with those responsible. Hopefully there will be a honky-tonk piano player, a rock or dance band and a magician.

Since all the profits from the Homecoming events are going to the United Way, Kurt Bonokoski, head of Queen's constables, hopes that the constables will be willing to donate their time and will work at the semi-formal without pay.

The events for the Homecoming weekend beginning October 17 are as follows:

New system tried at Douglas Library

by Laura Cooney

Queen's "other" co-ed residence, Douglas library, is taking experimental steps in advancing the cause of the poor over-worked, undergrad. One of the moves taken has been to extend the undergraduate loan per 100, from 11 days to two weeks for this year. For those of us who failed our speed reading courses, this is a welcomed innovation, but we must note the caution word "experimental". Chief librarian, Derek Redmond, admits that he is "keeping his finger's crossed" as a close watch is being kept for overdue books and books being consistently out when requested. It is his hope that, as a result of the extended loan period, both the number of overdue books and books on hold will decrease.

Increasing the availability of books to undergrads is the apparent theme of the "Douglas Experiments". This year one of the more ambitious schemes is

Thursday night is Applied Science variety night; on Friday at 2:00 pm, there is the official opening of Mackintosh-Corby Hall with its Open-House during which hostesses will present tours of the building; also on Friday there will be an oom-pa-pa band at the pub; on Saturday there will be the parade, football game, semi-formal, and a dance sponsored by Commerce at Leonard from 8:00-1:00.

Also, the selling of 2,000 pale blue Mickey Mouse buttons has just begun. Going for 50 cents a piece, the revenue from the buttons will help cover Homecoming expenses.

the inter-library loan system. Under this system, a student has access to almost every University library in Canada. Though fairly expensive ($4.5 a loan), the library absorbs the cost of borrowing and lending about 450 books a month. Due to the expense, however, borrowing is limited to essay or thesis research material.

This system gives the Queen's student access to approximately 7 million titles, though Douglas itself has but one million. If they require a U of B.C. thesis or a Dalhousie document, the last minute crammers are at a loss, for the process of finding and attaining the article takes about two weeks, via an Ottawa computing centre.

The staff at Douglas seem to have a genuine concern for the undergrad. Suggestions, complaints and requests can be made with confidence that attention will be paid to them.

As Snowball melts

Snowball, the traditional Queen's winter carnival, has been cancelled this year. Campus Activities Commissioner Robert Wood, explaining his move to call off the event, said that, "This year the Campus Activities Commission intends to cut the deadwood from the busy slate of social events on campus. Snowball hasn't worked in the last two years—students have lost interest in the week, the theme has become clichéd and hackneyed and the weather usually has proved uncooperative.

"Students still enjoy semi-formal dances, concerts, and variety shows. Freed from the Snowball concept, co-ordinator Michael Kidd will be able to explore new possibilities along this line."

The final decision has not yet been reached on a date for this alternative to Snowball—negotiations are still being carried on.

Chilkoot glitters

Pack your mule and go prospecting at CHILKOOT.

Klondike days are being revived for the Science '75 Formal happening at Grant Hall November 2. The $25 per couple admission price includes free bar and buffet. Scheduled performer Gino Vinely is unable to attend but the Science-formal committee has promised comparable replacements.

Chilkoot, which was the only pass through the Rockies into the rich goldfields, must have been reopened by the Science '75 Formal committee in order to finance this $13,000 extravaganza.

Gold fever is on, don't let it boil without you! Be a gold-digger November 2 from 10 p.m. to 3 a.m.

Science '78 presents

A Smoker

Admission Free

Wednesday, Oct. 9, at 7:30 pm

Clark Hall

Forget your car this immaculate 5-bedroom home is just a stone's throw from Sheltered Yard, Prestige Area, Priced Right As Owner Anxious.

BILL PARISH HAS THE KEY

389-3822

ROSS McMAHON REALTOR

546-5568

AN ENGAGEMENT INVESTMENT IN BRILLIANCE

Popping that all important question... leads to her all important diamond. Our staff of experts is ready to help you find the right diamond at the right price. Wisely you'll choose the finest engagement diamond... a dazzling investment that brings huge dividends... "happiness" for all her tomorrows.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE

JEWELLERS

168 PRINCESS STREET

KINGSTON, ONTARIO

An illustration of one of the many elm trees on campus that have already succumbed to Dutch Elm disease. It is hoped that an experimental injection program, costing $300 per injection, will save those trees which are not in the advanced stages of this disease.

$300 injections used in bid to save elms

by Connie McLeese

"Where have all the elms gone?" To most people in North America the answer is simply yet devastating in its simplicity: Dutch elm disease, the bubonic plague of elm trees has struck. And Queen's campus, once abounding with elms, hasn't been immune to the onslaught.

Man being the ingenious animal that he is has not stood idly by; but has developed means of halting the virus and compensating for the loss of dead trees in his environment. The Physical Plant on the Queen's campus is specifically responsible for the Queen's tree census. The primary concern is for existing trees and how to ensure they stay that way. Out of the five dozen elms originally on campus only four remain. Three of these are too badly infected by Dutch elm disease to ever recover while the fourth (in front of Stirling Hall) is participating in an experimental cure. By the injection of various chemicals, under pressure, into the roots of the "sick" tree, the virus is forced into a dormant state. Unfortunately a booster is required every five years, at three hundred dollars a "shot".

Regreening Queen's campus isn't solely the responsibility of the Administration since everyone benefits. The A.M.S. in collaboration with the Physical Plant has formed a group to involve students in the "green" program. The purposes of the group are twofold; to create a continuous public awareness of the problem in its entirety (this includes not only the aesthetic aspect but the pragmatic also) and to help alleviate the problem by raising funds for analysis and landscaping.

If you're interested in becoming involved contact Robert Wood (Woody) at 547-6165.

Oil Thighs kept girls warm as alarm rang

by Pentelope Schwartz

At precisely 7:45 pm Tuesday, the Ban Righ-Adelaide fire alarm system went off sending a number of girls in varying degrees of decency out to the Adelaide lawn, where they performed oil thighs to keep warm.

The official fire department report says that steam, let off by a machine which was cleaning dining utensils in the kitchen area of the cafeteria, resulted in raising the room temperature sufficiently to detonate the alarm. This apparently is not an unusual occurrence and not particularly dangerous to the building. The last of the three fire trucks left the scene at 8:08 satisfied that nothing overly serious had happened.

However the story takes an odd twist. Wednesday morning at 11:30, Anita Dobbs, manager of Beaver foods in Ban Righ was not aware that anything out of the ordinary had happened in the Ban Righ kitchens the previous evening and was certain that there was little possibility of steam starting the alarm.

Irregardless the alarm did go off. To the mystery-man who was in the Ban Righ kitchen at 7:45 creating enough steam to set off the alarm, you now have a number of pneumatic, irate girls to content with.

DOMUS

Kingston's most exciting gift shop and kitchen shop 68 Brock Street Between King and Wellington

- GREB-KODIAK BOOTS-

Waterproof, Insulated, Plain or Steel Toe.

Sizes 4 to 13

Always Your Size in Stock at the Best Price

LARRY'S

Men's Wear at 354 King St., East

Just 3 Doors from Princess St.

Queen's Progressive Conservatives

First General Meeting Wed. Oct. 9, 7 pm

Upper Common Room, Student's Union

EVERYONE IS WELCOME

STEVE AMEY'S

Lakeview Manor

PLAYING THIS WEEK IN THE CENTENNIAL ROOM

Sharon Lohnes

Coming next week

Ray Hutcherson

28 Yonge St., Kingston

ROMAN ORGY

OR HOW TO HAVE FUN WHEN MOTHER ISN'T WATCHING

Grapes, Wine, Beer and Slaves will be sold.

Bring your ARTSCI78 card and get in for $1.00. Others, $1.50. Den for the laity is Leonard Cafeteria at 8:30. WEAR YOUR TOGA TO BE ADMITTED, AND RELAX.

Journal needs you for sportswriting

10,000 STUDENTS READ
THE JOURNAL TWICE WEEKLY
ADVERTISE IN THE

Queens
Journal

See All The New
Programs This Year
With 11 Channels to Choose From On ...

 cable tv
544-6311

Over 12,000
Kingston Homes
Can Now Enjoy

 cable tv
544-6311

Additional Outlets
Are Available For Television or Stereo
For 1.25 Month

No additional connection charge if ordered at time of initial installation.

 cable tv
544-6311

letters to the editor

QEC: we waited and waited and waited

Dear Editor, admittedly a neophyte at the business of incendiary letter composition (and fearful that this will prove more flaccid prose), I should like to attempt to convey some of the frustration, despair, and expenses that I (amongst many others) have sustained this weekend, and I believe the Queen's Excursion Club is wholly culpable.

Tuesday, September 24th, I purchased a return ticket to Toronto - scheduled to leave Friday, 4 p.m., and return Sunday, 8 p.m. under the auspices of the august Q.E.C. I was to pay an additional $1 (above the reasonable return fare of $9) to join the Excursion Club proper (the membership card was, curiously enough, dated 1974, something which I perhaps ought to have questioned, and stamped with the president's name - John J. Zakos). The woman behind the desk made an elaborate and deliberate show of entering each passenger's membership number and guaranteed time of arrival and departure in a log book, presumably to be consulted in chartering buses.

Friday afternoon I was outside the Union at 3:40. Three buses arrived before 4:00 and filled immediately yet a busload of ticket-holders (and non-ticket-holders - the tickets were never requested nor examined, and the thought that fraudulent types were accommodated before others is disconcerting at best) remained. The 4 o'clock buses were over-booked. We were informed that we were welcome to ride to Toronto in the aisles, astride valises, packs and books, but the majority railed at this proposition for we had been promised seats...Well, a bus would leave within the hour. A single schoolbus pulled up outside the Union at 6:35 p.m. Summarily, this bus reached Union Station just before 10 p.m.

I vowed to avoid a repeat performance at all costs. Again, the unholy trinity (this time, two school buses and a coach) were at Union Station just after 8 o'clock, and were filled immediately. Sure, I made a half-hearted essay at self-assertion. I even entered the coach, and was approaching the rear only to find that a single seat was vacant and snatched up soon enough. The dispatcher predictably suggested riding in the non-too-commodious aisles back to Kingston; in retrospect, at least I might have arrived on time, in such a fashion. He said rather glibly that a bus would show within the hour (a school bus on the way from Ottawa). I waited until after eleven when I telephoned my father in Mississauga, begging to be driven. He proposed that I return by the last CN train to Kingston (D 11:30 - A 3:25); the single adult fare was $9.75, and my cab fare from the Kingston train station was $1. I could wait no longer, and the prospect of my 8:30 a.m. class loomed dimly - at least, I felt, the train was a sure thing (even at my tender age, however, I have begun to question in earnest the existence of absolutes and certitude in transit systems). This morning a friend (possessing a great deal more equanimity than I) called to say that a bus finally came at 1 a.m. and arrived at 4 a.m. The bus driver, indeed, came from Ottawa but assured his passengers that he was just leaving when the dispatcher lied (quite cognizant that the bus was to be inexorably LATE) and promised a bus "within the hour".

Well, Queen's Excursion Club, I am inclined to burn your (probably spurious) card outside the Union. A lesser person would sell his membership, I'd wager, to some hapless Frosh, and with that dollar, enter and win a catapult lottery, and assail your office with excremental missiles. John J. Zakos, you'll have your own Guy Fawkes day and be burnt in effigy at a special annual Ban Righ Fireside.

I am assured (and am hardly reneging) that your charters are almost always punctual and reliable, and the football game was clearly the cause of it all. But, by God, I refuse categorically to avail myself of any of your imminent desert isle junkets nor will I peregrinate with you to Montreal to see Derek Applause - it would only amount to self-victimization.

In all gravity, the Excursion Club's football weekend fiasco rankled with gross mismanagement, prevarication and relative inconsideration regarding the inconvenience, and expenses incurred, etc.

E.S. Mohler

But we'll tell you why!

Dear Editor:

The Queen's Bus Service would like to extend our sincere apologies to all those members of our club that were inconvenienced by the unfortunate delays with respect to the Toronto trips on football weekend.

The delays were caused by extremely heavy weekend traffic conditions which we had no control over. You can be assured that the situation will be rectified for all future trips and that compensation will be made to those people that have receipts to prove that they used the train or an alternative bus line to return to Queen's.

We again apologize and thanks to those who put up with the delay.

John Zakos
Don McVie

Intolerance at Queen's: ...heaven forbid!

Dear Editor,

I am writing in regards to the anonymous letter in last Tuesday's Journal (Oct. 1) which condemns all Jesus Freaks, homosexuals and communists because they don't happen to conform to the writer's religious, sexual or political views.

I know who wrote the letter and I was informed by them that it was a joke. However, I'm afraid that it does reflect the intolerant attitudes of many Queen's students.

I can't speak for any of the groups attacked by the writers, but I know that students with these reactionary views are helping to keep this campus in the McCarthy witch hunt era.

Kevin Stevenson

United Way; under way

Dear Editor,

Here we Go! We are now at the start of the United Way Campaign, a campaign that will be visible (without binoculars) to the students, to the faculty, and to the Queen's and Kingston communities at large. (When we see you, you'll be sure to see us!) It is a campaign that will afford many students the opportunity to take a great part in helping 25 social service agencies make ends meet, from the Day Care Centre to Meals on Wheels; from the Kingston Association for the Mentally Retarded to the Canadian Red Cross. These servicing agencies make our community a better place in which to live, so that contributing to the United Way is a tremendous way to give thanks for the many benefits we receive by living in this community. (Save a life-give blood).

Where do these agencies get their funds? Government grants are never enough. (As if that's news!) We need you to give - who else is there but you? We need you to show the community here

more letters

that Queen's students are continually a progressive minded and strengthening force in this area. We students enliven this community commercially; we must enliven it socially as well. We can meet our objectives ($2700 is a lot of money), only with your help, so please support us and give generously. Let us know you're with us; and then we'll tell you, "Thanks to you it's working."

Sincerely, Paul Bitove 544-9678
Ron Knox 544-1301
Co-Chairmen United Way
(Students Committee)

No student vote for OFS rep

Dear Editor:

I ask myself, what kind of a union appoints its executives? I was surprised and concerned to learn that the Chief Delegate for Queen's University on the Ontario Federation of Students is not elected but appointed. This person represents you and I on our (students collectively) provincial political body. This person takes stands on student issues and helps define the role OFS takes in regard to the Provincial Government and the community as a whole - and you and I have no say over who that person is or where he stands on the many issues the OFS concerns itself with.

How can I be asked to financially support a student union organization which has no accountability to the student body? I am solidly behind the concept of a provincial student union, indeed, I believe it is the only effective way to bring pressure to bear on a government which has proven itself to be deaf to the student's cause, but, I find it difficult to support morally or financially, the Queen's delegation, when I had no choice in their election.

Wendy Hughes
Queen's NDP
PS: I think the AMS should bring their appointee to the membership for ratification

unclassifieds

More on Pages 10 & 11

HANDMADE KAFTANS for sale? Original design ideal for both formal occasions and casual wear. Wide choice of material in variety of sizes for women and men or can be made to measure. Handmade long skirts also available. Phone 544-4488.

SVB LUNCH PROGRAM and Drop-in Volunteers. You are reminded at our orientation session to be held Saturday Oct. 5 at 10:00 am at 407 Bagel St. (Calvary United Church). Any other persons interested in helping with the program, or those unable to attend the orientation program, or those unable to attend the orientation, please contact Maureen 544-5873 or Wendy 542-4444.

UNITED WAY CAMPAIGN ALWAYS needs workers, we'd love to see you, please phone 544-9678 or contact Info Bank.

NO SEX PLEASE WE'RE WORKING on the United Way Campaign - help is needed - please phone 544-1301 or see Info Bank.

RAY AND WILCO BILL would like to invite all their buds to a "knock-down, drag-out" party at 249 Sydenham Innite. We want to especially see Gael Group 18 there. BYOB.

36-36 ALL YOU EX-FROSH from Gael Group 36 are hereby notified of our reunion. 8:00 p.m. the Pub Wed. Oct. 9. Be there or else. Ron Diane Graham

FOR SALE: Morisco Stereo System. NC4-224 Console Two Nec 524 speakers. dual turntable, just over one year old. $175.00. Call 548-5540.

QUEEN'S BANDS: BRASS AND PIPE BANDS? CHEERLEADERS, Majorettes, Highland Dancers: Your fantastic picture will be taken this Saturday, Oct. 5, 1974 along in front of Theology Hall. Regimental check will happen between 10:30 and 10:45 am. Have everything shiny and white! EVERYONE PLEASE ATTEND! Practice after for the game.

IT SURE IS A GREAT FEELING to get some sleep after a press night! How about after Who's Where, Woody? What are you going to do first: sleep or sleep.

Editor-in-Chief - Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager - Terry Collins
Managing Editor - Dan McClelland
News Editor - Sarah Yarnell
Features Editors - Wendy Reynolds, Laurie Gibson
Arts Editors - Kerry White, Peter Haworth
Photo Editor - John Cameron
Backpage - Valerie Cotton, Lois Malcolm
Classifieds - Linda Brown
Contributors - Michael Creagan, Leslie Gaukrodger, Nancy Flood, Connie McLesse, John Edwards, David Selander, Alison Cickey, Ian Jarvis, Karen Allison, Brenda Annis, Diane Provant, Mary Smielko, Ann Robertson, Dan Fruhling, Laura Cooney.

Queen's
Journal

Vol. 102, No. 8
Fri., Oct. 4, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Photos - Keith Bourns, Jon Wilmer, Peter Case, Fred Van Driel, Boltemer, Lyn Alwood, Logan Outfield
Elderstatespeople - Boomer (sorry about last time) and Woody (you too Stud)

Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (613) 547-7686. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newspaper.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY

BICYCLES - BICYCLES - BICYCLES

Save Our Trees

Please do not tie bicycles to trees

FAST, FAST, FAST RELIEF FROM HUNGER PAINS.

277 Bath Rd.
Kingston

JOCK HOP

Is For Everyone

octavian
ALL CAMPU. BA/H - EVERYONE WELCOME

GRANT & KINGSTON HALL/
Advance Tickets $1.25 ($1.50 at door)

AVAILABLE 10 AM-4 PM Tues.-Fri. at Phys. Ed. Centre

Saturday October 5

Randy Lee's
TAKE HOME STORE
842 PRINCESS ST.
544-9244

FRIED CHICKEN

★ ★ ★ BURGERS

Monday to Saturday 10 a.m. - 10 p.m. Closed Sundays.
Delivery anywhere within City limits .65 extra - and -
Delivery outside City limits slightly extra.

Principal Watts and United Way Official Kick-Off

October 5, 2:00 pm

Junior Engineering Rep.
Resigned

Nominations for new rep must be in by Friday

Elections will be held next week.

Nominees must be members of Science '77.

The Gift of DIAMONDS

MORE PRECIOUS THAN EVER

The Gift of Diamonds is the gift of a lifetime because only diamonds are more precious than ever. Diamonds are practically indestructible, retain their beauty and never lose their value.

COLUMBIA 1 CARAT DIAMOND CLASSIC COLUMBIA SETTING IN 18K-10K YELLOW GOLD RETURNS 20% OFF
SPECIAL $299 (IT TAKES ONLY ONE HOUR TO SEE THE DIAMOND OF YOUR CHOICE TO HER ENGAGE)
COLUMBIA 1/2 CARAT CLASSIC COLUMBIA SETTING IN 18K-10K YELLOW GOLD RETURNS 20% OFF	COLUMBIA 3/4 CARAT CLASSIC COLUMBIA SETTING IN 18K-10K YELLOW GOLD RETURNS 20% OFF	COLUMBIA 1 CARAT CLASSIC COLUMBIA SETTING IN 18K-10K YELLOW GOLD RETURNS 20% OFF
SPECIAL $399 (Includes Band Link)	SPECIAL $500	SPECIAL $500
USE YOUR CREDIT TODAY AND SAVE! EASY TERMS

BROCK Jewellers
2100 SHEPPARD AVE. E. UNIT 101 SCARBOROUGH, ONT. M1S 1T6
Tel. (416) 291-1111

Of stacks and students

A lighthearted look at the libraries

by John McQuail
Coming into the fourth week of classes, the workload of most Queen's students is increasing rapidly. It is therefore important to find a good place to study, particularly if you are in residence. Residences have a reputation for being barbaric and even unfit for long hours of study. It only follows logically that if your roommate is continually coughing up fluff-balls or is a hyperactive insomniac, you may be forced to work in a library. If you are living in a residence such as Brockington and plan to do extensive studying in your room, the chances are that you may be disturbed several times during a night's work. Noisy sound systems and loud vomiting may temporarily distract your attention from the books. Even in Victoria Hall you may be interrupted by periodic toilet flushing.

If you are in Morris you may not have time to leave your floor; if you are in McNeill House, a library is a building which has books in it.

Fortunately you are not at a loss for library facilities on campus. The library system at Queen's contains over one million items as well as hundreds of thousands of books. There are 850,000 volumes of monographs and periodicals along with 26,000 reels of microfilm. In addition, over 60,000 books are added to the Queen's Library System every year. The Inter-University Transit System, operated out of the Interlibrary Resources Section of Douglas Library, gives students access to over five million books from fourteen Ontario university libraries.

As well as the Douglas Library, which includes social sciences, humanities, special services, documents and special processing departments, there are twenty-one other less famous libraries on campus. There is something for every taste ranging from depressing to chronically depressing. Most of the libraries offer good working and reading areas as well as a welcome relief from the regular barnyard backfire of residence living.

A library should be judged on its merits. Is it quiet? Does it offer a wide variety of books? Is it open? Using the Houseman International Star System, we now give you a critical analysis of six top libraries on campus and a look at where to go to become a vibrant part of library life at Queen's.

DOUGLAS LIBRARY +++ - The Douglas Library was built in 1924 when the main library moved out of the Old Arts Building. (This may interest to some students unaware of the change in location). Since then it has undergone structural changes including major building when additional reading rooms, offices and catalogues were added.

The Douglas Library has developed over years an amazing collection of books, periodicals, newspapers, documents, records and Canada (ranging from original manuscripts to Canadian crockery). Douglas has always been most controversial of libraries on campus. It is the library made news when a thief made off with $35,000 worth of rare stamps. He was later caught by Kingston Police and fined because the stamps were overdue.

Throughout the early sixties the Douglas Library came under criticism by a number of students and faculty who maybe didn't understand the immediate need for having crockery with John A.'s lip imprint on it in a library.

Even the Journal ran an article in January 1963 criticizing Douglas Library because its reserved reading room was "overheated and dry" and that "the open nature of the surrounding makes distraction likely". It is possible that the reporter was distracted before he entered the library (maybe he was a bit overheated and dry as well).

Today the Douglas Library's famed "purple room" offers recreation for thousands. It is a place for meeting friends, relaxing and reading light novels. Freshman Doug Thompson described the "purple passion pit" as an excellent place for working on "arrangements". Noted purple carpet and swivel chairs, the room offers a comfortable setting. The purple room offers working accommodation but is not yet licensed.

For the more serious reader, there is a reserved reading room. Though the room is for its stiffness, it is certainly impressive with church-like seating arrangement.

For the downright grim individual there are the stacks which are open to all library-users who wish to get away from the hustle of the livelier of the library. No one can better assess a library than those people who are chronic users. Graduate English student Ralph Timmins, when asked how he liked the facilities, replied, "just great, I like them a real lot".

If you are looking for space and variety, then try the Douglas. Hours: open seven days a week during the fall-winter academic sessions; Monday to Saturday 8:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m. and Sunday 12 noon to 11:00 p.m.

ART HISTORY LIBRARY - On the top floor of the Agnes Etherington Art Centre is the Art History Library. A striking contrast to the massive Douglas Library, it consists of three small rooms lined with books relating to art, art history and crafts. Though reading space is limited, the Art History Library has an unmistakable down-home feeling about it not to be found elsewhere. Wooden desks and floors create a very rustic effect. It is however painful to sit for more than three minutes at a time. It is probably the only library on campus which has two fireplaces and an excellent view of the fourth and fifth floor rooms of Ban Righ.

Hours of the library are daily 9:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

THE BIOLOGY LIBRARY - Biology students working here may be delighted by the convenience of having a live rubber tree growing inside the library (either that or an orange tree - this will not be confirmed until spring). It adds a spark of life to an otherwise drab library. There is space for approximately fifty manic depressives if they study arm-in-arm. The tables are made of wood and the carpeting is by Beaver Lumber.

Being air-conditioned, the Biology Library is perhaps the only temperature-controlled library on campus (bring a coat). During normal hours, the library is quiet unless people are talking or dancing.

A good variety of periodicals and annals include "Malnutrition Today", "Flora and Fauna Weekly" and "The National Weed".

This historic library was originally found on the first floor of Earl Hall and was looked after by secretaries who had their hands full doing secretarial work, library work and tending earlier relatives of the rubber tree. Later, the library was moved to the second floor where people had a better opportunity to jump when the workload became unbearable. Hours are Monday to Friday 9:00 a.m. - 11:00 p.m.; Saturday (Sept. & Oct.) 9:00 a.m. - 12 noon and (from Nov. on) 2:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m.; Sunday 2:00 p.m. - 11:00 p.m.

THE JEFFREY MATH LIBRARY - The Jeffrey Math Library is on the third lower level of Jeffrey Hall. It offers space for sixty people lying end to end. Included in the library is an enclosed courtyard for outdoor reading which is also suitable for building snowmen in the winter. Inside, the library is very modern and comfortable. In addition to the study section with tables, there is a lounge-type area with several couches for relaxing reading or just relaxing. The lounge can hold approximately forty people.

The number of books is small, and understandably they pertain to math, however this is unquestionably the finest library on campus. Hours are Monday to Thursday 9:00 a.m. - 9:00 p.m.; Friday 9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday 1:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m.

THE HEALTH SCIENCES LIBRARY - The Health Sciences Library is located in the west wing of the Theological building. This relatively cramped library is deceptively large containing three levels of stacks and an expansive reading room upstairs. Librarian Virginia Parks advises in "The Guide to the Queen's Health Sciences Library" that students "as questions" and not "be afraid to expose a lack of knowledge about libraries". The Health Sciences Library creates the effect of a library on a submarine. The hours are 9:00 a.m. - 11:00 p.m. through the week; Saturday 10:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. and Sunday 1:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m.

THE LAW LIBRARY - The Law Library can be found in MacDonald Hall on Union Street, making it close to the Union for food, fun and relief. If you have a weak heart, don't go there. If you are pregnant, stay out. It is however, fun for the whole family but an amazing level of quietness is always maintained. Relatively few students from outside faculties are aware of the existence of the Law Library (there are a few Law students who can't quite find it either) and as a result, it is usually uncrowded.

When Maureen Wick was asked why she worked at the Law Library, she replied, "I'm the librarian." Hours are Monday to Friday 8:15 a.m. - 11:00 p.m.; Saturday 9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. and Sunday 9:00 - 11:00 p.m.

ALFORD'S

121 Princess St. 542-2891
Sporting Goods - Bikes - Records
Electrical Appliances

Speedo 20% OFF Adidas
Converse BIKES Cooper

St. James' Church

Union and Barrie Streets
Kingston, Ont.

Sunday, Oct. 6

9:00 am - HOLY COMMUNION
11:00 am - Nursery, Sunday School and HOLY COMMUNION
Preacher - The Rector
8:00 pm - Bible Study in the Rectory, 156 Barrie St.
Wednesday, Oct. 9
7:45 am - HOLY COMMUNION

Position Available

DIRECTOR

Queen's Student Agencies

Applications with resumes should be submitted to the AMS office by Friday, Oct. 11, 1974, 5:00 p.m.

Division of Concerts
Queen's University

INTERNATIONAL CONCERTS SERIES 1974/75

Series Tickets On Sale NOW
Box Office - 547-6194 in
Agnes Etherington
Art Centre

Grant Hall Series:

Early Music Quartet, Franz-
peter Goebels, Igor Olshak Chau, Masked Dance of Bengal,
Moscow Chamber Orchestra

Dunning Hall Series:

Estherazy Quartet: Beaux Arts
Trio: Camerata: Mary Lou Fallis;
Robert Aitken-Erica Goodman

Bonus Special Events:

King's Singers, COCOCO (concert of Canadian opera company).

unclassifieds

More on Pages 7 &amp; 11

AMS EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

PRESENTS the Community Liaison Committee. There will be a meeting for all interested people on Sunday, Oct. 4th at 2 p.m. in the 2nd Floor Common Room of the Students' Union. Problems, questions, or solutions - call Rob MacKnight at 542-9208.

FREE CASE OF BEER To person who comes up with my T.I. SR-10 calculator, lost in Dupuis Hall, Wed. Desperate. I've forgotten how to use a slide rule. Phone 549-5452.

EASY LIVING is not what Science '44 Co-operative offers. What it does provide is an opportunity for students to manage a corporation with a million dollars in assets, develop managerial, financial and culinary skills, and have good times while participating in this unique living experiment. If you are ready to try something different, and contribute time, imagination and enthusiasm, call Elaine Barry at 542-5505, 544-4506.

LOST 1 pair of Photo Grey round rimmed glasses. Please call Sue at 544-8801 if found. Please, I can't see.

GAEL GROUPS 27 and 16 Warm up party Saturday. Be there at 11:00 A.M. Where? 3rd Floor Miller House at West Campus. B.Y.O.B. or buy it at the party.

COMPULSORY ATTENDANCE For all of Gael Group 17 at a warmup reunion at Jimbo's 10:30 A.M. Sat. B.Y.O.B. or beer 25c. No excuses.

QUEEN'S ARTS COAT FOR SALE Size 38. Colour red. Almost new. Price is $40. Call 548-1793.

OUTING CLUB MEETING on Monday, Oct. 7th in Room 101 in Jeffrey Hall at 7:30 p.m. for all those going on Thanksgiving canoe trip at Algonquin Park.

DO YOU LIKE Black Outfit, California Rex or New Zealand White. Phone 546-4227 Mick.

Rabbits to sell as pets. Have a large Van and will move quickly and cheaply within 75 miles radius of Kingston. Quotes for longer distances if convenient. Call Nigel Smith 544-4316 anytime.

GAEL GROUP 88 Sat. Morning football game warm-up. 12 - 12:30 ish at Jay's. Definitely BYOB. I'll have tea and coffee. A very "enlightening" experience for all.

LOST One beige carved leather key case with two rows of keys. Lost in Ellis, Jeffrey, Student Union or points in between. If found please contact Claire at 546-7585.

CODE WORDS "Beer Soup" Reunion for Gael Group N.O. 90 this Saturday. Meet at 11:00 a.m. in front of Stirling for warm-up party before game see you there!

FIRST YEAR APPLIED SCIENCE

text books for sale. Also Bowmar MX-40 calculator. Call Pam at 542-3092.

THE OTTAWA HOUSE is throwing a party Saturday night at 8:00. All friends of Oide, Opper, Georgio, Gruffy, Flash, Bender and Wolt are invited. Be there. B.Y.O.B.

GAEL GROUP 13 Would love to see you all again! So let's get together at 8 p.m. Tuesday night (Oct. 6th) at the pub. Hugh, Jim, Annie

INTERESTED IN MUSIC of the thirties and forties in the big bands sounds, for your dance? If so contact W. J. Babe (542-1920) or D. G. Hallman (542-9740) for bookings. Also more modern styles. Latin, etc. available.

FOUND 5 keys at last Thursday night Beer Bash at Arena. Call John. 544-1466. When I'm in.

WANTED: FIVE FEMALES Must have good legs. Apply "Walt the Sliot" 542-3887. Be willing to spend long cold nights on Wolfe Island with research team. (Myself)

Payment depending on qualifications.

FOR SALE A black hardtop for any year MGB sports car. $175 or best offer. Removable. 549-1715.

STUDENT FLIGHTS TO VANCOUVER AT CHRISTMAS Dec. 21 Jan. 03 and Dec. 22 Jan. 4. Round trip $159.00. Hurry seats are limited. Contact AOSC, 44 St. George St., Toronto, Ont. M5S 2E4. Tel: 962-8808 or your local Student Council office.

FLIGHTS TO EUROPE AT CHRISTMAS $249.00 and up. Youth. Fares Group. (Heath). Contact AOSC, 44 St. George St., Toronto, Ont. M5S 2E4. Tel. 416-962-8808, or your local Student Council office.

SKI ASPEN from $269.00. One week tours - Jan., Feb., March. Contact AOSC, 44 St. George St., Toronto, Ont. M5S 2E4. Tel. 416-962-8808 or your local Student Council office.

ENGINEERING JACKET FOR SALE leather, size 36, excellent condition. Phone Mike 544-9740.

ONE COUCH-BED FOR SALE 74" long, reasonably good condition. $20. Call Goug at 544-8627.

LOST One cardinal watch with blue wristband as well as a set of Keys Oate approximately Sunday Sept. 22. Phone Jan. 548-7086.

BITTER GROUND IS BACK! The great Sneezy Waters and his excellent band appear this Friday and Saturday night upstairs in Clark Hall's New lounge. Tickets are $2.50 and go on sale in the John Orr Room and Eng. Society office today. Liquor, beer, coffee, tea.

FOUND One black dog, part Cocker Spaniel in the vicinity of 13 Sydenham St. Call Kathy at 549-5750.

544-1227

PIZZA CHALET

PIZZA AND ITALIAN DISHES
TAKE OUT ORDER AND DELIVERY
359 PRINCESS ST.

Alfie Sez: Go Gaels Go!

March to Richardson Stadium with the Queen's Bands

Sat. October 5 at 1 pm

Parade Route: Queen's Crescent, Albert, Union, Sir John A. MacDonald

O.U.A.A. Football: Queen's Golden Gaels vs. York Yeomen

FOR SALE: Texas Instruments SR10 calculator. Price negotiable. Call Kathy at 549-5750.

LOST: Ladies wristwatch, silver Mido, brown leather band between Student's Union and Princess (via Clergy St.) on Sat. afternoon Sept. 28th, 549-5720. Sentimental value.

GAEL GROUP 50 Reunion time! Saturday, Oct. 5th at 11 a.m. warm-up for the football game at Tom's. 195 Collingwood Beer available. See you there!

DEAR PICKLE AND STEW! Apologies from Bud for any adverse affects that may have resulted from the picture in the last issue of the Journal. P.S. Benji says Hi!

PARADISE IS NOW ON CAMPUS. GUY'S. Call Eve anytime at 544-8803.

WANTED: Cross-country skis. 1 men's size 10 boots approximately and 1 women's average size boots. 544-1316.

ALL FRIENDS OF R.J., D.S.F., Ricketts, Webbo, KH, J.J.-J. Johnson and Jelfer are invited to our Bash at 100 William, Saturday October 5.

LOST: one residence key for Victoria Hall. If found please call 544-8481.

HELP: Lost all my I.O. this week in or near Ellis Hall on Monday night. If found call 544-8404.

LOST: The "Ladies" are waiting at 721!

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT Friday and Saturday night at Bitter Grounds in the new Clark Hall Lounge with the Great Sneezy Waters and his Excellent Band. Liquor, beer, coffee, tea. Tickets go on sale today in John Orr Room and Eng. Soc. office. $2.50.

TO OUR FRIENDS AT 2nd McNeill, thank-you for the fantastic Sunday, and we hope there will be many more. Love, the girls in Ban Righ.

DESIGNS FOR THE ARTS 75 CREST are now being accepted. Phone Keith Crawford at 544-7718. Entry date closes Oct. 24, 1974.

ANY STUDENT interested in buying a barely worn Science 77 jacket is asked to phone 544-4276, and ask for John.

FRIDGE FOR SALE: In good condition and working order. Will make a great Beer fridge. $35, or best offer. Enquire at 409 Johnston St. Apt. 2 or phone 549-1347.

WHERE WERE YOU WHEN THE LIGHTS WENT OUT during the Roman Orsy? Bidding for an active slave, dancing to the music of MRD? or putting your toga back on? Find out in Leonard Hall, Friday Oct. 4th at 8:30.

FREE CASE OF BEER to anyone who found a dark blue leather jacket (not a Queen's jacket) in the field behind Vic at the end of orientation week, and will kindly return it to Randy Kline, Rm. 224 McNeill.

ANNOUNCEMENTS: 385 Earl is happy to say that Carmichael Gray is just like one of the boys. (guests which one - see answer below) Bob has had bids from four major brush companies to be his supplier for 1975. Duncan short sheeted Steve's bed. It still is! T.C.

FOUND: An umbrella in Carruther's Hall. Phone 548-7045, ask for Welback.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY Wing Wong Weed. Good times are coming (see you Sunday D. and R.) No longer a decadent teenage just a degenerate adult. Love from all us bums.

308 ELRONO SCOOPS Geoff's girlfriend can stay for the entire week-end. Dennis is going home. Wayne saw snow for the first time in his life but still needs a winter coat. All donations appreciated. Heather arrived home safely last week-end. Penelope has a boyfriend, things are going good, we father. Phil is asked to control his noise output by Maurice and Penelope. Gary got his first long-distance call but wasn't in, if you would like to write him a letter it might help. We all hit the news this week you guys, pictures and everything, keep up the good reputation!

LOST OR STOLEN: 1 red wallet containing money and some precious personal items. I don't care about the money but please return the other articles - they're valuable to me. Please call Peggy at 549-5952. Thanks.

ANSWER: Geoff.

LOST AT T.O. football game: 1 men's silver watch. Please call John at 544-5679.

SMALL DESK FOR SALE, suitable for small person or students who don't work too much. Three drawers plus flip top, comes with chair. All for only $20. Call after 5 p.m. 546-2902.

TO THE BITCH with with the paralyzed pussy-I stopped you should have killed it right away. It is cruel and unjust to drag around a numb pussy. S.P.C.A.

AUCTIONS AT THE DOMINO Theatre for "Leaving Home" by French directed by Jill Hodgkinson on Monday 7th October and Tuesday 8th Oct. at 8 p.m. A Canadian play of depth and sincerity requiring 4 males (2 young) and 3 females. Selected as best play in 1974 Theatre Ontario Festival.

NEED A PLACE TO STAY? Elron College still has some spaces available. Drop in or phone Susan at 544-1842.

FOR SALE: Marantz 1040 amp, 30 watts RMS per channel, perfect condition, less than one year old, best offer Call Steve 544-7298.

unclassifieds

More on Pages 7 &amp; 10

TRICOLOR MEETING TONITE Everybody welcome, especially those who have already been to one. Meeting is at 7:30 in the Tricolor Office, basement of the Student Union.

WOULD THE PERSON who found my silver-coloured Parker fountain pen please call me, John at 544-7720.

FOR SALE: REMOVABLE black hardtop for any year MGB sports car. $175 or best offer. Phone 549-1715.

BRING YOUR RECORDS to the Book Bin (beside the Capitol Theatre, 548-4871) to sell on consignment. $1.50 for every single, $2.50 for every double sold.

BLACK 1967 CHEV Impala 2 door hardtop radio, new tires, rear window heater, safety checked 5875, evenings 548-7364.

YOGA EXPERT desperately needed to aid live girls in their quest for inner peace with exercise. If you are the one we need call 544-8455 or 544-8558.

HAVE LARGE VAN and will move anything within 25 mile radius of Kingston quickly and cheaply. Quotes for longer distance if convenient. Call 544-4316.

WHOEVER CALLED about 2 silver bracelets found in Ross Gym - please call back after 4:00 any evening. Jane S. 544-6072.

REWARD! WOP ON! Nina, you really should lay off it for awhile after all these years... 3 in one night! Do you really think CAT would appreciate it?

LOST: Monday between Douglas and MacKintosh. One pair of glasses; 19 a red leather case please call 544-8076.

THE NEW MONETARY PYTHON paperback is in at the Campus Bookstore only $2.75.

OUTING CLUB: 1) bicycle trip:

approx. 75 miles, down Hwy 32. Meet Sunday Oct. 4, 11:00 am. In front of union, bring lunch. Info: Rob M. 544-7006.

Canoe Trip: Oct. 19-20. If interested come to Rm. 101, Jeffrey at 7:30 Mon Oct. 7. Info: Rob S. at 544-7069.

LOST IN NATHAN Phillips Square last Friday night at the Pop Rally. A set of 5 keys on a white Queen's key ring. If found, please call 544-4481.

LOST: Student ID and Soc. Insurance Card at Pub Grant Hall Fri Sept. 21 at around 11:30 pm. Please phone Chris at 544-7038.

SUNDAY at 2 pm - for all persons interested in the Kingston Community Action Committee - bring ideas and criticisms to the second floor Union common room, or call Rob at 542-2208.

GAEL GROUP 84 and friends. The insurance man and Doc remind you of the Tequila Warm up party Saturday morning at 10:30 in room 41, Morris Hall. We'll get the Tequila, you bring everything else.

LISTEN TO THE music at MRQ at the Roman Orsy as they play such fabbed tunes as "the beat goes on" and "easy to be hard". Lots more clean fun this Friday, Oct. 4th. Admission $1.00 for Artscl '78 cardholders. Other $1.50. Place: Leonard Cafeteria. Must wear a toga.

DO YOU LIKE TO DRINK, Dance? Roll! Roll! The Orsy wants you in your Toga! Slaves will be sold. Grapes, wine and beer will be full abundance.

BEING HOMOSEXUAL or lesbian need not be a problem. Call Terry Watson, 547-2834 or write Student Affairs Centre, c/o Terry Watson.

STOL CLUB: Meets Wednesday nights 9:00-11:00 and Sunday afternoons 2:00-4:00. Anyone interested is welcome.

"I HEARD SOMEONE say Horsley had 49 on his birthday cake!" "He doesn't look that old to me!" "Well, I hope he had a big piece anyway!" Happy 22nd Gary.

INEXPENSIVE STEREO for sale: RCA component set with Garrard changer, AM-FM tuner, speakers, 5175. AND a small Columbia stereo component set for $60. Call 549-2551.

LOST OR STOLEN: Mon. Sept. 30 blue buxton wallet with important IO vouch wherever state it or anyone knowing its whereabouts please phone Pat Fowler at 544-8433. The cards are all I want!

THANKS TO EVERYONE who made the 28th a really special day. It was a great time and a real surprise. You're all too good to me, thanks again, Joan.

REDUCED SPECIAL RATES on quality name electronic pocket calculators with all sciences, math functions sold by Duncen's student. If interested, call before 8:00 pm ask for Peter 544-4134. Leave name and phone. Will call back.

WANTED TO BUY immediately: A copy of Irving Copi's, 3rd ed. (1968) or 4th ed. (1973). Please phone Tom at 546-9132, between 6pm and 7:30 pm, if you will sell.

ATTENTION: Gael Group 50's first reunion in appreciation of Irish week. There will be a warm-up party this Saturday Oct. 5 at 11:00 am at Tom's place. Just bring yourself. This Gaelic night supply.

LOST AT T.O. football game: one men's silver watch. Please call John at 544-5679.

LEFT IN CAR: Girl's denim jacket while hitchhike to 431 last Friday. Has Orama Guild crest. I am freezing. Please call Julie at 549-1714.

South Vietnam

Epidemic of torture

by David Lampert

Do you remember Vietnam? Almost two years have passed since the signing of the Paris Accords. This was the agreement which called for the release of political prisoners and required the two South Vietnamese parties to ensure democratic liberties.

Amnesty International says that General Thieu's Saigon regime is holding between 100,000 and 200,000 political prisoners - more than any other country in the world. A small part of this total are members of the National Liberation Front, (the Communists). But most of the remaining prisoners have not really taken either side in the civil war. They are peasants, students, teachers, and monks. Some of the cells hold many old people; others are filled entirely with children.

Many of the prisoners belong to what is called the "Third Force" or neutralists. If they have committed any crime, it is only the "crime" of trying to reconcile the two sides. But in the eyes of the Thieu regime, if you oppose the government you are automatically a Communist. In fact, anyone suspected of harbouring anti-government views runs the very real risk of being thrown in jail - and severe torture is quite likely to follow.

"If they are not guilty beat them until they are", says a motto of the Saigon police. According to Amnesty International, "torture has become a standard part of the interrogation". "In many cases (it) has become no more or less than a matter of habit."

We have many first-hand accounts of the methods of torture. A prisoner may be forced to swallow soap water and then have his stomach beaten. Or he may be first hung by a rope or wire from his toes or feet and then beaten. Often electrodes are attached to sensitive parts of the body, including the genitals. Sexual torture, especially against women, is extremely common. The list of the varieties of torture seems to be an endless one.

The International Week of Concern is an attempt to arouse awareness of the plight of these prisoners. If you'd like more information or want to know how you can help out, come to the photo display in the John Orr Room. Or call David Lampert of the Kingston Committee to Free the Prisoners. - 389-1375.

The Chinese Exhibition

"Let the past serve the present"

by Rob Buller

The Royal Ontario Museum has scored a veritable coup by hosting "The Exhibition of Archaeological Finds of the People's Republic of China." The exhibit is first rate; well worth a trip to Toronto for it alone.

The Exhibition is in itself a significant indication of the thaw in relationships between the People's Republic of China and the western world. Until just recently the Chinese government permitted absolutely no access to their art and archaeological work; indeed in most cases they would not even admit that they were involved in any research along these lines. The thaw has come suddenly - not only are they now willing to talk about their work but for the first time they have allowed a major collection of artifacts to travel outside China. The only Canadian stop on this two-year tour is at the Royal Ontario Museum.

Of course the ROM is no stranger to Chinese artifacts; it houses one of the finest collections of relatively recent Chinese artifacts outside China. This collection contains works of relatively recent dynasties and was the result of primarily one man: Bishop White. While an Anglican missionary in China at about the turn of the century, Bishop White was able to save hundreds of artifacts that were in danger of neglect or destruction. Most had come from tombs that had been uncovered during railway construction and were saved from uncaring crews and an apathetic National government.

With the revolution and a new political philosophy the official attitude towards history and archaeology changed abruptly. In 1959 the Institute of Archaeology was formed as a major branch of the Academy of Sciences. Its purpose was, and still is, to plan systematic excavations and to survey and control antiquities. This exhibition is just one result of the years of work of the Institute.

The splendours of ancient china

The exhibits themselves have been very carefully designed to show artifacts representative of the very early history of China. The earliest artifacts date from the Palaeolithic Period (600,000 - 7000 BC), and the most recent is from the Yuan Dynasty which ended in 1368 AD. Thus the exhibition does not include the delicate porcelains, jade carvings and lacquers of the recent periods that are most often associated with Chinese culture. In fact, the ROM already has such an excellent collection of recent artifacts that it was most refreshing to have the opportunity of seeing objects from times that had never before been displayed.

The displays are arranged chronologically allowing even the casual visitor the chance to view the development of the art and crafts of the various dynasties.

The earliest artifacts are the most surprising of all. Unlike the recent ones that look distinctively "Chinese", many of the earlier objects bear striking resemblance to objects of similar age belonging to other civilizations and cultures. This was particularly true of the earthenwares before the Shang dynasty. The emergence of bronze technology in the following periods emphasized how far advanced Chinese culture and science had become.

Unfortunately China has no structural remains or ruins to indicate the life style of their various periods. Most of the objects have been taken from tomb excavations and this in itself lends certain biases to the displays. Only the very wealthy and powerful had large tombs built and filled with ritualistic or "religious" artifacts. It was perhaps fortunate that custom, and the fear of tomb thefts, prompted very careful sealing of tombs, sealing so complete that it ensured the survival of the objects that are displayed so beautifully in this exhibition.

Displays of exotic artifacts

Some of the objects are magnificent in themselves; these include the jade burial suit, the gilt leopards and the bronze tomb horse. However, the outstanding feature of the exhibition is the complete chronological displays that serve to emphasize the development of a culture so far advanced, centuries before similar developments in the Western World. Scholar, student and casual visitor together can learn from and enjoy this exhibition.

The exhibition runs until 16 November, 1974. While it is large, it can easily be given justice in a two hour visit. Tickets are available at the door ($2.50 per person) or may be purchased by mail from the Royal Ontario Museum, Queen's Park, Toronto.

A catalogue is most valuable and can be obtained in two versions: plain or fancy. The plain or official one is unillustrated and contains full descriptions of each artifact which is represented by photograph with the most spectacular ones reproduced in color. In addition it has complete sections on the history of each era and dynasty with summaries and a complete bibliography. This latter version is a most worthwhile purchase.

The only serious criticism of the exhibition concerns the numbering scheme. For some unknown reason the numbers on the exhibits themselves do not match the numbering scheme in either catalogue. This necessitated a code sheet and it was a complete bother to have to match the three lists to obtain a description of the article. I fail to see how such an error could have been allowed to happen in an exhibition of this stature.

This criticism aside, the Chinese Exhibition is one of the finest displays of its kind that we shall have the opportunity to view. It shouldn't be missed.

Painted pottery figure a horseman from a tomb of the Tang dynasty: AD 706

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT
SUNDAY 10 AM TO 8 PM

George Bedy
sporting goods
40 Princess Street K7L 1A4
Kingston, Ontario
Tel. 513/642-2203

WOODS
DOWN INSULATED
Jackets
for hiking or skiing
Reg. $9.95
$53.96 with student card

auditions

Auditions will be held for the cast of
WHAT THE BUTLER SAW
written by Joe Orton directed by Roger Dunn
Monday, Oct. 7 & Tuesday, Oct. 8 7:30 to 11 pm
everybody welcome

ST. LAWRENCE COLLEGE

QUEEN'S SNAPS

Sarah Yarnell and Steve Loughheed (see masthead) throw a bash, April, 1957

KINGSTON FINEST NIGHTCLUB
Town House
SHERATON SE
686 PRIN

A dream realized

by Kerry White

In response to a world-wide shortage of trained specialists in the field of art conservation and restoration, Queen's has instituted a new master's program. This program, the three-year dream of Professor Ian Hodgkinson of the Art History Department, is unique in the country. The only program similar is a training program at the Conservation Institute in Ottawa—a crash program designed to fill a desperate need for trained personnel and meant to last only three years.

There are over 700 museums and galleries in Canada, and much of the contents of these have received little or no attention with regard to restoration and conservation. The lack of Canadian conservators has forced us to import specialists from abroad, and there are few available. A great proportion of the art of the past has been destroyed by disaster, neglect and natural decay; it is essential that what is left be preserved for the enjoyment and study of future generations.

The 13 students in the Masters of Art Conservation (M.A.C.) program come from varied backgrounds: they hold degrees in art history, archaeology, fine arts, chemistry and biology. Once admitted to the program they must take courses in other departments to equalize their knowledge; students who have studied mainly art are required to study science, and students who have studied sciences are required to study art and studio art. This is very much an interdisciplinary program.

There are three streams in the program. The first concentrates on the restoration and conservation of fine art objects, the second on the conservation of artifacts and archaeological objects. The third is a scientific investigation into the countless materials used in art and the mechanisms of decay and change which affect these materials. Students in the program are carefully supervised by staff members when they begin work on actual art objects, and during the two year program they are required to serve two three-month internships in recognized conservation laboratories in Canada and abroad. Objects for practical work are obtained from various Canadian museums, from the Agnes Etherington Art Centre, and from the Douglas library.

The program is at present housed in the Frost Wing of Gordon Hall and is using studio space in the basement of Jeffrey Hall. New facilities will become available next year; the program is to occupy half of the new addition to the Agnes Etherington Art Centre.

Professor Ian Hodgkinson and student examine a painting

THE ENGINEERING SOCIETY COFFEE HOUSE

BITTER GROUNDS

PRESENTS

THE GREAT

Snoozy Waters

AND HIS EXCELLENT BAND

OCT. 4 & 5 8PM - 1 AM

TICKETS AVAILABLE:
JOHN ORR ROOM
ENGINEERING SOCIETY OFFICES (over the campus bookstore)
AND
AT THE DOOR
ADMISSION IS $2.50

Beer & Liquor served
Tee & Coffee

books

Erich Von Daniken
In Search of Ancient Gods
Souvenir Press 1974

by Tony Davis

In Search of the Gods is the fourth book published by the now-popular Von Daniken. Search is a compendium of ideas from his three previous works. A heavy emphasis has been placed upon so-called "pictorial evidence" of extraterrestrial beings. Von Daniken's literary approach continues to be more fanciful and artificial with little use being made of the more scholarly approach that other writers on the unknown rely upon (e.g. Bernard Heuvelmans, and the late Joan T. Sanderson take a scientific approach in their studies.) Perhaps, though, it has been this "popular" unscientific approach which has led to Von Daniken's success.

Describing himself as a "Sunday archaeologist" he proceeds to delve into man's prehistory, questioning the unknown and unexamined in archaeology. Von Daniken again attacks scientific dogmatism for its refusal to be open-minded. By means of travel, Von Daniken has collected similar motifs on a world-wide basis, which supposedly relate to the visits of extra-terrestrial beings. In particular: flying serpents, wheels of fire, strange beings wearing geometrically fashioned clothing, and many other such enigmas come under Von Daniken's scrutiny.

While one is drawn to find some agreement in his theories, it is dangerously tempting to become caught up in total acceptance of these speculations.

Von Daniken finds it hard to conceive of Egyptians spending their lives building pyramids so that their pharaohs might have a final resting place. But what he doesn't seem to take into account is the religious fanaticism of the people involved, and that they were not enslaved, but hired under decent working conditions, and that Egyptian engineering - with only primitive tools and concepts - was highly developed. Von Daniken seems opposed to any notion that the human mind could achieve any ideas of merit on its own. In this critical vein, it is conceivable that some future Von Daniken, when uncovering the Statue of Liberty in New York, will assume that it is some form of sun god that the local peoples worshipped. Von Daniken can only speculate; he has little, if any, proof for his arguments.

And yet, one should not try to take away all of Von Daniken's thunder. He has raised several questions which clash with scientific theory. Inquiry about the electrical forces involved in the construction of the Ark of the Covenant from the Bible and other such enigmas have provided us with some doubts. In Search of Ancient Gods asks questions leading questions. It is up to the reader to decide the answers.

A film adaptation of his first book, Chariots of the Gods will be shown at Ellis Hall on October 11 at 8:00. The film is well-produced, in colour.

Treatment For Anxiety

Are you anxious a good deal of the time?

Are you easily upset by problems?

Do you tend to lack confidence in yourself?

If so maybe we can help you and you can help us.

A number of graduate students in the Psychology Department are conducting research to identify effective treatment for various forms of anxiety. Treatment in my study involves self-management training. Over 50 people have been treated so far with excellent results for most people, and no undesirable effects.

It involves 3 assessments at 2-month intervals and 7 weekly half-hour sessions, on an individual basis, to be conducted in October and November.

If you want information, phone 547-3048 (daytime) or 542-5357 (evenings)

Four regulars out

Sore Gaels face York

by Chris Boon

An injury-riddled Golden Gaels squad will be looking to even its O.Q.U.A.A. league record at two wins and two losses tomorrow when Queen's plays host to the winless York Yeomen at Richardson Stadium. Game time is 2:00 pm.

The Gaels, who were hit hard by the injury jinx last Saturday against Varsity, may be without the services of linebackers John Tovee and John Waddell, both of whom aggravated old wounds, while Greg McNamera (broken hand) and John Rudan (knee) are definitely out of action. Offensively, the Gaels will still be without all-Canadian fullback Dave Hadden, although he should be ready by the Carleton contest October 12.

Look for several new faces in Queen's lineup tomorrow. Jim Vanderwater should see some action at middle guard, while Jamie Domanski has looked good at a halfback spot this week. Randy Edgeworth, who has been working as a backup offensive guard, looked very good on defense last week, and could well see two-way action, as could Peter Sabiston, who was a linebacker in his early days with the Gaels. As for York, they appear to be suffering the usual fate of Wirkowski coached teams - a lack of teamwork. Some of their athletes, notably halfback Bill Hatanasea, have excellent skills, but they rarely get things together as a unit.

Look for the Yeomen to show a variety of motion out of a pro set, and they will probably try to run inside. Fortunately, their version of the power- "I" is not at the same level of efficiency as Toronto's. The Yeomen shouldn't be able to throw

John Tovee
- doubtful for Saturday

against the Gaels, especially if we can muster a pass rush.

The Gaels will have to prove they can move the ball against York. Everybody else has so far this year, and a failure to do so by the Gaels could be fatal. Considering the injuries, it could be a lot tighter game than most people think.

A Sports Editorial

'Let's show a little class, fans!'

by Chris Boon

It's about time that some of the loyal die-hards who follow Queen's football on the road picked up a little class to go along with their endless enthusiasm. For several years running, away games, both in Ottawa and Toronto, have been interrupted in the closing minutes by well-oiled contingents aiming for a piece of goalpost. When this sort of thing causes a delay in the game, or, as was the case in 1973, results in its early termination, it is bush league behavior of the worst kind, and, to put it mildly, is an embarrassment to the players and coaches who represent Queen's.

As Frank Tindall, the Gaels' much-respected head coach commented after last Saturday's game, "This kind of thing is giving Queen's a bad name all over the league. We appreciate the fan support, both at home and on the road, but when they stop a game with time still left to play, it does us a lot more harm than good."

The tradition of storming a rival's goalposts AFTER A VICTORY is deeply ingrained in the intercollegiate football fueds that Queen's has long enjoyed. When kept in that perspective, it is in the best spirit of the old "big four" rivalries, when Queen's, McGill, Toronto and Western were the cream of intercollegiate football. But, ladies and gentlemen, let's show a little class from now on. Don't disrupt a game in progress, and, if we lose, accept the defeat gracefully and leave the posts intact. (However, Queen's has NEVER lost a set of goalposts at home - that tradition we can definitely stand to keep intact.)

Rugby Gaels trounce Guelph

by Jim Ferguson

Last weekend, the Queen's Rugby Club travelled to Guelph University and played two successful matches with their Rugby Club. The Guelph first team placed second in their conference last year, behind Western University and twenty of their players have returned this year. This led the Queen's players to the mistaken conclusion that they were facing a strong side. The Queen's second team had defeated the Guelph second team in the O.U.A.A. championship last year. "The Gryphon Line-Up", a Guelph University paper, claimed that "the weather was the chief opponent". If it was a little snow that defeated them last year, it must have been a hurricane this year.

The weather did have an impact on the strategy of the game. An extremely strong wind blowing the length of the wet field was beneficial in supporting a kick but impossible to kick into. Another condition that made the game pleasant was the fact that the pitch had been soaking up water all night. This meant that hitting the dirt was more like falling into a water-bed.

In the first game, Queen's Seconds lost the toss so were forced to have the advantage of the wind in the first half rather than in the second, which is more desirable. The game started off slowly for both teams, but Queen's scored first with a rather odd try, as the scorer was thrust over the try line by some Queen's forwards led by Mike Kay. This broke the ice, and soon the Queen's Seconds were rolling.

Ken Cove was next to score from his wing position. In rugby, the wings only score if the whole backline is working well, and this was certainly the case in the first half against Guelph. Solid back play accounted for the tries by Reid Dury and Ken Cove, his second. The elusive scrum half, Rob Wikie, single-handedly took the ball over for another. The forwards were playing well also, for they provide the clean ball which the backs must score with. Don Johnson, a forward, accounted for the final try of the first half.

The second half was another story. With the wind against them, the Queen's team slowed down. Huw Llewellyn, the Guelph fly-half and a Welshman, dropped-kicked to score the Guelph team's first point. With some strong forward play, the Guelph team scored again, but further scores by Reid Dury and Phil Hamilton ended the game with an impressive 42 to 9 win for the Queen's Second XV.

The Queen's First XV entered their game more optimistically after seeing the Guelph Guelph received from the Seconds. This time Guelph had the wind in the first half, but they failed to capitalize on the advantage. When you have a strong wind behind you, the usual strategy is to kick the ball and chase it. For some reason the Guelph team did not attempt this, for when they did kick it was always to the sidelines and out of play. Further they made the blunder of running several of their penalties, instead of trying to kick them through. Even so, the Guelph team did score first on a penalty kick by Howie. The Queen's team deserve some castigation for receiving penalties which are always unnecessary. Dave Bowker and Richie Thomas both managed to get tries in the first half for Queen's. Although Queen's scored more points in the first half, the Guelph team threatened many times, mainly due to strong play by their forward line.

When the Queen's team got the advantage of the wind in the second half they ran away with the game. John Rutka picked up a long kick by Peter Kopp to score for Queen's. The wing, Richie Thomas, caught a "blind side" pass and sped on over the line to score again. Dave Bowker scored twice more to collect a total of three tries for the game. Peter Kopp must be commended in putting over three converts in the tricky wind. The final score of the game was a handsome 30 to 3 for Queen's.

The successes last weekend indicate that Queen's may have a strong chance of doing well this season. This Saturday, the 5th at 12:00, Queen's will be playing their first home game against York University at West Campus. York University won the O.U.A.A. championships last year. Although rugby does not get much spectator support, excepting, of course, those faithful rugby wives, it would be greatly appreciated. If you are not knowledgeable about the game, there are always players from one of the two Queen's teams watching the other team play and I am sure they would be glad to explain any questions you have. Finally, the York team, as well as Queen's, is noted for fast-moving back play, which should make the game exciting. I hope to see you there.

COMMODORE HOTEL
840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT
THIS WEEK: in our Lounge

Amateur Night every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

Wic-ly News

by Barb McDermott

Athletic Sticks are still needed to represent Engineering, Meds and Grads. Any interested persons are requested to contact Judy Riggan (544-2845) or Maureen Bouris (547-8939).

Want to earn some extra money? Convene an intramural winter term activity... Details on bulletin board of the Women's locker room. Applications should be made by Nov. 15 to Maureen Bouris (office 215) or the green box inside the entrance to the Women's locker room.

Girls! Come on down to the Phys. Ed. Centre for 3 fun filled evenings of Badminton. Sign-up sheets are on the bulletin board in the Women's locker room. It's from 9:00 to 11:00 in the Ross and Bartlett Gyms on Oct. 10, 17 and 24.

Journal Sports

desperately requires one or more sports editor-trainees
Come to office Sunday evening.
All Welcome.

we're open...
dimension stereo

337 PRINCESS ST.
549-5000

Thursday Friday

Saturday Sunday
October 17, 18, 19, 20

Parliament Hill: Indians on Warpath

Ottawa: On Monday, Parliament Hill was the scene of rioting and demonstrating by approximately four hundred Indians representing the 'Native People's Caravan'. The violence erupted when the RCMP made a second attempt to drive back the demonstrators who were smashing down the wooden barricades, destroying lights, and setting fire to the trees. The riot squad was called out when the RCMP detachment present was in danger from flying debris. The riot squad challenged the group with three foot batons, plexi-glass shields, and tear gas. The Indians retaliated using stones, broken light bulbs, carved clubs, canes with pointed metal ferrules, and wooden and metal spokes. Presently the demonstrators are holding up in the deserted federal building which they seized on the weekend. The building was to house the embassy for the 'Native People'. This violence is the first of its kind requiring the use of a riot squad since it was formed in 1967.

The Indian leaders have put forth a series of demands. They want the Ontario government to pay for food, accommodation, transportation and medical supplies for the members of the Native People's Caravan. They have also requested that all criminal charges laid against the Indians be dropped.

Reports have been filed that while Communist agitators were involved in the demonstration and that this may be the main reason for the confrontation between the Indians and the police.

briefly...

Peking: - The People's Republic of China celebrated their 25th birthday on Tuesday. Neither of the two leaders, Chairman Mao Tse-tung or Premier Chou En-lai, who were instrumental in the conception of the republic, were present for the celebration. Both men are ailing and are unable to assume many of their duties which is making a question of succession an imminent one. The political uncertainty was emphasized by the editorials which said the current struggle in China "will continue for a long time".

The Soviet Union marked the occasion with an article in Pravda criticizing Mao-Tse-tung for pursuing nationalist great-power policies aimed at destroying the unity of the socialist system. "Our Communist Party and the Soviet Government decisively reject the schismatic policy of the Maoist leaders, their slanderous inventions commonwealth, and their at-Leninism", the article quoted.

Ankara, Turkey: - Bulent Ecevit, the Prime Minister of Turkey, has given up his attempts to form a new coalition government, and has resigned Ecevit became a hero in Turkey over the summer when he ordered the invasion of Cyprus. A former Prime Minister, Suleyman Demirel, has been asked as a leader of the opposition to form a new government. Turkey lost its American military aid at the same time.

Caracas: - Venezuela has imposed a 3.5 per cent tax increase on oil retroactive to the first nine months of 1974. Originally the tax hike was scheduled for the last three months of this year however Mines Minister Valentin Hernandez made the increase retroactive in order to cut oil company profits without increasing consumer prices. The retroactive levy would add $363 million to the $77 million Venezuela would collect in the increased revenue for the last three months of this year. Forty-four per cent of the oil Canada imports comes from Venezuela.

Whitby: - Prisoners in the Durham Regional Jail will be receiving extra rations of shampoo. Several requests were forwarded to Ontario County Court Grand Jury when they made a tour recently. Due to increase length of prisoner's hair, the request has been granted.

Waterloo, Ont.: - The Union Gas Ltd. has warned their large volume gas users that they seek an alternate source of fuel. Union Gas expects that there will be a shortage in 1976. Among the institutions which received notices were the University of Waterloo, the University of Guelph and the University of Western. Dr. Mathews of Waterloo has stated that preliminary inquiries have shown that no alternate source is available. The University of Waterloo have said that if they are unable to obtain gas supplies they will be forced to close. The university of Western has decided to appeal to the government to maintain an adequate domestic supply level by restricting the volume exported.

Ottawa: - Mr. Trudeau has firmly stated that the report that he was determined to take an activist left-wing approach to international affairs was "pure fiction". The foreign policy will proceed along the same line.

backpage

118 market street, Kingston, Ontario K7L1W8
THE MARKET STUDIO
 bill milliken
 photographer
 telephone: 542-5790 area code 613

Queen's University

Music Department

JAZZ CONCERT

BY THE Queen's Jazz Ensemble

BIG BANO SOUNO FROM EARLY
 Classics to Avant Garde and Rock

GRANT HALL
 Thurs., Oct. 10th

TWO PERFORMANCES
 12:30 noon & 7:30 pm
 FREE

Mother sends you her best

Offer good for spaghetti and pizza only

Compliments of Mother, offer expires Oct. 31st. Mon. thru Thurs. Only

455 PRINCESS

549-0006

Queen's

Journal

Volume 102, Number 9

Tuesday, October 8, 1974

McArthur will stay with AMS

by Barb Nyland

For a number of years the possibility that McArthur College would withdraw from the A.M.S. has been tossed back and forth among its students. The subject arose again at a recent student's council meeting and the student government was told by Peter Druexman, Vice President of the A.M.S. that separation was a legal possibility although the newly elected student president Guy Morazain, later said, "The benefits of staying within the AMS at this time outweigh any benefits that might be received from separating."

Discontent at McArthur stems from a number of causes. Since the students are there for only one academic year (that is only six months as they are away teaching for two) it is very difficult to establish a continuity in activities and services, explained Morazain. In the recent election only 200 students out of approximately 750 voted. "Nobody knows anybody else after only two weeks," Morazain said, "and people would rather not vote at all than vote in the wrong way." In his campaign Morazain emphasized the need for greater continuity from year to year. Suggestions have been put forward to include in the papers given to each new student before he arrives a questionnaire concerning their interests. In this manner they will, for example, be able to find out which students are interested in becoming a part of the student government.

The distance from West Campus to the main campus creates a physical barrier which excludes the students from many university activities. Morazain cited as an example the use of the squash courts at the Phys Ed Centre. "To be assured of a court it is necessary to get there around 8.30 in the morning."

Di Eastman, the AMS representative for McArthur pointed out another difficulty. "Our cafeteria is not open on Saturday and Sunday and therefore we either have to go out for meals or use the concession machines if we don't have food in our rooms."

Morazain is considering another aspect of the food question. The residents have the option of cooking their own food but this is getting more and more expensive. "We are looking into the possibility of setting up a food coop which would bring the food to the students at a significantly lower price," Morazain has been discussing his idea with representatives of communes who have set up this type of organization before. "One possibility is that the students would order the food ahead of time and it would be distributed once a week. I'd like to set this up in association with the students from the main campus and would welcome any advice they might have," said Morazain.

Class reps vote for councillors

by Nancy Flood

The balloting for DSC reps in each department being now complete, elections for Divisional Councillors will be held tomorrow at 7 p.m. in Stirling Hall, lecture theatre D.

The three Councillors, one for each of the divisions of Humanities, Social Sciences, and Sciences upon their election become full members of the A.S.U.S. executive and, in possessing 3 out of 10 votes on that body, exert considerable influence. Having as their job the representation of all DSC's within their divisions, the Councillors act as a communications link rather than in any way a coordinating body over the autonomous DSC's between the department councils and A.S.U.S.

The Divisional Councillors, who must already be elected as OSC reps themselves have a formidable but worthwhile job according to election organizer, Student Senator and past councillor, Charles Cuffari. They must know the University well and must be able to deal with both the students and faculty members within the jurisdiction of their division. Several new opportunities will be open to them this year in addition to their responsibilities for communication, for the selection of the orientation committee and for control of the $1,600 tentatively allotted to the DSC structure by A.S.U.S. in this year's budget. They will be members of the new Arts Forum to be instituted by A.S.U.S. and, in sitting with Senators, A.M.S. reps, DSC chairmen and the rest of the A.S.U.S. executive, will have a wider range of output and feedback to and from other campus bodies.

Cuffari stresses the importance of DSC's, noting that at universities where they are just now being instituted, they are viewed with an enthusiasm far different from the scepticism which has limited the productivity of our own experienced councils. He looks to the election of truly interested and capable Divisional Councillors to help bring the OSC's to the level of effectiveness they can and should achieve and therefore urges all elected DSC reps to be present and voting in the elections on Wednesday.

Enthusiasm up in DSC but attitudes unchanged

by Nancy Flood

By now, elections for Department Student Council reps (DSC's) will be over in preparation for tomorrow's Divisional Councillors ballot. A.S.U.S. Vice-President John Ronson has spoken for the need to renovate the reputation of the DSC idea. This year he notes that awareness and enthusiasm are higher but the general attitude toward the utility of the reps does not seem to have changed much, particularly among the upperclassmen. Ronson suggests that the reason for this general mistrust of OSC's may lie in their origins as faculty instituted rather than student inspired bodies. Hoping to overcome this attitude, A.S.U.S. this year has initiated a new program of spring elections instead of the previous fall elections for DSC chairmen in each department. It is expected that this move will provide more continuity in the councils, ensuring that the chairmen who are in office run the fall elections and perhaps participate to some degree in the course counselling during Orientation Week. With the holding of a DSC workshop in two weeks and with the institution of a full time secretary-researcher (who has now been hired and who will start in the A.S.U.S. office tomorrow morning) Ronson has high hopes for this year's OSC's. Having received information about the already completed elections, formulated committee structure and planned activities of the Chemistry DSC, he believes that with similar cooperation from other departments a truly effective council can be instituted this year.

wat's hapnin' ?

Tuesday, October 8

7:00 p.m. - 9:00 p.m. - An informal noncredit seminar on the Philosophy of Mathematics has been arranged, beginning Tuesday, October 15th and continuing until November 19th. The seminar will be conducted by Professor P.E. Obreanu of the Department of Mathematics and Professor D.L.C. MacLachlan of the Department of Philosophy. The seminar is open to everyone and no technical knowledge of either mathematics or philosophy is presupposed. Topics will include: Mathematics and Ontology; The Nature of Infinity; The Idea of Space. The seminar will be held in John Watson Hall, Room 341.

9:00 p.m. - Department of Film Studies presents 8½ (Italy, 1963), directed by Federico Fellini; starring Marcello Mastroianni and Claudia Cardinale. The film will be shown in Ellis Auditorium. Admission $1.00 at the door.

Wednesday, October 9

7:00 p.m. - The Queen's P.C. Club will be holding its first general meeting of the 1974-75 year in the Upper Common Room of the Student's Union. Everyone is welcome.

7:00 p.m. - Taking Better Pictures. The second lecture of a ten lecture series on the non-technical aspects of taking pictures; given by the Queen's Camera Club in Stirling Hall.

7:30 p.m. - If you want to work overseas for two years, and have something to offer to the people of the third world in medicine, technology, agriculture, education or sciences, CUSO would like to hear from you. Meeting in the International Centre, Lower Lounge.

8:00 p.m. - The A.M.S. Education Commission presents a public lecture - Morton Schulman in Dunning Hall.

8:00 p.m. - A Day in the Life of Sri Chinmoy will be shown in the Upper Meeting Room of the International Centre. Admission: $1.00.

8:00 p.m. - Introductory lectures on Transcendental Meditation are given every Wednesday evening in Stirling Hall, Room 412A. Transcendental Meditation is a major scientific discovery. The practice is unique and its effects are unprecedented in their range. Admission free.

8:30 p.m. - Inaugural Organ Recital in Grant Hall. The first recital on the new organ in Grant Hall, by Hedwig Bilgram, Professor for Organ at the State Academy of Music in Minich. Music of Bach, Mozart, Duruflé and Reger. Admission free.

Thursday, October 10

12:30 p.m. & 7:30 p.m. - Concerts by Queen's Jazz Ensemble, Conductor Duane A. Bates. Big Band Sound from the Early Classics to the Avant Garde and Rock. Two performances. Admission Free. Grant Hall.

1:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m. - Owners of leftover books from the ASUS Book Sale may pick them up in the Student Affairs Centre (beside Vic Hall) 51 Queen Crescent.

7:00 p.m. & 9:30 p.m. - Two Lane Blacktop - in Dunning Hall Auditorium. Admission: $1.00.

7:00 p.m. - Queen's Ski Club. First general meeting will be held in Stirling D. There will be executive elections, movies, trip info and ideas. Memberships will be available at the meeting.

7:30 p.m. - Amigos! Amigos! The Spanish Club will be holding its first meeting at La Casa, 90 Queen's Crescent (across from Vic Hall). Executive will be called and plans made for the coming year. Everyone is welcome; Bienvenido a todo el mundo.

8:00 p.m. - Queen's Department of Film Studies and Division of Concerts presents Alfred Hitchcock's NOTORIOUS - a glossy produced film of the world of spies and counter-spies with Ingrid Bergman and Cary Grant. Admission is $1.50 at the door in Ellis.

Pubs and Theatres

Frontenac - Muldoon's - Two Plus One
Frontenac - Finnegan's - Henry Hughes (Scottish Folksinger)
101 Inn - Family Brown
Townhouse - The Newcomers

Capital 1 - Chinatown
Capital 2 - My Name is Nobody (with Henry Fonda)
Hyland - The Tamarind Seed (with Julie Andrews)
Odeon - California Split (with George Segal)

Agnes Etherington

The Agnes Etherington Art Centre is a community and regional art gallery. It is supported by Queen's University, the Canada Council, the Gallery Association and the National Museums Canada. Students memberships are available for $2.00. A sale and daily rentals will be held at the Art Centre from October 8 to 10. The gallery hours are:
Monday - Friday: 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Saturday and Sunday: 1 p.m. - 5 p.m.
Tuesday and Thursday evenings: 7 - 9 p.m.

Phys. Ed. Centre

Holiday Closing: The Physical Education Centre will be closed on Thanksgiving Day, Monday, October 14, 1974. The tennis courts on the arena roof will be open for play on that date and reservations for court use may be made on Saturday, October 12.

Court Reservations: The book for reservations of squash, handball-paddleball and tennis courts is available for bookings daily starting at the times listed:

Mon., Fri.: 7:45 a.m.
Tues., Thurs., Sat.: 8:00 a.m.
Sun.: 2:00 p.m.

Ice Reservations: The Administrative Office at the Physical Education Centre will start ice rentals for the Jock Hart Arena, starting Friday, October 11, 1974 at 9:00 a.m., at the Facility Reservations Wicket. It will be conducted in the same manner as last year: a representative will line up to rent ice one hour only per week. Normally the ice will be rented two weeks ahead (i.e. October 11 will be renting for the week of October 21). Ice times remaining and/or not confirmed by noon, Monday morning may be booked from 11:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, during the following week. Ice must be paid for one week ahead of time, by Monday at noon. The rental fee will remain the same as last year.

Faculty Staff, Student Recreational Skates: During the period Thursday, October 10 until Thursday, October 17, faculty, staff and student recreation skates will be scheduled Monday through Saturday from 4:30 p.m. to 5:20 p.m. and on Sundays, October 13, from 4:00 to 5:20.

Family Skates: During this same period of time, family skating will be scheduled on Saturday, October 12, 10 to 12 noon and Sunday, October 13, 2 to 4 p.m. A schedule of faculty, staff and student recreation skates and family skating periods from October 22 on will be published in a recreation brochure, available in the Athletics Office, Physical Education Centre.

A.S.U.S. ORIENTATION COMMITTEE

All meetings to be held in the Red Room, Kingston, Hall

Schedules:

Tuesday, October 8th at 6 pm

(i) first reading of By Law Changes (finance and committee structure)

Wednesday, October 9th at 9 pm

(i) Second (final) reading of By Law Changes
(ii) Finalisation of selection procedures (closed session)

Thursday, October 10th

first day for Orientation '75 applications application forms to be picked up in the ASUS office, MacIntosh-Corry Hall, B105

Wednesday, October 16th

receipt of Orientation '74 report
"Think Tank" - open discussion Purpose and programmes of Orientation

Sunday, October 20th to Friday, October 25 orientation '75 committee re-election procedures

All questions to the

ASUS Office, (9-5 pm) at 547-3069

or to Sue Harper (after 11) at 544-8583.

ASUS

2 ASUS Reps on AMS (1 yr. term)
(term runs until spring elections)

2 ASUS senators (1 yr.)
(term runs until August, 1975)

Nominations to be submitted by 4 pm, Friday, October 12 in ASUS box in AMS office, and must have nominee's signature plus signatures of 25 other Arts and Science students

A.S.U.S. AGENDAS

Tuesday, October 8, 6 pm,
Red Room Kingston Hall

I First reading - Orientation bylaws
- discussion of proposals primarily concerning finances, committee structure

II Other Business

Wednesday, October 9, 9pm, Red Room
(7 pm - election of A.S.U.S. Divisional Councillors Stirling 'D')

I Approval of minutes

II Executive Reports

III Business arising from the minutes:

a) Approval of ASUS 74-75 budget
b) Ratification of researcher - secretary - Nina Mahan plus committee report
c) Second (final) reading - Orientation By-Laws.
d) Approval of gifts and grants policy
e) outline - interviewing procedure.

IV New Business:

a) gifts and grants

V Other Business

VI Orientation '75 committee selection Procedures - closed session

For questions of additions to agenda, phone 547-3069 (9am - 5 pm) or leave note in ASUS mailbox, AMS office.

One man's politics...

by Doug Bonnell

Do you remember last spring, those hot June days, that long, and often frustrating, election campaign? Do you remember the speeches, the cross-country flights from St. John's to Victoria, whistling in the Maritimes? How about the glossy policies, the Prime Minister promising five hundred dollars to first-time home buyers, a two hundred ninety million dollar transportation policy that would have plunged the country into the forefront of modern transport? Then there was the mingling with the people, the sincere handshakes, the catchy slogans. Now for all the right reasons, People matter more. You and Trudeau: For Canada. They were good days. And they're gone.

A week and a day has passed since the reading of the Speech from the Throne that marked the opening of Canada's thirtieth parliament, and with it time to consider and evaluate that mighty document which has the power to alter the direction of Canadian society or to leave the nation alone. And if I discern correctly, we are being pretty much left alone.

I suppose it comes as no surprise. The party elected was the one which stood for the least fundamental change, the Liberal Party. They were the party that stood on leadership, on a defeated budget, and on economic policies which reflected the reactionary and somewhat Americanized attitude of the Ottawa financial bureaucracy. And, through no fault of my own, they won.

The substance of the speech lies with the government policy on inflation, an attack which can be considered four-pronged. It seeks first to increase the supply of goods and services in the country through incentives to food producers, aid to small business, an energy policy that involves the establishment of PetroCanada, and legislation to insure the resumed shipment of Western grain - a move which comes too late to prevent the down-grading of Vancouver as an international port. Second, it attempts to offer some assistance to those hardest hit by inflation, old-age pensioners and those on the lower-income bracket. Third, it calls for action against unjustified increases in incomes, prices and profits, and fourth, government restraint in spending.

These last two, spending restraint and controls on unjustified profits can be considered little more than promises of action and offer no indication of the depth of government policy in this area. "The government will be conscious of the need for restraint and careful phasing in relation to the state of the economy" or "Just as one group in society should benefit at the expense of others from inflation, so should no one group shoulder an unfair burden." These are the type of vague generalities which overshadow the policies of the Throne Speech.

There are no indications of how these unnecessary increases in the price of goods and services will be controlled, no indication of how, and to what extent the government will restrain its spending. There is no call for a balanced budget or the cutting off of funds to extraneous and inflationary government programmes. There is no five hundred dollar grant to first-time home buyers, no two hundred and ninety million dollar transport policy. It is, as Geoffrey Stevens writes, "a speech with no new insights, no new approaches, no evidence of fresh thinking from the East Block." June was beautiful, but it's going to be a long winter.

One woman's opinion...

by Lynn Byford

Rape is the crime that seems most depraved; most repugnant to the ideals embodied by Christians and western man. It is the only offence where the plaintiff must be proven "not guilty".

What causes it? What is the psychological motivation of a rapist? There are no pat answers. Some sociologists feel the free attitude toward sex, the increase in pornographic publications and the acceptability of voyeurism are directly responsible for the increasing rape rate. Psychologists label the phenomenon "momism" in which a resentment is built up towards women; a frustration and a desire to hurt them.

Despite the theoretical explanations, rape is a fact. What can one do to avoid being in a potentially provocative situation? Never walk alone after dark; always go in groups. If you find yourself forced to walk unaccompanied, choose well lit areas or better still, take a cab. Ironically enough in a society which fancies itself the epitome of civilization, one must walk in numbers during the evening to prevent being sexually molested.

All the prevention in the world is of little consequence if one has been raped. What does one do? Where does one go? Most people dealing with rape victims will advise getting to Out Patients as soon as possible. They have the facilities to prevent pregnancy and deal with emotional shock.

The most gruelling aspect of rape is the legal one. As majority of rape cases are never reported to the authorities, how can one combat a disease when one doesn't know where the infection is? In most police forces the vice squad deals with rape victims; however in some cities such as New York, rape departments, with specially trained members have been experimented with.

The decision to press charges and legally punish a rapist is not frequently made. Rape cases are messy and primarily presented and judged by men. Frequently the trial can prove more devastating than the rape itself. An Ottawa lawyer is alleged to have said in order to make a rape charge stick, "one would have to be a 90 year old virgin nun."

How is a problem as nebulous as rape combatted in a positive way? On campus several groups have organized requests that lighting, especially near Queen's Crescent and John Watson Hall, be improved. The Physical Plant will install fixtures around MacIntosh-Corry Hall within the next few weeks. However, rather than skirting about the perimeter of the problem, society must isolate the cause. Aspirin will alleviate the pain of a cold but penicillin will destroy the virus. The old ideas must be overhauled before rape will be viewed in a more intelligent light. Fallacies like "every woman secretly wants to be raped" and "anyone who gets raped was asking for it" must be seen as rationalization by a society of a phenomenon it can't accommodate or cope with.

Queen's Journal

Vol. 102, No. 9
Tues., Oct. 8, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor-in-Chief Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager Terry Collins
Business Anne Robertson, Steve Loughheed, Marjorie Hart, Madeline Kelly and Jane Gutteridge

Managing Editor Dan McClelland
News Editor Sarah Yarnell
Features Editors Peter Harnworth, Kerry White
Photography Editor John Cameron
Photographers Keith Bourns, John Bottomley, Mike Bloom, Jon Wilmer, Peter Case, Fud, Lyn Alwood
Backpage Michael Creagan, Classifieds Leslie Gaurkroger, David Selander
Elderstatespeople Chris Boon, Robert Wood

Contributors Barb Nyland, Ian Jarvis, Nancy Flood, Connie McCleese, Peter Walls, Chris Davis, Sandra Bernstein, Doug Hutchinson, Paul Luke, Anthony Pang
Comments Hey thanks, John, for the Journal! It was like three parries all at once: three times the eals, three times the booze, three times the euphoric bliss. Three times more incapacitated the morning after and three times more impossible to get this paper out to you on time.

Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone 547-266. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

GIFTS and BOOKS LTD.
282 Princess St.
KINGSTON 542-6676

ATTENTION MOEL GUN COLLECTORS
Terrific item to decorate your walls, the exact replica from World War II, POLICE OETEC-TIVE REVOLVERS and a good selection of WESTERN PISTOLS Manufacturer priced. from $19.95 to $51.95

STORE HOURS
OPEN Mon.-Fri. 9:30 am - 10 pm
Saturday 9:30 am - 9 pm
Sunday 12:00 noon - 9 pm

Queen's University Music Department

INAUGURAL RECITAL ON THE
NEW CASAVANT ORGAN
IN
GRANT HALL
BY
HEDWIG BILGRAM
WEONESDAY 8:30 p.m. 9th OCTOBER 1974 admission free

BOAT IN A BOTTLE
THOUSAND ISLAND CRUISE
Thursday, October 10
8 pm - Midnight
Full Indoor Capacity
Tickets: John Orr Room
10:30-5 p.m.
THIS WEEK
$9.00 per couple Singles: $5.00
BAND - BAR - DANCING

if YOU want to work overseas for 2 years, & have something to offer to the people of the 3rd World in:

medicine technology agriculture education sciences

CUSO
WOULD LIKE TO HEAR FROM YOU:
Wednesday, October 9th
7:30 p.m.
International Centre (Queen's)
Lower Lounge
(call 547-2807)

Queen's
Progressive Conservatives

First General Meeting
Wed. Oct. 9, 7 pm

Upper Common Room,
Student's Union

EVERYONE IS WELCOME

CAMPUS MOVIES

presents

Two-Lane Blacktop

by Monte Hellman

with

James Taylor

Warren Oates

Thursday, October 10, 7 pm & 9:30

$1.00 per person

Flair
PHOTOGRAPHIC

Has A Limited
Number of Appointments
Available for Graduation Portraits

Phone 542-7733 or visit
94 Brock St.
(Corner of Brock & Wellington)

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT

in our Lounge

THIS WEEK : Special Blend

Amateur Night every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

Science '78 presents

A Smoker

Admission Free

Wednesday, Oct. 9, at 7:30 pm

Clark Hall

Queen's Ski Club

General Meeting

Thursday, October 10

Stirling 'D'

7:00 pm

- Executive Elections
- Movies
- Trip information & ideas
- Memberships available

ALICE COOPER'S GREATEST HITS $2.99

When purchased with any other album

All Epiphone Guitars are at special prices this weekend example - 12 string Reg. $169.00

$119.00

As you must have heard by now.
We are selling all Gibson and Fender Products at 30% off Canadian list prices (until further notice)

10% OFF ALL
MUSIC BOOKS

We sell most of our books at American prices which are 10% below Canadian

DOLMETSCH RECORDS

Reg. $3.75

$2.99

This Weekend Only

Tremblay's Music Store

277 Princess St.

To Autumn
Season of mists and fruitfulness, Close bosom-friend of the maturing sun; Conspiring with thou to load the bare and bless with fruit and vines the leaves run; To bend with apples the fill all fruit with ripeness to the core;
to plump the hazel shells, With a sweet kernel;
still more, later flowers for the bees, Until the cease, For Summer has o'er-brimmed their clammy
the
to load the thatch age-trees, And the gourd, and the budding more, And warm days will never a poem by John Keats, 1820

FLYING HOME AT XMAS
Be sure ..... RESERVE NOW!
GRANT'S TRAVEL SERVICE
127 Princess St. Est. 1954
"The Student Travel Professionals"

W.U.S.C.

(World University Service of Canada)
What is it? What does it do?

To find out, join us at 7:00 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 17
Upper Meeting Room,
International Centre

-meet Bill McNeill-director of WUSC
-if you are interested in programs of work or travel in the 3rd World,
be there. for further information call 547-2807

Sepp's Ski Shop

Sepp's Pre-Season Special:

Fiberglass skis and quality binding for under $100.00
You save $45.00

Haganfiberglass skis reg. $90.00 down to $65.00

Tyrolian binding reg. $52.
(while quantities last) down to $32.00

New stock is in and selling fast.

SKIS

Hart Free Style
Hexcell
Kneissl
Volkl

BOOTS

New Hanson (custom fitted)
Koflach
Ricker
Dolomite

Skiwear by Nancy Green
Complete line of Cross Country Equipment

OUR WITHIN-YOUR-REACH DIAMONDS
ARE OUT-OF-THIS-WORLD

Ready to be slipped on your finger.
All in our wide selection of heavenly diamonds in glorious mountings. At down-to-earth prices. We'll show you many different shapes... many different sizes. Come choose your dazzler that puts heaven close at hand brilliantly.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE

JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON ONTARIO

Clapton and band disappointing

by Doug Hutchinson
Last Wednesday night at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto Eric Clapton and his new band put on a mediocre show. It has been claimed of Clapton that he is more interested in playing as a soloist, but his performance disproved that claim. Clapton was always a superlative band member (as with Delaney and Bonnie and in "Keep on Growing"), for instance on "Layla", but in Toronto he seemed to be unable to creatively jam with his band and so appeared to be more of a soloist than he has in a long time.

He started his set with two acoustic numbers which, though pleasant, showed no improvement from the acoustic guitar he was playing over three years ago on "Eric Clapton". He played "Badge" and the Blind Faith song "Can't Find My Way Home", which, though creditable, certainly added nothing to the original versions. He played four very long and very boring songs from his new album, all on the level of the insipid "I Shot the Sheriff". When he pulled out his slide guitar and started to play the blues, he seemed to have found his strength again, but after a little while it appeared that he was not succeeding. The problem was that he is not an excellent slide guitar player. He brutalized the possibilities of the song by not allowing the guitar to sing (as did Duane Allman in "Layla").

The highlight of the evening was a re-interpretation of the Hendrix song "Little Wing" which he first played on the "Layla" album. Clapton used a single guitar and a single voice instead of the two voices and the two-guitar chord progression which gave the original version such solidity. His more delicate approach, combined with a slower tempo, supported the lyrics more effectively than did the original approach. But unquestionably the low point of the performance was a tragically castrated version of "Layla" which left me shaking my head and wishing to be back home listening to the record. The tempo was too fast; the treble section of the two-guitar chorus was often missed, and once the band slipped painfully out of key. He abused the song by completely eliminating the second half of the piece, the sublime piano-slide guitar section, which, it seems to me, transforms the song from a very good piece into one of the finest works of modern popular music. In effect he capitulated to the aesthetic of those Top 40 radio programmers.

The reasons for Clapton's decline are probably very complex, but one factor was very obvious—the band was not up to his standard. Because for minutes at a time they were playing the same phrases, he was unable to creatively improvise with them. The band was not together—so much so that to end a song, Clapton had to turn his back to the audience, signal to the drummer and grind out the major chord of the song—a classic high school band technique. Not once in the show did Clapton show any speed, any inventiveness or any intensity. He stuck to the pop style of his new album, only once venturing into the classic American blues at which he is so incredibly proficient. Eric Clapton is playing in the wrong idiom with the wrong musicians, and the result was a very disappointing evening.

Bitter Grounds returns

by Chris Davies

Before the show, Friday night, I chanced upon the Band's road-hand floundering about in their truck. He insisted that it was New Years and that we should have a drink. That was fine and so in the ensuing twenty five minutes he told me all of: Teddy Gerow was on the keyboards, Doug Orr played bass, Richard Patterson pounded the drums, Zeke Mazurek makes Don Messer roll over in his grave every time he touches the fiddle but that Sneezy Waters plays guitar and "generally mesmerizes audiences."

And mesmerize he did for the better of the evening. The enthusiasm evoked by Sneezy and the group for both the music and the people made up for their many shortcomings. At times they were having so much fun that the music was horrendous! The "bluegrass" section of the show which included the "St. Louis Tickle" and "Lonesome

Fiddle Blues" was exceptionally well done however. You might say that they were versatile in as much as they experimented with folk as well as rock songs but the overriding influence in whatever they chose to play, even songs which should have required a bit of finesse and sensitivity, inevitably ended up as nothing more than a rollicking satire. This style in some instances such as their rendition of the Beatles "P.S. I Love You" was downright hilarious, thus effective.

As an opening group for Bitter Grounds they were a solid choice in that they were competent and confident enough to keep everyone with them. Right from the beginning Sneezy established for himself a good rapport with the audience which he never lost. No doubt the intimate atmosphere of the room enhanced this, but then again, isn't that what a coffee house is all about? Welcome back Bitter Grounds!

film reviews

'Performance': violent insight

by Paul Luke

Performance is a movie impossible to resist. Its penetration of the mind of the viewer is so complete that after a few minutes into the film one is no longer a dispassionate onlooker but a manipulated participant. Initially resembling a pastiche of refuse from the cutting room floor, Performance accumulates an intensity in a series of scenes and images which resolve themselves into a movement from the barbaric to the transcendent, from the loathsome to the seductive, from the violent to the docile.

Performance flirts with a kind of stylized gangster plot. A savage hit-man for the mob, Chas (James Fox), is forced to flee his fellows and take refuge in an apartment owned by a retired rock star named Turner (Mick Jagger). The mob discovers Chas' hideout and arrive to kill him, but not before Chas has undergone a transformation which makes death look comparatively uninteresting.

It is the scenes of Chas' personal revelation that are the culmination of the film's artistic power. Turner quickly sizes Chas up, and by feeding him some kindred of the panacea mushroom forces him into a tumultuous ritual of self-confrontation. At the end the union of the two spheres of the film as embodied in Turner and Chas receives a violent consummation.

The film's artistry is a product of a uniform level of excellence in all its components. Oblique, demented dialogue is matched by mishapen close-ups and unnervingly immediate images. Performance is carefully cluttered with bizarre sets and lavish costumes designed to enhance the seductive, exotic atmosphere of the latter part of the movie. Jack Nitzsche's music, sporting vocals by Jagger, is nothing less than superb.

It is Mick Jagger perfectly cast as the enigmatic Turner, who binds the film together, lending its shifting sexuality and its seemingly deranged but unnerving insight. Turner is the ageless, all-knowing demigod, able to play all roles, savour all sensations, inspire all feelings. Jagger doesn't so much act as milk his mythic rock star persona, pushing it to new levels of power, invading the mind and demanding surrender and self-examination. All of this is epitomized in the film's climax where Turner tells a now submissive Chas that all he wants to do is to get inside his skull. Chas is not the only one whose psychic chastity is so effortlessly violated. Performance enters into the viewer's skull too, with a consuming directness that cannot be easily withstood, nor easily forgotten.

more films

Polanski's sinister 'Chinatown'

by Sandy Natman

Roman Polanski is a brilliant story teller. He is able to give subtle clues, carefully spaced so that the final crescendo of the tale is a harsh and frightening blow to the audience. He did this with Rosemary's Baby and he does it again with Chinatown, a clever and fascinating mystery set in the 30's in Los Angeles.

Jack Nicholson plays a private detective with a searing wit and a coarse and rather raunchy sense of humour. Jake Gittes is commissioned by a woman to find out whether her husband is having an affair. This seems to be run of the mill stuff for Gittes and he gets the information he needs but when his information explodes onto the front pages of one of the large Los Angeles dailies everything goes haywire.

The plot twists back and forth and neither Gittes nor you seem to know exactly what is going on. Faye Dunaway who plays the wife of the errant husband is a chronic liar, the police seem to be extremely shady and any of the major characters could be involved in the phony water distribution deal which is the frame of this murder mystery.

Nicholson plays the cool, unruffled detective in one of his best performances since Five Easy Pieces. He is an actor who has a fabulous smile, a twinkle in his eye and a strange and elusive sexiness about him. Dunaway here is also extremely effective as a less than grieving widow. And the entire cast bring out Polanski's ultimate purpose, his strange fascination with wealthy decadence, his penchant for evil at an incredibly gut level.

Chinatown is an interesting title for the film. We discover that Gittes has worked in this section of Los Angeles and wants to forget his experience as quickly as possible. We never see until the very end, but the motif is woven through the film and everyone who has in any way been connected with the place would rather never think about it again. And so when the final sequence in Chinatown unfolds we get a strange sense of foreboding, we know something is going to happen, something horrible, and it does.

Polanski is obviously a fan of the thirties mysteries, ones like The Maltese Falcon, for his film seems to be an attempt to recreate the suspense-cum-romance mix which typified the era. He has made an admirable attempt, but there is so much sophistication in Chinatown which contemporizes it.

This is not by any means a problem. The film is intriguing. Unlike so many current so-called mysteries which let the audience see the evil deed and then trace the steps of justice in uncovering it, we are never told until the end what has happened and the genesis of the murder are incredibly hidden, even, Gittes is taken aback when he discovers all the twists in the tale.

See Chinatown Polanski has recreated the thirties with faithfulness and care, he has placed a sophisticated 1970's story in an era which holds a lot of glamour and interest for us today, and the ending is brilliantly startling.

'California Split'

by Sandra Bernstein

Bill is a magazine editor whose business is failing. Charlie is an easy-going professional gambler. They meet at a shabby poker palace, horse around at a number of racetracks, and two-time Dame Fortune by escorting a couple of hooker friends around town.

Unfortunately, Bill has played too much from the office too many times, and his losses wax tremendous. Shady creditors loom in the wings, so he and Charlie board a Greyhound for Reno to make it rich.

This is the plot of "California Split". Robert Altman's (MASH) latest film, which is currently playing at the Odeon. It offers no complex con game, no method, no "Mission Impossible" antics. Bill and Charlie both win money at poker, but the major part of the Reno winnings derive from Bill's massive "winning streak", which arrives just in time. Its advent highlights the difference between the men, for gambling is Charlie's life, while to Bill it is a hobby or means to an end. Charlie's eyes gleam as he cries that now they can spend the rest of their lives just moving from racetrack to racetrack. In his inability to give up gambling, he leaves his friend behind.

Conversely, Bill has been unwilling to share the mood of the streak, preferring to share the winnings after. Perhaps he does not see what he has become until he sees Charlie's reaction.

Don't let this suggest to you that the film presents any remarkable insights into motives for gambling, or even into the characters of the two men. We can understand that a man desperate for money may dream of success at the roulette table, but Altman never quite reconciles to us the two images of Bill: one a sophisticated, sensitive writer with a tastefully decorated office, and the other who frequents topless bars, betting near-strangers that they can't name the seven dwarfs.

Elliott Gould is engaging as Charlie, but both he and George Segal have thrown their energies into a script and characters of negligible interest.

There is little of the snappy repartee we remember fondly from MASH; and Gould and Sutherland in that film actually deported themselves with more astute gamesmanship than this pair is allowed to do in their chance-dominated world.

The two women—shallow, semi-comatose Susan (Gwen Welles) and infantile Barbara (Ann Prentice)—are shoved into the background, apparently to highlight the stars, with the consequence that we don't get to know them, or even precisely what they are doing in the picture.

Altman has underlined the sordidness of the grown men's adolescent activities by abandoning the stars' previous boyish images. Cinema idol Gould is shot massaging his gums with the end of a toothbrush, and Segal seems to have mellowed into the Brian Keith of the seventies.

Altman directs with professional polish, and comes up with several clever shots, assisted by photographer Paul Lohmann. However, this is clearly a commercial film, catering to the tastes of a movie viewer who is not interested in learning about the characters or about himself.

Pipe organ recital

An event of special importance is to take place in Grant Hall on Wednesday, October 9th at 8:30 p.m. when the Music Department will present the inaugural recital, by Hedwig Bilgram, of Munich, West Germany, on its newly installed Casavant Organ. The new pipe organ, designed and built by Casavant Freres Ltee., of St. Hyacinth, Quebec, and located in Grant Hall, is a mechanical-action (or "tracker") type. This, together with the tonal design of the pipe-work, means that the organ is an historically accurate replica of the kind of organ used by J.S. Bach and other composers of his period.

The special attribute of this organ is that it makes possible 'authentic' performances of Baroque and pre-Baroque organ music, as well as some of the repertoire of the 19th and 20th centuries.

Organist Hedwig Bilgram, born in Muenchen, Germany, studied at the State Academy of Music with Karl Richter and Friedrich Wührer, and is considered to be one of Germany's outstanding organists. The recipient of several awards and prizes, she has performed extensively in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, France, Italy, the Soviet Union, and Japan, and has appeared in concerts under von Karajan, Kubelik, and Richter. Since 1961, Hedwig Bilgram has been Professor of Organ at the State Academy of Music in Munich. Her appearance in Grant Hall on Wednesday has been made possible through the assistance of the Germany Embassy and the Goethe Institute, Toronto.

The program will include organ works by J.S. Bach, Mozart, Maurice Duruflé, and Max Reger. Admission is free.

Bite the one you love

STEAK & STUFF
LICENCED DINING ROOM 1399 Princess (near the station)
AUNT LUCY'S RESTAURANTS LTD.

See All The New
Programs This Year
With 11 Channels to Choose From On ...

cable tv
544-6311

Over 12,000
Kingston Homes
Can Now Enjoy

cable tv
544-6311

Additional Outlets
Are Available For
Television or Stereo
For 1.25 Month

No additional connection charge if ordered at time of initial installation.

cable tv
544-6311

Rugby Gaels edge York 15-9

Gaels' kicking game was crucial in Firsts' close win

by John Ferguson
Early in the 1973 season, York defeated Queen's by a narrow margin. This had a decisive effect on Queen's for the rest of the season. Even though Queen's did beat York later in the season, it was York which went to and ultimately won the O.U.A.A. championships. Last Saturday, Queen's met York for the first time this season. In a hard fought, physical game Queen's managed to come up with a 15 to 9 win.

The game began at the early hour of 12:00 in ideal conditions. It was sunny and warm with a cooling breeze and the field was soft. It started off as a kicking game the intention behind this tactic to get the ball deep in the opponents territory, where a determined running drive could put the ball over to score. Setting the ball into the opponent's territory is achieved by kicking the ball to the opposing fullback and trying to catch him before he gets a chance to get rid of it. This type of exchange lasted for the first quarter of play. Finally, the tactic proved successful for Queen's. Rickie Thomas beat his opposing number to the ball and tossed it to Rick Evanson who scored. Peter Kopp kicked a ball placed in the corner at the 25 yard line to convert the try.

One thing noticeable about the game was the tough nature of the tackling. Both teams knew the importance of the game and were very determined to beat their opponents physically as well as in the score. Evidence of this fact was the number of times there were "men down" during the game. In rugby, if a player is badly shaken up, the play is stopped for a maximum of two minutes to give him a chance to recover.

In the second quarter of play, Queen's dominated the game by keeping the ball in the York end. During this part of the game the backs for Queen's showed they were developing some more intricate maneuvers such as the loop which they had not been using before. Queen's second try showed the advantage of having forwards who can support the backs. Jim Barnett, a forward received a pass from Evanson to score after the attack had slowed down. Kopp also converted this try.

At the half, the score in the game was 15 to 0 for Queen's. In the previous year the situation was much the same. Queen's lost the game because they began to play defensively in the second half and finally died altogether. This year, again, the York team "came on strong" in the second half. They threatened to score many times but Queen's was equal to the task and let them score a try only once. York scored in a play which they called a "fullhouse". Starting from a five yard scrum the forwards would pass the ball on sequence at very close quarters so that there was no opportunity for Queen's players to get it. Mario Rapini finally dove over the line, when he got close enough, to score. The factor which made the difference between this years win and last year's loss was the fact that the Queen's players are in much better condition this year. This enabled them to keep up the hard hitting play until the very end of the game.

The other points of the game were scored on penalty kicks. Throughout the game there were many penalties for both sides, most called out of kicking range and so not as serious as they might have been. There was one successful penalty kick by each side which accounts for the rest of the points.

With this win under their belts, the Queen's first will go on to meet Western next weekend. The support given by the spectators was greatly appreciated and I am sure they enjoyed watching rugby at its best.

Earlier that morning the Queen's seconds had a friendly match against the Kingston Club. Many players were substituted in order to give everyone a game. The score was 18-4 for the Queen's seconds. The Queen's tries were scored by John Gibson, Ralph Lutes and Rob Wilkie while the Kingston try was scored by John Edwards.

Injuries, officials hamper hockey Gals

by Kathy Keely

The women's field hockey teams travelled to Guelph on Thursday to play in the Early Bird Tournament. This is an annual exhibition tournament that all the Intercollegiate teams, both Senior and Intermediate, attend. This year eight Senior and six Intermediate teams played in the round-robin schedule. Thus we had a chance to play all the teams that will compete in the final two tournaments.

The Seniors came up with a one win, five loss, and one tie record. Initially, it doesn't appear to be an outstanding record, but the team deserves credit for an ever-improving performance despite the accumulation of numerous injuries.

On Friday they tied Western 0-0 in their first scheduled game. However, three Queen's goals were called back due to violations made by Western. Queen's did gain possession of the ball at the end-line (short corner) but the play should never have been called back in the first place. After this discouraging start, the Gals lost to Waterloo 1-0. In this game, Leslie Ferrari hurt her ankle and had to be taken to the hospital. She returned in time to play in the fourth game. They then lost to McGill 4-0 and Toronto 4-0. U of T was stifled in the first half except for a goal that was kicked in. It should not have counted but it did! The four game marathon took its toll as Gail Thompson hurt her wrist, Nanette Cuddy her hip and import Jane Peterson was playing with a pulled groin muscle.

Saturday began with a 4-0 loss to McMaster. The seniors then went on to beat Guelph 2-1 on goals by Janice Wager.

By the end of the tournament

the team was beginning to show promise of better offensive scoring punch. Special mention should go to Janice Wager who really worked hard around the goal. The defense looked strong against most teams. A few moments of relaxation in each game seemed to be fatal as clusters of goals were scored. The goalie Cathy Smith, looked impressive in challenging the opposing forwards, especially against U of T.

The teams to beat seem to be Toronto and McGill. Queen's has the potential to be a strong contender if they can find the goal and continue their defensive work.

The Intermediates on the other hand, were as good as any other Intermediate team there. They started out slowly by losing 3-1 to Laurentian. Debbie Stretton got the only Queen's goal. They then tied McMaster 0-

0, and lost to Toronto 2-1. Pearl Dixon was the only sharp shooter this time. That ended Friday's series of games. Saturday was a whole new day as they trounced Ottawa 4-0 with Pearl getting two goals, Lyn Atwood 1 and Carolyn Broadhurst 1. McMaster consented to another exhibition game and Queen's handed them a 3-0 defeat. Pearl and Lyn each scored, and a goal typical of the team's enthusiasm finished the scoring. Everyone on the forward line kept banging away at the ball until somebody finally knocked it in. The Intermediates showed a great drive to win and certainly must be considered a top contender in the final tournaments. Both field hockey teams can look forward to bettering their statistical performances of this past tournament. The first league tournament is October 25 and 26 here at Queen's. Everyone's support would certainly be appreciated so why not come out and watch some fine Field Hockey!

Gals' goalie Cathy Smith blocks shot against Toronto

Gaels tops in OU Golf

A strong second-day performance brought Queen's Golf Gaels the OUAA championship here this weekend, as they came from eight shots off the opening-day pace set by the University of Waterloo to edge McMaster by six shots, 611 to 617. Waterloo finished third while Toronto took fourth place.

Bill White led Queen's charge on Friday with a smooth three-over-par 73 on the tight, tree-lined Cataract Golf and Country Club course.

Don Clark added a 74, while John Colwell and Mike Clair both carded 75's to give Queen's a 297 total for the day, enough for their victory.

In the individual competition, McMaster's Dave Moser took the title with a 71-74, 145 total, with Fred Wilder of Waterloo second at 149 and Adam Brown of Guelph third, again at 149. Mike Clair and Don Clarke tied for fourth with 151 totals.

Passing game key

by Jim LeMesurier

The injury hampered Golden Gaels needed an impressive 4th Quarter scoring outburst to overcome and eventually bury the surprisingly stubborn York University Yeomen 30 to 7, in a Saturday afternoon clash at Richardson Stadium. For much of the game it was the winless Yeomen who appeared to have a more balanced and consistent attack, but a staggering six turnovers in Queen's territory kept them frustrated long enough for the Gaels offence to finally take command.

Darrel Penner opened the game with a 46 yard kickoff return up the sideline to the York 53, but on their first play from scrimmage, the Gael's Kery Gaels' flanker Bruce Pollock grabs clutch reception in York contest.

X-C sweeps regionals

At the Eastern Regional Cross-Country championships held in Ottawa this weekend, Queen's won both the Junior and Senior titles, over club teams from Eastern Ontario. Sophomore Bob MacCormack won the individual junior championship as well, with a time of 18:40.0 for the 6000 metre distance.

Queen's distance coach Walter Eadie has been very impressed with the cross-country team so far this year, what with its having won the prestigious R.M.C. Invitational last weekend. Members of the junior winners included MacCormack, and rookies Mike De Guida, Max Barr and Doug Brown, while the seniors were led by Dave Landriault, who finished third with Dieter Stein, Doug Robinson, Ted Metcalf, Dave Pichora and Mark Ziegler.

Tennis Gaels second

Queen's tennis team placed second to the University of Toronto in the OUAA's Eastern Sectionals on the weekend, but that wasn't good enough for them to advance to the finals. The Gaels' squad of Stu Watt, Neil Jacoby, Henry Brenzel and Al Hayes finished with a total of 10 wins, seven behind Varsity's foursome. Watt lost a close match to Toronto's Keith Porter, the eventual individual winner.

Bews News

by Carl Kirkpatrick

Bews Standings to October 8, 1974:

1. P.H.E.	5315	6. Law 77	3676
2. Arts 76	4560	7. Civil	3556
3. Meds	4250	8. Comm 78	3440
4. Comm 77	3986	9. Mining	2466
5. Mech	3865	10. Electrical	1500

Bews sports ended its third week of competition in what may be the story for the rest of the year. Point standings between the first eight sections are separated by only 1800 points. These standings may change with the upcoming events of the next couple of weeks, but I doubt if they will vary very much. Each section's time seems to have the enthusiasm and the organization to keep it a close race.

Unfortunately last week's events were marred by bad weather and poor field conditions but this week a full schedule of games will be played if weather permits. Schedules are posted on the Bews board and it is advised that these should be checked once a day to verify the time and place of each event. Any questions about scheduling or about Bews in general can be answered in room 108A of the P.H.E. Building. A reminder that Harrier will be run on Wednesday October 9, at 6 p.m. at West Campus. Contact your Athletic Stick.

Fourth-quarter surge beats York 30-7

Powell fumbled the ball and defensive halfback Doug Ward recovered for York. Four plays later, Yeoman, quarterback Doug Kitts sent fullback Kevin Beagle through the line, but Beagle left the ball behind and Al Stretton made the first of his two fumble recoveries.

The action then slowed down considerably as neither team could manage much offensively, but the ever versatile Peter McNabb brought 4000 cheering fans to their feet with a classic 87 yard punt return to the York endzone. The former Trinity College School star headed up the middle of the Yeomen coverage before speeding down the sideline and diving in the last 10 yards backwards, a la Johnny Rogers. Unfortunately, a clipping penalty nullified the efforts of this veteran crowd pleaser. The offense continued to have their problems but did get a consistently outstanding performance from their 3rd down specialist, punter Tom Taylor. For the third consecutive week Taylor tried to split the seams on the piskin and almost did. He managed an impressive 39 yard average, while eliminating the return threat by repeatedly kicking to the sidelines.

Moments after Taylor's booming single had given the Gaels a 1-0 lead, quarterback Raold Serebrin sent halfback Brian Titley out of the backfield for an 18 yard pass and run advance, then, four plays later, launched a perfect spiral deep to flanker Bruce Pollock who gathered it in for a 45 yard touchdown. Will Kennedy added the convert for an 8-0 advantage at 8:28 of the second quarter. Once again, the pace of the game slowed with neither offense sparking, but the Gaels defense forced two more turnovers to help keep the Tri-Colour Squad out of trouble as the half ended.

York opened the second half with a strong attack led by halfbacks Bill Hatanaka and Bob Palmer. For most of the third quarter, these two hit their holes and broke tackles while enjoying great success down the middle, as the absence of injured veteran linebackers John Tovee and John Waddell put a strain on their defensive unit. The Yeomen churned up eight first downs in their first three series, but twice turned the ball over the now faltering Gaels, before posting a major on Beagle's off-tackle burst at 13:01, to narrow the count to 8-7.

Just when some sceptical supporters might have smelt an upset, Penner's explosive 62 yard kick-off return ignited the Gaels' smoldering offensive fires. Titley, who had gained most of his yards on second effort, made 7 yards to the York 18 and Serebrin hit tight-end Wes Garrod on a quick look-in pattern for 17 more. Titley then plunged over at the 14:43 mark, from one yard on, and the Gaels never looked back.

Taylor and Kennedy (on a wide field goal attempt) added singles before Serebrin found Pollock on a slant in the endzone to cap a 58 yard scoring drive at 13:00 of the final frame. 24 to 7 wasn't enough for the hungry Gaels who came right back three plays later after Bill McIver intercepted a desperation Yeoman pass. On the last play of the game, Titley took a screen pass at the 15 and, ignoring the numerous Yeomen defenders on his back, staggered into the endzone for the 30-7 conclusion.

The Gaels were expected to win this one, but were not as convincing as they could have been. Dave Hadden's absence was again felt as the ground attack picked up just 84 yards on 33 carries, but the Beast should be back in action next week against Carleton. The defense should turn in another fine performance, and if Hadden can provide some much needed offensive balance, the Gaels will be well on their way to an O.U.A.A. Eastern Division play-off berth.

10.5 seconds

Fraser sets new 100-metre mark

Cauley, the Gaels' track captain was right behind in both events.

In men's relay competition, Queen's Old Boys proved the class of the field, taking the 4x200 event in a time of 1:30.0, a full three seconds ahead of U of T. Three members of the Queen's foursome are current national team competitors (Fraser, Dave Jarvis and Don Price) while the fourth was Brian Aiken, now in his second medical year at Queen's, who has run out of OUAA eligibility.

In the women's competition, Pam Scoborn dominated the field events for Queen's, sweeping firsts in shot, discus and javelin, while Mary Anne Drinkwater, the Gal's premier sprinter, recorded a pair of victories in 100 and 200 metres, in times of 13.2 and 27.5 seconds respectively. Patty Neelands took first in the 800 metres for Queen's, then added a second in the 500 metre, behind Rita McMinn of York.

Queen's next competition will be the University of Waterloo invitational meet at Waterloo next Friday; this will be their final tune-up before the OUAA championships at McMaster October 19th.

Soccer takes two

by M. Burnes

After losing to York last Saturday the Soccer Gaels bounced back to take a pair of games from R.M.C. (4-1) and Trent (2-1). The addition of these wins moves the Gaels into second place in the O.U.A.A. East Division. Yet, under the present league structure only the first place team in each division move to the All Ontario Finals so the team can't settle for second spot. Generally, both games were dominated by the Gaels but this advantage as such wasn't turned into goals. While the two goals which opposition mustered in both games weren't of their own creation either, the lone R.M.C. marker came from a penalty kick in the last moments of play, while in Trent's case a back pass to the goalie was completely off target and opposition scored into an empty net as the keeper had moved out for the pass that never came.

In the R.M.C. match, Queen's goals were scored by Rochus Klug, Dave Prescott, Brian Sawyers and Nic Drysdale again accounted for the Gaels score. The next and last home game of the season will be at West Campus on Friday, October 11 at 4:30 p.m. (This will be confirmed in Friday's Journal and by public notices as it is a change from the Athletic Schedule Card's List of Events).

backpage

Ottawa: Legislation to make "O Canada" the country's official national anthem, and to change some of the repetitious wording, was introduced in the House of Commons Friday by Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner. The bill cuts out two "stand on Guard" phrases and one "O Canada" from the standard version. The first English translation was done by Dr. Thomas Richardson in 1906. An official version was adopted in 1927 and the playing of "O Canada" became so general that it was given no formal recognition as our national anthem by the government. The bill was introduced originally in February 1972 but died when Parliament was dissolved for the October 1972 election.

Toronto: Ontario Education Minister Thomas Wells announced 1975 basic spending ceilings for 125 local school boards. The new ceilings mean school trustees can spend up to 24.3 percent more on each elementary student and 13 percent more on each secondary student. The general increase of 13 percent roughly matches the rate of inflation. The government also added $80 per elementary school pupil to strengthen elementary school programmes. This extra $80 will give the school trustees the opportunity to reduce class sizes and hire needed consultants.

Ottawa: Canada's armed forces are cutting staff and other costs and are studying how to trim what they term a much needed modernization programme in an effort to remain within their budget despite inflation. The forces have been allowed to drop to about 2,500 below authorized strength, along with plans to cut operating costs and a reduction in capital expenditures.

Ottawa: The International Joint Commission warned that it would make "loud public noises" if the U.S. and Canadian governments did not start replying to their recommendations. It expressed concern over failure of the governments to respond to recommendations on water quality, vessel waste regulations and air pollution in the Detroit and Windsor area. As well other proposals have not been acted on.

Long Beach, Calif.: Former U.S. president Richard Nixon left hospital Friday to return to his San Clemente residence. Nixon had spent 12 days in hospital for treatment of plebitis. Meanwhile in Washington, the Senate Appropriations Committee voted to limit federal funds provided to Nixon to $200,000 this year. This is more than 75 per cent below the amount requested by President Gerald Ford. In a further setback for the ailing Mr. Nixon, the Senate voted to cancel an arrangement that gave him custody of his White House tapes and papers. The bill is designed to prohibit destruction of the documents and to assure they are made available to the courts and public in the interest of learning the full story of Watergate.

Boston: White students staged a nearly total boycott of schools Friday in protest against a court ordered plan to desegregate schools by busing black students into white neighbourhood schools. About 7000 whites marched in a two mile long parade for two hours in one section of the city. Police reported scattered incidents of violence including a stabbing of a white student.

Santiago: Chile's military government said Friday it has released 386 political prisoners in the past 22 days but is still holding another 748.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT
SUNDAY 10 AM TO 8 PM

There is only one way to go!!
Queen's University Investment Club
General Meeting
Thursday, October 10th
7 P.M.
Room 211 Dunning Hall
New (and old) Members Welcome

HOMECOMING '74

THURSDAY, OCT. 17

Applied Science
Variety Night

SATURDAY,
OCT. 19

Downtown
Parade

Parade to game

Queen's vs U of T

Leonard Dance

Homecoming

Semi-formal

FRIDAY, OCT. 18

Official opening at MacIntosh Corry

Pep Rally

Oom Pa Pa

Band in Pub

SUNDAY,
OCT. 20

Lou Reed Concert
in Arena

SEE YOU REAL SOON

TICKETS ON SALE STARTING TOMORROW

12:30-3:00 JOHN ORR ROOM

Morton Shulman, addresses students in Dunning Auditorium Wednesday night in the first AMS Education Commission lecture.

United Way: "Up, and away"

Although the United Way Campaign has been running barely one week, results are starting to come in and optimism is running high. However, most of the fund raising events, sponsored by Queen's students will be taking place during homecoming week. Campaign Co-Chairmen, Paul Bitove and Ron Knox, have planned some really exciting and fun events.

Saturday, Oct. 19 is the big day starting out with a retaliatory football game where Queen's Golden Gaels are going to destroy T.O.'s Varsity Blues.

At half-time the United Way will present "Metres for Miles" Bike-A-Thon starring Principal Watts, Padre Lavery and Dean Sinclair in a dazzling display of athletic ability. Sponsor sheets for this event will be available at the INFORMATION BANK.

On the evening of Oct. 19, the Homecoming Committee will sponsor a semi-formal at $8.00 a couple with all proceeds going to the United Way. There will be three or four areas of entertainment including a dance in Grant Hall with two bands providing continuous music and a Western Frontier Room in Kingston Hall with a live magician (among other distractions). Liquor and beer will be sold. The theme is Disney's World and according to Co-Chairman Ron Knox, "the decorations will be just incredible."

Other student sponsored events will include a Pub night to be held within the next few weeks and a raffle which has been running all week. There will be two prizes of one lottery ticket which might win you one million dollars!

There are two campaigns running on campus. As well as a Student Drive (goal $3700.00), the University, which includes faculty, janitorial and library staff, secretaries etc., will also be sponsoring a drive (goal $62,000.00) $3700.00 is a lot of money but if each student contributed 50c we could reach our goal. The two thermometers outside of the Student Union will register returns as they are brought in.

Come on out and support the United Way and let's show Kingston that Queen's Students really do care about making Kingston (as well as the Queen's Community) a better and happier place to live.

Shulman: "You're all wasting your time here"

"You're all wasting your time here" declared Dr. Morton Shulman when he spoke to a full crowd at Dunning Auditorium last night in the first AMS Education Commission lecture. He stated that we as students are virtually defenseless against rising inflation (he predicts 20 per cent by next year). When we return to a system of barter, and he claims that is the way it always ends, the students (except maybe the "medical students, plumbers and electricians") won't have anything of value with which to bargain. The statement that our only hope was to leave university and learn a skill was greeted by the audience with silence. If you are among the privileged few who have money, invest it, or buy a farm, declared Shulman; or better yet, invest someone else's money at the present interest rates. "If you buy a house now, in five or ten years a $45,000 mortgage will be paid off with the money to buy a meal."

Shulman extracted what appeared to be uncomfortable laughter from the audience by saying that a few people would become "incredibly" rich by investing the only thing that will go up faster than the dollar loses its buying power: food and shelter. If you are patriotic, buy Canada Savings Bonds for they are "as safe as the government."

Shulman has been criticised by Robert Nixon, the leader of the provincial Liberal Party, for investing in the commodity market. With an amused smile Shulman leaned back from the podium and stated that because of this investment he had been accused of being the cause of inflation, the cause of the food shortage and even the cause of famine in Bangladesh.

Investment in the commodity market is an antisocial activity according to Shulman, but just in case any of the audience had this type of tendency they were given a short lesson in this type of investment. If you agree to buy sugar for example it is bought before it is produced at a fixed price. You don't get delivery for a year so you don't have to pay for a year. But this again does not apply to the poor student. "It's not for those who don't have money to lose," said Shulman.

The only cure for inflation is for society to start living within its means, declared Shulman. He asserted that there hasn't been a balanced budget in Canada since 1953 but he commiserated with the Politicians. "They can cut down on government spending, and be thrown out; or they can speed inflation up and put the evil day off until some other party is in power." Although it was denied in the later question period, Shulman declared that everybody is willing to do something about inflation until it directly affects them, and then they protest. "We all have grown to love the good life."

Democratic government always leads to inflation and can only result in a repressive government "either a white horse from the right or a coup from the left." In this situation there is always a scapegoat - in this case the Negroes, in Shulman's opinion.

Shulman left the students with a number of predictions. He feels that within four years the democratic system in the United States will be gone and there will be a General in the White House referring to the energy crisis, he said "If the crunch comes down, the United States will take our oil. The decision will be made in Washington, not in Ottawa, and we'll follow because we have no choice."

Dr. Shulman has announced that he will not run in the next provincial election. He has given up hope in government but intends to apply for the chairmanship of the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario in an attempt to do something about the "nutty laws" which now control liquor consumption in Ontario.

Katy maps few on campus

The new Kingston Transit Pilot Project has now hit the streets and with funding amounting to $100,000, from the Provincial government for the promotion of bus service in the city, a massive advertising campaign is underway. How much of this dissemination of information reaches the Queen's campus is a matter of concern for members of A.M.S.

One of the first moves made in the initiation of the project has been to print and distribute new, simplified, colour-coded route maps. A total of 100 of these maps have reached the campus, given by the PUC to the A.M.S. for posting in the residences. The pamphlets, being sent by the province are being distributed throughout the rest of the city however by a "postal drop" procedure in which each address receives one map. When questioned as to the reasons for so few maps being allotted to a campus of close to 10,000 people in a city of only 60,000, Mr. G. Fee, General Manager of the PUC, replied that it was firstly a problem of cost, each map costing approximately 25c to produce and in addition, one of accommodating the needs of the entire Kingston citizenry. "posting" in residences being considered a satisfactory method of informing the on-campus student population. He promised that more pamphlets will be given later to the University itself for display in the other campus buildings.

Queen's University under the Bus-it programme has paid in lump sum for the riding privileges of all students for the rest of the year. Thus no further revenue can be expected from students regardless of whether they make increased use of the buses.

Queen's

Journal

Volume 102, Number 10

Friday, October 11th, 1974

Friday, October 11

11 a.m. - Department of Psychiatry Conference: "Medical and Social Views of Alcohol Problems", with panelists: Dr. Ivan Beck, Internist, Department of Medicine, HDH; Dr. Murray Taylor, Director Emergency Services, KGH; Mr. Roy Teat, Community Consultant; Mr. Paul O. Rosenbaum, Sociologist. The conference will take place in the amphitheatre at Kingston Psychiatric Hospital.

8:00 p.m. - CFRC presents The Goon Show: Spike Milligan, Harry Secombe, and Peter Sellers. Tonight, "The Thing on the Mountain".

8:00 p.m. - G.S.S. Film Club presents Chariot of the Gods in Ellis Auditorium.

9:00 p.m. - CFRC presents Free Folk: Lots of singing and guitar playing resulting in an enjoyable hour of music.

Saturday, October 12

8:00 p.m. - CFRC presents Classics Unlimited: A preview of the upcoming Grant Hall Series concert featuring the Early Music Quartet.

10:00 p.m. - CFRC presents Nocturne: Get a whole new feeling from rock, as you listen to it as part of the alternative sound.

Sunday, October 13

10:30 a.m. - Morning Worship at Chalmers United Church.

10:30 a.m. - Folk Mass at Dunning Hall followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House, 164 University Ave.

2:00 p.m. - Queen's Musical Theatre holds its series of workshops in the dance studio at the Phys. Ed. Centre. These workshops are aimed at cultivating the singing, dancing, and acting abilities of people interested in musical theatre. All welcome and no experience is necessary!

4:00 p.m. - CFRC presents Perchance to Dream: This week a special program for children, featuring Winnie-the-Pooh, Alice, and others.

6:00 p.m. - CFRC presents Canadian Concert: Performances by Canadian artists of all types of classical music.

Upcoming Events

October 14 - 19 - Third World Week will take place. This week is presented by the World University Service of Canada. Through its programs, WUSC focuses concern on world poverty, oppression and discrimination and at the same time helps people to improve and develop their own communities and solve their own problems. WUSC also organizes seminars and meetings on educational and related issues. Watch for various activities being presented next week.

Tuesday, October 15 - An informal noncredit seminar on the Philosophy of Mathematics has been arranged and will continue every Tuesday until November 19. The seminar will be conducted by Professor P.E. O'Brien of the Department of Mathematics and Professor O.L.C. MacLachlan of the Department of Philosophy. The seminar is open to everyone and no technical knowledge of either mathematics or philosophy is presupposed. Topics will include: Mathematics and Ontology; The Nature of Infinity; The Idea of Space. The seminar will be held in John Watson Hall, Room 341 and will run from 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m.

Wednesday, October 16 - 7:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m. - The Kingston Antique Show will be held in the Ballroom of the 401 Inn. Tickets are $5.00 each including a readmission to the show on Thursday.

October 17. The show will also be held on Thursday, October 17 from 10:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. and tickets will be $2.00.

Wednesday, October 16 - Division of Concerts presents in the Grant Hall Series an Early Music Quartet. The program will include both instrumental and vocal music.

Wednesday, October 16 - 8:30 p.m. - Queen's Astronomy Club meeting will be held in Ellis Hall in room 323.

Phys. Ed. Centre

Court Reservations

The book for the reservations of squash, handball, paddleball and tennis courts is available for bookings daily starting at the times listed.

Mon., Wed., & Fri., 7:45 a.m. - 7:45 a.m.
Tues., Thurs., & Sat., 8:00 a.m. - 8:00 a.m.
Sun., 2:00 p.m.

The Phys. Ed. Centre will be closed on Thanksgiving Day, Monday, October 14, 1974. The tennis courts on the arena roof will be open for play on that date and reservations for court use may be made on Saturday, October 12.

Ice Reservations: The Administrative Office at the Phys. Ed. Centre will start ice rentals for the Jock Hartley Arena, starting Friday, October 11 at 9:00 a.m. at the Faculty Reservations Wicket. It will be conducted in the same manner as last year: a representative will line up to rent ice - one hour only per week. Normally, the ice will be rented two weeks ahead (i.e. October 11 will be renting for the week of October 21). Ice times remaining and/or not confirmed by noon, Monday morning may be booked from 11:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday during the following week. Ice must be paid for one week ahead of time by Monday at noon. The rentals fee will remain the same as last year.

Faculty, Staff, Student Recreation Skates: During the period Thursday, October 10 until Thursday, October 17, faculty, staff and student recreation skates will be scheduled Monday through Saturday from 4:00 to 5:20 p.m.

Family Skates: During this same period of time, family skating will be held on Saturday, October 12, 10-12 noon and Sunday, October 13, 2-4 p.m. A schedule of faculty, staff and student recreation skates and family skating periods from October 22 on will be published in a Recreation Brochure, available in the Athletics Office in the Physical Education Centre.

Coffee Shop

Saturday October 12 - 7:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.
Sunday October 13 - 11:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.
Monday October 14 - 11:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.
Wallace Hall closed all weekend.

Pubs and Theatres

Odeon - The Sacred Knife of Vengeance
Odeon - Black Belt Jones
Capitol 1 - Chinatown
Capitol 2 - Oorlie Walt Disney Feature.
Capitol 3 - The Castaway Cowboy and The Absentminded Professor.
Hyland - Jeremiah Johnson with Robert Redford

Manor - Ray Hutchison
401 Inn - The Family Brown
Town House - The Newcomers
Commodore - Special Blend
Frontenac Finnegans - Henry Hughes
Frontenac Multitons - Two Plus One

W.U.S.C.

3rd World Week: Oct. 14-18

WUSC CRAFTS sales week: Oct. 22-26

- feature films from developing countries
- superb handicrafts (great for advance xmas shopping!)

Call the International Centre
547-2807

18 market street, Kingston, Ontario L7L 1W8
bill milliken
photographer
telephone 542 5790 area code 613

ASUS

2 ASUS Reps on AMS (1 yr. term)
(term runs until spring elections)

2 ASUS senators (1 yr.)
(term runs until August, 1975)

Nominations to be submitted by 4 pm, Friday, October 12 in ASUS box in AMS office, and must have nominee's signature plus signatures of 25 other Arts and Science students

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT
in our Lounge

THIS WEEK : Special Blend

Amateur Night every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

So you found a house ... how's living on $32

by Ian Jarvis

The Ontario Federation of Students, of which Queen's students are members, is presently campaigning for government reforms in two key areas. The first is the question of financial aid to students as embodied in the Ontario Student Awards Plan. The second is the problem of inadequate student housing.

As far as student assistance is concerned, the OFS would like to do away with it altogether and institute a free tuition program. Failing this, they are trying to make the present assistance program as favourable to the student as possible, by demanding that the government increase grants, reduce interest rates and lower the level of expected student contribution.

The most damning criticism made by the OFS is that the $32 per week offered by the present assistance program just isn't enough for a student to live on. Dave Ellis, the man in charge of student assistance at Queen's, agrees that this figure is inadequate and says that last spring his department recommended to Queen's Park that the allowance be increased to $34. Their request, however, fell upon deaf ears. "Unfortunately," commented Ellis, "the primary concern seems to be keeping the cost of the scheme within the level of the budget." Ellis and his staff do a re-evaluation of student costs each spring.

The OSAP program as it stands now offers financial assistance to those students who would presumably not be able to attend university without it. The OFS disagrees with this, claiming that, in fact, the assistance program acts as a deterrent to students in low income groups because of its inadequacies. They go so far as to assert that "the OSAP scheme is a major reason why lower income groups aren't represented at university."

Another criticism made by the OFS is that the expected student contribution is unfairly increased for each year of education. Ellis points out that there are grounds for an increase between first and second year since the potential employment period for these students is increased from two months in high school to four months in university. However, the added increase of $100 for third and fourth year is hard to justify, since as the OFS points out, "summer jobs often bear no relation to educational status."

In response to the claim by the OFS that "student employment remains high," Ellis said that in the cases with which he is involved summer unemployment is very rare. The OFS also wants to clear up the discrepancy between the fact that students are legal adults at 18, yet this is only recognized by the assistance plan as independents at age 24. Ellis felt this change was really a white elephant which had been passed over in bringing government legislation in line with the change in legal status. He hoped it would be reformed soon.

In order for the OFS to work effectively it must gain credibility both in the eyes of the provincial government and the eyes of the students it professes to represent. With this in mind, the OFS will be touring campuses across Ontario this month and next in order to rally support for the organization and its policies. At Queen's the OFS will be staging an information campaign at the end of October which will involve speakers going to the residences and the distribution of leaflets explaining the OFS standpoint.

Terry MacIaur delegate to the OFS says that the support of the more conservative universities such as Queen's is essential to the OFS in its attempt to be recognized by the Ontario government as a viable organization.

In early November, a referendum will be held at Queen's to determine whether students at this university want to continue membership in the OFS.

New concert space available at arena

by Brenda Annis

The acute space shortage problem for concerts and other large events that faces Queen's this year will soon be alleviated with the purchase of plywood boards to spread over the floor of the Jock Hartley Arena.

In order to make the arena available at present time requires a removal of the ice. This is not only an expensive procedure but it also ties up valuable ice time. Using the boards system, the arena could be converted three to four hours before the event, and would need only resurfacing after the boards were removed.

Robert Wood, commissioner of the Campus Activities Commission says that $9000 has been budgeted this year for the boards. He expects them to pay for themselves in about three years.

They will be owned by the Commission and leased out to groups wanting them. They will be stored at West Campus.

The boards, not yet purchased, will be fitted around the edges of the arena, with the largest area being just 'plopped' in. They will be coded for easier installment.

Allowing the ice to remain will not make the arena uncomfortable for an audience because of an insulating effect created between the boards and the ice surface. This would also prevent the ice from melting.

Wood predicts the arena being used mainly for large 'big name' concerts this year but foresees large smokers or lectures there in the future.

The new boards should be available for use in about eight weeks.

Effectiveness of IUD increased

A recent development in the Intra-Uterine Device (IUD) a popular method of birth control, may increase its effectiveness to almost 100 per cent, says Judy McKinnon, director of the Birth Control, VD and Abortion Information and Referral Service located in the Student Affairs Centre at 51 Queen's Crescent.

The Copper 7 has been in the experimental stages for the past two years but it is now ready for widespread use. Birth control information is dispensed by the Centre through pamphlets distributed around campus or over the phone. McKinnon also says she would be "more than happy" to talk to any groups about the Centre and its services and has already spoken at some residences.

Providing up-to-date information is only one aspect of their service. The new prophylactic dispensing machine in the women's washroom of the Queen's Pub was placed there in affiliation with the Centre.

Practical aid is available for women who become pregnant. Acting primarily as a referral service, the Centre gives the woman the name of a doctor at KGH. If the pregnancy is confirmed, she is then referred to a gynecologist. The Centre contacts the Children's Aid Society to obtain continuing care for the mother and child if the woman decides to carry her child full term.

But if the woman wants an abortion, the gynecologist will present her case before the abortion board of three doctors at KGH who will review her case. Ontario law allows a therapeutic abortion to be performed if the continuance of the pregnancy would be detrimental to the health of the woman.

$1 Million

Your chance is only 25¢ away

THE GREAT UNITED WAY LOTTERY

2 first prizes - 20 Olympic lottery tickets
1 ticket - 25¢ or 3 tickets - 50¢
SPECIAL OFFER - Buy 3 tickets and get a free coffee (at any one of our canvassing booths)

THE
QUEEN'S PUB
Will be closed on Saturday Oct. 12
and
Monday Oct. 14

THANKSGIVING DAY
SALE AT
HOUSE OF SOUNDS
277 Princess St.

Deutsche Grammophone
Angel
Columbia
RCA
London
Sug. List $7.98 per disc
$4.67 Per disc.

Special Classical Section
Turnabout
Heliodore
London
Columbia deletes
Deutsche Grammophone deletes
One Day Only VALUES TO
$7.98 per disc
$2.80 each or 4 for $10

ALL LP's By Jim Croce
Lighthouse
Corole King
Elton John
LP's $2.80 each Tapes $4.67

Spotlight Specials!

Original soundtrack from The Sting
Band On The Run - McCartney
Journey To The Center Of The Earth - Rick Wakeman
Crosby Stills, Nash & Young - So Far
$2.80 ea.

unclassifieds

More on 11 and 5

OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA

Friday, Oct. 18, 8:00 p.m. Jack Harley Arena
PLEASED to announce that Paul McCartney has accepted official status as a member in the fan club. Love from the Little Pie. Love Wens and Laura and Kerry... why cuz they're ugly and I feel sorry for them, you too Harry but you're too ugly to even love.

BOO AND ROSCO had a SUPER time at the Pub last Friday. Join us for another period of excessive drinking at Flanagan's on Saturday night in Toronto at 7:30. On Valley Pkwy. Come one, come all! (We don't like getting drunk by ourselves).

ROSEMARY: This is a belated thank for the fantastic week end in T.O. From the Weekend guests at Parrot's Hotel.

BILL PAYNE of Vancouver and Rome - Where are you? Please phone Lexie 546-1921.

TICKET SALES PERSONS for the Concert Committee are needed desperately. If interested phone 549-3967 and ask for Dave.

LOST Licence plate EEO-438 - please contact Pal at 546-9979 evenings.

ATTENTION! BUBBLES! There has been a drastic mistake brought to our attention! STUO should be Oud. Greenleaves.

FREE TICKETS! Here's your opportunity to receive tickets to Queen's Concerts. We need ticket sales persons. Phone 549-3967 and ask for Dave.

NO hobbings, no parlo, no cake. And we'll have to forego the lake. But the girls from 30.

All wish you, Al.
The Best Boller Birthday to date! Much love from 30 girls of 73-74.

WANTED: Drama 100 textbooks. Reiner and Kernan - at good price. Good condition. Call 562-7142.

OOM-PA-PA is coming; OOM-PA-PA is coming; OOM-PA-PA is coming; OOM-PA-PA is coming; OOM-PA-PA is coming; OOM-PA-PA is coming; OOM-PA-PA is coming; OOM-PA-PA is coming; OOM-PA-PA is coming; OOM-PA-PA is coming.

DOUBLE BED to give away - owner left behind in good condition. Phone 546-1114 after 5 p.m.

WANTED TO BUY: Good microscope at reasonable price! Monocular or binocular but capable of oil magnification. Phone 542-7412 and leave your number if I'm not there.

FOUND: PHSA card belonging to Ms. Lyn Aird. Pick up at the offices of PEC.

FOR SALE: Mark VI APF electronic calculator. Four functions, per cent. Memory added feature. Used only 5 months. Excellent condition. $70 or best offer. Phone 544-7337.

RIORING will be postponed for Thanksgiving weekend only. Don't miss our usual Saturday morning irreks.

CANADA SAVINGS BONDS? 9.7% per cent each year on any amount over $50. Cashable at any time. For more info: George Orr 546-1634.

FOR SALE: Leather Apple Science Jacket size 36 - $70. $58 turntable $55. Study desk; phone Brian at 544-0530.

ONE PAIR OF SIGHT-GLASSES in a brown case - silver rimmed glasses. Name and address inside case.

HELP! I have lost my identity. Driver's license, student card, S.I. card. Everything. Please call Kathryn 546-5801 if you have found it.

GAIL GROUP 99: Has Don Shaved Shaggy - Saturday Oct. 12 the good time when they went to the sock hop together? Find out all this and more when you come to the reunion Thursday Oct. 17.

(That's the one after Homecoming+Hope you'll have recovered) at the pub at 8:30. House of Lords should be real great!

GIVE YOUR LIVER a break. Have a coffee on us when you buy 3 UNITED WAY lottery tickets for only 50c. Your great chance at $1 million. Call Info Bank.

TAKE A break from the Pub, come to Clark Hall Smoker Wed. Oct. 16 6:00 p.m. Bring a friend along for a good time.

FOR SALE: Texas Instrument SR10 Calculator. Price negotiable. Phone 549-4255 after six.

MANY THANKS to the guy who returned my bracelets - Jane.

BARTLEY, did the Baggie keep the tiavosti and freshness locked in all the game, Saturday? When are you guys going to get me my sign? My wall can't stand much more exposure.

HERE'S TO THAT LAST Friday night frolic featuring Al, Bruce, Ross and Wendy on the Pub Floor.

John (ashashashashash) and Cher (alternately freezing & hawking). All were in FINE FORM. The star of the show? Bruce's shoe - stark naked, in the beer bottles.

SEQUEL: Greg, how would you like an ice cube at 8:30 a.m. some Monday morning?

FOUND: Bracket outside Kingston Hall facing lake. Phone the Journal.

"VEE HAYE ways of making you go to the OOM-PA-PA: Vee don't want to cause trouble so Vee hope you will co-operate." Friday Oct. 18, 8:00 p.m. Jack Harley Arena.

KLEPTOMANIAC who stole my reversible leather jacket with wristwatch in right pocket. Examine (that) I examined bystanders before leaving - you I saw watching. Return both items to AMS office by Oct. 14 or expect O.P.P. for your sake.

OUTING CLUB MEETING: In Room 101 in Jeffrey Hall on Wednesday, October 16 at 7:30 p.m. for all those interested in going on canoe trips on either the weekend of Oct. 19 or Oct. 26.

FORGET: The drunk planned for 384 Alfred tonight. It was last night. The Journal got the days screwed up. Will try it again in November - L. Mitchell.

"EVERYONE LOVES A PARADE". Needed, many clubs, bands, year societies and residences for Homecoming Parade Sat. Oct. 20th. Theme is Queensworld, so come out and meet Mickey, Donald, and Pluto. Contact Peter 544-1271.

WIN AN ALL EXPENSE PAID TRIP to Bangladesh, sponsored by the League to send after dinner minis to Pakistan. Tour the world's largest tiger colonies (Oh, miserable afflictions). Send contributions to Mr. Bung Horsley & Mr. Aladesh Beattie, Brock St. Kingston. For further information phone 544-3093. Oh yes, yes, yes.

NYLON APPLIED SCIENCE jacket for sale - very good condition. Phone evenings - 544-7894, Jacques.

IF YOU FOUND my ss bill at University and Union last Sunday, please give it to the United Way. Thanks.

FRIDAY OCT. 18, in Jack Harley Arena Queen's University's biggest beer bash will be held starting at 8:00 p.m., featuring German band, BE THERE.

OOM-PA-PA, OOM-PA-PA, OOM-PA-PA, OOM-PA-PA, OOM-PA-PA, OOM-PA-PA, OOM-PA-PA, OOM-PA-PA, OOM-PA-PA, OOM-PA-PA.

GO to the OOM-PA-PA Friday Oct. 18 in Jack Harley Arena. Plenty of beer and German music. Doors open at 8:00 p.m.

LOST: Blue leather U of T winter jacket. Arrears are ARTS and 74. Valuable both for sentiment and warmth. Reward. Please call 546-0529 or 544-8896.

THANKSGIVING NEEDN'T be just the turkey and Cranberries! Cheer the Golden Gaels on to victory as they play Carleton at the Ravens' Stadium - Saturday Oct. 12 the date. Help the Bands lead the Gaels to the finals. Come on out, Ottawa Kids. Don't be chicken.

LOST in Dunning Auditorium Tues.

Blk during 8:30 class: 1 pair of glasses with brown frames. If found, please call Anne at 544-8413. URGENT - I am slightly blind without them.

CALCULATOR FOR SALE - 1 Olimatic P-8. Purchased earlier this year and still in new condition. Adds, subtracts, multiplies and divides as well as doing percentage calculations. Floating decimal, automatic constant, and clear entry button to eliminate incorrect entries. $59.95 only. Contact Terry Collins at 547-5540 (Journal office) or 549-4623 (home).

WOULD THE PERSON who took a football from Leonard Field last Saturday afternoon please phone 544-7269. I was fined $14.00 for losing it and I would like to get it back.

CHECK THESE PRICES! A giant load of publishers' remainders at the CAMPUS BOOKSTORE.

FOR SALE: Brand name calculators. Quality Texas Instruments in all models. Phone Duncan at 549-4623.

FRIDAY OCT. 18, in Jack Harley Arena, Queen's University's biggest beer bash will be held starting at 8:00 p.m., featuring German band, BE THERE.

TO THE THIRDO GORDEN GUYS: Thanks for the friendly atmosphere, the gentlemanly company (suits/coats), and the spirit of Christ (even if it was wrong).

NICE AND FURNISHED ROOM available in semi-communal house close to campus. Female preferred. Call 546-9266.

C.L.U.B.S. SOCIETIES, ASSOCIATIONS - Let the CAMPUS BOOKSTORE know your needs - books, T-shirts, or whatever.

SCIENCE FORMAL, SAT. Nov. 2 - any girls wishing to help out as CHILKOOT barmaids or hat check girls please contact Paul Hewitt at 544-5775 after 6 p.m.

HAPPY 20th BIRTHDAY GAIL, FROM THE Captain (me), and Crew (Nina) of KARU.

FOUND: Set of KEYS in 3rd floor Conference room in Dunning Hall. Found last Monday Oct. 7. Contact Secretary of Economics Dept.

LOST - Steel Rimmed Glasses in MacIntosh-Corby - Thursday night. If found please call Al at 548-3081.

FOR SALE: 1971 Dodge van Call Dave at 549-4366.

GAIL GROUP 50 - Thanks for the Greatest Warm up Party! Let's do it again. Homecoming weekend - same place, same time. Thanks ALSO FOR THE BOTTLE - Tom and Gail Gail.

INTERESTED IN THE MUSIC OF THE 30'S AND 40'S in the Big Band Sound for your Dance? If so, contact W.J. Baber (542-1920) or O.G. Hallam (547-9740) for bookings. Also more modern styling, latin, etc., available.

LOST STUDENT ID AND SOC. INSURANCE CARD at the pub. Grant Hall Fri. Sept. 21 at around 11:30 p.m. Please phone Chris at 544-7038.

OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA
OOM-PA-PA

BEING A GAY MEANS. Call Terry Watson, 547-2834 or write student affairs centre, c/o Terry Watson.

LIVING IN ELRON? Come on down to our general meeting tomorrow night 7:00 p.m. in the Cathedral School Auditorium, corner of Barrie and Brock.

FRESHMETE BACARDI AND SEXY VOICE - Have a Happy Thanksgiving Sorry we won't be here to celebrate but just wait until Homecoming/Love Tom and John, P.S. Beware of Pierre the Hustler.

LITTLE TAPOLE: the long one, and most honorable Grandfather would like to congratulate the Grasshopper on his Victory! The Shang Chi monastery will celebrate by having a star throwing contest. Participants must have knowledge of rice paper walking.

LOST - small green wallet with I.D. card belonging to a MIKE CAMPBELL. If found, please phone 549-4376.

ARE YOU A FRUSTRATED MOUNTAINEER? OR ROCK CLIMBER? If so, and you want to do some climbing, fal Kingston Mills or Bon Echo. Contact Jim Lamont - phone 549-4860.

RING FOUND: Wednesday October 2nd in Earl Hall, Room 117. If it belongs to you phone 544-5179.

ANYONE INTERESTED IN WORKING WITH ARTS/CI FESTIVAL '75, there is a meeting tonight at 7:30, second floor common room in the Student Union. If you desire information, phone 542-4880 OOUU.

LAST MONDAY AT VICTORIA FIELD, I lost my blue ski jacket with red arm stripes. I found please call 544-7412. It's going to be a long Cold Winter.

FROSHETTE PERFECT - After lengthy deliberation we have decided to adopt you, if you are consenting (we know you are) for days now, we have wanted to protect you from the degeneracies in our cafeteria. Love Fourth Leonard West.

HAPPY DELATED BIRTHDAY NOTICE - to Miss Gen Roddy. Here is hoping that your Birthday was duly celebrated and you're hurting today!

PISTOL CLUB meets Wednesday nights 9:00-11:00 and Sunday afternoons 2:00-4:00. Anyone interested is welcome.

IF ANYONE found my red Osmirol 45 fountain pen on October 9, please phone Peter at 544-7739. Thank you.

FOR SALE Brand name calculators. Quality Texas Instruments in all models. Phone Duncan 549-4623.

FOR SALE: ONE Queen's Commerce sweatshirt. Year 77. Leather jacket, size 42-44 in A-1 condition. $50.00. Phone 544-2841.

BONJOUR with moustache who stole my leather jacket with OMEGA watch in right pocket. Have a photograph of you wearing jacket and know your address. Return both items to AMS office or expect O.P.P.

MUSICIANS WANTED: Any Sax, Brass or Guitar players interested in playing with a group of others for fun please phone Stu at 544-7046.

FUN CLUB 1974 T-shirts now available in Teddy Tin Can Graphics in basement of union across from coffee shop. $3.00 each. Watch for Fun Club 2nd annual Halloween'74.

Win a FREE JOURNAL UNCLASSIFIED details to come

The best you can be

It's not enough for you to be a good gymnast. You have to prove you're the best in the group! So every day and every practice session is important.

When you can't afford time out, when you can't break training, you need the dependable internal protection of Tampax tampons. They allow you comfortable freedom of movement while they expand gently in three directions to fit your inner contours.

Tampax tampons come in three absorbency sizes: Regular, Super and Junior. So you can choose the right one for your needs. Well protected, you'll prove to the others you're the best you can be.

The internal protection more women trust

DEVELOPED BY A DOCTOR NOW USED BY MILLIONS OF WOMEN

OFS launches campaign for reforms in student awards plan

OTTAWA (CUP)-The Ontario Federation of Students is about to launch a campaign to have substantial reforms made in the Ontario Student Assistance Plan (OSAP).

OFS submitted four briefs to their membership at a meeting in Sudbury September 28 and outlined strategy for the coming campaign.

They reject the present system of student assistance because it feels post-secondary education should be funded through an equitable taxation system, rather than students having to mortgage their future to get an education.

While OFS favours free tuition and living stipends for students as its ultimate goal, it wants reforms in the OSAP scheme as it is presently constituted.

"OSAP is a deterrent for people who want to attend university. In a general sense this is so because of the cost of the loans in the first place and the cost of arranging loans with students having to pay high rates of interest to pay them off," said Chris Harries, OFS publicity director.

"In particular terms it deters low income groups from attending university. The OSAP scheme is a major reason why lower income groups aren't represented at university."

The federation also wants the government to reaffirm its stand on the concept of universal accessibility to a university education. If it believes in this, says OFS, then let them put down concrete policies that will make universal accessibility a fact.

OFS will attack OSAP on low living allowances, high interest

The briefs attack the present OSAP scheme in many areas such as student living allowances, interest rates for loans, expected student contributions to their education and the age of independence.

It points out that students who receive OSAP are forced to live on $32 a week which is less than the poverty level and less than recommendations of provincial student awards officers.

James Auld, the Minister of Colleges and Universities, has refused to increase the amount of money in OSAP loans for food and lodging even though he has admitted they aren't enough.

Student contributions expected from summer work are based on a table with increases for each year of education. The OFS brief, points out that summer jobs often bear no relation to educational status. The tables also do not account for rises in the cost of living affecting the amount of money students are able to save.

The report says student unemployment remains high, especially for women and appeals based on inability to find work result in increases in loans, not grants.

"OSAP is adding an extra economic burden to the already heavy social barrier women have to overcome in seeking an education."

OFS also suggests that the expectations are too unrealistic for those returning from the work force, with applicants being expected to contribute 25 per cent of their gross income for the last eight months.

Present OSAP regulations regarding the age of independence also come under attack in the OFS briefs. Students are unacceptably their parents for a student loan unless they are 24 years of age or married even though they are legally adults at 18.

The system discriminates against those whose parents refuse to help them as well as those who do not want support. This provision works against families with more than one student to educate and those who are just above the cut off level for student aid.

The report also says the present loan system is "an especially pernicious form of financing higher education because it works unequally." Students are forced to assume indebtedness which is not related to their ability to pay.

Students are now paying more of their educational costs despite increases in government educational expenditures. The operation of OSAP is based on a "bureaucratic fairy-tale" and shows that the Ontario government "has no intention of increasing accessibility to post-secondary education or of even supporting students at a subsistence level," says the report.

OFS plans to continue the fight to win more equitable benefits for students under OSAP on two fronts. They have asked each university and college to form their own committees to initiate campus campaigns to inform students of the present inequalities in the OSAP program and to go into the community with their message.

Who's Where

Mr. and Ms. A.M.S. proudly announce the forthcoming arrival of their latest venture. Who's Where. The baby is to be delivered in the John Orr nursery on the 10th and the 17th of this month. The baby is expected to weigh about 11½ oz. and to be slightly premature. All students are invited to visit on these days and it is requested that all viewers please bring their student cards. This is a brother for Tricolor and The Journal.

ABRAMSKY

Men's Wear

Queen's students 10% off

full line of men's clothing and furnishings

259 Princess St.

Take a break from the Pub
Clark Hall Smoker

Everyone welcome,

Good Music and Good Times

Once Again

Wednesday October 16

8:00 p.m.

Presented by Science '76

STEVE AMEY'S

Lakeview Manor

PLAYING THIS WEEK IN
THE CENTENNIAL ROOM

Sharon Lohnes

Coming next week

Ray Hutcheson

28 Yonge St., Kingston

unclassifieds

More on 4 and 11

FOUND: MEDICAL ALERT BRACELET - phone number on bracelet 209-634-4917. Reads: Allergic to penicillin. Blood type O negative. Contact Garry Blicum 182 Frontenac 548-8559.

FOR SALE: Brand name calculators. Quality Texas Instruments in all models, phone Duncan at 549-4623.

MUSICIANS WANTED: Any Sax, Bass, or Guitar players interested in playing with a group of others for fun please call Stu at 544-7046.

HAVE LARGE VAN AND WILL MOVE ANYTHING within 25 mile radius of Kingston quickly and cheaply - quotes for longer distances if convenient. Call 544-4316.

JOIN THE NUCLEAR TEAM

ATOMIC ENERGY OF CANADA LIMITED is responsible for research into and development of peaceful uses of atomic energy. AECCL provides a wide range of activities ranging from basic science to wholly commercial operations. The quality of AECCL's facilities and the competence of its scientists and engineers are internationally known and respected.

AECCL, in close cooperation with industry and the utilities, has brought to maturity one of the world's most successful nuclear power systems. It is a leader in the production of radioactive isotopes and related equipment for the treatment of disease and other uses. It is responsible for the commissioning and operation of heavy water plants.

THINK ABOUT JOINING THE TEAM. Consult your Placement Officer for more information on the jobs available to new graduates in 1975.

Application forms should be forwarded before October 21st if you wish to be considered for an interview. AECCL representatives will visit your Campus on -

Wednesday Nov. 20, Thursday Nov. 21, Friday Nov. 22

Atomic Energy of Canada Limited

L'Énergie Atomique du Canada, Limitée

- GREB-KODIAK BOOTS-

Waterproof, Insulated, Plain or Steel Toe.
Sizes 4 to 13
Always Your Size in Stock at the Best Price

LARRY'S

Men's Wear at
354 King St., East
Just 3 Doors from Princess St.

544-1227

PIZZA CHALET

PIZZA AND ITALIAN DISHES
TAKE OUT ORDER AND DELIVERY
359 PRINCESS ST.

Clubs Grants '74

ALL CLUBS INTERESTED IN RECEIVING A GRANT FOR THE COMING YEAR, THERE WILL BE A MEETING

Wednesday Oct. 16
at 7:00 pm
Jeffrey Room 118

BY POPULAR DEMAND
Toronto Mendelssohn
Choir
RETURNS
FRIDAY 25 OCTOBER
GRANT HALL 8:30 p.m.
Tickets from Box Office
in Agnes Etherington Art Centre
547-6194
A Division of Concerts
Event

letters to the editor*Disgruntled Golf team

To the editor:

As members of an intercollegiate team at Queen's, we can tell you that none of us has ever strived for anything as much as we have in the last two weeks. We will not mention who we are until the end of this complaint, but I hope that you will be able to identify us long before that. If not, we will be fully aware that Queen's students are interested in only two sports - namely football and hockey. If this is the case, we have the deepest pity for each and every one of you.

For the past three weeks, we have participated in four separate events. Of these four events, the only one which received any sort of coverage was the OUA Finals, which we won. In the other three events, we compiled a record of one win, one second, and a fourth place finish. For our splendid efforts on behalf of the beloved red, gold and blue, we received a write-up which covered roughly, a space no larger than two inches by three inches.

The football team on the other hand, wins two out of four games and they receive a full page spread, win or lose. Now, this would be fine if they were to win every game, but they certainly aren't going to win the OQIFC title so why not give a little credit where credit is due. We even got a bigger write-up in the Globe and Mail. My God, what's this world coming to.

Hurray for the golf team - 1974 OUA Champions!

Sincerely,
Dan Clark

Praise for United Way

Dear Editor,

I think it is high time that the students of Queen's acknowledge the great effort being made by the United Appeal Co-ordinators to involve all of us as thoroughly as possible in the present fundraising drive. Their proposed ideas are very original and innovative, and I hope that with the support of the Student Body it will be very effective.

Wishing United Way
record-breaking Success,
George Benson

Soviet Game plan revisited

Dear Editor:

The ill-conceived "Soviet Game Plan" cartoon, run on Tuesday's Backpage, exactly illustrates the disabling paranoia which seems to accompany Canada's forays into international hockey. When our players lose it is not their fault, but rather, the result of an insidious conspiracy of referees, timekeepers, hoteliers, and the entire Soviet Central Committee.

Experience from the previous Summit Series has apparently profited us little. Poor accommodations, inept refereeing, and bureaucratic hassling in general were all problems that cropped up last time. That the same factors have formed the major part of Canadian crabbing in this series should indicate to the Russians that Canadians are still not really serious about playing hockey. Accordingly, the Soviets will see no reason whatsoever to change their tactics next time around.

To Canadians it should indicate that we lag behind the Russians in a game other than hockey:

sport politics. While visions of the sale of television rights and other financial sugar plums dance in our officials' heads they will be unable to realize the degree of sophistication necessary to negotiate a reasonable set of conditions for a series with the Russians. But the Russians will respect our toughness and our guts in backing up our demands when they attempt to renege on them, as they surely will.

Then and only then will the Soviet style of hockey triumph in a completely open contest where both sides have the full measure of their opponent - both on and off the ice.

Your Comrade in Moscow,
Allan M. Austin

One more radio station

Dear Editor:

In her article of October 1st Ms W. Reynolds claims that there are "four student-operated stations in Canada" being in Kingston, Toronto, Edmonton, and Saskatoon. This may be true for English Canada but if one accepts the notion that Quebec is still a part of Confederation, then it should be noted that CKRL-FM operates out of Université Laval on an assigned frequency of 89.1 with an effective radiated power of 1400 watts.

May I end this letter congratulating Ms Reynolds on an otherwise fine article.

Francois Vaillamont

Ed Note: Ms. Reynolds wishes to absolve herself by saying that she was operating on info given her by the station manager of CFRG, Steve Cutway. Perhaps the dissension lies in the definition of "student operated station".

"Metres for Money"

Dear Editor,

During the half-time show of the Homecoming Football game against U of T on Oct. 19th, the United Way Committee has organized a "Metres for Money" bike-a-thon. The event will take place on the track around the football field with the following participants: Principal Watts; Padre Laverty; Dean Sinclair; and Dean Reid (Chancellor Roland Mitchell has been officially asked but is presently out of the country.) Please allow us to explain the event and how money will be raised for the United Way from it.

Each of the four participants will be riding a bicycle and it is their objective to ride as far as possible around the track in a time limit of three minutes. At the end of the three minute period, the cyclists will stop pedaling and their individual progress will be marked. It is not designed as a competitive event and therefore the cyclist may decide to stop prior to the three minute maximum limit. The bicycle will be equipped with a set of training wheels attached to the rear wheel as a safety precaution for the soft surface of the track. Other than the two additional wheels, the bikes will be standard one-speed.

The money will be reused in the following way. Prior to the event, that is the remainder of this week and all of next week, the students on campus will be approached by student volunteer workers of the United Way and will be asked to sponsor one of the contestants in the bike-a-thon. The sponsoring will be per contestant per 50 metres completed in the three minutes. (50 metres is one-eighth of the track.) The collecting of the sponsored amounts will be done during the week after Homecoming Weekend.

Sincerely,
Ron Knox, Paul Bitove

P.S. If it is raining the event will still be held. We hope this clarifies the activity "Metres for Money".

more letters*Eric Clapton defended

Dear Editor,

Doug Hutchinson's review of Eric Clapton's Montreal Concert reveals the poor attitude and standards with which he attends live performances. Perhaps he would appreciate their beauty if he was not so intent on hearing the artist meticulously replay note for note, his repertoire of songs exactly as they are on the albums. Otherwise he should remain at home and listen to the record.

Mike Creagen

Get the shows on the road

Dear Editor,

I am very disappointed by the quality of concerts at Queen's so far this year. With a student population of ten thousand, we can afford and should have name groups and performers. Instead we get mediocrity.

Recently Western had Steppenwolf, Bruce Cockburn is appearing soon. In October and November U of T is having Harry Chapin, Renaissance and George Carlin. Even McMaster is having Chuck Magione. Meanwhile we at Queen's accept second rate concerts. So we have Crowbar and Leon Redbone? Big Deal!

Last year our high school had Foot in Cold Water and Crowbar; another had Fludd. Each high school had under fifteen hundred students. Our student council was in touch with the students, found out what they wanted, provided it, and made a profit. With seven times the resources Queen's comes up with Devotion? God!

I can't swallow the argument that we don't have room for a name concert. The arena or the Phys. Ed. complex can hold enough people to break even. For Steppenwolf or George Carlin the place would be packed.

I'll pay four or five dollars for quality entertainment but don't waste my time on groups that any self respecting high school can pick up. Queen's is the best - we want the best.

Sincerely,
Kent Hayglass

New group on campus

Dear Editor:

Increasingly during the last few years, various groups have been throwing aside their mothballs and stepping out of the closet. The changes that have taken place in social values and attitudes have allowed many people greater freedom in the choice of lifestyles. So far we have heard from such groups as the Homophiles, the Heterosexuals, the Children of God, followers of Krishna, the NOP and many others of various stripes and colours. However we have yet to hear from a group which has managed to infiltrate all parts of our social fabric (even Inner Council). During the past few weeks, several of us have met and formed an organization which we believe will aid all those, who, up until now, have kept secret their true colours, in openly showing their feelings. To this purpose we take great pride in announcing the formation of the Queen's Celibacy Council.

The Q.C.C. firmly believes that widespread practice of celibacy would be of immeasurable benefit to society. Perhaps the first noticeable benefit would be the end of the menace of V.O.

The most important result of a world practising celibacy would be the end of the endless proselytizing that confronts us wherever we turn. Yours in innocence,
William Hardely

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY OIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT
SUNDAY 10 AM TO 8 PM

Bite the one you love

STEAK & STUFF
LICENCED DINING ROOM 1399 Princess (near the station)
AUNT LUCY'S RESTAURANTS LTD.

STUDENT HEALTH SERVICE
MEDICAL CLINIC - 547-6106 - 24 hours daily: (Answering Service contacts a duty physician when the Health Service is closed)
CLINIC HOURS - 9:00 a.m. - 11:30 a.m. 1:00 p.m. - 4:00 p.m. Monday to Friday inclusive PSYCHIATRY & COUNSELLING - By appointment 9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. Phone 547-2889 or come to the Health Service to make an appointment.
AMBULANCE EMERGENCY CALLS 544-5555

G.S.S. Film Club
Friday Film Series
presents
Chariot of the Gods
- controversial documentary
Ellis Auditorium
Friday Oct. 11 8:00 p.m.
Series Ticket or $1.00 at the door

QUEENSNAPS
'74

KINGSTON FINEST NIGHTCLUB
Town House Pub
SHERATON SEAWAY MOTEL
686 PRINCESS ST.

Queens
Journal
Vol. 102, No. 10
Fri., Oct. 11, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Editor in Chief Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager Terry Collins
Managing Editor Dan McClelland
News Editor Sarah Yarnell
Arts Editors Kerry White, Peter Haworth
Features Editors Wens and Laur
Photography Editor John Cameron
Backpage Valerie Collen
Wal's Happin' Jennifer Hastings,
Rosemary Knight
Classifieds Leslie Gaukrodger,
and Trish

Elderstatespeople: Chris Boon, Woody
Photographers John Bottomley, F.V.D. Ernie Sparks, Keith Bourns, an apology to Marvin Bloss, Peter Case
Business Staff Anne Robertson, Jane Gutteridge, Steve Lou Cathy (I forgot your last name, sorry)
Contributors Barb Nyland, Ian Jarvis, Nancy Flood, Connie McLeese, Hugh Agnew, Dave Colburn, Mike Creagen, John Edwards, Dave Selander, Mary Smelko, Jim Lemesurier, Glenn

Comment - This looks like it's going to be a long one, folks, but we love it! (or something like that) John and Dave and Dave churned out the letters pages, Mike drew and wrote (what a turkey), Trish came to the classifieds, Val coughed, Kerry bitched, Peter compiled, photos wandered around, Wens and her pard gobbled, Terry made life miserable from the beginning (those ad people are going to be the death of me) Leslie came and went, Connie wouldn't let me write on her pants, Nancy became a physics major but overall Suz and Danno and the penguin became weary

Founded in 1973 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor, and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (613) 547-2866. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint

A fowl feature for Thanksgiving

Roast and Boast

by Wendy Reynolds & L. J. Gibson

Turkey: "A large American game bird with head and neck naked and wattled and an erectile fleshy process on the forehead. Comprising two species, the Mexican, M. gallopavo, from which the domestic breed is derived and M. ocellata, the wild turkey of Honduras." Such is the dictionary definition of the bird we have come to associate with Thanksgiving, Christmas and countless left-over sandwiches, casseroles and general rushes in between. Though neglected for most of the rest of the year, at these times it certainly enjoys a unique and unquestioned popularity.

Our respect for the big bird is evidenced in the subtle colloquial expressions of the day - to wit, "You turkey!", "talking turkey", "cold turkey", and that ever-popular 1920's rag-time dance, the turkey trot. It's a non-partisan bird as well, offering something for everyone. Light meat, dark meat, thigh or breast, which part of the turkey do you like best?

Thought should be given to the guest list of a traditional sit-down turkey dinner. Include please a token pilgrim, assorted grandparents, the president of the Audubon Society as an observer, and someone strong enough to carry away the rest of the guests' meal's end after they too have had their little stomach cavities stuffed.

You don't have to be a mother or great-aunt to roast and boast successfully. In fact there's very little to it. You pluck it, you stuff it, you truss it, you roast it. What could be simpler? Budding surgeons will find great satisfaction in practising their cross-stitches after the operation of stuffing has been performed. However, if the thought of such a grand undertaking boggles your twentieth century, pre-packaged mind, order in a turkey sub or pop a turkey TV dinner in the oven.

Turkey talks out

The Journal was fortunate in being able to arrange an interview with a typical turkey in his natural habitat.

J: How are things around the barnyard?

T.T.: Pretty tense; it's that time of year again.

J: Do you anticipate riot and rebellion then, Mr. T.?

T.T.: Well, I may be sticking my neck out when I say this...

Regrettably, at this point, the interview was cut short.

Stuff it

As important as your choice of the bird itself are the trimmings: stuffing, cranberries, gravy and pumpkin pie. Stuffing particularly lends itself to secret family recipes. Straight and narrow traditionalists would never serve anything but bread stuffing. Melt some butter in a frying pan and add lots of bread crumbs, salt, pepper, sage, parsley and a bunch of onions. Throw it around a little and shove it in the cavity of the bird. But only fill it about 3/4 full since it expands while cooking.

Express yourself in your stuffing. Assert your individuality. Sea-food lovers who can't abandon their passion even during the holiday season add oysters to the dressing. Chinese food enthusiasts enjoy a celery and almond addition. Possibilities are limitless. Sausages, mushrooms, sweet potatoes or bacon can all be added, while the really innovative and daring among us might appreciate the taste delight of apricots and raisins.

Gravy is tricky. A good rule of thumb is to do what your mom says. Better yet, get mom to do it. But if you're feeling fiercely independent and have a strong stomach turkey giblet gravy, they say, is delicious. However, make sure you really want to play around with a turkey's liver, gizzard and heart.

The big Bird

Eat as much as you can on Thanksgiving. It's not only traditional, it's a rule. So keep forking in the food - after all, it is two and a half months till Christmas, the next opportunity you'll have for a gorge-in. Even people who hate vegetables eat them with a turkey dinner. Who can resist potatoes smothered in gravy, piping hot squash and turnip, buttered carrots and peas, interspersed with succulent, mouth-watering morsels of turkey.

Of course, as with any other feast, wine provides the pause that refreshes. You can stick to the questionable tradition that dictates white wine with fowl, or go blindly to our wine cellar and choose any old favourite. For those organized individuals who thrive on matching sets, Cold Turkey was made for you.

Stuffed or not, and you better be, there's got to be room for dessert - pumpkin pie, of course. Hallowe'en conveniently occurs several weeks after Thanksgiving so you have something to do with the empty shell that's left after the innards are scooped out for pie filling. Plain, with whipped cream or ice cream, it's the perfect finale to a harvest spread.

HOMECOMING '74

OCT. 17, 18, 19, 20

Applied Science
VARIETY NIGHT
THURSDAY, 8 - 1 P.M.
GRANT HALL

PEP RALLY
7:00 p.m.
FRIDAY
DANCE

Mickey's Madhouse

LOU REED
CONCERT
JOCK HARDY
ARENA
SUNDAY
8 p.m.

LIVE BAND
IN
THE
QUEEN'S
PUB
9 p.m. SATURDAY

LEONARD CAFETERIA
8 PM
SATURDAY

OOM PA PA
GERMAN DANCE BAND
8:00 p.m.
FRIDAY
JOCK HARDY ARENA

PARADE DOWNTOWN 9 AM PARADE TO GAME 1 PM SATURDAY

QUEEN'S GOLDEN GAELS
VS
U of T BLUES
SATURDAY, 2:00 p.m.

HOMECOMING
Semi Formal
8:00 P.M.
Grant Hall
Saturday

OFFICIAL OPENING
OF THE
MacINTOSH-CORRY
BLDG.
2:00 p.m. FRIDAY

record review

by Mike Creagen
John Mayall and the Bluesbreakers
Diary of a Band
John Mayall is the most interesting figure in the British blues scene. He has been the leader of bands which have included some of the most talented musicians of our time. Eric Clapton, Peter Green, Ansley Dunbar, John McVie, Jack Bruce and countless others have at one time played as members of the Bluesbreakers. Eventually each has gone to bigger things and expanded their careers beyond the Chicago blues format that Mayall so rigidly followed. While these artists moved on, Mayall still remained with the blues and never achieved the commercial success these others attained. However, his artistic achievements with the Bluesbreakers have been phenomenal and Diary of a Band is a testament to this success.

The album is the first live recording of a Bluesbreakers band and is marked by a relaxed atmosphere. Interviews with various band members and a rendition of God Save the Queen evoke this casual mood.

The recordings highlight guitarist Mick Taylor, and one section is devoted to several of his instrumental pieces. However, he shines most brilliantly on "I Can't Quit You Baby", an Otis Rush song, and John Mayall's "It's my Own Fault". Mayall sings in his most pleading blues voice which just oozes with desire. As he cries each line ("Well, I'm down here on my knees!") Taylor emphasizes the heartbreak with his crying guitar fills. Both songs feature guitar and sax solos, all of which are superb. Here Taylor convulses as he cries and stretches out his pleas with extended notes. Supported by Mayall's piano riffs and a steady rhythm section, the music reaches the creative levels to be true emotional blues.

This album is a definite high spot for any collection and it could not come from a more honest musician.

'8½' presents a personal vision

by Mike Creagen
'8½' is a journey through the mind of Fellini as he presents a subjective analysis of his world. The film is well developed by the director's fluid visual style by using a slow moving camera which contrasts harsh reality and escapist fantasy.

Guido, a frustrated filmmaker, is the medium through which Fellini expresses his themes. We are constantly shifting inside and out of Guido's mind as he attempts to escape the sterile environment and harrasing characters which offer him little inspiration.

Guido's reality is very demanding. The pressures on him are emphasized by many close-ups of critics, production crew, and cast, who question him about roles and the script of a film which exists only in his mind. The emptiness of his world is brought out through the emphasis on white settings and vast areas of space. Guido is out of place here as his black attire clashes with this whiteness.

The half completed rocket pad set is the visual symbol of the structure of Guido's mind, which is constantly slipping into fantasy and nostalgia, illustrated by dream sequences and flashbacks.

One character called the set "an electronic brain", defining the rocket pad as Guido's frustrated state of mind. In the scene at the rocket pad, the high and low angle shots show it as a great maze and puzzle of beams.

Guido uses fantasy to solve and escape from the problems of his life. He dreams that Carla, his lover, and Louisa, his wife, are the best of friends when they are really deadly enemies.

The most dominant theme is childhood, and along with the childhood flashbacks, the adult Guido is also much like a child. This theme is beautifully shown in the scene at the old square between Guido and Claudia when Claudia states that he looks like an eight year old in the cowboy hat and we see Guido in a long shot dwarfed by the spacious square and oblong buildings to present an image of him as a child.

It is this avoidance of concrete solutions to his problems that prevents Guido from achieving the satisfaction he seeks. Only at the end of the film when Guido decides not to make the movie is he able to fit into his environment. This is symbolically shown by his joining the circle of people that make up his world, and by the dismantling of the rocket pad movie set. (The dismantling of his frustrated state of mind.)

The film is a very personal vision and Fellini makes no attempt at universal appeal. It shows the great control Fellini has over his work by developing his film in a structure that is probably more satisfying for him than our Hollywood-oriented audiences. It is a difficult work to grasp but even if one is not thrilled by his vision, one cannot doubt the brilliance of its execution.

unclassifieds

More on 4 and 5

SHOWER CURTAIN its line. Would the girl who was so helpful during orientation please phone me? 545-4132 - the guy on the Honda.
FOR SALE - Brand name calculators. Quality Texas Instrument in all models. Phone 545-4023.
LOST - 10 week old sheltie collie. Light colouring. If found or seen please phone 544-5627.
OOM-PA-PA is coming. OOM-PA-PA is coming. OOM-PA-PA is coming. OOM-PA-PA is coming. OOM-PA-PA is coming. It's coming. It's coming. It's here. Friday night of Homecoming Weekend.
ARTIST JACKET OWNERS my jacket was removed from the 1st floor Anatomy Building Tuesday October 8. Size 42 tall. Year '74. Biology crest and "HARDRILL" printed on label. Would appreciate its return. Phone 542-3827.
DESIGN COMPETITION to design the backdrop for music-drama performances at Galerie Victoria Materials supplied. Honourarium $50. Submissions due Oct 22. Site: Victoria Hall information - Dean of Women's office, 547-8109.

FOUND - large sum of American money at Lake Ontario Park during Orientation week. Come to AMS office to identify.
$72.50 or Free Artist Jacket is the prize for the winning Artist '78 Crest. Interested designers please contact Keith Crawford 544-7718. Designs accepted until Oct 24th '78. N.B. Only students with Artist '78 cards will be eligible to vote for the year crest.
OP P 43, Pierre 1251 But, Rematch Oct 31 (Halloween) at the Gananoque Court House. 9:00 am ATTENDANCE MANDATORY FOR ALL THIRD LEONARD ROWIES Francis C.P. we need you.
NEED ONE MALE to share very large room - close to campus. Room has everything: stove, frig, fireplace, stereo, T.V. etc. Call 542-5508.
"VEE HAVE ways of making you go to the OOM-PA-PA. Vee don't want to cause trouble so Vee hope you will co-operate. Friday Oct 18, 8:00 p.m. Jock Hardy Arena

NORDIC SKIING

First Meeting
Seminar B

Physical Education
Centre

Date: Tuesday, October 15
Time: 7:00 pm

DISCOVERY IN DAZZLE

You've discovered the perfect mate now let us help you discover her perfect diamond. Like a woman, one diamond is waiting. One she will cherish above all others. One with fire and brilliance that will glow forever just as your love.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

FROM THE DIRECTOR OF Z. COSTA-GAVRAS

W.U.S.C.

THIRD WORLD FILM SERIES
International Centre Lower Lounge
Admission $1.00 per evening

- Mon., Oct. 14: Sembene's EMITAE and TAUW. 8:00 p.m.
- Tues., Oct. 15: LIMITES TO GROWTH, DREAM ON MONKEY MTN. 8:00 p.m.
- Wed., Oct. 16: SOUL TO SOUL, Roberta Flack, Santana, 8:00 p.m.
- Thurs., Oct. 17: Satyajit Ray's Best, DAYS & NIGHTS IN THE FOREST, 8:00 p.m.
- STATE OF SEIGE, 8:00 p.m.
- Fri., Oct. 18: STATE OF SEIGE, 8:00 p.m.
(call 547-2807)

Domino: a community theatre

by Kerry White

Domino Theatre is one of the most active theatrical groups in Kingston. The group is one of the few amateur groups which are totally self-supporting, bringing in enough money from ticket sales and membership fees to finance all productions and to pay the rent on the theatre at 8 Princess St. Domino is a true community theatre—it is managed by a board of directors, elected from the membership. Auditions are public and are well-advertised.

At least six plays are produced each season; this year seven are planned. The directors and designers strive for a balanced programme each season. Thus productions range from light to heavy entertainment and include musicals, mysteries, children's plays and classics. A few plays of recent years have been "The Killing of Sister George", "Oh What A Lovely War", "I Never Sang for my Father" and a dramatic adaptation of The Trial by Franz Kafka. Among the seven productions planned for this season are "Leaving Home", a play by a Canadian writer about the problems of adjustment encountered by a Newfoundland family in Toronto; and "Canterbury Tales", a musical adaptation of four of Chaucer's famous tales. The Domino's traditional fall "Music Hall" is already past, and was as popular as it has been in the past. The next production will be "6 Rms Riv Vu", a contemporary American comedy about a man and woman who have never met, trapped in an apartment open for inspection. The opening night for this production is October 24.

A tradition in Kingston

The Domino began in 1952 with the disbanding of the Faculty Players, a dramatic group composed of Queen's professors and their wives. These people formed the core of the new company. Since then it has expanded to include people from all areas of Kingston and from all walks of life. Domino is amateur theatre—actors, directors, designers and technicians are not paid for their work, but find the Domino an admirable opportunity to perfect their skills and to enjoy themselves, while giving pleasure to others. Domino serves the community in other ways. It has provided scholarships for students at the Summer School of the Arts and loaned costumes, sets, props and expertise to schools and other theatre groups, including the Prison for Women. It was the first group to take a major production "The Plough and the Stars" into Kingston Penitentiary. It broadcasted a 20 week series of half-hour dramatic productions over radio station CKWS each year for nine years. Last fall Domino produced a variety show to launch the United Appeal campaign. Domino also supports two smaller theatrical groups: Bucksaw Hollow and Theatre Five.

Domino has been at its present location for 10 years. In that time the second floor of 8 Princess St. has been transformed from an empty warehouse to a well-equipped theatre. The theatre seats only 120; this intimate atmosphere helps to create a strong rapport between actors and audience.

A move is planned

However, 8 Princess St. will not be the home of the Domino Theatre for much longer. The building was advertised for sale last spring, and Domino members could not raise the funds necessary to buy it. It has since been sold; and prohibitively high rents and the likelihood of the building being turned to another purpose have forced the groups to seek other facilities. Stewart Barton, a member of the Domino executive, has been searching all summer; at present the most probable new location is a part of 370 King St. West, a complex of old government buildings used by various arts and crafts groups. Jill Hodgkinson, another member of the executive, accepts the necessity of the move philosophically, stating that it will facilitate change and growth within the groups.

Attention writers and artists

The Arts section of the Journal needs lots of writers and artists. Artists are needed to draw graphics, and writers are needed to review plays, art exhibitions, classical and popular concerts, films, records and books. We also want people to interview people in the arts at Queen's. If you are at all interested, please drop in at the Journal, or phone Peter at 544-7739 or Kerry at 544-5358.

Valerie Robertson as Juno, Gordon Robertson as Boyle, and Andrew Orr as Joxer in last spring's Domino production of "Juno and the Paycock".

Texas Instruments SR-11... No other slide-rule calculator offers as much performance for so little cost.

109.95

- Pl. scientific notation, square roots, squares, reciprocals at the touch of a key—as well as addition, subtraction, multiplication and division.
- Constant, chain and mixed calculations.
- Range of nearly 200 decades—8-digit mantissa.
- and 2-digit exponent.
- Automatic (full floating) decimal placement.
- Rechargeable long-life batteries—or AC operation.
- Pocket portability.
- Change sign key and stands/d arithmetic.
- Full year warranty.

Contact
Duncan MacDonnell
549-4623

HEAVY.

McDonald's Quarter-Pounder Or Quarter-Feinder with Cheese. Just right for a heavy appetite.

277 Bath Rd.
Kingston

DOMUS

A side walk sale of picture frames, old and new
Sat. Oct. 12
only prints also

Kingslon's most exciting gift shop and kitchen shop
68 Brock Street
Between King and
Wellington

Shining performance at inaugural recital

by Hugh Agnew

The inaugural recital on the new Grant Hall organ was given by Hedwig Bilgram, West German organist and teacher, to a nearly-full house on Wednesday evening. Both artist and instrument came to Queen's with sterling credentials, and the audience's expectations were more than fulfilled. Professor Bilgram demonstrated the artistry that makes her one of the leading German organists, on an instrument which showed the audience why Casavant Freres, makers of the Grant Hall organ, are the leading North American builders. The program was almost entirely Bach, suitable perhaps since the organ is a faithful replica of the great Baroque organs. For her first selection, Professor Bilgram performed J.S. Bach's transcription of a work by Vivaldi in which she demonstrated the various tonal possibilities of the organ by frequent changes of registration. Unfortunately, this is not one of Bach's most powerful works, and it was only in the next composition that the organist and instrument came into their own. The Toccata and Fugue in F major was a truly spectacular piece, marked by virtuoso pedal work in two long solo passages.

Hedwig Bilgram of West Germany practices for Wednesday's recital on Queen's new pipe organ. The organ is located in Grant Hall and is an historically accurate replica of the organs used by J. S. Bach and other composers of his period.

Mozart work weakest point

Following this tour-de-force, the only non-Bach selection on the program, a work by Mozart, seemed out of place. Although Professor Bilgram's performance was not lacking, the Mozart failed to move the listeners. One could almost hear a sigh as Bach returned to the program with three chorale preludes. The pieces, originally intended for use in church, were not as elaborate as some of Bach's more grandiose works; but each was a little gem in itself, sublimely performed by the artist.

Professor Bilgram's ability to keep the drive and momentum going in long contrapuntal sections was especially evident in the last work of the evening, the Prelude and Fugue in A minor. The evening was only slightly marred by technical problems with the light above the pedal board and the artist's unfamiliarity with the particular instrument, but the influence of these minor difficulties upon the total effect of the evening was negligible. Queen's is indeed fortunate to have an artist of Hedwig Bilgram's calibre on campus; and to have an instrument worthy of her talent.

Hedwig Bilgram at the keyboard

Beer
5-$2.00

Beer
5-$2.00

Oom Pa - Pa

Jock Harty Arena

Friday Oct. 18

8 pm - 1 am

Music by

The Elastic Band

Tickets on sale John Orr Room

Tues., Wed., Thurs., Fri.

Oct. 15-18 9 - 3 pm

1.50 each

no tickets available at door
1500 maximum

THE-ELASTIC-BAND

Ravens look tough

Playoff hopes on line Saturday

by Chris Roon

The playoff hopes of Queen's Golden Gaels will be on the line tomorrow when the Gaels invade Ottawa to take on the Carleton Ravens. The game will be played at the new Carleton Field (which is rumoured to be similar to the beauty York used before moving to the C.N.E. - I sure hope it doesn't rain), starting at 2:00 p.m.

The Ravens are wallowing along with a 1-3 mark in OUAA competition, but they may well be better than one would suspect. Certainly, their 23-22 loss to Ottawa U. last weekend does not support the image of a bad team, and the Gaels have always had trouble making Carleton roll over and play dead, even though Queen's has lost just once to the Birds in recent meetings.

What the Ravens can do is what Queen's hasn't done much of lately - run the football. Joe Colvey, their fullback, is probably the second-best back in the East - right behind a healthy Dave Hadden - while the rest of the Carleton backfield, including QB Peter Stenerson, are quick and mobile. Their passing game is not quite as strong as last year - the loss of clutch receiver Scotty Alexander has definitely hurt the Ravens, and Stenerson is not noted as a bomb-thrower. However, Colvey is a deadly receiver on short stuff, and can run the screen well.

Defensively, the Ravens are big up front. Their down four are probably the biggest in the division, averaging 6'4" and 230 lbs a man. Brian Hedges, an All-Star selection on several occasions, is back to anchor this unit. The Ravens are not as strong from there back, although their linebacking is reasonable. The pass rush they get from the front men helps to hide some of the deep deficiencies.

For the Gaels, Saturday should (had better) see the return of Dave Hadden. His presence will certainly be a big plus for Queen's, who have been having virtually no success along the ground of late. As well, Hadden is the kind of player who inspires everyone to put out just a little harder all the time. This kind of effort can make all the difference in a tight ball game.

The other walking wounded, notably linebackers John Waddell and John Tovee, are healing nicely, but there were still uncertainties at press time as to their availability for tomorrow. If they can play, the Ravens should have a bit more trouble on the ground. It appears that Peter Sabiston has been permanently assigned to a defensive tackle spot, so Wess Garrod, who hauled in a throw that set up a touchdown last week, will probably start at one tight end spot. Peter McNabb will likely stay on offense teaming with Brian Titley, Hadden, Raold Serebrin and Bruce Pollock in the starting backfield. Greg Anderson is the other tight end. If the Gaels can reestablish what was once the best ground game in the East, to go with their best passing game since Don Bayne called it a career, they should be able to control the ball. If this happens, John Thompson's defensive crew won't give up too many points, Colvey or no. If the offense can't move the ball effectively, it could be another fourth-quarter ulcer special, because the Raven offense can wear people down.

A final note: since there are undoubtedly many people heading home to Ottawa for Thanksgiving, why not make a point of dropping by the game. The Gaels will appreciate it.

6-1 Gaels dump Big Blue

by M. Rurnes

The soccer Gaels played St. Lawrence College Monday night and came away with a 6-1 victory. The game moved at a very quick pace, probably due to the cool evening temperatures. In the early going, the attack repeatedly penetrated St. Lawrence territory, but were held scoreless. Then, after about 15 minutes had elapsed, Davy Robertson scored the first of his three goals. However, moments later, a Queen's forward lost the ball to a St. Lawrence attacker whose wind-assisted drive sailed over the keeper's head. Just before the half ended, Jim Monaghan restored Queen's lead with the Gaels' second goal, making it 2-1.

In the second half, the Gaels' tough conditioning began to show as the St. Lawrence drive became non-existent. Some half-time changes were needed when Tony Louwman was sent to hospital for stitches and observation for a possible concussion. X-rays proved negative, however, and he is expected to resume playing in the near future.

Unable to create any offensive pressure, the St. Lawrence defense started giving up the ball in wild desperation. On one occasion, Carlos Valdes lost no time in putting it home to add to the growing Queen's lead. Only a few moments later, Davy Robertson connected, making it 4-1. The Gaels were really beginning to click.

After moving into Queen's territory, St. Lawrence lost the ball and were caught out of position. On the quick two-on-one break that followed, Mike Barnes fed a perfect pass to Ron Heidebrecht who slammed in Queen's fifth goal. The last goal to complete the hattrick for Davy Robertson came after Barnes threaded a pass through the St. Lawrence defenders to set him up.

The next game is today, October 11, at 4:30 p.m. against R.M.C. at West Campus Field. If you're not going home, try to make it out to the last league home game of the year.

Convenor system tops

by Carl Fitzpatrick

The convenor system implemented this year has not only been my praise. It has enabled the Bews program to advance to a stage where the schedules are fair to all concerned and each sport in the program receives the attention of a devoted individual whose sole responsibility is to coordinate the event. This responsibility is not an easy job; the convenor must make sure that schedules are properly drawn up, posted and carried out. It is because of this system that the results of each game in every sport are given in to the Bews office once a week where they are tabulated and filed. In this way, point standings are carefully calculated and posted each Thursday morning in the Men's Locker Room. It also enables the Director of Intramural Sports (Sue Bolton) to verify each participant's point accumulation towards his letter at the end of each year.

It is the responsibility of the convenor to arrange that officials are working each game. The officials this year are doing a fine job, and I believe the calibre of officiating we have seen this year reflects the job done by these convenors.

A case in point is that of Jim Henderson (Arts 76), whose job it is to provide qualified referees for Bews Hockey and Broomball. He has taken it upon himself to run a referee's clinic for the men who will handle the officiating this year. Henderson is a graduate of the National School of Refereeing and has three years of experience in the field.

The officiating for soccer, rugby and flag football is not only a reflection of the efforts put in by the convenor, but also the individuals who devote time to doing a tough assignment as officials, and are doing a competent job.

The Bews program has been set up to provide an opportunity for male students who do not participate on inter-collegiate teams to take advantage of the numerous sports available and to represent their year and-or faculty.

Up-coming sports, or sports already in progress, are open to every male student, and information regarding these can be obtained in the Bews Office Room 102 A PHE Building

Bews News

by Carl Fitzpatrick

This week in Bews rugby, Comm 77 was awarded the victory over Science 76 when the latter did not show and defaulted the game. Two other defaults went to Law 77 over the Independents and Civil-Math. Millen made 2 tries and R. Know a field goal to round out the scoring for the Commerce team. Another Commerce team, Comm 78, defeated Arts 76, 12-0. The scoring for the businessmen was spread over to three members of the team, Lee Bennet, R. Bradeen and M. Deslaurier, who counted one try each.

In the soccer section, 9 games were played during last week and the early part of this week. The only tie came between Science 78 and Meds, who scored 1 goal apiece in a closely-matched contest.

In other games, Chemistry defeated Law 77 2-0; Commerce 76 blanked the Engineer Grads 3-0; and in an upset victory, Civil Math upended the P.H.E. boys 3-0. However, the boys in P.H.E. were able to turn the tables and blanked Comm 77 4-0. Unfortunately, three defaults were recorded, Arts 75 defaulting to Arts 76, Mechanical to Comm 76, and Arts 78 to the Independents.

Flag Football has started, and teams are already fighting for the top playoff positions. Two teams to watch out for are Arts 76 and P.H.E.

Arts 76 defeated Science 78 in a game which saw Arts 76 dominate both offensively and defensively. Tom Dixon gathered in two touchdowns from quarterback Tom Hamilton, and it seems that Dixon and his speed will be hard to beat this year. Hamilton played a super game mixing his plays, setting up Dean Manjuois for a major, and Mike Dousset was left alone in the end-zone for an easy 6 points.

Both the defensive and offensive lines kept the pressure on the first-year team. John Wilson was quite pleased with the performance of his charges but did comment that some work had to be done to coordinate the defensive squad.

P.H.E. also dominated play with touchdowns going to Simon Little, Ken Sagadore, Jim Stone and Kerry Powell, while Dave Kay converted three out of four on their way to defeating comm 78 27-0.

Wic-ly News

by Barb McDermott

Girls! Come on down to the Phys. Ed. Centre for the 2 remaining fun filled evenings of badminton. It's from 9:00 to 11:00 pm in the Ross and Bartlett Gyms on Oct. 17 and 24. (Convenor: Y. HIEMSTRA 544-8087)

Paddleball starts on October 15. Anyone who wants to play, or learn how should show up at the paddleball courts from 8:30 to 10:30 pm.

All female students of Queen's University are informally invited to come out to the SKATATHON. Any number of laps on any of the nights earn you five participation points closer towards your Intramural Queen's mug. Queen's book ends or silver tray award. If you skate the highest number of laps over the three nights you will earn a pennant award and 1000 points for your faculty towards the "Marion Ross Trophy". So girls come out and skate on Wednesday, Oct. 23, 30 and Nov. 6 - 7:00-8:20 pm, Jock Hardy Arena. You are welcome to bring guys for morale support.

WANTED

Assistant Director

For Queen's Entertainment Agency

A POSITION WITH NO DEFINITE FUTURE THAT WILL TAKE UP A LOT OF TIME. IF YOU'RE INTERESTED IN BOOKING AND WORKING WITH ENTERTAINERS THEN THIS MAY BE FOR YOU. AN INTEREST AND A KNOWLEDGE OF MUSIC, RECORDS AND A KNOWLEDGE OF MUSIC, RECORDS AND GROUPS IS A NECESSITY.

IF INTERESTED LEAVE YOUR NAME, PHONE NUMBER AND A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF YOUR EXPERIENCE AT THE A.M.S. OFFICE NO LATER THAN WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 16.

The Handmaids

Princess Street, Kingston, Ontario

MOVED!!

TWO DOORS AWAY

Handmade

Gifts - Clothing - Accessories

COME AND SEE US!

New Address: 349 B Princess St.

George Bailey
sporting goods
40 Princess Street
Kingston, Ontario
K7L 1A4
Tel. 613/542-7293

WOODS
DOWN INSULATED
Jackets
for hiking or skiing

Reg. 59.95

$53.96 with student card

LONDY'S DRUGS
Special rates
to Queen's Students

471 Princess at University Ave.
464 Princess
Reddendale
Lasalle Park
Amherstview

Delivery Available

546-3696

OPEN 7 AM TO 11 PM DAILY

Everyone Agrees...

THAT MOTHER CAN'T BE BEAT

Whether you crave one of Mother's Piping Pizza's, superlative spaghetti, or super subs, there's one thing for sure: you won't be disappointed. In fact you just might become one of the family. Drop in today, or let one of Mother's boys deliver to your door.

MOTHER'S
PIZZA PARLOUR

455 PRINCESS ST.

549-0006

LOU REED CONCERT

with Daryl Hall
and John Oates
Jock Harty
Arena

Sunday Oct. 20
8 pm

Tickets: $3 advance
$4 at door

available at

John Orr Room
House of Sounds
Vern Napier

FORD

Washington: President Ford put forth his policies on how to tackle the problems of inflation in the United States. Ford has proposed a five per cent surtax on corporations and middle and upper income families. The surtax would be in effect for one year. It would apply to families with adjusted incomes above $15,000 and to single people with incomes above $7,500. The additional funds would be used to ease the tax burdens of the poor.

To encourage business expansion Ford has recommended an across-the-board investment tax credit of ten per cent, an increase of three per cent. This tax credit would allow business to subtract some of the costs of new equipment for expansion from taxes. A measure to permit businesses full tax deductibility on dividends to preferred shareholders has also been suggested. This act would save the corporations $100 million a year.

Anti-inflation attack proposed

Ford proposed the creation of a Community Improvement Corps to assist with the problems of unemployment and the rising cost of living. The Corps would provide public service jobs when the national unemployment level exceeds six per cent. Currently the unemployment level is 5.8 per cent. If the unemployment rate exceeds 6.5 per cent in any local market, the one-year jobs program would automatically go into effect. If instituted such programs would put 2.25 billion dollars into the economy.

When approached about two of the most severe problems food and energy inflation, Ford urged his people to "cut the food you waste by 5 per cent" and to "reduce the amount of joy-riding in your cars". Ford intends to reduce oil imports and gasoline consumption by one million barrels per day. The United States presently consumes 18 million barrels a day, 6 million of which are imported. A new National Energy Board would be instituted to devise a single national energy program. Oil will be phased out of electricity production and be replaced by coal and nuclear fuel. A program would be started in which auto manufacturers would be asked to achieve a forty per cent increase in gasoline mileage over four years.

Ford has suggested a 300 billion dollar federal spending ceiling for this fiscal year, 1975, a cutback of 5 billion dollars.

President Ford's proposals could affect Canada in the areas of energy, food and automobiles. External Affairs Minister MacEachen indicated that the proposed cutbacks in oil imports is not aimed at Canada but at a new push to use the oil in Alaska. The use of this oil might require that a pipeline across Canada be built. Ford's hint at food controls could affect the agricultural imports from Canada.

Great Train Robber, Ronald Biggs, is planning to write a cook book called, "Cooking on the Run". He intends to include "all those delicious recipes I've picked up in my travels about the world". Biggs is considered a Brazilian citizen the government may not expel him. Britain has no extradition treaty with Brazil and therefore can not demand the return of Biggs to serve his prison sentence.

Cairo: Since the Egyptian-American diplomatic relations were restored in March, after a break of seven years, the American government has used over $13 million in an attempt to please the Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. The most recent donation was the transfer of a plot of land worth over one million dollars, to Sadat. The United States government acquired the site for the residence of the U.S. ambassador. Prior to this Mr. Kissinger approved a reduction of the Egyptian debt to the United States by ten million dollars. The ten million dollars involved was to be donated to Mrs. Sadat's 'Fidelity and Hope Society' last spring. Former President Nixon presented Mr. Sadat with a gift of a two million dollar white-topped presidential helicopter.

Bonn: The German T.V. will be starting a fifty minute marriage market once a month. Individuals will be able to select either a husband or a wife from the tube in the privacy of their own home. The series is titled, 'Marriage Not Excluded', and its theme song is an old Beatles tune, 'Love Me Do'.

Washington: The Senate approved an election reform bill on Tuesday. The bill was designed to prevent actions typical of the Watergate episode. The bill recommends that federal financing of presidential election be provided. A ceiling will be placed on campaign contributions by individuals and organizations; individuals are prohibited from donating more than $1,000 to any one candidate. Organizations are not allowed to contribute more than $5,000. The presidential candidates are held to a $20 million spending ceiling.

briefly..

Washington: Legislation has been called for that would allow the United States to divert water from Lake Michigan. Representative James Otter has stated that although Canada's views are entitled to consideration, the United States must weigh Canada's objections against the benefits for their country. The diversion of the water would reduce the water level which would reduce the potential for hydro-electric generation at Niagara Falls, Ont. and Beauharnois, Que. The reduction will also affect Great Lakes shipping.

Calgary: The Canadian oil companies are searching for a revised formula for reporting their earnings. They seemed to be rather embarrassed about the tremendous upswing in profits last year. They are investigating a new method which will express that their profits are not as high as the layman would think them during a period of galloping inflation. The new method of accounting will be designed to remove the distorting effect inflation has on a company's profit. It would report 'true profit' by eliminating those earnings which are due to inflation.

The overstatement of profits by the standard method creates the illusion that the profits of industry are excessive. Such an image of industry invites tax, royalty, and regulatory policies that impair the industry's ability to finance development of new high cost energy sources.

Rio De Janeiro: The escaped

"With so many countries to choose from, I can't decide where to take my post graduate studies in terrorism."

Canada urges support

Ottawa: Recommendations to the External Affairs Minister, Allan MacEachen and to the Immigration Minister Robert Andras have called for a change in the Canadian policy toward Chile. The members of the Canadian Labour Congress and of major churches feel that the policy has not "sufficiently expressed Canada's concern for justice and that indeed the military junta which now rules oppressively over the Chilean people has been well-treated by the government of Canada." The reign of terror which began in September of 1973 continues with its systematic tortures and summary executions. The members have expressed the view that many Chileans would seek refuge in Canada if Canadian Immigration laws were relaxed. Rev. Floyd Honey general secretary of the Canadian Council of Churches, charges that the Chileans are being discriminated against. Canada has accepted thousands from Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Uganda but only about 1,000 from Chile. It was recommended that a policy of "evident Canadian coolness" toward the military regime be taken and that a rapid admission of 10,000 Chileans to Canada be allowed. The Canadian government implies its approval if it remains silent about the junta's activities, and if it sanctions economic aid through international and United States dominated financial institutions.

back
page

Ministry of Colleges and Universities

OSAP Reminder

Those students seeking assistance through the Ontario Student Assistance Program for a full academic year must submit their applications to their Student Awards Officer before September 30, 1974. Applications received after this date will be assessed for half a year's need only.

The Queen's Jazz Ensemble played to vibrant audience Thursday evening... everything from classics to modern jazz. see page 6 for story.

Common law: low priority

by Paul Steep

The current housing shortage in Kingston has raised some serious questions about the policies of the Queen's Housing Service.

The Housing Service has offices at 125 Union St. They are responsible for listing vacancies, as well as administering A.M.S. housing, the Queen's Towers and the married students' apartments.

As the housing shortage became more and more acute, more students who were unmarried began applying to the married students' apartments. Housing policy provides that unmarried students will be taken care of only if there are no married couples on the waiting list. If this qualification has been satisfied then room will be made available in the following order of preference: single students of the same sex, young faculty members, and finally other students in other post secondary education.

This set of regulations makes no allowance for unmarried couples of opposite sex who wish to apply for these apartments. Their dubious status under the housing service's guidelines has been the cause of some concern over the past month.

John Gray, Vice President (University Affairs), related incidents where students who wished to live common law were rejected solely on the basis of their marital status, or more correctly, their lack of it.

When questioned about this, the Housing Service was ambiguous in their reply to say the least. It was made clear that the apartments were for married students which could only be defined as a legal status. Common law did not qualify at all.

In assessing the applications of single students, however, the Housing Service assured us that there was no discrimination between couples of different sex and those of the same sex who wished to live in the married students' apartments. This would appear to run contrary to the experience of some students who insist that they were rejected because of their common law status.

John Richardson, the director of the service conceded that someone on his staff might have made a mistake in interpreting their policy. He stated that about five weeks ago their policy regarding the admissions of singles into the apartments was under review. At that time, uncertain about what the true regulations were, unmarried couples may have been rejected.

Mr. Richardson further stated that at present there are common law couples living in the married students' apartment. But their admission seems to be a haphazard affair. They are not given the same status as married students.

Gray felt that the housing service had better get a more specific set of guidelines so that everyone would know exactly where they stand. He feels that common law students should be dealt with on an equal basis with married students.

He felt that the confusion over married vs. common law status was another example of the services poor public communication. On other occasions they have refused to properly advertise temporary housing on the mistaken assumption that this would discourage students from seeking permanent placement.

He also cited instances where listings have been discriminatory, requesting that no males apply, or even more absurd for a student housing office that no student apply. Listings that were often already taken remained posted days after they had been rented.

Gray feels that they have not acted responsibly in tackling the current housing shortage. Their policies have not been in the best interests of the students. He warns that the housing problem has already developed into a housing shortage and that if responsible action isn't taken soon, the shortage will soon be a crisis.

Jacob Bronowski dead

Brockington Visitor: still uncertain

by Sue Bennett

There will be a Brockington Visitor. However, who it will be and exactly when it will be at Queen's remains a mystery.

The original Visitor was to be Dr. Jacob Bronowski, a teacher, inventor, administrator, and playwright. The culmination of his philosophical enquiries can best be seen in his forthcoming book, 'The Ascent of Man' and in all Bronowski has written twenty books and an assortment of articles. Unfortunately and quite unexpectedly, however, Bronowski passed away last month.

Further contacts have been made with several prospective speakers but nothing definite has been established. The Visitor will be here during second term, instead of the first due to the short notice. In order to avoid priorities of the persons contacted, Padre Laverly was unable to release any names. However, he will inform the students as soon as something is certain.

Other speakers will be appearing during the year. An interesting person to look forward to will be Dr. Peccei, chairman of the Club of Rome whose book 'The Limits to Growth' is studied here at Queen's and is a most controversial piece of literature. An attempt to contact John Kenneth Galbraith economist, was made, but to no avail.

It is hoped that second term will be lived up with a political debate, perhaps including Prime Minister Trudeau. As well, there will be guest speakers for the Arts Festival, Canadian writers and critics. Other speakers on campus include those for the Third World Series. AMS and OFS seminars as well as a Law Day will be held later in the year.

Queen's

Journal

Volume 102, Number 11

Tuesday, October 15, 1974

Up and Coming..

Bitter Grounds Coffee House and Good Times Emporium presents Michal Hasek. A evening of folk. Admission $1.50. Tickets available starting Thurs. in John Orr Rm and Eng. Soc. offices. doors open at 8:00 p.m.

Domino Theatre "6 Rms. Riv Vu" by Bob Randall. Directed by Gary W. Thompson... a Broadway comedy of charm and humor. Dates: Oct. 24th, 25th, 26th, 31st. Nov. 1st, 2nd, 7th, 8th, 9th. Time: 8:30. Tickets available at Mahod's Drug Store or at the door. $2.50 and $1.75 for Students on Thurs. only.

Department of Obstetrics and Gynaecology presents "New concepts in Pregnancy Immunology: The Placenta as a Tumor". Tuesday, October 22, at 8:00. Etherington Hall Auditorium.

Tuesday, October 15

7:00 pm - Philosophy of Mathematics Seminar. John Watson Hall, Room 341.

8:30 pm - A film on Eastern Spirituality and meditation followed by a talk from Prof. Cliff Hospital. Admission free. SCM's Union basement Bookroom now open Weekday afternoons.

9:00 pm - Human Sexuality Course - introductory session. Dupuis Aud.

9:00 pm - Contemporary Cinema Series - "Night of the Following Day" (USA 1969) Dunning Hall Aud.

Wednesday, October 16

7:00 pm - 10:00 pm - Kingston Antique Show - ballroom of the 401 Inn. Also on Thurs. 17th from

unclassifieds

MS'S LUSHBOOD AND DESIRE. 419

VIE, despite previous contracts, will consider offers if you can show us what you've got. Oave de Praved (an installable).

FLAMING MAMIE kassy Kathleen Toy-Noy of 174 Earl - don't fret about bringing in the bees - most likely manifestation of menopausal flaunting.

Heaving the mattress helped. Love Anyv free too.

Gael Group 42 reunion in the pub this Wednesday at 8:00 pm. Special invitation extended to OR, GB, OL, OM. See you all there!

JO.

THINKING GAY CAN BE lonely if you don't live gay. Call Terry Watson 547-2832 Mon. to Thurs. 8-9 pm or write Student Affairs Centre c/o Terry Watson.

HELP - one lost small brown wallet between Queen's Pub and Earl Street. Just want my ID, you can keep the $2.00. Call 544-8756.

NINETY FOUR is on the floor or they will be after our reunion. Yes, it's this Thursday, 8:00 pm at the Pub. All the gorgeous girls, guys and car parts of Gael Group 42 are ordered to attend. BYOB (bring your own beer). The lampost is growing fuzzi. This we gotta see!

TO THE GUYS on 3rd Gordon. Thanks for the great party and the garbage bag boozet. Your sisters on 4E.

VEE HAVE VAYS of making you to the Oom-pa-pa: Vee don't want to cause trouble so vee hope you will co-operate Friday, Oct 18, 8:00pm Jack Harry Arena.

OUR THANKSGIVING TURKEY is still in the freezer. We were busy with sexy Suite on the United Way. Care to give her a hand? Call 544-1301.

10:00 am to 9:00 pm. See previous Journal for details.

8:00 pm - Introductory Lecture on Transcendental Meditation. Stirling Hall, Rm. 412A. Transcendental Meditation is a major scientific discovery. The practice is unique and its effects are unprecedented in their range and profundity. Free.

8:30 pm - Queen's Astronomy Club meeting. Ellis 323.

8:30 pm - Grant Hall Series "Early Music Quarter". The program will include both instrumental and vocal music.

Thursday, October 17

4:30 pm - French Canadian Film - "Les Acadiens de la Dispersion". Kingston Hall Rm 101. Free.

6:30 pm - CFRC - "Spectrum": Music and items of interest and a summary of upcoming events at Queen's and in Kingston.

7:00 pm - Kingston Group of Amnesty International presents "Wait until Dark" in Dunning Hall Aud. Also a showing at 9:30 pm. Admission $1.00.

7:00 pm - Campus Movies presents "Paper Moon" in Ellis Aud. There is also a showing at 9:30.

7:30 pm - Diplomacy Club Meeting in the Polson Room in the Union. The meeting will be brief and all members are asked to attend. New members welcome. For information phone Michael Small at 549-0741.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

8:30 pm - CFRC - "Music of Canada": Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Weinzwieg - Interlude in an Artist's Life and Morawetz-Piano Concerto No. 1.

VAN'S GIFTS and BOOKS LTD.

282 Princess St. KINGSTON 542-6676
"RONSON" - "SCRIPTO" - "BENTLEY" - "DUNHILL" - "ZIPPO" etc. Are Bought at the Old Price and these famous quality brandname lighters are sold at the old price.
At Van's of course! Buy these bargains now before the Christmas rush starts! EXTRA SPECIAL - 2 Pouches of "DRUM" or "BOUKANEER" Reg. $1.06 at Van's 2 pouches, mix or match, for 89c.

STORE HOURS
OPEN Mon.-Fri. 9:30 am - 10 pm
Saturday 9:30 am - 9 pm
Sunday 12:00 noon - 9 pm

CAMPUS MOVIES presents PAPER MOON

by Peter Bogdanavitch with Ryan and Tatum O'Neill
Ellis Auditorium
Thursday Oct. 17
7 and 9:30 p.m. $1.00 per person

Grant Hall Concert EARLY MUSIC QUARTET - programme of medieval music WEDNESDAY 16 OCTOBER

Tickets: $4, $3 general
$3, $2 students and senior citizens
Box Office in
Agnes Etherington Art Centre
a Division of Concerts
event

WHO'S WHERE

will be available
in the
International Centre
Lower Lounge
from 11:00 to 4:00
Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, this week.

Correction

While the Domino Theatre appreciates the article written in the Journal last Friday 11th, October we should like to point out that although the Domino supports Bucksaw Hollow and Theatre Five in spirit there is no formal relationship between any of these groups. Another misconception in the article was that Domino came into being with the disbanding of the Faculty Players....The Players continued for ten years after the Domino began.

Improve learning skills

by Mary Smelko
The Queen's Student Counselling Service, which has been in existence for four years, is now in operation at its new location situated at the Orr House, 32 Queen's Crescent, between Stirling Hall and Ban Righ.

There are a number of services which the organization supplies, including study skills, reading comprehension, effectiveness in vocabulary and increasing one's reading speed. The courses are now in the first week of the first session and there will be another programme beginning in November. The courses entail one hour a week classes for four weeks for the study skills and two hours a week for the reading improvement. The instructors are Heather Carmichael, a Doctoral candidate who served her internship last year at the Student Counselling, and Marilyn Hood last year's chief counsellor for Queen's special admission programme.

Last year the reading course was conducted voluntarily by Carmichael and met with some universities have shown that although there was not a drastic increase in student marks there was a marked improvement in the students ability to cope with his studies and as a result less tension was felt by the student. One of the instruments which may be used for the reading exercises is a projector by which the student is forced to read faster. The emphasis is on comprehension along with speed.

Another of the services which is provided is called desensitization by which one learns to control one's fears and anxieties. This is done essentially by the use of a tape by which the student learns to control the tensing and relaxing of his own muscles. With this the student is able to relax before an exam or to put himself to sleep when he is unable to naturally. This principle can also be applied to rid oneself of fears which stem from fantasies. The Service is also there for counselling in such areas as helping the student decide whether or not he should continue in university and provide various tests to determine one's abilities and interests.

The Service employs a part-time staff including a psychologist, a social worker, doctoral candidates specializing in clinical psychology and a Professor of Psychology. The Service does not administer drugs but instead works from a counselling angle. The Queen's administration is the sole financial supporter of the Counselling Service. Dr. Marilyn Bowman, director of the Service believes that if the Student Society Fund were to partly support the Service then the Service could be responsible to the students rather than only to the Administration. The Student Counselling Service is open from Monday to Friday, from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. and the telephone number is 547-2893.

One Man's Politics...

by Doug Bonnell

The past seven years in the provincial legislature have altered the outlook of Dr. Morton Shulman, the controversial and outspoken member from Toronto-High Park. Just two elections ago he bounced into the Provincial House as an idealist, a newly-converted member of the NDP, an activist, and a man with the strong belief that if you fight progress is inevitable. Now, eliminated from his party's inner political circles, he talks openly of his disenchantment with the NDP and derides their economic policy.

Born and raised a Progressive Conservative, he repudiated the party in power and became Chief Critic of the City of Toronto. But it was an unsettling experience, Shulman maintains they wanted to keep him quiet. They should have known better. One Commission and a firing later, Shulman swept to victory in the relatively wealthy riding of High Park overturning the Conservative incumbent Alfred Cowling and piling up a five thousand vote majority.

Why NDP? There were two reasons. "I wanted revenge. I had a choice of two parties. The Liberals came to me and offered me one hundred thousand dollars to run. The NDP said they'd fight for the things I was fighting for." He joined the NDP.

Shulman is an erratic politician using his freedom of speech privileges as a member of the House to lash out at government members and policies in a way most commonly labelled as "trial and error". He has attacked hospital administrators and linked provincial cabinet ministers to the Mafia. His name has become a godsend in the homes of some, anathema in others. And yet, even to his opponents, there is something very unsettling in his departure from provincial politics.

Perhaps it is merely politics playing with Shulman as he has played with it. Or perhaps it is a sign that independent-thinking people like Morton Shulman have no place in the Canadian electoral system, a system designed for specified leaders and compliant back-benchers. A man of his character, enthusiastic, emotional, and impatient, is unsuited for a role in any parliamentary system. He demonstrated this point on Wednesday night.

"Dr. Shulman, you have the knowledge and talent to tell society what is at stake, the harm that present economic policy can do, yet you come here tonight sounding like an investment counsellor. Why are you backing out now?"

"I've said it all before. I've made the same speech fifty times in the House, to the same one hundred and sixteen members, and the only time I get press is when I talk about dogfights or the Mafia".

Even more distressing is his present world view, a view that forces economic collapse and political autocracy. "If you've given up on government, any government, and I have, you have a responsibility to yourself and your family. It's every man for himself in a democracy."

I hope that the frustration of Morton Shulman is only a reflection of his experiences in provincial politics. I hope that he is wrong about politicians and their inability to handle the coming economic crisis. I hope he is wrong about the collapse of western democracy. I hope like hell he's wrong.

Who's Where

Pick up your Who's Where Wednesday and Thursday in the Lower Lounge International Centre.

Queens Journal

Vol. 102, No. 11
Tues., Oct. 15, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Editor in Chief - Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager - Terry Collins
Managing Editor - Don McClelland
News Editor - Sarah Yarnell
Arts Editors - Kerry White, Peter Haworth
Features Editors - Wens and Laur
Photography Editor - John Cameron
Wat's Hapkin - Jennifer Haslings
Rosemary Knight

Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (413) 547-2864. Printed by names at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newspaper.

Flair
PHOTOGRAPHIC
Has A Limited
Number of Appointments
Available for
Graduation Portraits
Phone 542-7733 or visit 94 Brock St. (Corner of Brock & Wellington)

W.U.S.C.

3rd World Week: Oct. 14-18
WUSC CRAFTS sales week: Oct. 22-26
- feature films from developing countries
- superb handicrafts (great for advance xmas shopping!)
Call the International Centre
547-2807

AMS OUTER COUNCIL MEETING

Thursday, October 17
7:30 pm McLaughlin Room
Students' Union

Agenda items include:
debate on OFS Report

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.
The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT
in our Lounge
THIS WEEK :
Rouge Hill
Amateur Night
every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

HOMECOMING '74

Pep Rally
Vic Field
Friday, Oct. 18
7 pm

Live Band
In The
Queen's Pub
9 p.m.
FRIDAY OCT. 18

OFFICIAL OPENING
OF THE
MACINTOSH-CORRY
BLDG.
FRIDAY OCT. 18
2:00 p.m.

Lou Reed
Concert
WITH DARLY HALL AND JOHN OATES
Jock Hardy Arena
8 p.m.
SUNDAY OCT. 20
TICKETS $3 ADVANCE
$4 AT DOOR
AVAILABLE IN JOHN ORR
ROOM

Oom Pa Pa
GERMAN DANCE BAND
Friday Oct. 18
8 pm
Jock Hardy Arena
TICKETS ON SALE TUESDAY
IN THE JOHN ORR ROOM
$1.50

Parade
Downtown
SATURDAY OCT. 19
9 a.m.
UNIVERSITY AND UNION

Mickey's
Madhouse
Leonard Hall Cafeteria
Saturday
Oct. 19
8:00 PM
TICKETS $1.50 AT DOOR
BEER $5.50

The
Wonderful
World
Semi Formal Dance
in Grant Hall
SATURDAY OCT. 19,
9 P.M.
TICKETS $8.00
ON SALE IN THE JOHN ORR ROOM

Saturday
Parade To
Game 1 p.m.
Oct. 19
UNIVERSITY
AND UNION

Applied
Science
Variety
Night
Thursday Oct. 17
Grant Hall 8 PM - 1
Refreshments
5 for $2.00
Tickets 50c at Door

The
Queen's
Golden Gaels
VS
The University of Toronto Blues
SATURDAY, OCT. 19
2 pm
Bring Student Card

Running game too much

Ravens bomb Gaels 36-16

by Chris Boon

Carleton Ravens parlayed a devastating running attack and some tough defensive play into an overwhelming 36-16 victory over a somewhat befuddled Golden Gaels quad Saturday, as they knocked Queen's down to a 2-3 record in the OUA East.

The loss leaves Queen's a slim chance of making the playoffs; they must defeat Varsity next weekend, then knock off Guelph two weeks from now, plus getting the right combination of wins and losses from their rivals for the fourth and final post-season berth.

The Gaels started off like they would have an easy afternoon of it, jumping out to a 9-0 lead on a 36-yard field goal by Will Kennedy and a 21-yard run by Brian Titley after Radd Serebrin had hit flanker Bruce Pollock on a 62-yard bomb up the sidelines. However, Carleton blocked the extra-point attempt, and nothing went right after that.

Led by power-back Joe Colvey, who picked up 168 yards on 24 carries, the Ravens ripped the Gaels for over 360 yards along the ground. Carleton enjoyed a considerable advantage in size in both their offensive and defensive lines, and used it well, on the sloppy field, overpowering the smaller Gaels' defenders almost

John Soliman

Gaels' halfback Brian Titley (29) starts to the outside as end Wes Garrod (77) and guard Doug Lowry (62) look for blocking at will. When Colvey wasn't slashing up the middle or off-tackle for seven and eight yards a crack, halfbacks Paul Johnston, who gained 64 yards, and Steve Walsh, who added 56, were doing damage to the outside. Raven QB Pete Stenerson, who tried just 9 passes during the course of the wind-lashed game, did some effective running on the option play, picking up critical first downs in the early stages of the Ravens' comeback. He also gained a total of 56 yards, while passing for 70 more.

Part of the Gaels' difficulties came from offensive inconsistencies, as the combination of the windy, cold weather, strong Carleton pass rush and tight coverage in the secondary almost shut down Queen's passing game. Serebrin tried 12 passes, completing just three, including the longie to Pollock, although he had some well-thrown balls, knocked away by hard, well-timed tackles. One of his completions went to Doug Latham for Queen's second TD, late in the game, but by then it was too little, too late. Serebrin also figured on the catching end of a pass, taking an option toss from Peter McNabb that gained 10 yards and helped keep that final drive going. Serebrin had two balls intercepted, one by Jim Dale and another by Larry Neilson who returned his for 47 yards to set up a Raven score. The Gaels got just one interception, when Bill McIver grabbed off an under thrown Stenerson bomb in the first quarter.

One of the few reasonably bright spots for the Gaels last Saturday was their running game, which has been almost non-existent in past weeks. The return of the Beast, who picked up 74 yards in 13 carries to lead Queen's rushers, seemed to inspire the rest of the backfield somewhat, with Peter McNabb adding 58 yards and Titley 38 for Queen's best total since McGill, 180 yards. However, the absence of the so-far reliable passing game left the Gaels with limited offensive continuity. Hadden, who seemed a little rusty (quite reasonably, considering his lengthy layoff) should be back at full speed next Saturday for the homecoming classic with Varsity. He will likely need to be, and let's hope it doesn't rain or get windy.

The windy conditions Saturday also took a lot out of Tom Taylor's punting. He had only two kicks all day that were with the wind, and kicking into targets. Titley slid to the outside past Raven LB Alan Jette and galloped in for the score to give the Gaels' a short lived lead. that game was a thankless task at best. As Taylor commented on the bus after the game, "When we were kicking with the wind, it was really tough for Jim (Murphy) to get the ball back to me quickly, and when the wind was against us, the snaps were great but my kicks didn't go anywhere." Some days, nothing goes right. Another factor, which did nothing to help the Gaels' punt-return crews, was the referees' decision to call the ball dead where it was caught on punts into the wind. This eliminated any number of no-yards penalties, and also eliminated one of the few things the Gaels were doing well. However, Queen's did continue to do well on kickoffs, with Penner coming close to breaking one for a TD after the Ravens' opening touchdown in the second half had given Carleton a 21-9 lead. Unfortunately, a penalty and a dropped pass left the Gaels out of luck.

The Gaels now have absolutely no margin left. Even two victories, which would give them a 4-3 record, would not guarantee Queen's a playoff berth, and to be blunt, they would have to do a miraculous rebuilding job, both physically and mentally, to get ready for Saturday. Hopefully, the tradition and a home crowd may inspire the Gaels to suck it up and keep going. It may be that some of the players were looking ahead to Varsity and forgot to take the Ravens seriously. It was unfortunate if they did so: the Ravens have a damn good ball club, and when Colvey is in the game, they can beat just about anybody - and just might do so if they make the playoffs. Finally, it looks like the Gaels escaped without any more serious injuries, although Doug Lowry may have more ankle problems, and John Waddell took another jolt on the shoulder separation he is nursing. If everybody is reasonably healthy by Saturday, it could be a good ball game.

John Soliman

Yes, it was bloody cold up in Ottawa Saturday afternoon! It was even colder up on the mickey-mouse stadium doesn't have a press scaffolding where CFRC and friends were box.

Wic-ly News

by Barb McDermott

The remaining WIC athletic stick rep positions have now been filled. Michelle Sampson is the Grads rep; Sue Foster - Education and Paula Luck - Engineering. Contact your rep if you want to find out more about WIC events.

Entries close today for SWIM NIGHT. Teams and schedules for intermure water polo will be posted in the Women's Locker room tomorrow. Anyone wishing to play paddleball, or interested in learning how to play can come down to the Paddleball courts on Tues. Oct. 15, from 8:30-10:30 p.m.

Girls! Come on down to the Phys. Ed centre for the 2 remaining evenings of badminton. It's from 9:00-11:00 in the Ross and Bartlett Gyms on Oct. 17 and 24.

All female students of Queen's University are informally invited to come out to the skating. Any number of laps on any nights will earn you 5 participation points towards your Intramural Queen's mug, Queen's book ends, or silver tray award. If you skate, the highest number of laps over the three nights you will earn a pennant award and 1,000 points for your faculty towards the "Marion Ross trophy". So girls, come out and skate on Wednesday, Oct. 23, 30, and Nov. 6, 7:00-8:20 p.m., in Jock Hart's Arena. You are welcome to bring guys for moral support.

Flag Football takes place Wednesday, Oct. 16, 5:30 to 6:30. Right after this, you can stay and join in some Soccer, from 6:30 - 7:30 p.m.

Going home on the weekend? Remember to bring back your skates, and to WIC's Skatathon and Skating Party.

Tennis: 2nd and 3rd rounds must be played by the end of this week. Check the bulletin board in the Women's Locker Room, and contact your opponents to arrange games.

The deadline for submitting applications for convening WIC winter team sports is Nov. 15. Forms are available in the Locker Room, or from Mo Bouris, and may be left in the Green Box in the Locker Room or with Mo.

Queen's

Journal

Volume 102, No. 12

Friday, October 18, 1974

Homecoming reunion

1200 Alumni expected

by Debbie Coyne

Contrary to the popular conception of Homecoming '74 as simply another excuse to have "good time", Homecoming represents much more to the returning alumni of Queen's. It is a time of class reunion, a time to see the changes which have taken place on the campus over the years, and a time to speak to students of the University today, and compare notes.

The Alumni Association has organized this weekend of reunions ever since its inception in 1926. Mr. Hamilton, Director of Alumni Affairs, explained to the Journal that the pattern of reunions is determined by the "Dix Plan", which is now used by most universities in North America. Through this plan, each year is brought back at approximately five year intervals, in groups, so that the alumni are assured of not being isolated from the acquaintances of their own class. This year, the classes of '41, '42, '43 and '44 are back, as well as '49, and '60, '61, and '62. Twenty-five members of the class of 1914 and sixty-five members of the class of 1924 will be the special guests of the University, and some of these alumni are returning from as far away as England, Florida and California.

The Reunion Program begins with the opening of MacIntosh-Corby Hall on Friday. In the morning there will be a symposium on the subject, "Persistent Canadian Problems: From the 1930's-1970's", with respect to matters which concerned former principal W.A. Mackintosh during his life. Dr. J.J. Deutch, Professor M.C. Urquhart, Louis Rasminsky and Robert Bryce will be among those on the panel. In the afternoon, Chancellor Roland Michener will preside over the official opening of the Hall. On Friday also, the alumni are invited to the Principal's reception in Grant Hall as well as the Medical Formal.

The highpoints in Saturday's Program are the traditional Queen's Varsity Football Game and the General Reunion Dinner in the Student's Union. According to Mr. Hamilton, due to the fact that there are over twelve hundred returning alumni this year, the classes of '14 and '24 will be the special guests in Wallace Hall. The class of '49 will hold a dinner in MacArthur Hall, while all other classes who have not organized their own dinners, are invited to the Alumni Party in the Lower Common Room of Victoria Hall.

During this weekend, therefore, it might be interesting and enjoyable for students presently attending Queen's to have a conversation with the visiting members of the alumni. (One notes here, that a Homecoming 2000, the graduating class of '75 will be the equivalent of the class of '49 this year, and will want to do the same.)

QSA: Druxerman resigns

by Ian Jarvis

Vice-President of operations Peter Druxerman has resigned as Director of the Queen's Student Agencies. In a statement accompanying his resignation, Druxerman explained he was resigning for "personal reasons". When pressed to explain what these were he said it involved a lot of things but primarily "I found I was getting too involved with all the little everyday things and I wasn't able to do the things I planned on doing when I took on the job".

Druxerman said he resigned not as a result of disillusionment but mostly to reflect his feelings at the time. When asked to elaborate on this point he mentioned that his heavy involvement with the QSA was conflicting with his idealist objectives. He seems to see his role in the AMS as acting as an ideas man as it were, and his being so caught up in the nitty-gritty was hindering this objective. The Queen's Student Agencies, which falls under the heading of Druxerman's operations portfolio, encompass such things as the Student Housing service, the Pub and the student typing service. In spite of the fact that he has officially resigned as director, Druxerman will continue to handle the business of the QSA until a new director is found. The move, then, is a political one rather than an actual shift of A.M.S. responsibilities.

Chairman of Housing foresees no hassles

by Paul Steep

The Housing Committee was originally formed to look after the basic maintenance of the houses which the university owns and rents to students. Currently there are twenty-eight such houses accommodating about one hundred and seventy-five students. Annual maintenance checks are made each fall in order to determine what repairs are needed. With the resignation of the chairman these fall inspections were not held this year. They will not begin until tomorrow.

Greenwood does not feel that the homes will have suffered any significant amount of damage because of late inspections. He noted that there were few requests for repairs and that during the weeks when the committee had no chairman, emergency repairs were looked after by Vice-President (Operations) Peter Druxerman.

Recognizing that student housing is in a period of shortage, Greenwood said that the committee is actively trying to obtain more houses. They hope to have a substantial increase in the number of homes they can offer at the A.M.S. housing lottery. He also has plans to get lists of other Kingston landlords and their phone numbers so that students will know where to look for accommodation. These will be published next spring in the Journal.

The Housing Committee is made up of seven students chosen by the chairman. The current committee has members that cut across the faculties of Law, Commerce, and Arts and Science, including a number of undergraduate members who will be able to return next year and add some continuity to the committee's work.

Paul Greenwood, a third year student, was recently appointed by the AMS Outer Council as the new Housing Committee chairman. The post had previously been left vacant when Sheila McIntyre resigned.

She charged that there was undue interference from the A.M.S. in her committee's activities, and felt that it had been A.M.S. mismanagement which created the confusion over whether or not she was a full-time A.M.S. employee.

The new chairman does not feel that this confusion is likely to develop again. His own position is clear to him. He is a salaried employee of the A.M.S. receiving fifty dollars a month. Though the A.M.S. has yet to clarify the position of the summer chairman, he estimates that there is only enough work at that time of year to justify part-time employment. He feels that the controversy over full time employment won't develop again so long as this is kept in mind.

John Gray, Vice-President (University Affairs), recently stated that the A.M.S. needs a tighter control over the activities of the committee. He pointed to the fact that it is A.M.S. money which finances the committee's business as justification for this position.

Greenwood does not see any place in the committee for A.M.S. policies. As far as he is concerned, the housing committee was set up to operate separately from the A.M.S. He sees the need for an A.M.S. representative on the council only in the capacity as a signing officer. He realizes that ultimately the committee is responsible to the council but stressed that any decisions they make will be their own, not those of the A.M.S.

Homecoming '74 - bad for the Blues - good for the brews

wat's hapnin' ?

Upcoming Events

Tuesday, October 22 - 7:00 p.m. - Meeting of Queen's NDP Room 115 in McArthur Hall student lounge. Guest speaker - Lois Thompson (Kingston NDP Federal Candidate).

Tuesday, October 22 - Queen's University Amateur Radio Club meeting in Room 454. All members and interested persons please attend.

8:00 p.m. - Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology presents "New Concepts in Pregnancy Immunology: The Placenta as a Tumor". Tuesday, October 22 in the Etherington Hall Auditorium.

Tuesday, October 22 - Public Debate between Queen's Debating Union and a team from Princeton. "Resolved that Western Society is in Decline". All welcome - especially as the decision will be made by split of the house. Wallace Hall at 8:00 p.m.

Tuesday, October 22 - Quartetto Esterhazy - This ensemble restores an authentic string quartet style, on instruments as they were played in Haydn and Mozart's time - with unmodified fingerboards, lower bridges, gut strings and original bows.

Tuesday, October 22 - 9:00 p.m. - Department of Film Studies presents Zabiskie Point directed by Michelangelo Antonioni and starring Mireille Darc, and Jeanne Yvonne.

Wednesday, October 23 - Introductory lectures on Transcendental Meditation in Stirling Hall Room 412 A at 8:00. Transcendental Meditation is a major scientific discovery. The practice is unique and its effects are unprecedented in their range and profundity. Admission is free.

Thursday, October 24 - Domino Theatre presents 6 Uhis Riv Vu by Bob Randall and directed by Gary W. Thompson. A Broadway comedy of charm and humour.

Dates: Oct. 24th, 25th, 26th, Oct. 31st, Nov. 1st, 2nd, Nov. 7th, 8th, 9th. Tickets are available at Mahod's Drug Store or at the door for $2.50 and $1.75 for students on Thursday only.

Friday, October 25 - Spanish Club presents a Sangria Party at La Casa, 90 Queen's Crescent across from Victoria Hall. Come to enjoy Spanish and Latin American music and culture. Bring your own music with you! All are most welcome. Vengan Todos! Spanish Club memberships are $1.00 on sale.

Friday, October 18

7:00 p.m. - Official opening of the MacIntosh-Corby Building.

1:00 p.m. - Pep rally on Victoria Field behind Vic Hall.

1:30 p.m. - The Department of Drama presents Chronicles XXIV Cue for Treason in the Studio - Rm. 102 in the Theology Hall. Tickets are free and available at the Drama Desk. This production runs from Tues. Oct. 22 through to Fri. Oct. 25, with two performances on Thurs. and Fri. evenings at 7:30 p.m. and 9:00 p.m.

8:00 p.m. - Ommi Pa Pa with a German Dance Band in the Jack Hartly Arena.

8:00 p.m. - Live Band in the Student's Union Pub.

Saturday, October 19

9:00 a.m. - Parade Downtown. Those wishing to join in should meet at the corner of University and Union.

10:30 a.m. - 12:00 p.m. - Dedication ceremonies in Clark Hall with Professor Arthur Jackson, Principal Watts, Chancellor Michener and Dr. J.J. Deustch.

1:00 p.m. - Parade to the game. Meet at the corner of University and Union.

2:00 p.m. - Queen's Golden Gaels vs. U. of T. Blues

2:00 p.m. - Queen's Rugby Team vs. Waterloo

7:00 p.m. - The Music Department: Dr. F.R.C. Clarke hosts the last of a three-part series on Sibelius, over CFRC 1490 AM.

8:00 p.m. - Mickey's Madhouse in Leonard Hall Cafeteria. Tickets at the door for $1.50 Beer $5.00. Bitter Grounds Coffee House and Good Times Emporium presents Michal Hasek, an evening of folk. Admission is $1.50 and can be bought in the John Orr Room and Engineering Social Offices.

8:00 p.m. - International Club Dance at the International Centre, Lower Lounge. Music from the World Over. Admission 50c.

8:00 p.m. - CFRC 1490 AM - A preview of the upcoming Dunning Hall concert Quarteto Esterhazy Hosted by Phil Minty as part of Classics Unlimited.

9:00 p.m. - The Carpenter's Inn Coffee House in the Union Coffee Shop featuring Frode Neilson. Come in for relaxation, refreshments, and live music. Admission $7.50.

9:00 p.m. - The Wonderful World Semi Formal Dance in Grant Hall. Tickets $8.00 on sale in the John Orr Room.

Sunday, October 21

10:30 a.m. - Morning Worship at Chalmers United Church.

10:30 a.m. - Folk Mass at Dunning Hall, followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House, 164 University Ave.

2:00 p.m. - Men's Field Hockey - Queen's vs. Crosslyx Toronto at the Queen's lower playing field.

2:00 p.m. - Queen's Musical Theatre will hold its second in a series of workshops at the Grand Theatre. All interested people welcome. No experience necessary.

7:00 p.m. - Galerie Victoria presents Don Marchand singing folk and blues, in the upper common room of Victoria Hall.

Monday, October 21

8:00 p.m. - Who Invited Us? - 2nd in the 3rd World Film Series. Everyone is welcome. Coffee and donuts will be served and a discussion will follow the film. Admission is free.

Pubs and Theatres

101 Inn - Randy Stuart

Townhouse - The Newcomers

Manor - Windsor

Frontenac - Finnegan's - Allan Rudi

Frontenac - Muldoon's - Henry Hughes

Commodore - Rouge Hill

Odeon - Airport 75

Capitol 1 - Mame

Capitol 2 - Frankenstein

Utyland - Jeremiah Johnson

Phys. Ed. Centre

The Phys. Ed. Centre swimming pool will be closed due to other University requirements during the following recreation dates and times:

October 18 - 12:00 - 1:30 p.m. & 4:30 - 6:00 p.m.

Agnes Etherington

Bachelor of Art Education: an exhibition from the four year programme of the Department of Art, continues until November 3.

Excursion Club

Notice

It has come to our attention that there have been a number of inconveniences suffered by Queen's Students as a result of the Queen's Excursion Club. Any students wishing to register official complaints are invited to do so at the AMS office as soon as possible.

Come to ...

The Great United Way

BIKE - A - THON

This Saturday at the Homecoming Football Game Half-Time

See the Famous Bicyclists:

Principal Watts

Padre Laverly

Dean Reid

Dean Sinclair

With Fun, Frolic and Fanfare!

"Get your quarters ready"

By popular demand

Toronto Mendelssohn

Choir

RETURNS

FRIDAY 25 OCTOBER

GRANT HALL 8:30 p.m.

Tickets from Box Office

in Agnes Etherington

Art Centre

547-6194

a Division of Concerts

event

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT in our Lounge

THIS WEEK : Rouge Hill

Amateur Night every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome In Our Lounge

Keith Bourne

"To get into the Pub, you must present your student card!" This 76 engineer won't be resisting these police demands, not when constables are so human! (See story opposite)

Meet the big heat on campus

An opinion by Paul Esley

Recognize this figure? Sure you do - it's an A.M.S. Constable on duty at the Pub. You know - one of the cops who make you stand on the cold, hard Union steps every Thursday night with the feeble excuse that the Pub's full. Everyone knows what the AMS Constables do - you've all seen them or have been "hassled" by them at one time or another. But how many of you realize what a unique system this is, or how valuable it is to Queens?

The A.M.S. Constable System, where all student events are policed by students, is the only system of its kind at a university in Ontario. Can you imagine having to have a Kingston cop or Security Guard in his ugly black uniform complete with cap and billy stick standing on guard while you sat around and got loaded in the Pub? Now think of it - isn't it much nicer to have a sweet young A.M.S. constable (yes there are girls on the force) to look at rather than some buffoon that looks like he's just been imported from Siberia? As well as this aesthetic value, the A.M.S. constables represent a considerable savings to Queen's. The A.M.S. constables are paid $2.25-hour.

For those of you who don't know, the AMS force consists of 120 students who police all events at Queen's, to keep order and maintain the smooth running of events ranging in size from football games to small parties on campus. The last few years have brought Women's Lib and with it came the women constables. Remember the Great Female Constable Debate of a couple of years ago? Well it's over and the women won. This year there are 39 girls out of 120 constables. So next time you're considering throwing that beer in the Pub don't be surprised if you're ousted by a girl.

The AMS constables, besides the obvious guarding tasks, travel with the Queen's Band wherever it goes, are called out to Vic Hall every time there is an engineer's raid, and even do ridiculous tasks like guard the football stadium and goalposts the night before football games.

This year, as usual, frisking is done at the football games, much to the amazement of many frosh and the consternation of those who attempt to sneak the odd mickey or two into the stadium. "Why do you do this?" we are often asked. For a graphic answer just travel to the next U. of T. game in Toronto. As you hide under the seats of Varsity Stadium in the barrage of beer bottles hurled your way by the local U. of T. engineers, I think you'll understand. The AMS constables just want the battle to be confined to the gridiron, not the stands. Being hit by a bottle on the head is no fun, nor is

Continued on Page 5

Human Sexuality lectures try to teach caring attitude

by Ian Jarvis

The first of four lectures this term on human sexuality was held Wednesday night in Dupuis auditorium. The series is organized by the Birth Control and Abortion Referral Service and the lectures themselves are being coordinated by Nancy Plant and George Glumak.

As described by Glumak the lectures are designed not only to act as an information service but more importantly to try to develop a caring attitude towards people, in particular our sexual partners.

Wednesday's lecture started off with a movie entitled "Sexuality and Communication" followed by a general discussion of sexuality and how we view it with respect to ourselves. The movie, as anybody who saw it will attest, was very cleverly done and managed to make its points about sexual inhibition and traditional sex myths in a very humorous, Woody Allen-type manner. Unfortunately the size of the group, between 70 and 80 people, somewhat inhibited the discussion afterwards and kept things very much on the "I've got a friend" level. Nevertheless several very interesting points were raised, among them the often asked question of why the male feels the need for many sexual experiences, yet still looks for a wife who is a virgin.

The lecture series continues for three more sessions covering the topics of contraception and V.D., the nature and variety of sexual experience, and abortion. This is the third year the series has been run and although Wednesday's turnout was low, the organizers are hopeful that response to the remainder of the series will be better.

Health Services will be closed on October 25

by Diane Provan

"Come hell or high water" Queens' Health Services will open Monday, October 28, at their new location in the St. Lawrence building, opposite Victoria Hall.

The Services will be closed Friday, October 25, for the actual moving process is expected to take the better part of the weekend. "Come Monday we will HAVE to be ready to go," commented Mr. Jack Armstrong. He stated that it would take two days to move the medical side of the Services alone. Besides the actual moving, there is plenty of cleaning up to do, and finishing touches to be administered to make the centre move liveable.

Although the Services will close Friday, one of the staff will always be available to answer the telephone. The Kingston General Hospital has been notified of the Health Services' "shutdown", and is prepared to cope with emergency cases (few are expected to arise). As of the 25th, Health Services will again operate Monday through Friday, from 9:00 - 11:30 a.m. and 1:00 - 4:00 p.m. daily.

ABRAMSKY

Men's Wear

Queen's students 10% off

full line of men's clothing and furnishings

259 Princess St.

A HARVARD MBA?

Discuss the Master in Business Administration Program with an Admissions Representative from the Harvard Business School

24 OCTOBER, THURS.

OFFICE OF CAREER PLACEMENT

No courses or areas of concentration are required for admission.

SKI EXHIBIT

Featuring Famous Manufacturer's Displays

Alpine and Cross-country movies
Ski fashion for '75
Thursday Oct. 24 8 pm
Austrian International Club
Gardiners Road

Admission 50c

Door prizes

Sponsored by Sepp's Ski Shop

QUEENSNAPS '74

"God, that bottle's cold!"

KINGSTON FINEST NIGHTCLUB

Town House Pub

SHERATON SEAWAY MOTEL
686 PRINCESS ST.

Michener, Auld speak today at Mackintosh-Corry opening

To help mark the opening of Mackintosh-Corry Hall, the Mackintosh Symposium and the inaugural Corry lecture is being held today.

The new building, named for the late Dr. W.A. Mackintosh who was Principal of Queen's from 1951 to 1961 and Dr. J.A. Corry, Principal of Queen's from 1961 to 1968, brings together a number of different academic bodies of the University in a unique way.

Two institutes, Local Government and Inter-governmental Relations, the School of Business, the School of Public Administration, the School of Urban and Regional Planning, four departments in the Faculty of Arts and Science - Economics, Geography, Political Studies and Sociology - and the Faculty of Law, are all housed within one complex in a manner designed to contribute to interdisciplinary understanding and support.

In the Dunning Hall Auditorium at 9:30 a.m. four distinguished Canadians review some of the lifetime concerns of Dr. Mackintosh in the symposium titled, "Persistent Canadian Problems: From the 1930s to the 1970s."

Members of the symposium are Mr. Louis Rasminsky, former Governor of the Bank of Canada; Mrs. Robert Bryce, Executive Director of the International Monetary Fund in Washington; Professor M.C. Urquhart, a professor in the Queen's Department of Economics and Dr. John J. Deutsch, former Principal of Queen's and now a Professor in the Department of Economics.

In the afternoon in Dunning Hall at 2:30 p.m. the distinguished scholar, Professor W.J.M. Mackenzie, recently retired from the Department of Politics at Glasgow University, will deliver the inaugural Corry Lecture "The Relationship of Politics and Law: Equality before the Law." Professor J.E. Hodgetts will chair this session. Queen's Chancellor Roland Michener will preside at the opening ceremonies of Mackintosh-Corry Hall at 4:15 p.m. in the lounge area of the new building.

Remarks will be made by the Honourable James Auld, Ontario Minister of Colleges and Universities; Mrs. I.G. Morgan (daughter of Mrs. W.A. Mackintosh) and the late Dr. W.A. Mackintosh) and Dr. J.A. Corry.

A plaque to commemorate the opening will be unveiled by Mrs. W.A. Mackintosh and Mrs. J.A. Corry.

STUDENT HEALTH SERVICE
MEDICAL CLINIC — 547-6106 — 24 hours daily
(Answering service contacts a duty physician when the Health Service is closed.)
CLINIC HOURS — 9:00 am - 11:30 am
1:00 pm - 4:00 pm
Monday to Friday inclusive
PSYCHIATRY & COUNSELLING — By appointment
9:00 am - 5:00 pm phone 547-2889 or come to Health Service to make an appointment.

- GREB-KODIAK BOOTS-
Waterproof, Insulated, Plain or Steel Toe.
Sizes 4 to 13
Always Your Size in Stock at the Best Price

LARRY'S Men's Wear at
354 King St., East
Just 3 Doors from Princess St.

ASUS
Notice of election for:
2 ASUS Senators (1 yr.)
1 ASUS Rep to AMS (1 yr.)

Advanced Poll: Wednesday Oct. 23, 1974
Election Day: Friday Oct. 25, 1974
Poll Stations for Both Days

Student Union Library	10:30 am - 7:00 pm
Ban Right	10:30 am - 3:30 pm
Leonard	4:45 pm - 6:15 pm
	4:45 pm - 6:15 pm

FRIED CHICKEN
★ ★ ★ BURGERS

Monday to Saturday 10 a.m. - 10 p.m. Closed Sundays.
Delivery anywhere with City limits .65 extra - and -
Delivery outside City limits slightly extra.

INTERNATIONAL

DANCE

SAT. OCT. 19
8:00 - 1:00 A.M.
$50 ADMISSION
INTNL. CENTRE LOWER LOUNGE

CLUB

OFS: a brief history

by Terry MacI

About three years ago post-secondary school students formed a province-wide Union to replace the defunct Ontario Union of Students. The organization which emerged was called the Ontario Federation of Students and was committed to representing interests of its members to the provincial government and to act as an agent of social change. During its sweet, short life, the OFS has attracted much criticism both from the Government and from the Federation's own members.

Much of the criticism has centred on the supposed "radical" nature of certain OFS motions but more about that later.

In March 1972 the Conservative government announced changes in the financial arrangements of post-secondary education. The action was taken partly as a response to the Draft Report of the Wright Commission on Post-Secondary Education which recommended an increase in the tuition fees presently paid by university students. The Commission also recommended an increase in the student loan arrangement.

The specific action taken by the government was to raise the fees for undergraduates by $100. The fees for Graduate Schools went up $395. The fees for Teachers college Students increased by $600, and the fees paid by nursing students effectively went up $1250. At the same time, the government announced that the grant portion of a student loan was reduced by $200. In addition the provincial government did away with Ontario Scholarships.

All of these measures did little to promote the ideal of accessibility in Post-secondary Education in Ontario. A student who had no parental backing faced the prospect of emerging from university with a $3200 debt.

The reaction from the educational sector was hostile. The Council of Ontario Universities, in a bulletin said that "it is apparent that the changes were introduced in part as a deterrent to university enrollment." The Ontario Committee on Student awards stated that it was "quite clear" that the government action "effectively contradicts the Government's view of accessibility."

The defence offered by the Conservatives was not overly convincing. George Kerr, the Minister of Colleges and Universities, when questioned on the fee increase replied: "It is simply one of the ways for this government to raise more revenue. You know, you can only increase taxes on gasoline and park fees and licence fees and booze so much."

The OFS issued a call to arms and its member institutions reacted favourably to it. In the fall of 1972 referendums were held across the province asking whether or not students would withhold their second term fees. The "fee strike" was, in terms of student response, a great success particularly at Queen's where the largest per centage of any campus withheld the second term fees.

The response of the provincial government was not as favourable. The government lowered the age of independence, that is the age when one is considered to be independent of the income of his or her parents, from 25 to 24. The government also promised not to raise tuition fees without first consulting students. But the increases stayed in effect and at best the OFS could claim only a moral victory.

One important fact which did emerge from the fee strike however was the recognition of the OFS as the legitimate voice of Ontario Students. The Federation then began to address itself to other matters and it was at this point that the charge "radical" began to be levelled.

In order to carry out its research and campaigning functions, OFS is asking for an increase in the fee that students pay to $150. The decision on whether or not to pay the fee will be made by students voting in a referendum Nov. 13. The future of the student movement in Ontario may well depend on the result of the decision made at Queen's. To date, the referendum has passed in six of seven universities where it was held.

Housman

"Shoulder the sky my lad, and drink your ale".
(Last Poems)

Shakespeare

"For a quart of ale is a dish for a king".
(The Winter's Tale)

Borrow

"Good ale, the true and proper drink...".
(Lavengro)

Browning

"There they are, my fifty men and women".
(One Word More)

poetic justice

the MARKET
BARBER SHOP
& hairstyling salon

Peter Smits invites you
to his new hair care shop
549-2110
43 BROCK ST., KINGSTON, ONT.

Come meet and discuss ideas with Premier Bill Davis

Thursday Oct. 24
517 Watson Hall
3:30 pm

unclassifieds

More on Pages 13 & 14

TRANSFER STUDENTS '75 Come on home Saturday Night, Oct. 19th. Bring your bottle to 19 Quebec St. apt. 2 - corner of Barrie (north of Princess) - Alex and Gary.

THE BEST WARM-UP PARTY OF THE SEASON will take place at "Penthouse 3". Doug's place, Sat. morning, 227 Regent St. apt. 3. For Gael Groups 15, 17 (Joanne's) and 84 (Gary's) Starts at 10:30. BYOB. OR BEER AND LIQUOR - stores close - Phone 544-9059 or your gael.

MAY THE SUN ALWAYS SHINE so the students are intelligent and the thesis finished. Good Luck to Sheila and David and Happy Halloween. LH ET AL.

JEAN Ls Oise alias John L. alias Murphy and Achon Andrew request the presence of all friends, relatives, and acquaintance and present and ex-4th Gordoners to a warm-up party bash starting at 8:30 pm Friday Oct. 18 today, at 240 East St. BYOB & BABES (see you after OM-PA-PA).

BOOZE FOR DA BOYS Science '77 You got a SMOKER - Hey, Hey, Hey. Clark Hall - Wednesday October 23rd 8:00 - 1:00. Be Oere Buddy!

YOU ARE IN WITH THE BEST OF US: Only 25c guarantees you a warm day with United Way at the Homecoming Football Game.

Gael Group 24, 42, 73, 90: HERE IT IS! 1st warm-up party: Saturday before Toronto game: come to Brockington House Common Room any time after 11:00 BYOB or buy some of ours. Heather, Jay, Dave, J.B., Joan, etc.

FIRST MEETING OF THE UKRAINSKY MOTOR-CYCLEWAY CLUBS to be held in room 57 Adelaide tonight at 8 pm. For further details call Sigmundchuk Pelczewski at 544-8184.

WANTED: one ticket to the OM-PA-PA. Phone 544-8019.

"THE CARPENTER'S INN" Coffee House. Saturday Oct. 19th, 9:12 pm. Featuring Frode Neilson. Come on in for relaxation, refreshments and live music. Admission is 75c! Sponsored by Queen's Christian Fellowship. (It's being held in the Union Coffee Shop.)

BEER BEER BEER BEER BEER BEER - Big Drinker for the Science '77 Boys. Wed. Oct. 23rd, 8:00-1:00. Clark Hall.

1-1948 AUSTIN MINI-COOPER with Tach, Stereo, Michelin 24. Reasonable. Phone 544-4914

STEREO EQUIPMENT: 1 - Sony 1130

Queens
Journal
Vol. 102, No. 12
Fri., Oct. 18, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario.

Editor in Chief - Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager - Terry Collins
Managing Editor - Don McClelland
News Editor - Sarah Yarnell
Arts Editors - Kerry White, Peter Haworth
Features Editors - Wendy and L.J.
Photography Editor - John Cameron

Comment: General madness reigned in the madhouse yet once more. Various politicos peeped in and peeped right out again. That's okay. We went madly sharpening pencils, and I'm mad anyway. Don and Sarah exchanged loving words (?) and they went me to do a feature that National Lampoon wouldn't print. Suzanne is nice to us, but then she's a little crazy too. How many days till Christmas?

Founded in 1973 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc. incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member, of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (613) 547-2405. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

Backpage - Valerie Collon
Wall's Haplin - Jennifer Hastings,
Rosemary Knight
Classifieds - Leslie Gaukrödger,
Trish Brooks
Elders/atespeople - Chris Boon,
Woody
Photographers - John Ballionley,
F.U.O. Ernie Sparks, Keith Bourne,
John Willmer, Marvin Bloos, Peter Case
Business Staff - Anne Robertson,
Jane Gutteridge, Cathy (dark lady of the sonnets?)
Contributors - Ian Jarvis, Hugh Agnew, Dave Colburn, Mike Creagan, John Edwards, Jim Lemeursier, Glenna, Oiane Prevan, David, Paul Steep, Debbie Coyne and Terry Hall who did a super graphic year

Comment: General madness reigned in the madhouse yet once more. Various politicos peeped in and peeped right out again. That's okay. We went madly sharpening pencils, and I'm mad anyway. Don and Sarah exchanged loving words (?) and they went me to do a feature that National Lampoon wouldn't print. Suzanne is nice to us, but then she's a little crazy too. How many days till Christmas?

HOMECOMING '74

OCT. 17, 18, 19, 20

LOU REED CONCERT

JOCK HARDY

ARENA

SUNDAY

8 p.m.

THE
QUEEN'S PUB

bands in pub
re homecoming -

Friday Night

Tugwood

Sat. Night

Metagenesis

PEP RALLY

7:00 p.m.

FRIDAY

DANCE

Mickey's Madhouse

LEONARD CAFETERIA

8 PM

SATURDAY

OOM PA
POOM

GERMAN DANCE BAND

8:00 p.m.

FRIDAY

JOCK HARDY ARENA

PARADE DOWNTOWN PARADE TO GAME

9 AM

1 PM

SATURDAY

QUEEN'S GOLDEN GAELS

U of T BLUES

SATURDAY, 2:00 p.m.

OFFICIAL OPENING
OF THE

MacINTOSH-CORRY
BLDG.

4:15 p.m. FRIDAY

HOMECOMING

Semi Formal

8:00 P.M.

Grant Hall

Saturday

letters to the editor

A place for Intramurals

Dear Editor:

Last year as a member of the Women's Intramural Council I became extremely involved in what I believe to be the most important division of athletics at Queen's for women.

In the past women's intramurals have been faulted for their relative ineffectiveness, a criticism based mainly on low participation. It was thought that those who were really "keen" on athletics would go out for intercollegiate teams. Considering the tremendous number of hours involved with team practices, games and tournaments there seemed to be little time left for these people to devote to intramurals. On the other side of the coin were those women interested in the recreational aspects of athletics. Common consensus was that they would prefer to channel their efforts into university clubs and recreation courses where competition was not a primary objective. In the middle, of course, were the girls who chose not to participate at all.

Today things have changed. The super enthusiasts are still going out for the intercollegiate teams. However, already women's tryouts have been swamped by these "keeners", in some cases six times as many as are needed to field the team. What then of those who are turned away as the team cuts are posted?

And what of the Queen's rec. programs? Anyone who was in the hour long line-ups to register for instructional courses will be able to confirm that more and more students, men and women, are looking for opportunities to learn and play many sports.

I feel that women's intramurals has a very definite place in amidst all this. Not only is there room for intramurals in conjunction with the intercollegiate and recreational activities, there is a necessity. I think it can offer a chance to develop their skills, meet others with similar interests and experience an adequate level of competition in doing so. As for the recreationalists we hope our programs will provide you with participation in a relaxed atmosphere, self satisfaction and enjoyment. We have clinics designed to give lessons in the basic skills of a sport which will then enable you to take part in our tournaments.

Our programs are set up to stress participation rather than skill and winning. There is room for women's intramurals at Queen's and there is a place in them for you.

If you weren't one of the over 120 at Athletic Night you're not too late. Come out and get involved. Watch the WIC-ly NEWS column for upcoming events.

Judy Riggan
(WIC Chairwoman)

have increased their donation by 26.3 percent over last year and the staff of the local Red Cross office by 46.4 percent.

This trend is most encouraging and indicates a realization of the importance of the work done by the 25 agencies supported by the United Way in helping to make Kingston a better place in which to live. The Queen's Division is the largest in the campaign and hence it is vital we reach our objective. Queen's Campaign Committee is confident we can do this if everyone gets behind the Campaign and does his bit. Please give as generously as you can so that those who need our help will know that we recognize our responsibility to help our fellow men.

Sincerely,
Co-Directors United Way Campaign Division
Queen's University

Discontent with Buses

Dear Editor:

As Human beings we protest. Sometime in the past you decided that you were big boys, responsible enough to run a transportation service. Such an organization makes a commitment to safely and efficiently convey human beings from one place to another in a given time. This you have not done. Instead you have recklessly toyed with people's lives, causing excessive and unnecessary discomfort, worry, inconvenience and utter havoc.

To itemize just a few of our grievances:
- Your disorganization is such that people, believing, or rather knowing that space on the buses will be oversold, must start lining up 45 minutes to an hour early.

- The buses are invariably late, after being driven from Toronto, the drivers having no opportunity to rest before making the return trip.
- When the buses do arrive, otherwise intelligent human beings push and shove like four-hooved animals in order to obtain one of the few and precious seats. Those who do not get a seat attempt (and worse, are allowed) to stand for the entire trip.

- The buses involved are of the yellow school bus variety, one of the most dangerous types of vehicles on the highway. They have no storage facilities for luggage, which must be packed in the aisles with the standing passengers. Moreover, the buses are built for pre-pubescent public-schoolers so that anyone more than 5 feet 5 inches tall cannot be seated comfortably.

- As the aisles are crowded with people and luggage, it is impossible to check tickets or control the number of passengers.

- With respect to a specific bus, the 3:00 p.m. bus on the 11th (which left at 4:30) was in such a state of disrepair that within two miles of its departure it was unable to move. At this point an uninformed and uninformative bus driver followed your lead and did nothing.

After grovelling for rides, waiting for buses and trains, and in a state of mind that was nothing less than murderous, we arrived in Toronto six hours later, to missed connections and broken engagements.

We believe that Mr. McVie and Mr. Zakos, in contracting for those buses, are responsible. Their gross incompetence borders on the criminal. Beyond this they should be reminded that it is people's lives with which they deal so carelessly. The transportation which they provided was dangerous and unreliable. Now we can only convey our intense spite for their irresponsibility. It is not an abstract organization that has done this to us but the thirty or forty fellow humans on that bus, but you D.L. McVie and John Zakos. It was your responsibility. For you we cannot express enough contempt.

Lloyd Bregman
Fern Mackenzie
Vicki Mattucci

United Way gathers steam

Dear Editor:

The University United Way Campaign Committee reports that donations are coming in well from most departments and that at the time the Journal went to press totalled just over $5500, which is in excess of our receipts at this time last year. The Kingston and District United Way office also gives encouraging reports of increased giving in several other divisions. The staff of the OHIP office

Buy your Brigham pipe from a franchised dealer. Guaranteed service, accessories and imported tobacco's also available.

Lou Williams Smoke & Gift Shop
213 Princess St. 546-1616

LONDY'S DRUGS
Special rates
to Queen's Students

471 Princess at University Ave.
464 Princess
Reddendale
Lasalle Park
Amherstview

Delivery Available

546-3696

OPEN 7 AM TO 11 PM DAILY

544-1227

PIZZA
CHALET

PIZZA AND ITALIAN DISHES
TAKE OUT ORDER AND DELIVERY
359 PRINCESS ST.

→ PROBLEM in DESIGN

Design deadline Oct 15 - final project Oct 31

Competition - ON SUNDAY EVENINGS, Galerie Victoria, INVOLVING MUSIC AND THEATRE, IS HELD IN THE LARGE COMMON ROOM OF VICTORIA HALL. THE DESIGN PROBLEM IS TO DESIGN THE AREA INVOLVED IN THE LARGE ROOM, AS A BACKDROP FOR PERFORMANCES. THE COMPLETED PROJECT WILL BE RELATIVELY PERMANENT BUT MUST BE STOREABLE, AND ABLE TO BE TAKEN DOWN.

Materials - are at the discretion of the artist and will be supplied by the project office. The site can be seen in the lobby common room in Victoria Hall.

Honorarium - $50 WILL BE AWARDED TO THE WINNING ARTIST. HE/SHE WILL PERSONALLY CONSTRUCT HIS/HER OWN PROJECT.

Further information: Office of the Dean of Women, Victoria Hall

Famous Brand
Names at Discount Prices

Howick

GWG

North Star

Baby Jane

Landlubber

Apple Bee

and many more

Where's the old gang one?

You may be surprised to learn that once you leave the shelter of dear old Queen's University, your activities, past and present, are immortalized in the files of the Alumni Association. Any newspaper clipping concerning you, any change of address which you might make, any change in your marital status - it's all in the personal record file which the Association keeps on each and every graduate granted a degree from Queen's University.

That's a full-time job for four or five secretaries who work in the Alumni office. With 36,000 graduates to keep track of, the changes of address alone are enough to keep one or two people busy during the year. There is a 33-1-3 per cent turnover annually in grads moving about from place to place, and it keeps the Alumni people occupied chasing them about from pillar to post.

It's not as clandestine as it sounds, however. Although much of the info is dug up by the staff getting address changes, much more is given voluntarily by the grads themselves, either through the form that is distributed to each student in his graduating year, or through communication with the area alumni branches.

And this isn't the only service or function of the Alumni Association. A magazine known as the Queen's Alumni Review is published six times a year and distributed free of charge to every graduate, as long as they have the address. This publication aims for a blend of the current events on campus, a names-in-the-news section (which includes births, deaths and marriages of former students), and a column devoted to special awards and positions grads have received.

Reunion programmes are organized by the Association which takes care of all the clerical work involved for each group. According to Herb Hamilton, who has been

Director of Alumni Affairs since 1926, the Association operates on the "Dix plan" when organizing reunions, which means that the grads are invited back in groups of five years, plus those years celebrating their sixtieth, fiftieth, and twenty-fifth "anniversaries". Over a period of five years, then, each of the 36,000 grads have been invited back, though roughly only a ten per cent turnout can be expected in any given year. This year, the classes officially scheduled for reunion are 1914, 1924 and 1949, plus '41 to '44 and '60 to '63.

And of course they must be financed. Annual appeals are made; last year, they raised over two hundred thousand dollars. Over the past ten years, close to one and a half million dollars has been collected through the fund alone. Over six million dollars has come in through alumni gifts when bequests and wills are taken into consideration. They charge no membership fees; it's a free gratis service offered by the University. The Alumni Association, as a university department, must hand over all the money they collect to the Board of Trustees and they in turn distribute it.

Back in 1926 when the Association was founded, there weren't quite so many grads to keep track of. By this time, only 6,000 students had graduated. Still, it was felt that there was a pressing need for some sort of organization to be formed, so the University formed it. All the local alumni were called together and during the 85th Anniversary Reunion, an event held every year previously, the Alumni Association proposal was approved. Alumni branches have since been established in several cities throughout Canada and the U.S. The largest Canadian groups are in Toronto, Montreal, Hamilton and Ottawa. There are about 2,000 Queen's grads in the States, but they are scattered throughout the country, with the largest concentration in the New York City area.

These groups perform a social function primarily. Sometimes, especially the Toronto branch, panels of students will be asked to attend branch meetings to discuss topics of current interest on campus, as, for example, the Queen's Forevergreen movement of last year.

Mr. Hamilton declares that when the students of years gone by return for their class reunions, they are only mildly interested in the growth of the campus, and often remain unimpressed by it. They tend to look around for the little bits of campus that they recognize and can identify with some good time or other that they have had. Of course, not many of the professors which they would have had will still be here, so they get the biggest charge out of talking to the students and finding them as rah-rah and as keen about Queen's as they were.

Having been Director of the Association for so many years Herb Hamilton has several anecdotes to relate, but one of his favorite concerns an erstwhile, rather elderly man who had made the arduous climb up several flights of stairs to the former location of the Alumni offices upstairs in the Union. Puffing and panting, he made his way to one of the desks, and queried in a shaking voice "But where's all the old gang?" And they didn't have the heart to tell him that there probably wasn't too much of "the old gang" left around to do Oil Thighs with him.

Two stalwart Golden Gael fans of the class of '60, toggled up in college gear (above). They'll be back this weekend for Homecoming.

So will the bonnie lasses (above) of the class of '49, still as keen to see Varsity defeated.

The erstwhile graduates of the class of arts 1866 (above).

And the Queen's spirit lives on (above and below). Football games haven't changed.

The Handmaids

Princess Street, Kingston, Ontario

MOVED!!

TWO DOORS AWAY
Handmade

Gifts - Clothing - Accessories
COME AND SEE US!

New Address: 349 B Princess St.

George Bailey
sporting goods
40 Prince Street
Kingston, Ontario
K7L 1A4
Tel. 613-942-2293

WOODS
DOWN INSULATED
Jackets
for hiking or skiing

Reg. 59.95

$53.96

with student card

ARTSCI '78

Less than a week to submit your design for Artsci 78 crest.

Entry closing date October 24

Winning entry receives $72.50 or Artsci jacket

Contact Keith Crawford,
544-7718 for further details

Queen's Musical Theatre

is pleased to announce

It's second workshop to be held at The Grand Theatre (218 Princess St.)
at 2 pm on Sunday Oct. 20

All interested people are welcome.
Accent this week will be on dancing and lighting.

Solzhenitsyn as artist and as moralist

by Kerry White
Professor Gleb Zekulin of the University of Toronto, a guest of the Queen's Russian Department, presented a very interesting lecture this afternoon; the lecture was entitled "Solzhenitsyn's Latest Works". Zekulin has written and spoken widely on this writer, and it is obvious that he has studied his works in great depth.

Zekulin's starting point, and one of the main themes of his lecture, was that we must regard Solzhenitsyn as an artist as well as a moralist. He feels that we in the West have almost exclusively political reactions to Solzhenitsyn's works, and that we tend to ignore their artistic aspect, the literary means by which the moral is presented. Zekulin has an obvious respect for Solzhenitsyn's artistry; he illustrated this artistry with reference to the earlier works of the writer.

Zekulin places five works published before August 1914 in a sequence: The order of this sequence is determined by the type of protagonist involved in each work, and the development of consciousness in each protagonist. There is a progression here; each protagonist picks up where the previous left off. In the play The Innocent and the Call Girl the protagonist is an officer, a member of the Russian intelligentsia, who is captured and sent to a prison camp. In this camp he realizes that the life which he has been living, a life based on political and social hierarchy, is an illusion with no real value. He therefore resigns all privilege and becomes a common prisoner. The protagonist of the novel First Circle is basically the same character, but he has made the additional realization that he cannot resign all responsibility, that he must continue to seek a position in life. After reading and rejecting the works of countless philosophers, he encounters a Russian peasant and has the fleeting feeling that this simple man knows something that he cannot understand; he has a certain wisdom that allows him to act rightly in any given situation. The next two works, One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich and Cancer Ward, examine this peasant figure more closely. One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich portrays a simple man who, almost unconsciously, lives a good life in a very ugly prison camp. No "great" values are expressed; the most important principle is that of "survival ethics". The Allegorical play The Candle in the Wind brings the cycle to a conclusion. Its protagonist is a scientist, another member of the intelligentsia. He has recognized the illusion of society, as did the officer in The Innocent and the Call Girl; he has begun to seek another answer, as did the scientist in The First Circle. He eventually finds a place on the staff of an institute for sociological research, stating that he will watch society from the sidelines and "shout" when he sees its mistakes. This attitude seems to be very much that of Solzhenitsyn himself.

whose works are involved are local people whose work was commissioned by the Art Centre in an attempt to make the construction site at least a little more pleasing aesthetically.

A spokesman from the Art Centre was understandably very concerned about getting the paintings back; she stated that no questions would be asked of anyone returning the works. Anyone with information concerning the theft is asked to contact the Art Centre.

Theft at Agnes

Two of the paintings on the hoardings surrounding the construction site at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre have been stolen. One of the works, consisting of three 8 by 4 panels is "The Fall of Icarus" by Stephen Jones; the other, painted on one panel, is an untitled painting of the figure of a young girl by Adrienne Dow.

The theft was discovered by the construction foreman when he arrived to begin work early this morning. The two artists

New York Sunday Times available every Sunday
at 10 a.m.
Regular Sunday edition direct from New York
Reserve your copy now.

Lou Williams Smoke & Gift Shop
213 Princess St. 546-1616

Forget Your Car

this immaculate 5-bedroom home is just a stone's throw
from

QUEEN'S

Sheltered Yard, Prestige Area, Priced Right
As Owner Anxious.

BILL PARISH HAS THE KEY
389-3822

ROSS McMAHON REALTOR
546-5568

The Installation Of Principal Watts

The Convocation for the Installation of Dr. R. Watts as Principal of Queen's will take place at 3 pm in Grant Hall on Friday November 8th. The Alma Mater Society will distribute a student allocation of tickets on a first-come-first-served basis.

For further information regarding tickets contact John Gray (University Affairs) 547-6165

Early Music Quartet: Powerful performance

by Hugh Agnew

Kingston's audience was exposed to a powerful and highly individualistic interpretation of medieval music Wednesday evening by the Early Music Quartet of Basel, Switzerland. Although the concert was a difficult one in that the music was vastly different from that which we are conditioned to hearing, it was given with an authority and excitement which left us all at least partly converted. If the audience was slightly unresponsive, it was not due to the quality of the performance but to the demands the program made of the listener.

The Early Music Quartet was founded in 1961 to perform music of the medieval and renaissance periods, and since the demise of the New York Pro Musica it enjoys a relatively unchallenged preeminence in the field. This is not to say that all musicologists agree with the group's approach; far from it. The Quartet has been controversial since its inception, but is only recently succeeding in making its impact felt. The one area of greatest dispute is probably the whole approach to the practical performance of early music. The Quartet holds that more related to music of the Near East and more influenced by Moorish and Arab elements than had been generally conceded. Thus their performances contain improvisational and other stylistic elements foreign to the modern western ear. The concert on Wednesday certainly reflected these ideas.

The first half of the program consisted of medieval polyphonic works, that is, works in which there is more than one melodic line. These highly sophisticated art works do not show as much of the Eastern influence mentioned above; but they are based on different premises from those of today's music. Generally, the musical effect is not dependent on the words, and is sometimes secondary to them. This is especially true of the motets which made up the last part of the first half, in which each line has a different melody and different texts, all going at the same time. The two vocalists, Richard Levitt and Lucy Craig, showed a complete mastery of the medieval vocal technique of using all three "types" of voice: chest, throat, and head. Mr. Levitt's parts covered the entire range of both tenor and counter-tenor voices. The instrumentalists, Thomas Binkley and Sterling Jones, also demonstrated their mastery of the tone colours of their instruments; and were especially flamboyant in the preludes preceding the body of each work. There were a very few points in the first half where the tuning seemed slightly off, but this could have been the music itself.

The works on the second half were earlier, being a selection of the chansons of the troubadours and trouveres. The music dates from the 12th and 13th centuries; the troubadours were from Provence in Southern France and the trouveres from the north of France. The troubadour chansons differ from the music in the earlier part of the program because they are monophonic, that is, there is only one melodic line and any accompaniment is improvisational. In addition, the composers were essentially poets, and the words are of importance. Here the Early Music Quartet definitely showed their theories of Moorish and Arab influence, at times actually sounding like an Eastern band. The performance of these works was more effective, partly because the works are earthier and less intellectually difficult than the polyphonic music. By the end of the concert, each performer had used one instrument from each of strings and winds, reinforcing their versatility and musical ability.

In general, the Early Music Quartet performed with artistry and panache. In Wednesday afternoon's workshop, Mr. Binkley stated that in the end any group's approach to medieval music is based simply on their own ideas. It is obvious that the ideas of the Early Music Quartet work

record review

by Doug Hutchinson

Lou Reed's new album demonstrates both the poverty of his artistic imagination and the continued excellence of the musicians with whom he plays. Reed is a member of the avant-garde in rock, a group that considers concerts to be shows rather than recitals, and in a broad sense tries to be sensational; hence the preoccupation with bisexuality, sexual perversion, costumes, and violence. As his RCA press release says, Reed is an inspiration to a budding school of third generation rockers, including David Bowie, Mott the Hoople, and the New York Dolls. The press release also claims that Reed's earlier band, the Velvet Underground, "sounded like an unlikely marriage of Bob Dylan and the Marquis de Sade." Perhaps - you conclude at first listening that neither of them know how to sing. But it doesn't take long to realize the Dylan can in fact sing.

The playing of the music on this album is at least good, sometimes very good and sometimes excellent. The guitarist, Danny Weiss, from the group Rhinoceros, has got some fine licks to contribute, the brass is usually good and the sax accompaniment to "Billy" is surely worth listening to. Musically and lyrically, the title song and "Billy" are very good by anyone's standards, but the other six cuts fall well below this level.

The problem lies largely with Reed's decadent obsessions which after a while lose their novelty and so their appeal. Some examples of the sort of things Reed concerns himself with: from the first song "Ride Sally Ride" - "Ride Sally ride" - "cos if you don't, you'll get a concussion - Ooooo isn't it nice - When your heart is made out of ice - Sit yourself down - Take off your pants, don't you know this is a party ..."

The second song is about shooting a dog and drowning a cat, and the third song is about the breakup of a homosexual love affair. The fourth song is yet another one about the decadence of New York City life, with a notable line, "All we got left is fear, cataracts and sores."

As his press release says, Lou Reed is "spreading the decadent, drug-infested, sexually perverse side of life." All too true, but, as Terry MacLi said in Wednesday's Golden Words, Lou has been doing this since 1966, and it is now boring. If decadence is your thing, then Lou Reed and his band are for you, but otherwise Sally Can't Dance is recommended only for those with encyclopedic collections.

VANDERMEERS MEAT MARKET

Custom Cut Meats
Freezer Orders
Groceries

171
WELLINGTON ST.
542-1134

Bite the one you love

QUEEN'S RIFLE CLUB
MEETS EVERY Thursday 9-11 pm
Sunday 4-6 pm
in projectile range
For information phone 544-2926
or 544-9054 after 6 pm

See All The New
Programs This Year
With 11 Channels to Choose From On...

cable tv
544-6311

Are you or your group
doing something you
would like others to
know about?

Tell Us....

USE OUR BULLETIN
BOARD

Cable Cast TV 13

Additional Outlets
Are Available For Television or Stereo
For 1.25 Month

No additional connection charge if ordered at time of initial installation.

cable tv
544-6311

After the game ....
Bring her home to Mother's

MOTHER'S

Mother's Pizza Parlour and Spaghetti House

"More than just a place to eat"

455 Princess St.

549-0006

ASUS

EXTENSION OF NOMINATIONS
FOR
1 ASUS Rep to AMS (1 yr.)

(term runs until spring elections)

Nominations to be submitted by 12 noon,
Friday Oct. 18 1974 in the ASUS Box in the AMS
Office, and must have nominee's signature and phone number and signatures of 25 other Arts and Science Students.

CAMPUS BOOKSTORE

The rush is over....

Come and see us sometime

ACADEMIC RESEARCH LIBRARY

Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date,
176-page, mail order catalog
of 5500 topics. Enclose
$1.00 to cover postage (1-2
days delivery time).
519 GLENROCK AVE.
SUITE #203
LOS ANGELES, CA. 90024
Our materials are sold for research purposes only

DOMUS

Kingston's most exciting
gift shop and kitchen shop
68 Brock Street
Between King and Wellington

unclassifieds

More on Pages 4 & 14

IT'S HERE TOMORROW! The 25c deal of the century. Warmth and Kindness brought to you by the United Way. Come to the Football Game and win.

BEST WISHES TO SHEILA AND DAVID ON THEIR BIG DAY -
Biology and Biochemistry Depts. will never be the same. LW and others from 10:30, 7:30, Fri. P.M.
LAB.

ORANGE MAN - This is your official invitation to join the ranks of the Tub o' Lard Club, founded and supported by Sioux and Paradise (among others).

PHILOSOPHY - STUENTS &
FACULTY! Come to the D.S.C.
Smoker in the Red Room of Grant
Hall on Thursday 24 at 8:00 p.m.

THANKS TO OOC JJ for the holes in my mouth and Dan's fingers.
Tune to CHUM FM daily on 5-A-R-
A-H radio.

To whom the hot red head: Sorry I didn't take you on the offer, but remember that I get lonely in the land of the toads and may need some company sometime.

For Rent - immediately - Large Limestone House - unfurnished - 3 bedrooms, 2 bathrooms, large kitchen and living room - 2 blocks west of West Campus; close to bus route and Manor. Call 548-9550
between 5-7 p.m.

Deen size waterbed with frame. Call JoAnne after 5 p.m. at 542-5318.
Four Electrovoice professional microphones ideal for recording of P.A.A. 2 RSC 1530 15 inch bass speakers. Call Doug at 542-5318.
Being gay means living gay. Call Terry Watson 547-2836 Mon. to Thurs. 8-9 p.m. or write Student Affairs Centre c/o Terry Watson.

Artwork needed for use in Tricolor '75.
Anyone interested in submitting works please contact Jennifer Hunter 544-8088.

NORD: YOU SURE KNOW HOW to blow my fuses, baby. But the next time KLUTZ don't push the toast down when your heater's on.

THE HOT REDHEAD WISHES TO THANK all those studly males who replied to her classified, but next time Oan, when your little mind comes up with brilliant ideas concerning hot red heads, would you please check with her first.
Besides, you didn't take up the offer.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTO. offers
quality film processing both in
black and white and color.
colour. Transparencies with competitive prices and 24 hour service. For more information call us at 546-7770 or drop by our studio at 33 Brock Street.

LOST or stolen recently probably in Ban Righ a small coloured change purse containing $26 and some change. I'm a poor student too. If found call Donna at 544-8557.

REWARD: and my everlasting appreciation for Minolta Telephoto lense, lost Thursday evening possibly on AMS bus to Toronto.
Please call Carol 542-7685.

FOR SALE: All models of quality
Texas Instruments. Phone Ouncan at 549-1423 (any day except Thursday) between 4:30 and 7 pm or come to 385 Earl St.

ACTION ANOREW alias SCOTT alias BOOBY and MURPH request the presence of all friends, relatives and acquaintances present and EXhibitors to a warm up party
bush starting at 8:30 pm, Friday
Oct. 18, today at 269 Earl St. - BYOB and Babes. (see you after DOM-PAN-PAN).

NOT everyone is graduating this year but a photographic portrait makes an ideal gift for Christmas or any other special occasion. Whether you prefer a formal portrait or an informal study we at Photo Image will listen to your ideas and adapt them into a unique photograph.
Call us at 546-7770 or drop by our studio at 33 Brock St. and see the portraits we have made for others.

ATTENTION ALL GRADUATES: If your graduation portrait is to appear in Tricolor 1975 it must be taken by Nov. 15 please make a definite appointment for a portrait sitting with Wallace Berry (542-2889) NOW.

65 NELSON welcomes those former H of H's; Cinders and Buzzina; the traveller from T.O. and Mon-trealers. Have a great weekend!
And a message to B.S.: It had better be good cause we're gonna be there! Walla and Sue.

AHA O.G.D.: We were there and saw it all! How could you besmirch poor Sue's reputation like that!

Does the "O" stand for dastardly?
The two innocent bystanders.

HALLOWEEN escorts needed for kids
October 31. Want to help? Come to SV8 between 9 and 3. BOO!

TRACK GAELS: Thanks for the dip in the sleazy chase pit. (But I already had a shower!) Good luck at OUA's. Ex-Rookie Krames.
P.S. Gwen is next.

GIRLS: any girl wishing to transfer from Vic to West Campus call Julia before 8 am or after 10 pm at 549-8316.

DSC Chairman workshop: all chairmen please attend 9 am Sat.
Oct. 19, lower lounge - International Centre, should be over by 1 am.

RON K: Hope you enjoy Journal. Best of luck at Cambridge. Your friends at outlook.

TO THE 3 or 4 Girls from Vic who phoned "Walt the Stilt" re Wette Island. You missed a once-in-a-lifetime chance (an in-joke) but are given a 2nd chance. A first year Med student needs you for practice in surface anatomy. Must be uninhibited and willing to experiment. Call BO at 548-7086.

MICKEY MOUSE warm up party:
Geoff, Joel and Bill (Finnegan) invite all their friends and relations to a warm up party Sat.
Oct. 19, 10 am at No. 11. You bring the Mickey's - we'll make the mouse. bring your wineskins then on to the game.

GAEL GROUP NO. 2 is at long last having a reunion. Meet us on the stairs of Kingston and then on to the pub. Come even if just for a while. Mike, Jay and Ak.

PREMIER BILL DAVIS at Queen's Thursday Oct. 24 at 517 Watson
Hall 3:30 pm.

FOR SALE: Dynaco A35 speakers Syr.
warranty, also a car roof ski rack.
Phone 546-9818 from 5-7.

ASUS ORIENTATION COMMITTEE
Applications now available in ASUS office at Macintosh Corry B
105, 547-3069. Deadline for submission of applications is Friday
Oct. 25 at 12 noon in ASUS office.

LOST: pair of silver wire-framed glasses on 401 at Division St exit westbound last Friday. Reward
phone 544-7506.

THE Riding Club is organizing a trail ride this Sat. Everybody welcome!

The bus leaves from the Union at 9 am sharp. Cost $2.50 plus $1 for membership if you don't have one.

SEMI-FORMAL Ticket scalpers
Here's your big chance to make some extra change. You didn't want to go any way, did you?
Phone Jamie at 544-9993.

GRADE 8 eh? Hm...
HAPPY BIRTHDAY EDDY: Better luck with the hose, now that you're a year older. Hope you find the ultimate high P-5 You can use our closet anytime. The Aug's

LOST: One Science 77 jacket on one of the buses coming back on Thurs
Oct. 10. If anyone has it please call Steve at 544-6215.

ASUS orientation committee applications now available in ASUS office at Macintosh Corry B105, 547-3069. Deadline for submission of applications is Friday, Oct. 25 at 12 noon in ASUS office.

COKE: The Bear and The Bewis Kid (formerly Hartsy) invite all their friends to their Homecoming warm-up this Sat. at 10 am Mandatory attendance Gael Group
56, especially Wendy, 3rd Leonard,
Frechette, Bacardi, and Sexy Voice. Cornwall and everyone else from ads B Y O and some beer available. P-5 Chris and Julie your oil thighs at the Vic were good, try them at 195.

WORLD OF GOD from Ann Arbour
Michigan, a charismatic living, praying community. Meet them at Newman House 8:30 Friday Oct
18. For more information call EO
Shia at 544-2495.

WANTED: girl to share 3 bedroom apartment near Bagot and Earl.
Preferably upper year student or working. Phone 542-9426.

O.F.S COMMITTEE - "Sunday morning feel so bad" a reminder of your seminar on Sunday Oct. 20 at 10 am in the McLaughlin room.
Please be there I don't like this any more than you do.

BEWARE OF 180 girls. HE is worse than Walt the Stilt. But he is going to make an awful "sexy" doctor
AT LAST ITS CUM. All friends, enemies, leftovers from Gael
Groups 10 of 1972 and 64 of 1973, shipwrecked Bluesnovers and Newties (with Skreetch) are urged to get their sails for a big gust this homecoming weekend. ON SAT
we are having a housewarming warmup and victory party. Ted, Bob, Brian and Calvin are waiting for you to cum to 458 Frontenac St BYOA (anything) or we'll have beer AVALMENT

Hoechst thinks ahead

Ideas: The spark we run on

Hoechst develops a constant stream of new ideas to keep its research pointed in the right directions. Ideas about what is needed, ideas about what is wanted. Ideas about what is possible, ideas about what is probable in the light of a constantly changing, ever-increasing body of basic knowledge.

Imagination steers the ship

Imagination is a prime source of the new ideas Hoechst uses constantly in order to keep developing better products - more effective medicines, better chemical and industrial materials. Imagination is only half the battle, but when good ideas are properly teamed with the discipline of applied research, they constitute a formidable force in the search for improved products in every area of modern life.

Helping Build Canada

Products and ideas from Hoechst have touched and improved the quality of people's lives in every area around the world, in a hundred countries on six continents. As an affiliate of the worldwide Hoechst organizations Canadian Hoechst Limited has a full century of research and achievement to draw upon. In Canada Hoechst is an autonomous company employing Canadians to serve Canadian needs.

Hoechst in Canada concerns itself with supplying both the present and future needs of Canadians. The range of products and services covers the spectrum through industrial chemicals, dyestuffs, plastics, printing plates, human and veterinary medicines, pharmaceuticals, and textile fibres. Hoechst products and services, Hoechst techniques and know-how in these fields, combined with a large international fund of experience, have given the company a reputation for expertise which takes constant striving to live up to. Hoechst thinks ahead.

HOECHST

Canadian Hoechst Limited
4045 Cote Vertu
Montreal 383 Quebec
40 Lesmill Road
Oon Mills, Ontario

"THE ROCK AND ROLL ANIMAL"

LOU REED IN CONCERT

with Daryl Hall
and John Oates
Jock Harty
Arena

Sunday Oct. 20

8 pm

Tickets:

$3 advance

$4 at door (from 2 pm Sunday)

AVAILABLE AT: John Orr Room
House of Sounds
Vern Napier

"Lou Reed is not a nice boy"

unclassifieds

More on Pages 4 &amp; 13

THE "PIT" (245 Johnson) is finally ready for a bash. All our friends and/or associates are invited. Special invites to Addy H. Hoggeltes, 3rd Morris (72-73) Club 99 Nelson, 529 Johnson, 205 William, P.M.E. 74 Re-hab 77, Eleanor, Rob and Oave, Maris, Rob S., Org, Beth, Kathy, Ang, Barb, Sue B., Legs and all the Hawks' bunnies (that includes Vankleev Hill too. Arthur and Bryce) Can't forget Gloucester either. See you Saturday and BYOB. Margo, Lynn, Ruth and Anne.

WORD OF GOD from Ann Arbour Michigan: a charismatic living, praying and sharing community meet them at Newman House 8:30 Friday October 18. For more information call Ed Shea at 546-2495.

WOODY: A HUG AND A KISS for the big beautiful roses that made me all better Bird.

ASUS orientation committee applications now available in ASUS office at Macintosh Corry 8105, 547-3089. Deadline for submission of applications is Friday Oct. 25 at 12 noon in 6:50 office.

BEWARE OF 180 girls. He is worse than Walt the Stoll but he is going to make an awful "sexy" doctor.

FOR SALE: All models of Quality calculators by Texas Instruments. Phone Ouncan at 549-4621 (any day except Thursday) between 4:30 and 7 pm or come to 345 Earl St.

ALL it takes is $25 from you. So get your quarters ready for the homecoming football game. United Way loves you.

REWARD: any my everlasting appreciation for Minolta TEL photo lease lost Thursday, evening possibly on AMS bus to Toronto. Please call Carol at 542-7685.

LOST - or stolen recently probably in Bar High a small cream coloured change purse containing $36 and some change I'm a poor student too. Call Donna: 544-8475.

Professional photographer requires male and female models for a vision care brochure being produced by the Canadian Association of Optometrists. Subjects to be portrayed include: school nurse, optician, optometrist, optometrists and various aged patients. Call Or. Ron MacPherson at 356-5890 or write to 129 John St. Napanee, Ont. Last Mon. at Victoria Field I lost my Blue ski jacket with red arm stripes. If found please call Jack 544-7415. It's going to be a long cold winter.

For sale: 1971 Dodge van. Call Oave 549-3348. Interested in the music of the '30's and '40's in the big band sound for your dance? If so contact W.J. Babe 1542-1920 or O.G. Hallam (542-9401) for bookings. Also more modern stylings. Latin, etc. available.

Volunteers urgently needed to befriend people recently released from K.P.H. Hours are flexible. If you are interested please come to the SVB Office. In the Union, University entrance.

Do you have a spare morning or afternoon? You could kill that time helping a paraplegic outpatient with shopping, etc. Interested? Please come to the SVB office or phone 547-5766.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB presents a variety of music from all over the world to dance and drink to. Where: International Centre. When: Saturday, Oct. 8. Time: 8 pm - 1 am.

ATTENTION 44 and 20 (and Henry) Bash reunion Warm-up for Homecoming game Saturday at 23 Elterbeck 11:30 am Orange Christ and please BYOB. Linda, Jane, Babe 11, Richard, Mary, Oave, Jane.

BARB THANKS FOR INTREO. to old spaghetti factory etc. Hope you had a good weekend. Will be in touch about pub. Mike.

LEAGUE PUORQ DWT Mraw pu to s'sirhc esuh, owl ytrihleno ylisrevin U. warromet, net ytiht M.A. B.Y.O.B. ... bob, sirhc, dna lorac.

ASSHOLE REPLIES: Sorry about the bruise, but was it really necessary to vacate your bowels on the hood of my car? Next time face the other way so you'll sing in soprano.

THIS IS GETTING TO BE A bad habit, but I must thank the couple who turned in my wallet Sunday night (October 13). It must have fallen out of my pocket when I was running down Carmichael street. Your kindness is really appreciated. (Please, no smart comments from No. 385 or No. 404-15) Cher Mewat.

TO THE GIRLS AT 221. Thanks for the great dinner. It was a real slice. Be back for the next bite soon. The boys at 216.

NORTH BAY RIDE OESPERATELY NEEEOO for Friday Oct. 25th to leave 5:30 pm but flexible. Will help with gas and driving.

ASUS ORIENTATION COMMITTEE. Applications now available in ASUS office at Macintosh Corry 8105, 547-3089. Deadline for submission of applications is Friday, Oct. 25 at 12 noon at ASUS office.

LOST: GOLD WIRE-RIM glasses in white case. Please call 549-0791.

SANSUI ALX66 FOR SALE 33 watts RMS per channel at 8 ohms $275.00 Phone 548-8978.

SCIENCE 77 DRINKER: Wednesday night, October 23rd 8:00 - 1:00 Clark Hall.

THINKING GAY CAN BE LONELY IF YOU DON'T LIVE GAY. Call Terry Watson 549-2836 Mon. to Thurs. 8-9 pm or write student affairs centre c/o Terry Watson.

STAMPS FOR COLLECTORS: The Queen's Stamp Club will hold its Third meeting on Monday, October 21 at 8:00 in the Red Room at Kingston Hall. All collectors welcome.

FROSH: if you haven't already got your Artsci '78 card. Time is running out. Call Oous Thompson 546-8059. Remember: Artsci '78 cards are required to be eligible to vote for the year class.

SECRET! There will be auditions shortly for an upcoming Artsci '78 night club. GET YOUR ACT TOGETHER NOW!

ALL FEMALE STUDENTS ARE WELCOME to participate in the Women's Intramural Skatathon. Come out to skate laps for points towards your intramural awards.

7:00 - 8:20, Jack Hartly Arena Wednesdays, October 23, 30 and November 6. For further information call Betty Dickie, 544-0242, after 7:30 pm.

FOUND: medium sized cat (white) in Hotel Oieu area. Please call and identify 544-6671.

Professor Irving Lavin, Institute for Advanced Studies, Princeton, N.J.

"The Ecstasy Of Saint Theresa"

An illustrated lecture on a masterpiece by the baroque sculptor Bernini

8 pm Friday Oct. 18
Dupuis Auditorium

COMMUNITY LIASON WANTS:

- Problems
- Solutions
- Criticisms of
- City/Queen's interaction
- People (most of all)

Sunday 2 pm

2nd Floor Common Room
Students Union

Come Prepared To Get Involved!

W.U.S.C.

3rd World Week: Oct. 14-18

WUSC CRAFTS sales week: Oct. 22-26

- feature films from developing countries
- superb handicrafts (great for advance xmas shopping!)

Call the International Centre
547-2807

Skydivers take meet

The Queen's Skydiving Club held its first annual Thanksgiving Meet last weekend at the Gananoque airport. The Queen's contingent succeeded in ousting teams from Cambrian College, Algonquin College, and McGill U. Strong performances were turned in by Steve Foord and Frank Lenk in free-fall "relative" maneuvers, and by Ken Wright, Sandy MacHattie, Frank Lenk, Demetri Georgiou, Alexandra Cottee, Steve Foord, Greg Thomson, and John Rankin in Precision Landing.

In all, about forty skydivers were in attendance. The meet was directed by Brian Wood, of Queen's. Chief Judge was John Smyth, Executive Director of the Canadian Sport Parachute Association, and FAI (Federation Aeronautique Internationale) world class judge. Queen's took the McDonald's trophy for best team overall, and Frank Lenk captured the Queen's Alumni Trophy for top overall collegiate jumper. Trophies were donated by Labatt's, McDonald's, and the Canadian Collegiate Sport Parachuting League.

Not a nothing game

by Jim LeMesurier

Saturday is Homecoming at Queen's and, for the Golden Gaels, it is probably the last chance to make the '74 season a relatively successful campaign. The undefeated, University of Toronto, Varsity Blues are in town, for a return match, and should be determined to repeat their previous 32-9 defeat of the Gaels, in a realistic bid for a perfect season.

A 2-3 win-loss record has virtually, if not mathematically, eliminated Queen's from post-season action, but this will not be enough for the many fierce competitors on the team, to meekly root over in awe of the great Blue machine. For the truly dedicated athletes, this game has little or nothing to do with the standings; it suddenly becomes so significant because it is Homecoming, it is Queen's versus U of T, it is pride and it is self respect. It's that simple. In their earlier meetings, both teams played extremely hard and tough. The result was a thoroughly physical battle which left many on both teams crippled by injuries. It was far more than the standings that created that brutal encounter and it would take more than points or play-offs to turn this one into a nothing game.

With a healthy Dave Hadden (27) the Gaels have a legitimate ground game and, if the weather holds, pivot Raold Serebrin should be able to establish a reasonably balanced attack. Peter McNabb (22) and Brian Titley (29) will join the "Beast" in the backfield while Serebrin will be looking to flanker Bruce Pollack (23) and end Greg Anderson (78) with the pass.

The defense who were on the field for most of the Carleton game, will have to stop Toronto's impressive ground game and rely on the offense, to maintain enough ball control, to see at least an even split in the action.

The Blues are anchored by quarterback Dave Langley, but are led by rookie halfback Mark Bragananolo (24) who is quickly closing in on a 1000 yard season while punishing defenses all fall. His performance could be critical in a tight game. Varsity appear to be strong in all areas and unlike Queen's have been able to fill any gaps with consistently reliable bench strength. U of T may prove to be the best team in the country this year but can be turned back tomorrow. An upset may require a good share of the breaks but it won't have a chance if every man in a Tricolor uniform can't evaluate this for what it is, an everything game, and respond accordingly.

Waterpolo victories

In O.U.A.A. Waterpolo action last weekend at RMC the Queen's contingent swept all three of their games. The first game against RMC began with RMC taking and holding the lead until the last quarter when our boy's caught fire and pulled a win out of the hat 9-7. Queen's was next pitted against the ever-strong Ottawa U. squad. Ottawa led 9-4 going into the last quarter, amazingly the team managed to score six goals, the last and winning goal by Paul Nolum coming in the last second of play. The last game against York was a much more closely fought contest, the third quarter score was 6-5 in York's favour. Queen's coach Danny Beitter directed the squad splendidly and by virtue of his tactics the team scored twice to win 8-6.

In two weeks Queen's goes to Toronto where they will face U of T probably their toughest opposition.

Wic-ly

by Barbara McDermott

Needed: MEDS Wic athletic stick representative. Please contact Maureen Bouris, office 215 in the Phys Ed Center or at 547-5939. Conveners are needed for Winter Term Sports. Application forms are available in the Women's Locker Room.

The Skatathon started last Wednesday, but there are still two more nights: Wednesday 30 Oct. and 6 Nov. from 7 to 8:20 PM. Guys are welcome!

Last reminder of Swim Night! Come on out for inner tube waterpolo on Monday at 7:30. Teams and game times are posted in the Locker Room. See you there!

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY

SPECIALIZING IN

CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD

TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT
SUNDAY 10 AM TO 8 PM

Looking for Something Special?

We have it!

Grad Portraits, Natural Outdoor Portraits,
Weddings, Passports, all with something extra -

Personal Service.
Try us!

18 Market Street, Kingston, Ontario, K7L 1W8
THE MARKET STUDIO
bill milliken
photographer
telephone: 542-5790 area code 613

see our window display at Mohood's (Bogot & Princess) or come see us... soon!

STEVE AMEY'S Lakeview Manor

PLAYING THIS WEEK IN
THE CENTENNIAL ROOM

The Windsor Show

Coming next week

Reflections

28 Yonge St., Kingston

AFTER YOU PROMISE HER THE WORLD...
GIVE HER A DAZZLING DIAMOND

Even if you can't keep all the other promises you made... there's one you can. Give her a diamond! One fiery jewel to express the love that is yours.

Symbol of love and devotion... and all that is yet to be... a brilliance to be cherished forever.

KINNENAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

Touchdown at McDonald's

after the game.
You deserve a break today.

277 Bath Rd.
Kingston

On the home front

Police brutality investigated

Toronto: Yet another instance of police brutality has been reported in Metro. A 19 year old postal worker reported Wednesday that he was tortured by metro police when he was arrested Feb. 9 for drug possession. Recounting his story under the eye of a lie detector, Tom Henderson claimed that the police had beaten him at his apartment stripped and searched his wife as well as hunting through the apartment. Henderson was later taken to the police station where he was again beaten and tortured with a steel claw. The inquiry into the activities of the Toronto jail guards was announced on Oct. 7. A former jail guard Gary Dassy reported that prisoners were beaten by the 'goon squad'. The goon squad was composed of six of the biggest guards employed by the jail.

Opposition leaders Robert Nixon and Stephen Lewis have asked the Legislature to expand its public inquiry into the alleged brutality by the guards at the Toronto (Don) Jail to include the complaints filed against the were threatening members of the union. The files concerning the activities of the Unions disappeared in the riot at the site last March. The outbreak of violence caused an estimated $2 million damages to the development site. A public inquiry into construction union freedoms was set up following the incident. Guitard stated that he sus-son plans to travel to Cyprus and the Middle East to visit the Canadians on peacekeeping duties and to see if the troops over there may be reduced.

Montreal: As a result of her apartheid policy, the general assembly of the United Nations has voted to restrict South Africa's voting rights, allow her to receive only selected documents and attend only certain meetings. The idea was widely supported by Third World states. Retaliation from South Africa may be in the form of withdrawal of financial backing, a spokesman said.

Ottawa: Defense Minister James Richardson has announced that the government will cut the size of the armed forces. The forces currently 83,000 will be reduced by not replacing all of the 9,000 or 9,000 people who leave each year. General Jacques Dextraze charged that the forces are already overworked and if there is any reduction in strength Canada will have to drop some of their commitments. Richardson stated that the main tasks for the forces are defense of sovereignty, commitments to the North America defence system and to North Atlantic Treaty Organization and peacekeeping. Richard-

Toronto: The provincial government has gone ahead with preparation to make official the new regulations concerning social development. The province has started sending out the $15 million it allotted for assisting day-care centres. Grants totalling $2.4 million have been given to 17 day-care groups. The money will go mainly to the renovation of existing facilities and to provide space for approximately 668 children.

Ottawa: The British North America Act will be hashed through again. Prime Minister Trudeau announced that Ottawa will attempt to reach agreement with the provinces on a program for amending the act.

Montreal: Union rivalry continues to cause trouble at the site of the James Bay hydro-electric project. Unions affiliated with the Quebec Federation of Labour began sending 'goon squads' of stewards to the site last January. The stewards are quite well known for the physical strength Mr. Guitard, head of labour relations for the project, stated that one steward said he wanted all members of the rival Confederation of National Trade Unions expelled from the site. Guitard composed a file of signed complaints that the stewards pected the Quebec Manpower Centre of being in collusion with the inter-union rivalry on the project. A contractor had difficulty in recruiting workers through the centre in Montreal. Guitard submitted the contractor's list of workers to Jean Bergeron, the Manpower official in charge of the recruiting, personally. The contractor still did not receive any workers for the site.

VEE HAFV VAYS OFF MAKING YOU TALK!

briefly from the World

Boston (Reuter-CPI-AP) - The Massachusetts National Guard is standing by ready to enter the city for the first time in over 50 years, as racial strife continued over the busing issue. The troubles were touched off by a school desegregation plan requiring the bussing of 18,200 students.

In the violence earlier this week seven students were injured in a racial fight that occurred in a secondary school. Knives were drawn and the fight spread out into the corridors. Both Black and White parents have vowed to keep their children out of school until the order to desegregate is rescinded.

Evanston Ill. - A Northwestern University biochemist estimated this week that the inorganic components of a person weighing 150 lbs. are worth $5.60 in current dollars. In 1938 the same body was worth 98 cents.

Kansas City - Gerald Ford outlined a Twelve-fold programme of self-restraint to the American people, in Kansas earlier this week. Ford urged the formation of local committees to help keep plants, stores and other enterprises in line with the drive to control prices and costs. The American President stated that the American people have up until now been a nation of "wasters". Ford left Kansas City Thursday to attend a $1000 a plate

Luxembourg (Reuter) - The foreign ministers of the European Common market agreed to open talks with Canada on the possibility of setting up a co-operative relationship.

A draft statement is to be issued when Prime Minister Trudeau visits Brussels on Monday. The action reflects a desire on the part of the Common Market to strengthen ties with Canada.

Council slams latest report

by Ian Jarvis

At Thursday's meeting, Outer Council refused to approve a report prepared by the committee set up to evaluate the past and planned actions of the OFS, and sent the report back to its architects to be rewritten. The major criticisms of the report were that it did not present enough basic information, lacked cohesiveness and congruency, and failed to give a direction for AMS policy to follow. The committee stressed Internal Affairs Commissioner Ian Nordheimer was to have prepared a concise report on OFS activities which would provide council members with the proper background for making decisions regarding OFS. He did not feel this report had accomplished that objective.

Nordheimer was also displeased by the lack of sound conclusions in the report's synopsis. The report states "The future of OFS is great. This potential is such that there is no question about whether we should or should not stay in OFS - we should." Yet several paragraphs later, in discussing the political techniques of the OFS, the report says, "With its present styles we question its effectiveness and life span."

Strangely enough the report probably would have been approved had it not been for President Tony Wolman. Speaker Mary Bloos had asked for discussion on the motion of approval but Mary a peep was heard from the council until Wolman challenged council's reason for not discussing such an important issue, and it was only then that queries about the report were brought out.

Cyclists pull in $1000

As part of the campaign to raise funds for the United Way, a Bike-A-Thon was held at half time of last weekend's football game. The participants, dressed in colourful costumes were sponsored for every 25 metre section of the track they completed. Cheered on by the crowd were Chancellor Roland Michener (who completed 2 laps), Principal Watts (2), Dean Reid (1 1/2), Padre Laverly (2), and Dean Sinclair (2 1/2), who were able to raise over $1000.

In other United Campaign drives, the Lottery returns reached approximately $150, while proceeds from the Homecoming Semi-formal dance will also go to the campaign.

Bottoms up!!!

Following the Bike-A-Thon held during half time at Saturday's Queen's-Varsity football game, Queen's Chaplain Rev. Dr. A.M. Laverly took a spill off his bike. The Padre should have avoided trying to do wheelies!

Queen's Journal

Volume 102, Number 13

Tuesday, October 22nd, 1974

Boosts in honoraria recommended for AMS

by Ian Jarvis

The plan to restructure honoraria passed second reading at Thursday's Outer Council meeting. The changes encompassed in this proposal come out of the recommendations of the report on honoraria prepared by Ian Nordheimer (chairman), Peter Druxer, John Gray and Sue Harper.

The definition of honoraria according to the report is "a cash payment given as compensation for time expended and benefits forgone." The increased compensation recommended by the report is designed to make such jobs as President and Vice-President of the AMS financially accessible to anyone. The problem that faced the committee was in determining the point at which a student in an AMS position is not forced to suffer financially while at the same time trying to keep the principle of student volunteerism from being jeopardized. In the words of the report: "Student volunteerism is an important and desirable facet of this university's life but personal bankruptcy is not."

The honoraria recommended for the jobs of AMS President and Vice-President and Journal Editor is based upon the cost of living and attending school for a year; a figure of $2400 arrived at by the Ontario Student Awards Programme. For these positions, honoraria would consist of tuition and a summer salary since due to the full-time nature of these jobs those holding them are unable to take on regular summer employment. Other positions which are to receive a hike in honoraria are AMS Commissioners, $600 (tuition) up from $300; Managing Editor of the Journal $300 (1/2 tuition) up from $100; senior editors $700 (aggregate sum) up from $200; Tricolor Editor, $600 (tuition) up from $200; Tricolor staff $500 (aggregate sum) up from $225; Housing committee, $600 (aggregate sum) up from $450; QEA Director $600 (tuition), up from $150; Concert committee technical $1100 (aggregate sum) and two people who received no honoraria last year the director of Info Bank and the Clubs manager, will each receive $100.

One criticism of the restructured honoraria was that it did not go far enough. As ASUS rep Linda Lesueur explained, "Why should the concert committee staff receive this sort of honoraria when there are many others such as the co-ordinators of Homecoming, the Arts Festival and Orientation who work just as hard and receive no compensation?" In defence of the report's position Sue Harper maintained that a line had to be drawn somewhere but she conceded this line should be flexible enough to allow consideration for other areas in the future.

A motion made by Bart Bull and Brian Copeland to reduce the amount of honoraria was defeated after Ian Nordheimer, who was growing increasingly annoyed at the bickering over the figures involved, told council that "we have to trust the integrity of the members of the committee and the people they talked to in

(John Bottomley)

Ian Nordheimer, Chairman of the Honoraria and Salary Review Committee.

A peek inside...

Lou Reed review
page 14 and 15

Blues beat Gaels
page 19

Senate election
page 6

Satanic bible
page 10, 11

State of the Union address
page 3

Candlelighting
page 5

back page

BEN WICKS

I don't care what Ford told you to tighten. You look ridiculous.

Tuesday, October 22

7:00 pm - Meeting of Queen's NDP in room 115 in McArthur Hall student lounge. Guest speaker - Lois Thompson (Kingston NDP Federal Candidate).

7:30 pm - The Department of Drama presents Chronos XXIV Cue For Treason in the studio-room 102 in Theology Hall. Tickets are free and available at the Drama Desk 547-6291. The production runs from Tuesday through to Friday, October 25 with two performances on Friday and Thursday nights at 7:30 and 9:00 pm.

7:30 pm - Queen's Amateur Radio Club Meeting in room 454. All interested persons and members please attend.

8:00 pm - Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology presents "New Concepts in Pregnancy Immunology: The Placenta as a Tumor". In Agnes Etherington Hall Auditorium with Jerry F. Frontenac-Finnegan - Associate professor of the department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, University of North Carolina School of Medicine Chapel Hill, North Carolina.

8:00 pm - Public debate between Queen's Debating Team and a team from Princeton. "Resolved that Western Society is in Decline". All welcome - especially as the decision will be made by split of the house. At Wallace Hall.

8:00 pm - Meeting of the Committee to Free South Vietnamese Political Prisoners in the Ban Righ Board Room (near the cafeteria). Everyone is welcome.

8:30 pm - A film on Eastern Spirituality and Meditation followed by a talk from Professor (Biff) Adisson free. Also the Student Christian Movement's Union Basement Bootroom is now open weekday afternoons. Please come by.

8:30 pm - Quartetto to Esterhazy. This ensemble restores an authentic string quartet style, on instruments as they were played in Haydn and Mozart's time. Tickets are $4.00 general and $3.00 for students.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies presents Zabriskie Point directed by Michelangelo Antonioni and starring Mireille Darc and Jeanne Yanne. Admission is $1.00 at the door of Ellis Auditorium.

Wednesday, October 23

6:45 pm - Camp Outlook Meeting in the Chown Common Room East.

7:00 pm - Queen's Circle K presents its first organizational meeting in Stirling Hall. Be there! 8:00 pm - Introductory lectures on Transcendental Meditation every Wednesday evening in Stirling Hall room 412A.

8:30 pm - Grand Theatre presents Ivan Rebroff, a Russian singer performing serious music and folk songs. Tickets are available at the box office.

Thursday, October 24

1:30 pm - Come meet and discuss issues with Premier Bill Davis in room 517 Watson Hall.

6:30 pm - CFRC presents Spectrum: Music and items of interest, including Happenings, a summary of upcoming events at Queen's and in Kingston at 6:55 pm.

7:30 pm - Campus Movies presented by Cineguild and the Alina Mater Society shows Gimme Shelter, by the Maybys with the Rolling Stones in Dunning Hall Auditorium. Admission is $1.00.

7:30 pm - Queen's Skydiving Club will be showing slides and movies on skydiving at the regular meeting this week. A brief talk on "Self-Supervision on parachute jumps will also be given on a basic level. The meeting will be held in the Brockington House Common Room. New members and interested spectators are always most welcome.

8:00 pm - CFRC presents The Goon Show: Tonight, "The Telephone".

8:00 pm - The Right Reverend J.T. Frame, the Anglican Bishop of the Yukon will be delivering a presentation and showing slides concerning development in the north and the church's role in this development. The meeting will be held in Dupuis Auditorium.

10:00 pm - Jazz Opera "Escalator Over the Hill" on Jazz FM, Queen's radio 91.9.

Pubs and Theatres

Musor - The Reflections
Frontenac-Muldoon's - The Moonshiners
Baika, M.D. Associate professor of the department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, University of North Carolina School of Medicine Chapel Hill, North Carolina.

00 pm - Public debate between Queen's Debating Team and a team from Princeton. "Resolved that Western Society is in Decline". All welcome - especially as the decision will be made by split of the house. At Wallace Hall.

8:00 pm - Meeting of the Committee to Free South Vietnamese Political Prisoners in the Ban Righ Board Room (near the cafeteria). Everyone is welcome.

8:30 pm - A film on Eastern Spirituality and Meditation followed by a talk from Professor (Biff) Adisson free. Also the Student Christian Movement's Union Basement Bootroom is now open weekday afternoons. Please come by.

8:30 pm - Quartetto to Esterhazy. This ensemble restores an authentic string quartet style, on instruments as they were played in Haydn and Mozart's time. Tickets are $4.00 general and $3.00 for students.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies presents Zabriskie Point directed by Michelangelo Antonioni and starring Mireille Darc and Jeanne Yanne. Admission is $1.00 at the door of Ellis Auditorium.

Upcoming Events

Friday, October 25 - 8:00 - 1:00 pm - Champagne Charlie and His Good Time Guitar will be at Bitter Grounds. Admission is $1.00. Tickets are available Wednesday, Thursday and Friday in the John Orr Room 10:30 to 4:30.

Friday, October 25 - 8:00 pm - Spanish Club is holding a Sangria Party at La Casa, 90 Queen's Crescent across from Victoria Hall. Come to enjoy Spanish and Latin American music and culture. All are most welcome. Vengan todos! Spanish Club membership $1.00 on sale.

Friday, October 25 - A Division of Concerts event. The return of Toronto Mendelssohn Choir. Conducted by Elmer Iseler. Works by Britten, Stanford, Andre Prevost, Handel, Vaughn Williams, Ligeti, Schoenberg and Copland. Tickets now available at the door. Grant Hall at 8:30 pm. Admission for students is $1.00.

Wednesday, October 30 and Friday, October 31 - Finally, Anne of Green Gables, "the most popular musical theatre production in Canadian history" comes to Kingston in a production from the famed Charlottetown Festival. Tickets now available in the Agnes Etherington Art Centre. Student prices are $3.00, $4.00, $5.00, $6.00. General prices are $3.50, $4.50, $5.50, $6.50.

Phys. Ed. Centre

The hours for skating are as follows.

Monday: 4:30 - 5:20; 8:30 - 9:20

Tuesday: 4:30 - 5:20

Wednesday: 4:30 - 5:20; 8:30 - 9:20

Thursday: 4:30 - 5:20

Friday: 12:30 - 1:20; 4:30 - 5:20; 10:30 - 11:20

Saturday: 4:30 - 5:20

Sunday: 4:00 - 5:20; 8:30 - 9:20

Journal Advertisers

Please note that Journal advertising deadlines are as follows:

5 pm Tuesday for Friday issues

5 pm Saturday for Tuesday issues

There is no guarantee that material submitted after these deadlines will be printed

TONIGHT QUARTETTO ESTERHAZY

Dunning Hall Series

8:30 p.m.

a Division of Concerts
event

Interested in Canoe Tripping?

Come to the

Camp Outlook Meeting

Wednesday Oct. 23, 74

Chown Common Room East

6:45 pm

ASUS

Notice of election for:

2 ASUS Senators (1 yr)

Advanced Poll:

Wednesday October 23, 1974

Student Union 10:30-3:30 pm

Election Day:

Friday October 25, 1974

Student Union 10:30 am - 7:00 pm

Library 10:30 am - 3:30 pm

Leonard 4:45 pm - 6:15 pm

Ban Righ (Upper) 4:45 pm - 6:15 pm

Wolman's State of the Union address

It is about time that your AMS President delivered a "State of the Union" address. With approximately four months left in my term of office I am in a safe position to let you all in on a few basic secrets.

Oh, you can be sure I'll tell you all about the new and innovative ways we have spent your money, and how we have made good on most of our promises, but as you and I know it is pretty tough to decipher the truth from the crap.

Basically, politics has lost its credibility. The men who lead us are not willing to tell us the truth about ourselves. As Morton Shulman (MLA) so aptly puts it, "the government is not elected on the basis of telling their electorate that we must live within our means," this hurts too much.

The people (you and I) would prefer not to hear about this sort of thing yet, let us put it off until a little later.

The AMS is the same way. At election time all the teams of candidates, ourselves included, tell the electorate the things that buy votes, and there is nothing wrong with this so long as you are aware of what is happening.

This then brings me to the points I mean to hammer home. What I am about to say is most likely going to be unpopular but I feel necessary, and in view of the vast number of students to whom I've spoken during these past eight months I also feel that the following points are accurate.

Firstly, to all those students that don't know what they want from a university education, I recommend getting out. Get a trade, something that is useful, a B.A. is worthless in the scheme of things. The only safe course, temporarily only, is Meds, and don't count on it. For when the government decides to computerize medicine (symptoms, treatments, etc.) as it will, mysticism of medicine and doctors has vanished, the demand for this degree will decline as well. You as a person, and as a parent of a family someday will have to be a provider. If you have nothing people want, forget it, and don't count on welfare.

Secondly, the University of today, and I mean all the universities have their moral obligation to society (note: I am not sure they ever knew it). University has become another dollar and cents proposition. The B.I.U.'s, ay, that's the rub! But what about this moral obligation. If a university knows that graduating students in a particular faculty have a slim chance of putting bread on the table, or worse yet he or she won't have much to offer society, then why doesn't the university just say so?

Our society is moving so quickly today that the training you receive now is obsolete when you are ready to use it.

Thirdly, most of us at university are lazy. We fail to set any objectives or goals for ourselves. We have been in school from the age of 5, and are dependant on either our parents or the government until we are 23. We probably don't fully break ties with our homes until we are 23. And with only 40 years left in the average lifetime we amble through life dependant on the

What we promised:

(2) To promote more cultural activities.

What we delivered:

- We are in the process of buying boards for the ice surface of the arena in order to lower the costs of putting on large scale productions.

- QEA is attempting to bring in a Philharmonic Orchestra, or ballet company if the deal with the boards goes through.

- The Education Commission is aiming for prominent speakers: (i) Morton Shulman (MLA) (ii) Dr. A. Peccei (Chairman Club of Rome) (International Environmental Agency) (iii) I will approach the Prime Minister's office, with regard to having the Prime Minister talk to the students sometime during the school year.

- The commission is also providing funds for any student or students' groups with a reasonably workable cultural bias. "The Human Sexuality Course" is one example of this type of program.

What we promised:

(1) To consolidate finances:

- The financial position of the AMS is better than it has been for a great number of years.

- We have developed financial operating policies for all our services (Pub, housing, typing, copying, etc.) and a careful watch is being maintained.

- During the summer a Management Study was done on the AMS and the recommendations made are being implemented in whole or in part.

- The capital account, depleted to $1,500 last year is back up to close to $40,000 partly as 1973-74 revenue over costs and partly due to the profit realized by the Pub this spring and summer.

Tony Wolman

government. We are mothered from cradle to grave. (The government will bury you if you die with no money. Cost to taxpayer approximately $850.)

I repeat, if you don't know what you want, and are looking to find yourself at university, forget it, get out.

When you finish reading this article, if you decide to, start setting some goals out for yourself. If you don't, I am sure you will have a very boring, hand to mouth existence while you live. And by the way, all the while you live those people who do have goals (primarily the political types) will lead you like sheep.

Fourth and finally, university is no place to "find yourself". From the vast majority of students that I have talked to, you only become more confused and further lost. University can be an extremely lonely place. T.A.K. is evidence of this. If you do want to find yourself, get out and work, contribute to the society you live in, and yourself. Then, when you know where it's at, get your ass into college, and not before.

This is the way I have come to see it, after eight months of serving you.

What we promised:

(4) To stimulate more interfaculty interaction.

What we delivered:

- Here too we have been lacking, but not entirely of our own fault. The elected representatives have been extremely lax in their duties to bring matters to Council, concerning any areas at all. - Again, all I can try to do is elicit some action from Council Representatives, a task easier said than done. I'll let you know

What we promised:

(5) To be responsible for what we say and do.

What we delivered

- In these times when communications are so fast, a person in the public eye can't afford to let his credibility slip. There just isn't time to check out all the facts pro and con. The policy of Mr. Wolman, Mr. Druxerman and Mr. Gray is to be honest. We have no other choice if we want to maintain your confidence in our leadership.

AMEY'S TAXI 546-1111

VAN'S

GIFTS and BOOKS LTD.
282 Princess St.
KINGSTON 542-6676

VAN'S EXTRA SUPER SPECIAL
Old part plain and tipped - reg. 3 pkgs. for $1.29
At Van's - 3 packages for $1.05
Stainless steel heat resistant small and large size pipes, screens included, from $2.98 - $16.95.
Comical cast iron wall plaques or heat resistant table coasters only $1.98

STORE HOURS
OPEN Mon.-Fri. 9:30 am - 10 pm
Saturday 9:30 am - 9 pm
Sunday 12:00 noon - 9 pm

VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S

Patton's Dry Cleaners

Complete Tailoring Service

Specializing in men's and ladies repairs

Free pick-up and Delivery

10% off for Queen's Students

1 hour service

546-3626

349 Princess St., Kingston

CAMPUS MOVIES
presents

GIMME SHELTER

with the

Rolling Stones

Thursday, 23 October 7:00 and 9:30

Dunning Hall $1.00

HAPPY BIRTHDAY WATTY!
BUG BEKNOWN

Parade ponderings

Pics by John Cameron

Interviews by Sarah Yarnell

"This stirs my Scottish blood," Dr. MacDonald (Meds 39) told the Journal as the whine of the Queen's Pipe Band moved past his vantage point on University Ave. Saturday morning.

Ann Bahen and John Chance returned to Queen's for the 25th reunion of Arts 49. Here they stand in front of the tree planted by their class outside the Students' Memorial Union as a 5th reunion project in 1954. This weekend, several members of their class were present at the planting of 2 more trees on University Ave. Ms. Bahen explained that when Arts 49 entered the university in 1945, Queen's was experiencing her first post-war, "big" year. Enrolment rose considerably and the "new look" of Queen's began to take shape.

Alumni were easily identified by the badges and name tags they wore on their roamings around the campus.

Joanne Harrison, age 4, watched from her father's arms as the 3 little pigs and other Disney characters danced up Barrie St. Joanne will you do an oilhigh for us in '89?

Journal: Hello Bashful - where's Snow White at this early, chilly hour?
Bashful: Uh... she hasn't come to, yet...

The Journal asked Harry Burbidge (Science 44) if his class were planning any panty raids in women's residence (in true engineering tradition) as part of their Homecoming fun. He hesitated, but replied, "I beg your pardon?" See how time will alter (cure?) even the most driving of engineer passions!

10,000 STUDENTS READ
THE JOURNAL TWICE WEEKLY
ADVERTISE IN THE

Queens
Journal

Come meet and discuss issues with Premier Bill Davis

Thursday Oct. 24
517 Watson Hall
3:30 pm

MR. DARKROOM

Over the years that I have been conducting darkroom printing sessions, first in black and white and now in colour I have stressed to the audience that darkroom work is not only a rewarding hobby but is easy and fun. This three letter word was used in two of our show slogans: "Taking Pictures is Half the Fun - Making Prints is Twice the Fun" and the current one "Let's Turn out the Lights and Have Some Fun - with our Durst Enlarger".

People who are fascinated watching a print being processed and express amazement at the equipment used would do well to compare the first steps to a photographic process they themselves may well have done many times - the projection of a slide or movie film onto a screen. If you look at an enlarger, used to produce prints of varying sizes from a negative, it has precisely the same make-up as a projector. A lamp to provide illumination, condensers to intensify the light, a carrier to hold the film in place while enlarging. Projection does their work in a horizontal position, while most enlargers are vertical, but the operation is identical. The farther the projector from the screen, the larger the projected image.

The enlarger works in exactly the same manner, with the image arriving at an easel. Instead of being viewed, the image is burned into a piece of sensitized paper which then goes through chemical baths under "safelight" conditions and after being dried is a finished print, ready for your wallet or album. So, even if you have never seen a darkroom door from the outside, you have gone through the fundamental steps when you showed your slides to friends.

The second "slumbing block" to many is the fear of expense involved with photographic printing. A darkroom need be neither fancy, nor expensive, the most important factor is that it is functional, having the necessary equipment to do the type of work required. Great strides have been made recently in colour printing. Trays are no longer required and all processing is done on a counter-top in a small drum that is rolled back and forth to provide proper agitation. This system also eliminates complicated temperature controls and is most efficient from a point of time and economy of chemistry.

Many apartment dwellers have designed portable bench-tops for bath-tubs on which to do their work. This is an ideal situation, being close to running water, and a room that requires a minimum of lightproofing. Equipment costs can range considerably, depending on your needs and budget. Good equipment is a good investment as product quality will determine the efficiency and durability of most major items. Photographic printing is a matter of gaining experience, and the best equipment will not automatically improve a mediocre darkroom man. However, look for an enlarger that offers lifetime durability and avoid frills that really give no true assistance to printing. Durst is such an enlarger.

When selecting darkroom accessories consider the famous Paterson products from Great Britain. They are the result of design experience and proven in actual working conditions. This broad range of darkroom equipment utilizes the advantages of plastics in the production of designed for the user items.

During the balance of this series I'll outline the simple stages of producing a print and discuss other interesting aspects of this fascinating part of photography. For those already interested in darkroom work, Braun has a twin-sided wall chart detailing and illustrating procedures for developing film. It's called Mr. Darkroom's 9 step wall chart, and is yours for the asking. Please write direct to them: Braun Electric Canada Ltd., 3269 American Drive, Mississauga, Ontario L4V 1B9.

ASUS President stresses focal change for orientation

by Debbie Coyne

Applications for the new ASUS Orientation Committee are due this Friday, pending the selection of the members early next week. ASUS president, Sue Harper, hopes that applicants will think seriously about what they, personally, think orientation should entail, without being constrained by past orientation plans.

A program such as Orientation requires much organization and the personal drive of committee members in order to be successful. It must cater to a heterogeneous body of students, with many varied interests. Thus there is always room for change and fresh ideas, and of course, people willing to experiment and create a new, effective and functional Orientation program.

The usual criticism is that past Orientation Committees have been overly concerned with the entertainment aspect of the program. More gatherings and discussion groups should be arranged to facilitate conversation within the group of new students, as well as to provide opportunities for questions to be directed at upper year students. But, according to Harper this shortcoming has not been due to a lack of initiative on the part of the Committee members, rather it is a result of inadequate action by the Committee, as a whole, to implement these different concepts of orientation.

The structure of the Orientation '75 Committee has been changed, which hopefully may encourage a new outlook on Orientation. It now consists of five members. The member for Communications handles such things as gael and frosh information, and handbooks. There is also both a Social-Cultural member and an Operations member. Formerly, these positions were occupied by one member. The latter, this year though, will handle the purely technical details of the program, in order that the Social-Cultural member may devote her (himself) entirely to the more philosophical aspect of Orientation. A fourth member is the liaison, who is essentially responsible for relation with any outside bodies, including the Academic Orientation Committee. This committee is made up of both professors and students, and is a Faculty Board Committee. Finally, there is a treasurer, whose responsibility is to organize the financial aspect of Orientation as well as ensure that everyone involved is aware of the financial position at all times.

Having experience Orientation for several years, many selection committee members would like to see a radically different program next year. Harper expressed the hope that people who felt the present Orientation program to be too socially oriented would apply for the committee.

Application forms and other helpful are available at the ASUS Office, Macintosh-Corby B105 (547-3069). The deadline for submission is noon, Friday, October 25, at the ASUS Office.

Candlelighting's myths: still burning brightly

by Nancy Bowes

"Most solemn of the ceremonies surrounding freshmen initiation is the candle-lighting ceremony. Gowned freshettes circle tradition-clad Grant Hall to the accompaniment of stately music; each receives her candle and lights it from the great taper, 'the spirit of Levana'." Tricolor '45.

Undergraduate gowns and the Levana Society have faded from the university scene, but the ceremony of candlelighting remains.

The ritual is an official welcome to all women new to Queen's. It will take place in Grant Hall, tomorrow Oct. 23 at 8:00 pm. The ceremony includes an address by a prominent woman in the community and, of course, the traditional passing of the flame of knowledge and experience from the upper class women to the first year women.

Each participant is provided with a white candle with the Tricolor ribbons tied in a double knot around it. The legends surrounding the candle are many. The colour of the ribbon uppermost on the knot indicates the faculty from which her husband will come. The colour of the ribbon showing on the back of the candle is representative of the faculty wherein she'll find a boyfriend and many close friends. The colour of the longest ribbon represents the faculty of her lover. The number of wax drops above the ribbons is equal to the number of legitimate children she will bear; the number below the ribbons is equal to the number of illegitimate children she will bear.

Obviously the stories are but flights of fancy. Despite this, there has been an attempt, in recent years, to smother the legends for the alleged reason that they set back the cause of Women's Liberation. The myths centre on romance, marriage and childbearing, and are therefore deemed unsuitable for modern women.

Therefore, it must be remembered that there are some women whose goal in life is to be a partner in a strong marriage and a loving mother to her children. Not all women come to university intent upon setting the world on fire. Many come in the hope that they might graduate as more intelligent people and thus be better prepared for life - whatever their conception of a fulfilled life may entail.

Tricolor

If you do not want to receive a Tricolor 75 next year, you must officially opt out of it at the AMS office tomorrow, Thursday and Friday.

McArthur students should come on Wednesday of next week.

Elmer Iseler
conducts
TORONTO MENDELSSOHN
CHOIR
FRIDAY 25 OCTOBER 8:30 p.m.
Grant Hall
Tickets at Box Office
in Agnes Etherington Art Centre
547 6194
A Division of Concerts
Event

unclassifieds

ATTENTION ALL GRADUATES: If your Graduation Portrait is to appear in the Tricolor '75 it must be taken by November 15. '74 please make a definite appointment for a portrait sitting with Wallace Berry (542-2908) NOW!

Do you have a SPARE MORNING OR AFTERNOON? You could lift that time by helping a paraplegic out-patient with shopping, etc. Interested? Please come to SVB office or phone 547-5746.

ARTWORK NEEDED FOR USE IN TRICOLOR '75. Anyone interested in submitting works please contact Jennifer Hunter 544-8058.

CIRCLE K NIGHT tomorrow, Wednesday October 23rd, 8:00-11:00 pm. Sinking Hall, is everybody happy out there? If not, please phone Harry at 542-6261. Is everybody crazy out there? If so, please phone Harry at 542-4361.

BEING GAY MEANS LIVING GAY. Call Terry Watson at 547-2636. Men to Thurs 8-9 pm or write Student Affairs Centre c/o Terry Watson. FOR SALE: All models of Quality Calculators by Texas Instruments. Phone Duncan at 548-4623 1 any day except Thursday! between 4:30 and 7:00 pm or come to 345 Earl Street.

THE BELL BOYS are having a Bash and invite all friends and relatives to the Arcade at 229 University this Friday October 25th. We've got the shill so just show up.

PREMIER BILL DAVIS AT QUEEN'S: Thursday October 24, 3:30 pm Room 517 Watson.

ATTENTION GUEL GROUP NO. 72 (Seventy-two) Reunion time Saturday October 26 9:00. 261 King St. East - A party Rod, Arlo, and Carline.

FOUND: 1 pair of wire frame glasses in Ellis on Thursday. Phone 389-7646.

TO THE PERSON WHO GRABBED MY JACKET ON FRIDAY NIGHT: Would you please return the papers in my wallet: Drivers licence, student card, OHP card, etc. Just send them to 319 William St.

FOR SALE: All models of Quality Calculators by Texas Instruments. Phone Duncan at 548-4623 1 any day except Thursday! between 4:30 and 7:00 pm or come to 345 Earl Street.

AMS Education Commission Presents A Public Lecture And Film

The Lecture: "Reappraising Human Prospects"

"WOULD YOU NOT HAVE A CHOICE BETWEEN GROWTH AND A STABLE SOCIETY; WE ONLY HAVE A CHOICE BETWEEN A STABLE SOCIETY AND DISASTER"

Dr. Aurelio Peccei

PRESIDENT OF THE CLUB OF ROME
ITALIAN INDUSTRIALIST
AUTHOR - CHASM AHEAD

WEDNESDAY OCTOBER 30
8 P.M. ELLIS AUDITORIUM

THE FILM:

"LIMITS TO GROWTH"

7 P.M. - ELLIS AUDITORIUM

AMS EDUCATION COMMISSION

And they're off...to the Senate

Steve McGirr

As a Senator, I would be concerned with maintaining the personal close academic and social atmosphere at Queen's, one that can survive only at a small university. A second look should be taken at enrollment projections and every effort should be made to limit the number of students and encourage high academic standards. I think that more emphasis should be placed on the aesthetic aspects of campus architecture. Queen's definitely should not become a coldly distant educational machine but rather should perpetuate the atmosphere of tradition and friendly intimacy.

Duncan MacDonell

I feel that the majority of the students on this campus are unaware of the problems of the Senate or its functions, so I will now begin this article with a summary of the Senate's functions.

In an article written by former ASUS senator, Kathy Turner, she stated that "the Senate is the ultimate governing body of the university, and while many policy decision papers originate in the various faculties and schools, it is the Senate that makes the final analyses and provides the direction for the campus as a whole. The Senate is the one institution on campus where attention can be drawn to every matter regardless of how inconsequential it may be."

To this I would like to add the concept of the Senate being the body that determines the long term direction of Queen's for a majority of campus activities, i.e. campus planning; academic development; promotion, tenure and leave. It is here through the work of various committees reporting to the Senate that the quality of education and the direction of many other facets of university life are determined.

Turner points out in her article that "No one bothers to seek out and fight for student interests in major, pressing issues on the campus." I feel that the Senate is the place in which these issues must be brought to life through proper representation. I feel that I have the enthusiasm and capabilities to provide this representation, and that is why I am offering to dedicate myself to this position. I am familiar with the areas involved and I feel quite confident that I can properly represent your interests, so I urge you to vote MAC DONELL on Friday, Oct. 25th.

With your support, I'll attempt to establish better lines of communication between the individual student and the Senate. For further discussion, phone me at 549-4623.

George Laidlaw (Arts 77)

In order to achieve a proper balance between the varying divergent interests at the University it is necessary to have not only representation in university government from certain administrative sectors and the faculty, but also from the student body at large on a faculty or school basis. It is doubtful whether the student body has sufficient representation at the Senate level in order to give justice to the students' needs and to provide an effective exercise in self-government at that level. This is particularly noticeable in the committees of the Senate and in the process of selecting members for those committees.

My two areas of particular interest are in academic planning and campus planning. In the latter you have only to look about the campus to notice constructions, such as the new Arts-Science complex, which strengthen the Queen's tradition of penal-style architecture. Within campus planning it is not just alleged administrative requirements which must be met but also certain aesthetic considerations and the demands of human habitation. In the area of academic planning certain anachronistic academic standards are maintained which are not only meaningless but capricious. To cite only one example the charade of final examinations comes to mind. It is also clear that Queen's is seeking not to have a student population of wide backgrounds, in terms of socio-economic class, but it seeks to maintain a prevailing middle-class content which seriously detracts from the possible vitality of the student-body. Factors such as income and social status must be taken into consideration for the undergraduate applicant, and recruitment policies should look for a truer reflection of the outside world in the Queen's student-body.

Virginia Morse

On Friday, Oct. 25, a Senate election will be held (advance poll on Wed., Oct. 23). This manifests an opportunity for students to contribute to the pattern of growth that Queen's will assume in the years ahead. As that catalytic body responsible to the Board of Trustees the Senate, composed of 34 faculty members and 14 students, exerts its concern and influence in all matters pertaining to the well-being of the university community. Specifically, it considers:

- academic structure and program content: changes in a faculty, school, institution or department
- admission qualifications and degree requirements
- faculty appointments: procedure for hiring, promotion, tenure and leave
- service operations: libraries, computer access, STATLAB, housing and recreational facilities
- physical plant: the budget
- discipline: delineation and enforcement of standards of behaviour that preserve the community warmth and integrity of Queen's.

Current campus issues of personal priority:

- resolution of the acute housing problem
- increase in and redistribution of monies available to students through financial aid, both for grants and loans
- consolidation of the Ontario Federation of Students (OFS)
- student affinity: encouragement of extensive participation in the myriad of campus and greater Kingston activities

My qualifications:

Arts 74 year executive & ASUS rep, Soc DSC 70-71
Eng. DSC, Psych DSC & Curriculum Comm. 71-72
Psych DSC & Undergrad Comm.

72-73
Arts & Science Faculty Board rep (Social Sciences, Psych), Faculty Board Curriculum Comm. 73-74
Proposed: Senate (ASUS rep, 1 year term)

Senate Committee on Academic Development (SCAD) 74-75

I am now in my fifth year of persistent and active involvement in a decision-making capacity at Queen's. Having been a part-time student for the last 3 years, I am now enrolled full-time and will graduate in May, 75.

My community involvement has included work at Beechgrove (short-term regional assessment centre, KPH), the Birth Centre, VD & Abortion Centre, Collins Bay & Millhaven Penitentiaries (weekly, non-salaried participation), and as a volunteer probation officer with a juvenile offender for a 1-year court term ended August, 1974.

Sue Wishart (Economics 76)

One of the most frequent responses I have encountered since deciding to run for Senate has been "Good for you. By the way, what does the Senate do?" It's unfortunate that many Arts and Science students don't know very much about the Senate.

because its policy decisions have an important direct impact on the academic life of everyone at Queen's. Basically, the Senate is concerned with reaching policy decisions on academic development, admissions and financing for the university. One reason why many students are unfamiliar with these activities is that the Senate's operations are low-key, with the emphasis on getting things done rather than political grandstanding. It is the close cooperation between student and faculty members working for the good of the university community that makes the Senate a vital constructive force at Queen's. I want to be part of this cooperative effort.

I also want to work to improve communications between the Senate (especially student senators) and the rest of the campus. It's hardly fair to complain that students don't know or care about the Senate when they haven't been given the chance to find out about what it is doing and how this can affect them.

Much of the Senate's work is done in committees, where policy proposals are prepared for consideration. I am particularly interested in the activities of the committees on Academic Development and Appointment, Promotion, Tenure and Leave. As Journal news editor, I became aware of the importance of the Senate and interested in its activities. I believe that I can be most effective as a direct participant, and I ask you to give me that opportunity.

- Journal news editor 1973-4
- assistant national desk editor, Journal, 1972-3
- gael, Orientation 1973 & 1974
- co-ordinator academic pubs Orientation 1974
- intermediate field hockey team 1972, 1973

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT in our Lounge

THIS WEEK: Boojum

Amateur Night every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome In Our Lounge

One man's politics...

by Doug Bonnell

Internal Affairs Commissioner Ian Nordheimer has made a somewhat arbitrary decision in denying AMS financing to political clubs on campus. Nordheimer's reasoning is that political groups have sources of revenue outside the university and he is therefore most reluctant to monetarily support them then say, the chess club.

On the surface the argument sounds realistic, but further study reveals certain fallacies. In the political party system money seldom filters down, it moves upwards. For example, all proceeds from the sale of NDP memberships at the university move to Toronto where they are divided between the provincial and federal wings and the riding associations. Thus in many situations the NDP can offer only manpower and resource personnel and must lean away from events which require money. The Liberals and Conservatives are in a slightly better position having control over their own membership dues and monies raised in fund-raising projects. A three-party policy conference held last November cost the Conservatives twenty-five percent of their budget, and yet the event was offered as a service to students. The parties were given no financial support and not allowed to charge an entrance fee.

Mr. Nordheimer's view is misinformed but is, unfortunately, typical of the thoughts of a large number of students, many of whom see political parties as promoting their own self-interest and incapable of offering a service to Queen's.

Thursday's AMS meeting was the start of a bad night for Tony Wolman. It began with his poorly-received "State of the Union" address and ended when his Housing Report went down in flames.

The idea of a mid-term address is a good one. A general statement on policy and direction for student government and a report on the progress of the executive would have been helpful. It could have placed the existing political situation in perspective for the student body.

and have given Outer Council some idea of the direction the executive would be moving in for the remainder of their term. Wolman's remarks did neither.

His brief report on policy was too scanty and too pragmatic to be coherent. Wolman spoke of a mishmash of AMS activities but offered no understanding of the framework with which the executive has operated or the reasoning by which they opted for activity in some areas and ignored it in others.

Wolman also attempted to give social impact to his report by telling students, "If you don't know what you want from a university education, I recommend getting out." It may be an honest remark, but in a "State of the Union" address? It sounded more like a follow-up to a Morton Shulman lecture.

Finally, it is clearly obvious that the President has not come to grips with the parliamentary procedure followed by Outer Council. He continually breaks rules, speaking off topic or out of turn. At one point Mary Bloos, Speaker of the Outer Council called Wolman to order with the remark, "You should have attended my seminar" (on rules of order). Bloos was right.

It wasn't Tony's night, and I remember as I watched him that evening the thought went through my head, "The lights are on, but nobody's at home."

Opinion

by Dan Fruhling

Does the pot of gold actually lie at the summit of the yellow brick road? According to the 1974 version of the world, no. That is, not unless you're a doctor or a lawyer. The feeling generally shared by most students is that the only bread and butter courses are medicine, law and architecture. In 1973 and 1974 the students at Queen's seem to be more career oriented than at any earlier time. Gone are the times when a student didn't "mind sacrificing a course in the pursuit of eternal and nocturnal bliss for now, according to many professors, students are more serious and more studious than in years before. The chic courses of five years ago (art, music, English) are dropping noticeably in attraction while courses such as the life sciences, engineering, and commerce continue to grow in popularity. Even the prestigious Bachelor of Education has received calls due to surplus of teaching jobs. Interest in financially promising courses is demonstrated best by the demand and fight over spots in the medical faculty. In 1973 over thirteen students were competing for each of the seventy places open for first year students while in 1974 there were over twenty-one students fighting for each of the seventy-five spots, according to the Registrar. At the same time, demand for admission to art has gone down one percent in the last three years. Now, more often than not, freshmen enter college with firm ideas about what courses will prepare them for their chosen careers, careers that will provide them with greater self-expression and self-fulfilment as well as high salaries. In the largely populated classes (chemistry, biology, engineering and business administration) there is no goofing off and average marks have risen sharply. Inflation has contributed significantly to the students' newly sober attitude toward higher education. A year's average costs about $2,200, and parents dishing out money seem unwilling to have it go to waste on courses that run to dead ends, such as English, film studies etc. In order to have some money more students are looking for part time employment; common jobs include waiting on tables, mowing lawns, working nights in stores etc. Student interest in extra curricular activities is also suffering a noticeable decline. This year the previously successful Arts Festival is an unsure returnee because of insufficient student interest. Previously highly popular dances and football games along with other athletic and social extravaganzas have shown slight losses of troops. The student orientation toward jobs has even contributed to the campus comeback of beer and liquor, since many students feel that a drug arrest might ruin their chances of successful employment. They also find that inflation has hit the drug market. An ounce of marijuana costs as much as $27, up from $24 last year.

At a time when political futures are very fragile and insecure, more and more students are drawing off politics. The majority are in tune with the major political issues but a very small percentage is willing to get involved and an even smaller force is willing to act. Students are afraid to believe in anything, much less in anyone. Their main concern seems to be to enter public life as prepared as possible and to remain with the average flow. For many students there will be no yellow brick road, much less a pot of gold and for the others the future holds no more than a nugget.

W.U.S.C.

WUSC CRAFTS sales week: Oct. 22-26

- feature films from developing countries
- superb handicrafts (great for advance xmas shopping!)

Call the International Centre
547-2807

IVAN REBROFF

ONE WEEK ONLY
All records by Ivan Rebroff
$4.49 each at
HOUSE OF SOUNDS 277 Princess St.

Students' rites.

BLACK & WHITE
SPECIAL BLEND OF BUCHANAN'S
SCOTCH WHISKY
VIEUX SCOTCH WHISKY SELECTION
DISTILLED IN SCOTLAND
EMBOULETTE EN ECOSSE
JAMES BUCHANAN & CO. LTD LONDON
DISTILLERS
GLASGOW & LONDON
40% alc/vol.

Black & White.
Enjoyed in over 168 countries.

letters to the editor

Excursion service is hazardous

Dear Editor,

This is intended as an open letter to the AMS and all students at Queen's. I think it is important that they be made aware of the problems students are encountering with the bus service provided by the Queen's Excursion Club. This club is recognized by the AMS and operates on campus out of the John Orr Room, therefore, it would seem to me, it is not only within the jurisdiction of the AMS, but also it's duty to investigate the character service the club employ, Ventureways Bus Company.

It has become blatantly obvious that Ventureways is incapable of fulfilling the most basic responsibilities to its customers; i.e. safety and punctuality. The fiasco - of Thanksgiving weekend alone (although there have been other instances and not on holiday weekends) is sufficient to warrant a serious investigation as to whether or not the Excursion Club should continue to deal with Ventureways.

The following events were either experienced by me personally, or reported to me by other students. The buses leaving for Toronto on Thursday night left at 9:45 pm, not at 8: a delay of an hour and three-quarters. The bus-driver announced that the brakes "were funny" and that something was wrong with the radiator. We were further delayed at a service station along the 401 as the driver tried to decide whether the radiator would continue to function. He decided it would, but by this time several students were quite anxious. We arrived at Union Station at approximately 1:30 am. After originally being informed that we would arrive at around 11:00 pm. Several students were too late to make the last out-of-town connection. What they did, stranded overnight in Toronto, I don't know. Others of us were greeted by anxious parents who had been cooling their heels for 2½ hours.

The trip back to Kingston on Monday night represented the end of the rope for many of us. Things seemed to start out well when two buses arrived on time and departed without incident. Unfortunately almost half the students were left and this group waited for almost an hour before we glimpsed our bus failing to make the grade on York St. The other bus literally had to push it out from in front of Union Station to get it moving.

During the course of the trip our driver made the following remarks: "the transmission is ready to drop . . . there's half an inch of clutch left . . . I don't know how it (the bus) made it to Toronto . . . It's going to be scrapped when we get to Kingston."

Student: "Will we make it to Kingston?"

Driver: "If we get to the 401, we might."

Student: "Is this bus safe?"

Driver: pause "I don't like driving this bus."

Taking all this into consideration, along with the fact that we had not changed gears since leaving Union Station and the bus kept making alarming noises, it was the consensus of the students on the bus that we should call the O.P.P. to determine whether or not the bus should go on. We were concerned, not only with our own safety, but for the safety of other drivers on the road. We stopped for gas ten miles west of Belleville and the police met us there. On the basis of what we told them and after a conversation with the drivers, the officers called Elliot Motors in Belleville (who had leased this bus to Ventureways) and arranged for another bus to pick us up. We finally arrived home at about 1:30 am, tired and shaken.

A student bus service is an excellent idea and no one expects luxury for bargain prices. BUT a business simply must provide the service it advertises (on Thanksgiving or any other weekend). The incidents I have related, as well as those outlined in the letter in Friday's Journal show clearly that Ventureways is not such a company. I would strongly recommend that the AMS make arrangements with a more reliable charter service for the transportation of its students.

As for the travelling student: the next time you hazard a trip with the Queen's Excursion Club check two things: a) what time do they claim you will arrive in Toronto? and, most importantly, b) what bus company are they dealing with? If it is Ventureways, I recommend a boycott. Your safety and your time are worth more than the saving on a bus ticket.

Yours Sincerely,
Ann Crompton

Constables suggestive of fascism?

Dear Editor,

This is a reply to Paul Estey's article "Meet the big heat on campus" which appeared in THE JOURNAL on Friday October 18, 1974.

A fundamental fallacy in Estey's article is the assumption that there is a dichotomy between having the A.M.S. or the regular fuzz. I have spent a number of years at a university abroad where we have students' pubs and events just as Queen's has - yet we have no student police force and the regular fuzz has only very rarely to be called in. By rarely I mean not more than twice a year. And I have no reason to believe that my former university is in any way exceptional. They do have a student disciplinary system which is closely related with the Union Committee and which has the power to impose fines and suspensions from Union facilities - this seems quite adequate.

Estey seems to have three reasons in support of the A.M.S. fuzz. These reasons are as follows -

1) "Aesthetic value": "... isn't it much nicer to have a sweet young A.M.S. constable to look at rather than some buffoon that looks as if he's just been imported from Siberia." My replies to this are threefold. Firstly Estey is here begging the question. We can do without either the A.M.S. or the regular fuzz - if and only if things get out of control then cops (of either variety) can be called in. Secondly Estey implies that all Kingston cops are buffoons, whereas the A.M.S. are "sweet young things". Is this the true situation? All police are either fascists or buffoons or both and this includes the A.M.S. police. Thirdly Estey also seems to have something against Siberia. It is typical of fascists to be anti-communist although they do not even know what this means.

2) "The A.M.S. constables represent a considerable saving to Queen's." My reply to this should now be clear - is the A.M.S. fuzz cheaper than no fuzz?

3) Frisking at football games etc. To me this is the strongest justification for the A.M.S. fuzz because riotous football matches seem to me to be almost as odious as the fuzz. But it could be argued that frisking is not necessary. If people do not like being hit on the head by bottles then they should either stay at home, wear a crash-helmet, or themselves desist from throwing bottles and likewise discourage as many of their friends as possible. Perhaps many people go to football games simply for the "atmosphere" (i.e. for the sake of throwing

Continued on Page 9

Brock Macpherson

This fellow had a very unique way of expressing himself at the recent Homecoming football game...very interesting indeed!

Editorial

Wolman's speech fails

Tony Wolman, (President AMS) has decided that it is time for him to descend from the summits of Mount Olympus and speak the gospel 'The State of the Union' to all his children. After eight months in the presidential position, Wolman has seen the light - the key to 'What it's all about at University'. (There were some rustles and rather bored sighs heard in the gallery of the AMS meeting and no one appeared to be in too great anticipation for the coming words. However, Wolman poised himself and spoke.)

He sends down to us the message that the university is not the place to find out what one wants. Further that it is the administration's moral obligation to inform us that we are not all going to have a trade when we leave the university.

However, it is not the university's responsibility to teach the student how to live, but only to educate. It does not even purport to train him for a trade - only to educate his intellect so that he might apply his learning to whatever confronts him outside. It is the Community Colleges that supply the slot-holed trade and the University that cultivated the education.

It is the responsibility of the student to mould his education into something useful for himself - not that of the University. They provide the raw material we produce the goods.

The second half of Wolman's address is admittedly more profound. He is showing us all what a good honest politician he is and tells us just what the AMS has done and even what they haven't done.

However the speech failed to include the policy structure of the AMS under which all their ideas might fall. There is no mention of their political attitudes concerning issues directly related to the student. Issues such as housing, O.F.S. Senate and inter-faculty-student relations are of immediate importance. These are not considered, and further, no underlying direction of operation is outlined.

The address, although sincere, proved not to be the informative statement Wolman had hoped but rather emphasized his failure in being a viable leader of the AMS.

more letters

Continued from Page 8

bottles), but if it is made clear that football and flying bottles cannot co-exist then the more highly valued of these will survive. I mean that if people start throwing bottles then the football players ought to stop playing.

Estey asks us to remember that the A.M.S. fuzz are "just students like yourself who put on an armband." "I cannot forget this. I think it unethical that students should prostitute themselves to fascism by co-ercing their fellow students for money. Have the A.M.S. fuzz no moral feelings? Do they not recognize any sort of bond between students - let alone between students at the same university? To me the armbands would be more appropriate if the device they bore was a swastika, a foreigner

AMS lacks motivation, initiative

Dear Editor,

I would like to make a few comments on Kathy Turner's article in the ASUS Lictor, but a fortnight is a long time to wait. Kathy's views are well founded. The majority of students are not concerned, much less involved, in the guidance of university policies. This view, I am sure, is shared by the majority on Outer Council and is probably echoed in the hallowed Collins Room chamber of the Senate.

I'm equally convinced that there are many students who would like to make concrete contributions to life at Queen's. The problem lies in the fact that the initiative that must be taken in order to get oneself sufficiently well-briefed and actively involved in these areas of concern is considerable. Normally only those who become elected representatives of some body of students feel a moral commitment to take this initiative. (Even then its touch and go).

Many feel, and rightly so, that the adequate amount of time required to become a serious and participating influence in campus activities would make a considerable impact on their academics.

The only other avenue open to students to attempt change is organized protest, to which Queen's does not lend itself. Like the man said, "Queen's is the quiet campus". Thus it is left up to those people who decided that they wished some elected position.

Have you ever asked a candidate for some post why he or she wants the job and what specific directions they would like the body, to which they wish to be elected to take? Unfortunately all too often the answers are slow to come and evasive as he or she tries to remember what the position involves. Frequently the motivation is prestige or ego gratification. The money involved would motivate few, if any, even now with the honouraria all but certain to be increased.

Ego gratification would have to be recognized as the most frequent motivation for student politicians, whether admitted or unspoken. Too few really want to see new directions taken and a good job done.

Truthfully, Kathy, I don't know of any method of getting people to feel strongly enough to take the trouble to get involved. Until someone can come up with a method to accomplish this I envision the same degree of apathy and the same politicians doing the same job.

As long as there are a few good people in the administration of students affairs the situation will progress at the same rate of change although for many this may not be quickly enough.

As far as second year students as Vice-Presidents is concerned, I think you really have to look at the individual involved. John Gray is doing as good, if not better job than any student in any position (with a few exceptions). It would not make sense to say that perhaps he should have waited for a year or so before assuming the job. John's an individual of remarkable perception and sensitivity. His graduating year is irrelevant.

T Collins

The Big Cheese: Suz Sherkin	The Hired Cheese: JAC	More Mouldy Cheese: Anne, Jane, Steve
The Mouldy Cheese: T. Collins	The Blue Cheese: Val
The Little Cheese: M.D. McClelland	The Cule Cheeses: Rosemary and Jennifer	Sometimes Cheeses: Terry Hall, Tony Davis, Chris Davies, Paul Luke, Doug Hutchinson, Mike Cragen, Sandra Bernstein, John Edwards, Nancy Bowes, Ian Jarvis, Dave Colburn, Dan Fruhling, Jim LeMcusker
The Gaudy Cheese: Yarn	The Other Cule Cheeses: Les and Trish
The Holy Cheeses: Wend and Laur	The Cheeseheads: John Bol Tomley, F.U.D. K.B., Ernie, John, Peter, Ernie, Brock and Chuck, Peter Case
The Old Cheese: Ker, assisted by the young cheese, Pete

Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (613) 547-2806. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

COPING WITH ANXIETY

Most people feel anxious about some aspect of daily living. For college students there may be specific situations that lead to anxiety, such as taking tests, or speaking in front of groups. More generally, people often feel anxious in social situations and so find it difficult to develop satisfactory interpersonal relationships.

The Counselling Service is offering a programme to help people learn to cope more effectively with situations that cause them to become anxious, whatever these may be. If you would like more information please contact the secretary, Student Counselling Service, telephone 547-2893.

IF YOU'VE BEEN HEARING THAT A LOT OF GOOD PEOPLE HAVE JOINED THE ONTARIO PUBLIC SERVICE... YOU'VE BEEN HEARING RIGHT!

And good people are required for these jobs
*Administrative Trainees *Agriculture Specialists *Auditor Trainees *Biologists *Computer Systems Specialists *Correctional Officers *Economists *Engineers (Civil) *Environmental Officers (Engineering) *Foresters *Social Workers *Systems Development Officers

See your placement office for your copy of "Careers With the Ontario Public Service".

On Campus Interview Dates:
JANUARY 22/23
(Engineers-November 19/20)

*For most of these jobs, applications must be submitted to your placement office by DECEMBER 4, 1974.

For a preview of what the Ontario Public Service is all about, plan to attend on Information Session.

Date: October 28
Time: 12.30 p.m.
Place: Students' Union - McLaughlin Room

 Ontario Public Service

by Tony Davis

"There is no heaven nor glory bright, and no hell where sinners roast. Here and now is our day of torment! Here and now is our day of joy! Here and now is our opportunity! Choose ye this day, this hour, for no redeemer liveth!"

In verse such as this, and others like it, the followers of the Satanic Church of America proclaim their beliefs. When one hears the word Satanism, images come to mind of Black Masses, unspeakable orgies held in the dead of night and other various sordid details. In 1966 the Satanic Church was formed in San Francisco by the "Black Pope", Anton Szandor La Vey. His organization prefers not to deny any of the aforementioned accusations, as if to draw the curious flies to his web. Sensationalism in religion is no new feature: Spain's auto-de-fées and England's witch trials were all part of the fanaticism evoked by religious fervor.

La Vey himself reflects a demonic nature with his bald pate, beard and moustache. Let the fools think what they like. But beneath these cloaks of mystery lies one of the world's religions. Not witchcraft but a nature-worship - man's attachment and awe directed towards the earth, not to some other worldly manifestation. Nature mysticism thrived throughout man's history, if not in religion, then through the lines of poets, authors and philosophers. The devotees of the great god Baal copulated in the fields mimicking the fertility of the crops. Natural cycles - spring, summer, fall and winter - were re-enacted in man's worship. The devotionist love for nature has been best expressed by the long-condemned (and unjustly so) "philosopher", politician and author, the Marquis de Sade, who believed that there was no God, but a goddess, and She is Nature. She is a bountiful deity, with her lush fields and life-giving rain. But Nature can also be destructive with earthquakes, hurricanes and the like.

La Vey and his Satanic Church adopted the tenets and symbols of basic nature worship. They gather during the solstices and on "Walpurgisnacht" (Hallowe'en) and dance through the night and greet the new dawn.

The popularity and the publicity of this new cult rapidly led to the growth of the occult in terms of books, films, songs and other forms of media. High school students practiced Black Masses (a parody of the Catholic Mass instituted by dissatisfied clergymen a few centuries ago) and Manson-like killings became associated with the rise of Satanism in America. Clergymen rose up in protest with their hellfire and damnation speeches. Billy Graham went on national television to castigate those wheed in demons. On this fundamental, popular Satanism appeared as a simple new thrill. Higher level, the soi-disant Satanists indulged in own speculative philosophy and newly-relied religious rites.

Of course is the philosophy which La Vey himself stated as a model for the aspiring Satanist book, "The Satanic Bible", a best-seller, of his views. Subdivided into four parts, that of Lucifer, Leviathan, Belial and Satan, "Satanic Bible" acts as a doctrine for the Satanist. No creed must be accepted upon authority, but nature. Religions must be put to question. Moral dogma must be taken for granted. A yardstick of measurement defied. There is no inherently sacred moral codes. Like the idols of long ago, they are the work of human hands and what man has made, man can destroy.

La Vey's indictments - appear in one section, "Book of Satan". More here than in any other part. "The Satanic Bible" is the Satanic nature and revealed. La Vey has brought together a sort of religious notions to composition. Ancient spells from medieval grimoires (of black magic), Slavic and Germanic and other various liturgies make up his "Bible".

La Vey presents himself as a prophet who is going to lead the masses out of their ignorance and superstition. Satanism represents a vital force and seeks to create a vital world in which only the strong survive. La Vey condemns the trappings of civilization as its shallow veneer for entombing man in decay. Man has been removed from nature and brought back with the light of Satanism. "The church translated means 'light-bringer'. Satanism has given man false hopes. A religion itself doesn't escape his criticism. The church has tended to place men's minds away from earth and nature where they belong. It is to be made manifest on the earth. Only man and religion have blinded man from his destiny. Church-goers are compared to sheep and weak. And the lambs of God are being slaughtered.

Natural Darwinism is to be found in Satanism. Only the strong survive while the weak are weeded out and destroyed. Such has been the nature throughout history. Man's works both with and against him. The Satanist is self-sufficient and self-reliant, needing no physical crutch to maintain himself. He is away from all conventions that do not lead to earthly success and happiness. "Conventional laws and moral dogma which once held sway have lost their relevance today. Within himself and within Satanism, man can only find success and worth. Satanism is ego-based the self matters, all else is inconsequential. As a worldly, vital philosophy or religion, Satanism defies notions of abstinence and sterility. Satanism pride leads to indulgence and fertility. Life should be enjoyed to the fullest. The Satanist is "death-defiant"; paradise is here on earth. Man should not fear about the future. Fear means weakness and there is no place for weakness in Satanism.

Satan Lives!

"Too long the dead hand has been permitted to sterilize the living thought." "Living thought" is the Satanic philosophy as expounded by La Vey. The notion of man obeying the words written by some "dead hand" of long ago has no application for today. Living prophets have a greater worth than dead ones.

The Satanist heralds in the new age with celebration, somewhat akin to the vitality shown by ancient nature-worshippers in man's past. The Satanist prides himself in his virility; sex in all forms is a necessary good. To recreate means the continuation of a lineage, hopefully one well-versed in Satanism. Man is continually striving against nature and his fellow man; this concept is an oft-repeated and essential part of Satanism.

Notions about what is right and wrong and what is good and bad have been defined in moral terms. "But whose morality?" questions the Satanist. It is not within man's prerogative to judge such problems. By simply existing in this world, man comes to judge for himself what standards are worth keeping or discarding. The Satanist attempts to raise himself above the crowd, to stand out and find a place in nature. Such an existence however, is not one continuous struggle as "the eternal flame of power through joy dwellth within the flesh of the Satanist."

Fulfillment of the flesh and spirit is made manifest by the Satanist's efforts to be his own redeemer. Only individual men can recognize their own inherent qualities. Action, not passivity, is necessary. The individual is the principle motif in La Vey's work; pride being a virtue, not a vice. In one of his diatribes, La Vey relates the Satanic "blesseds": "Blessed are the strong, blessed are the powerful, blessed are the bold, blessed are the victorious" and so on. To preserve its hold over its followers, religion has evoked divine power to impress itself upon the faithful. Satanism makes no claims to supernatural force. The hold Satanism has over its followers derives from the vitality and simplicity of its philosophy.

Satanic beliefs tend to become a moral rearmament in the face of uncertainty. Because of its liberal connotations, Satanism is amenable to change to suit individual needs. "As environments change, no human ideal stands sure." Ideals of perfection, salvation and resurrection are orientations which La Vey believes cannot give man security and peace of mind, as every new personal crisis demands an immediate solution.

The Satanist is concerned with truth. La Vey writes about popular and privileged lies. Lies which have their basis in society and have built for themselves a kind of false truth. For example, the office of the American president was often thought to be sacred, or the notion of the "American dream". These have been proven falsehoods and no matter what their stature, they should be exterminated, "root and branch".

Violence is recognized by La Vey as a necessary and integral part of life. It cannot be fully repressed. The stifling of hatred can only lead to something worse. Violence and force is to be channelled, not abused. The concept of "survival of the fittest" can only be applied where man is willing to create a place for himself regardless of consequences. That is not to say that the Satanist indulges in brutality, but rather that he has no fear of applying violence if such is a necessary recourse. And the Satanist, full of pride, can state "Have I not delivered MYSELF by my own brain and body?"

Satanists speak not of 1974 A.D., but 8 A.S. "Anno Satanas". Nowadays there are Satanic baptisms, marriages and other pseudo-ritualistic functions. There is always a danger that popular - sensationalist Satanism will come to the fore, largely through exploitation from the mass media and from religious spokesmen, and the philosophic content of La Vey will be left behind. In such a case, persecution would eventually arise and reactionaries will scream with righteous indignation. While the press reports supposed exposes of Satanic depravity, the whole basis of Satanism is ignored. As I have hopefully attempted to illustrate, Satanism is more than crude sensationalism; it evolves concepts of the self-oriented individual, reveling in his own strength and in the natural benefits made manifest here on earth by his own actions.

"The chief duty of every new age is to upraise new men, to determine its liberties, to lead it towards material success - to rend the rusty padlocks and chains of dead custom that always prevent healthy expansion."

The Satanic Bible is available in paperback from Avon Publishers, a division of the Hearst Corporation, for $5c.

A.M.S. PAGE

Darts and Laurels for KT

The Public Utilities Commission deserves to be complimented on the new bus signs which they have been erecting this week. The sign tells you the name and number of the bus route, and the times at which the bus arrives at the stop. On a cold afternoon in January this kind of information is invaluable as it can save you from freezing your buns off while waiting for a bus which isn't due for another 29 minutes. Thank you P.U.C.

As you may have read in the Journal last week, the P.U.C. has allotted only 100 of its bus route map and schedule for distribution on campus. The remaining 4,900 which were printed are to be distributed around Kingston, one per household. There are a lot of students who will never see one under this arrangement. Since the P.U.C. has received about $60,000 from us for Bus-It, it seems only fair that a few more copies of the route map could be made available on campus. But now that they have our money, perhaps the P.U.C. would be just as happy if we didn't ride their buses.

If you have trouble finding a copy of "Katy's Guide to Kingston", why don't you phone 546-1181 and ask Mr. Fee to send you one.

-Craig Miller

Have Fun in the Hay The United Way Hayride Friday, Oct. 25

- 7:20 p.m. - ferry to Wolfe Island
- Hayride to marshmallow roast
- Ferry back at 10:00 p.m. and 10:40 p.m.

Tickets:

Wednesday and Thursday in John Orr Room

Arts Festival '75

Anyone interested in helping,
Please come to meeting tonight in 3rd Floor Common Room,
Students' Union

Information Bank General Staff Meeting

Thursday, October 24
8:00 pm.
John Orr Room

OPT OUTS

For the Specific Fees Collected for:

TRICOLOR $4.00
AND
CONCERTS $3.00

Will Be available in the AMS office starting
Monday, October 28
to
Friday, November 1
Students wishing to opt out must bring their student cards with them

Who's Where

Students with pale-blue students cards who have not picked up their copy of Who's Where may do so at Info Bank this week. McArthur students can obtain a copy from their student council. Students without blue cards and faculty may obtain a copy for $1.25 from the AMS office. University departments are reminded that they can get copies from Stationery Stores only.

A.M.S. Education Commission presents

Dr. Aurelio Peccei

President, Club of Rome,
Italian Industrialist and Author

Wednesday, Oct. 30

8:00 p.m.

Ellis Auditorium

We Need
Some Heat!

Thanks To You It's Working
Donations Still Accepted At Our Booths

Brown bag lunch with Agnes E.

by Peter Haworth
Last Thursday the Agnes Etherington Art Centre presented the first in a series of 'brown bag lunches' with Mary Rawlyk who is currently showing an exhibit of prints at the Art Centre. 'Brown bag lunches' offer people a chance to listen to an artist during lunch time in a casual atmosphere while they munch on sandwiches and sip free coffee. Everyone is invited to wander in and sit on chairs or on the floor just inside the Art Centre main door to hear a short talk from an interesting person within the arts.

At this brown bag lunch, Mary Rawlyk spoke about her specialty, print-making. She described the various types of prints from simple relief prints to lithographs and etchings, giving us a general idea of the procedures, effects, and possibilities that each type of print-making possesses. She explained the technique of etchings in particular detail, since her exhibition at Agnes consists entirely of etchings. We learned of the simplicity of making etchings, and of Rawlyk's creativity and deftness in exploring various techniques of etchings by producing prints from the fabric of a nylon shirt, autumn leaves, and scratches from a comb.

The prints on exhibition are quite interesting; each print consists of an etching of white lines on a black background and an appropriate colour object that is related to the etching. In one case the etching is of autumn leaves, while above hangs a rake poised on a white background. Unfortunately, the prints have an incongruent character to them which only occasionally has Rawlyk overcome. The objects are estranged from the etchings, because the etching is enclosed in its black background, and Rawlyk uses colourful objects in contrast to the black and white etchings. Rawlyk has united some prints with contact between object and etching, but the majority of prints are disjointed. Rawlyk has concentrated entirely on this type of print in her exhibition, and so we are deprived of seeing the full extent of her originality.

However, the brown bag lunch and exhibition proved an invaluable insight to print-making.

Rebroff to perform Russian folk music

Wednesday evening promises to be an exciting time at the Grand Theatre. Ivan Redroff, a Russian Bass will present a programme consisting of Russian folk songs and serious music.

Redroff was born in Berlin of Russian parents who had fled to Germany at the time of the Revolution. His mother, a non-professional singer, passed her love of the beautiful Russian folk songs on to her young son, and encouraged him in his musical studies at the Hamburg Music School. He began as a soloist with the Black Sea Cossack Chorus and moved quickly to a small German Opera company and then to the distinguished Frankfurt Opera Company. After winning numerous competitions and releasing a record he became known internationally and was sought for radio, television and concert engagements.

Besides Russian, this talented performer speaks English, German, French and Greek, capturing crowds with his multi-lingual charm. Critics have acclaimed him: "He has a wonderful presence, an amazing range of mimicry, an amusingly warm way with his introductions (in four languages, yet!) and an impressive repertoire." (Toronto Star) "When Redroff walked on stage, he dominated everything. The man has a fantastic voice with a range from soprano to basso and he lets you know that he has complete control over it." (The Sun, Vancouver)

A comment Redroff himself has made seems to express completely his warm personality and his sense of his own skill: "My four-and-a-half octaves...truly a gift from heaven, you could say a kind of knapsack for life. I would like to remind you of the great Walter Felsenstein, who once remarked, 'There are two kinds of singers, those who discharge sounds and those who are artists!' I have tried all my life, ladies and gentlemen, to be an artist."

Ivan Redroff's concert is at the Grand Theatre at 8:30 p.m. on Wednesday, October 23; tickets are available at the box office.

Chronicles XXIV

A play that's no fun is useless. I like playing only with my friends. To make no enemies, to have no fun, is against the spirit of play. I play only for now, this present moment. The friends I make playing now might last forever: -enemies are no fun. What we build is, more than what we build.

Cue for Treason in the Studio Theatre (Rm 102), Tuesday October 22 (tonight!) to Friday October 25. Tickets are free and are available at the Drama Desk, 547-6291.

A scene from Domino Theatre's forthcoming presentation 6 Rms Riv Vu by Bob Randall. The play opens on October 24.

10,000 STUDENTS READ
THE JOURNAL TWICE WEEKLY
ADVERTISE IN THE

Queens
Journal

W.R.C.
Candle lighting '74

Wednesday Oct. 23

Grant Hall

8 pm

guest speaker:

Lily Inglis

Human Sexuality

sponsored by the AMS

and

The Birth Control Centre

Tuesday, 9:00 pm
Dupuis Auditorium

This week:
Contraception and V.D.

change of course?

We've got a program for you that could change the course of your whole future - successfully.

It's called our Sales & Marketing Management Program, and it's for graduates who want the most out of their career and have the drive to earn it.

To find out more fill in the coupon below or talk to your Campus Recruitment Officer about an interview.

The Canada Life Assurance Company

The Canada Life Assurance Company
330 University Avenue, Toronto, Ontario M5G 1R8

Send me more information about your Sales & Marketing Management Program

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

COURSE _____
(Include resume if available)

Dissent over Reed concert

john bottomley

john bottomley

Reed's rock 'n' roll romp

by Paul Lake

Lou Reed dispelled any fears that he might have deteriorated into an overrated relic, another bland, sterile legend. His concert Sunday night was a complete triumph, an uncompromised penetration of the raw vitals of rock music. It is unimportant if his music frequently passes by sympathy and keen intuition for gibbous and sensationalism. What is important is that Reed can summon forth the necessary combination of high energy and outrageous lyrical impudence which makes attending rock concerts still worthwhile. Lou Reed's music won't save the world, his music will just give a little more clarity and a lot more unerring immediacy to some of the stranger walks of life.

The opening act, Darryl Hall and John Oates were generally dismal. It doesn't take a hell of a lot of talent to get a double forte when you're playing at one hundred and thirty decibels. Dynamics to these guys is less a matter of nuance and more a case of aural rape. Things weren't improved much by treats like the keyboard men's mindless ascending and descending white note drags which suggested that one or both of them had lost motor control in the left hand and had a couple of dead fingers in the right. Only in "Seventy Scenario" did they achieve a decent lyric and replace morose excessive six string attacks with a somewhat more subdued barrage, which was more kosher than evangelistic. Darryl Hall and John Oates would be a good pick-up band for Edgar Winter when he's too wrecked to be discriminating.

By contrast Lou Reed's first class backup band worked up to a respectable and fluid intensity within minutes after taking the stage. Reed soon swaggered on to sing an excellent version of "Sweet Jane" whose throb and bite belied its age. Reed's voice is a somewhat mutated progeny of Bob Dylan. His vocals lack the venom of the latter but replace it with a kind of insolent, mocking leer. Reed has however inherited Dylan's sense of vocal dramatics, which renders a command of traditional technique unessential. Equally important Reed has cultivated an eccentric and engaging stage presence, one that is a mixture of familiar punk posturings with a hint of something sexually bizarre. His frantic manner seems to be a composite of Tina Turner, Elvis Presley and George Wallace.

Reed's selection of numbers included a redressing of older standbys and a sampling of his recent album. "Sister Ray" was tense and incisive, blessed with a scorching guitar solo. "Walk on the Wild Side" initially dragged with a noodling bass solo but quickly recovered. "N.Y. Stars" was noteworthy for its churning guitar-clavinet texture which highlighted Reed's chopped, bitten off vocals. The band throughout was consistently musical, seasoning things with unexpected little organ romps as in "Walk on the Wild Side" and terse, spine-tingling punctuations by the guitar. The ever-grinning drummer smacked things along nicely, particularly in "White Light, White Heat" where he and the guitarist prodded the song with a fervour which was at once precise and abandoned.

"Heroin" was arguably the highpoint of the concert. A delicate organ alternated with crashing chords as Reed attacked the words all the while running anxious, unquiet hands up and down his emaciated torso. The stunning realization of this song redeemed Reed from revelling in a really dumb lyric about animal cruelty in "Animal Language".

Superlatives are at best reacherous aids for a reviewer. Today's best concerts are all too quickly surpassed by tomorrow's. Suffice it to say that that gaunt homosexual facsimile called Lou Reed is one of the superior talents around at the present time.

john bottomley

"What's the point?"

by Doug Hutchinson

Lou Reed pranced into the arena on Sunday night. When he pranced off stage, I asked myself "What's the point?" His band was very good, the show had its high points, but Lou Reed on stage is almost superfluous. He simply cannot sing, he has no musical ability, and his stage presence is nothing but ludicrous. Were it not for the fact that he wrote all the songs and he headlined the show, he should not have been there.

There were two exceptions. His "Heroin" was a fabulous success with his snakecharmer voice and his junkie movement - a masterful concert performance. "Walk on the Wild Side" also benefited from his unique style - it is hard to imagine anyone else doing this song successfully - and though it suffered from the lack of a tenor sax at the end, it succeeded well on stage. His band was very tight throughout and all contributed excellent performances. Mostly it was straight ahead rock and roll, with few frills, the classic three chord progression, but it was executed with a skill that the genre usually doesn't attract.

A case in point is the warm up band. Although their press release tried to claim that they're doing something significant, and at times their music was dreadfully pretentious, they played the same brand of rock and roll, though with a cruel lack of skill.

At one point we were subjected to an execrable guitar solo and once a song was introduced as a "comment on the modern scene, uh, as we see it." Furthermore they had problems with their equipment and held up the show. It wasn't worth it.

People apparently had varied reactions to Lou Reed. At one point in the middle of the show, some people were storming the stage, some were standing, most were sitting and there was a steady stream to the exit.

Hopefully, most people didn't come with high expectations; I didn't and I was pleasantly surprised, not by Lou Reed, but by the honest rock 'n' roll I haven't heard in such a long time.

Hasek captivates audience at Bitter Grounds

by Chris Davies

Though diminutive in physical stature Michal Hasek loomed very large on the stage of Bitter Grounds this past Homecoming weekend. In its own right it was a triumphant year old Toronto native who played here two years ago. Hasek has been on the professional music scene for the past eight years after two years in Chemistry at Western University. Working primarily out of Toronto, he has his own band (Sundog) and record company (Naja). The financial nature of the engagement would not permit him to bring his band with him yet I am sure that no one missed them as his show was so fluid.

The first thing which struck me was how easy it was to listen to him. There was absolutely nothing harsh about his actions, presentation or playing. One could not help but sense his professional ability, and one began to appreciate him all the more when another Toronto musician took the spotlight during a break time Rob Uddell buried the audience in sloppy guitar work, babbled nonsense in between songs and had a stage presence which totally alienated him from the audience. The redeeming feature of his brief appearance was a medley of Bruce Cockburn and of all things, King Crimson material.

The audience saw many faces of Hasek on Saturday night. He could be all powerful as in "Who's That Chasing" or treat a David Wiffen tune "More Often than Not" with grace and honesty. Being a genuine technician on the guitar, he time and again dazzled everyone with his excellence, his finest example being heard in the guitar instrumental "Naja". Although he borrowed the blues of Lonnie Johnson or the wit and humour of James Cotton, there was nonetheless a definite Dylan influence in his material. Even discounting the fact that he utilized the harmonica, his singing style bore a striking resemblance to that of Bob Dylan.

Calling on "the house" four or five times to sing with him, he met with a rather touching and beautiful response. As he said, "it seems everyone was here to get off" and so it was. Coming back for a fitting and well deserved encore he finished with "Sometimes It All Seems...too short". I could have listened to him for the duration of Sunday morning.

RACKETS RESTRUNG

for fast and guaranteed service

Brown's Racket Restringing Service

546-6429

ASUS ORIENTATION COMMITTEE

Applications now available in ASUS Office, Mackintosh-Corby B105 (547-3069)

Deadline for submission of applications is Friday, October 25, 12 noon at ASUS Office.

For further information call 547-3069 or 544-8583

Davy Real Estate

Wanted: Part time

maintenance
handyman.

Required immediately.

Phone 546-2256
ask for Mrs. Teaford
or Mr. Davy

If you'd like to know about us,
We'd like to know about you!

Meet us on campus
November 7 and 8.

CANADIAN IMPERIAL
BANK OF COMMERCE

Journal Offices (Student's Union, Basement)

Rugby team moves on

Last Saturday the Queen's Rugby Club defeated the Western U team in London. This win gives the first team a 5 to 0 record for the season thus far.

It was clear that both teams were ready for what turned out to be a very brutal game. Queen's scored first with a penalty kick by Peter Kopp. Later in the game, a Queen's player made a late tackle which gave the Western team their first points on the penalty kick. After a strong break down the centre, Reid Dury passed the ball to David Bowker who beat his opponent to the corner and scored. Peter Kopp bounced a difficult kick off the posts to score the convert. Moments later Kopp scored and kicked another convert which bounced off the post and luckily went through. Close to the end of the half, Queen's were threatening on the one yard line but Western was saved by the half time whistle. The score at the half was 12 to 3.

The factor that won the game for the Gaels was the ability of the forwards to maintain control of the ball. They were winning most of the lineouts. Richard Thomas kicked a good "up and under" and then brought down the opponent before he could get rid of it, which almost turned into a try. Kopp kicked another penalty to make the score 12 to 3.

Later Bowker made a long run and was forced out on the one yard line. Terry Graham picked the ball from the scrum, made a dummy move to the outside and dove over to score. It was converted to make the score 21 to 3.

In a strong comeback attempt, Paul Clarke for Western, made a long run to score. It was converted to make the final score of the game 24 to 9.

The Seconds played a much closer game with the Western team with the final score coming

Good performance by Track and field teams

This past weekend there was a track and field meet held in Toronto for both the Queen's Men's OUA and the women's OWIAA with Queen's teams able to put on a good performance.

The Women's team was able to finish fourth in the overall standings with 33 points. McMaster topped the meet with 86 points. Pam Scottorn's performance was good enough to place in all three field events, winning the javelin with a throw of 39.90 metres, and finishing third in both shotput and discus throw. Sprinter Mary Ann Drinkwater placed first for a gold medal with a long jump leap of 1.58 metres.

The Queen's Men's team put on a strong showing as the team was able to place a solid second amongst the eleven schools that participated. Queen's with 101 points behind first place U of T but well ahead of third place McMaster with 57 points.

There were many displays of individual accomplishments from the team. Vic Gooding won both the 100 and 200 metre events, with excellent times of 10.9 seconds and 20 seconds both near record runnings. Joe Austin set a Queen's record in the discus throw with a toss of 44.27 metres. Austin also finished fifth in javelin, while team mate Peter Khignesse's toss of 56.36 metres was good enough for second place in the same event. The shotput event was won with a toss of 14.29 metres by Kevin Thompson who was also third in discus. Team Capt. Mark MacAuley set a personal record of 55.3 seconds and placed second in the 400 metres hurdle, while cross-country Capt. Bill Bryden placed fourth in the 3000 metres steeple chase setting a new Queen's record of 9 min., 1.4 sec.

The Queen's mens team showed a good form throughout the meet, scoring both in field and track. This concludes the fall track season for this year while indoor track begins in January.

There were many displays of

Hockey Gals split series

by Kathy Keely

The women's field hockey teams have been very busy this past week. They hosted two teams from St. Lawrence University to a series of exhibition games on Wednesday. Each year games are arranged with this school from New York State and this year it ended one win and one loss apiece.

The Queen's Seniors lost 3-2 to the St. Lawrence Seniors. The Queen's team had run into several injury problems so their ranks had to be filled by intermediate players. Lyn Atwood and Carolyn Broadhurst kindly consented to perform double-duty in playing for both Queen's teams. Broadhurst provided some scoring punch for the Senior while Les Ferrari added another goal. The team was experimenting with a new system of play which caused a few initial problems. However with another week of practice, things could be looking good for the OWIAA championships.

The intermediates came up with a 2-1 win by virtue of goals by Lyn Atwood and Betty Dickie. This team is playing hard and beginning to perform as a team. They travelled to Bishop's University on the weekend to play in an invitational tournament. Despite cramped travelling facilities, freezing temperatures and a degassed pitch, they came home with one win and two losses. The slick surface of mud lead to some fine acrobatic feats, but did not help the ball slide into the net as they managed only 2 goals in 3 games.

The first loss was to Bishop's, 1-0 but then they went on to beat John Abbott, a CEGEP from Montreal, by a score of 2-1. Betty Dickie potted both goals for Queen's. The last game proved to be another 1-0 loss; this time to the St. Lambert Selects which is an all-star city league team. Throughout the tournament team spirit was great and team play ever improving. Both of the losses could have been wins as several key scoring opportunities were missed.

That rounds up the exhibition games and tournaments for this season. The two remaining weekends decide the OWIAA field hockey championships. Queen's is fortunate enough to be hosting Part I of this event next weekend. There will be some fine field hockey to watch on Friday Oct. 25 and Saturday Oct. 26, on the Lower Campus field and the field behind Vic Hall. Both Queen's teams will be competing so please come out and give them your support!

FINLAY'S SPORT SHOP

This year's selection of Fischer Skis is now in. Come in and see the new Attack, Swiftly and Futura Skis.

Free "tips up" poster with purchase at any ski equipment over $5.00

Sport Socks - Wigwam reg. $2.00 only .79¢

While supplies last: Hockey Sticks $1.00 off

PRAY FOR SNOW - WE ARE

The Queen's Journal, Tuesday, Oct. 22, 1974

FLYING HOME AT XMAS
Be sure ..... RESERVE NOW!
GRANT'S TRAVEL SERVICE
127 Princess St. Est. 1954 546-5584
"The Studenttravel Professionals"

UNIVERSITY OF OSLO INTERNATIONAL SUMMER SCHOOL
OSLO, NORWAY

June 28 to August 8, 1975
UNDERGRADUATE AND GRADUATE COURSES
International Student Body!

For catalog write to:
Oslo Summer School Admissions
c/o St. Olaf College
Northfield, Mn. 55057
Two years college required

ACADEMIC RESEARCH LIBRARY

Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date, 176 page, mail order catalog of 5500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage (1-2 days delivery time).
519 GLENROCK AVE.
SUITE #203
LOS ANGELES, CA. 90024
Our materials are sold for research purposes only

... THERE'S MORE TO A DIAMOND THAN DAZZLE

True diamond quality is determined by four factors. CARAT weight... which denotes size and not the quality of the diamond. CUT... brings out the fire and sparkle. COLOR... captures the spectrum of the rainbow. AND CLARITY. We'll be happy to explain all these factors... come "C" for yourself.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

The Queen's Journal, Tuesday, Oct. 22, 1974

Gaels no match for undefeated Blues

by Jim LeMesurier

The University of Toronto Varsity Blues matched an awesome running attack with a devastating aerial assault to easily defeat the Golden Gaels 38-20 before close to 9,000 Queen's Homecoming fans, Saturday. U of T's balance and power kept them in clear control through all but the opening stages of the game while their impressive statistical edge was evidenced in all departments. The Blues amassed over 600 yards, with an even 321 on the ground and 288 through the airways as compared to Queen's 205 total yards. The win leaves undefeated Toronto in undisputed supremacy over the OUA East Division, and erases the Gaels' previously slim hopes of reaching the 1974 playoffs.

The Gaels opening kick-off gave Varsity possession, in the shadow of their own goal posts, where the Blues offense had trouble moving the ball and were forced to keep setting the Gaels up with good field position inside midfield. Queen's were also having trouble offensively, but Darrel Penner found some key blocks to break a punt return for a 70 yard TD and end the see-saw action at 9:28. Will Kennedy was wide with his convert attempt, leaving the score at 6-0.

The Gaels insertion of an extra linebacker in place of a deeper back seemed to be working well against the U of T running game but when quarterback Dave Langley started throwing against the four remaining defensive halves, the Blues started to move and quickly established their offensive superiority. Langley's favourite target, wide receiver Mark Ackley brought in 10 of the 12 passes thrown his way for 162 yards as he repeatedly burned both zone and man-on-man coverage.

Working from his 42, Langley, who was good on 14 to 20 for the afternoon in passing, directed his team down-field and onto the scoreboard in just 5 plays. Rookie sensation, half-back, Mark Bragagnolo picked up an Argo bounce after fumbling the ball on a sweep and took it into the endzone at 11:41. Don Wright's convert gave Toronto a 7-6 lead and the Blues offensive problems were gone for good.

The same could not be said for Queen's who were unable to make a first down in the opening 20 minutes. This lack of offensive punch soon told on the hard pressed defensive crew. Bill McIver's interception and Alex Morris' fumble recovery momentarily halted varsity but it was not enough to keep the Blues from posting two more majors before the half for a commanding 21-6 lead.

The third quarter saw the game's most polished action, with the teams combining for three consecutive scoring drives. Midway through the quarter U of T put the game further out of reach, at 28-7, with a 90 yard touchdown march but Queen's rallied for a 75 yard scoring advance, aided by a 31 yard Serebrin to Pollock completion and climaxed by a 5 yard off-tackle plunge by Dave Hadden.

The Blues then made it 35-14 after going 67 yards on four rushes and four passes to Ackley, whose final one of 10 yards counted six points.

The cold temperatures began to show their effects in the final period when U of T barely managed a field goal by Wright. Queen's were unable to do much before Ian Anderson's interception deep in the Toronto end set up 'the Beast's' one yard major with just 32 seconds remaining in the game.

The score of 38-20 is in no way disgraceful against a team as good as U of T and it is to the Gaels credit that they played well against overwhelming odds. Next week, the hapless Guelph Gryphons are in town for an anti-climatic finish which the Gaels should be able to take with a reasonable effort.

Wic-ly

by Barbara McDermott

All female students of Queen's University are informally invited to come out to SKATATHON. Any number of laps on any of the nights will earn you five participation points towards your Intramural Queen's mug, Queen's bookends, or silver tray award. If you skate the highest number of laps over the three nights, you will earn a pennant award and 1,000 points for your faculty towards the "Marion Ross Trophy". So girls, come out and skate on Wednesday Oct. 23, 30, and Nov. 6, 7:00-8:20 pm. Jack Hardy Arena. No experience is needed - instruction in skating will be given. There is no closing entry date so come on out, and by the way girls, you are welcome to bring guys for morale support.

FLAG FOOTBALL is now finished - there were some problems of scheduling due to the weather, but all who came out had a good time. Phone and arrange your tennis matches now - Kingston weather can't hold out forever!

Girls! Come on down to the Phys. Ed center for the one remaining fun filled evening of BADMINTON. In the Ross and Bartlett Gyms Oct. 24 9:00-11:00 pm.

To all WIC PADDLEBALL players: From now on the tournament will be self-run. You must phone your opponent and reserve your own court. Please fill in game results on the tourney schedule posted on the bulletin board beside the paddleball courts.

Are you interested in convening a Winter Term Activity? Fill out an application form (to be found in the Women's locker room) and place in the Green WIC box.

Who's Where

If you haven't picked-up your Who's Where yet, you can still get it at the John Orr Room.

Gael's halfback Peter McNabb (22) eludes flying Varsity linebacker Nick Desimini (34) with QB Roald Serebrin (19) looking on.

Bite the one you love

STEAK & STUFF
LICENCED DINING ROOM 1399 Princess (near the station)
AUNT LUCY'S RESTAURANTS LTD.

See All The New Programs This Year With 11 Channels to Choose From On...

cable tv
544-6311

Are you or your group doing something you would like others to know about?

Tell Us...

USE OUR BULLETIN BOARD

Cable Cast TV 13

Additional Outlets Are Available For Television or Stereo For 1.25 Month

No additional connection charge if ordered at time of initial installation.

cable tv
544-6311

Arabs invest oil money

TORONTO - The Arab states are beginning to invest the money earned through increasing the oil prices. The Middle East oil producing countries, since they banded together last winter, have tripled the price of their oil. It has been estimated by the end of the year they will have accumulated $60 billion in surplus cash. Billions of dollars have already been invested in the United States and Europe, and it is now estimated that $1 billion of the Arab oil revenue has flowed into Canada. However, the amount of money invested has been difficult to state accurately because the Arab oil producers tend to use intermediaries to invest their money. They have concentrated on short-term bank investments, on bond financing and on real estate.

Canadian investors are

Psych crest contest

All you can drink - and it's all on us - if you are the winner of the Psychology Crest Contest! Put your mind to work - be creative and psych out the campus. Leave your special design at the Psychology office on second floor Humphrey and remember to sign it and include your phone number. The contest ends Nov. 7. We will contact the winner so that he/she can be the guest of honour at our first Psych Smoke Nov. 14 - or should we say prize drunk? For non-drinking contestants I'm sure we can award you just as appropriately.

US aids soviet jewish emigration

WASHINGTON - The Soviet Union has agreed to ease its restriction on Russian Jewish emigration in exchange for trade concessions from the United States. Russia will end the harassment of the Jewish people and will allow a minimum of 60,000 people a year to emigrate. Last year only 35,000 people emigrated. In return for easing the restrictions United States will lower tariffs to the Soviet Union and other Communist countries, including China. Under the agreement the President can permit trade concessions to these nations, if he determines that they have no unreasonable restriction on emigration of their own citizens. After eighteen months the President would have to go to Congress for a year-by-year extension under an arrangement allowing either the House of Senate to veto the extension of the waiver if it feels the Soviet Union is not abiding by the understanding.

The agreement leaves the way clear for the "over-all" trade bill. The bill not only suggested the lowering on tariff-goods but authorised the Administration to begin international conferences aimed at freer world trade.

Palestinians seek new and independent state

BEIRUT - The Soviet Union and Egypt have agreed to support the creation of a Palestinian state as a requirement for Middle-East peace. The Palestine Liberation Organization is negotiating for the right to set up an independent state on the west bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza strip Israel occupied both stripes of land during the 1967 war.

The Palestine guerilla movement is restructuring its ranks in preparation for the event of independence. The headstrong terrorists are being intimidated or eliminated and left-wing extremists neutralized. They have become rather an embarrassing liability to the moderate mainstream of the movement and to their leader Yasser Arafat. The once useful radicals, now victims, were those men responsible for the Palestinian overseas attacks on passenger planes, embassies, and other foreign targets. The renegade attacks against neutral targets will be stopped. However the PLO guerillas intend to intensify operations inside Israel and to occupy territory. Yasser Arafat and other leaders hold that these attacks are essential for them to maintain their fighting credibility in their move to gain independence. Yasser Arafat also reasons that the 'in-country' raids demand large scale organizational resources which place them firmly under the control of the official leadership.

briefly..

WASHINGTON - A confidential report is being prepared by an eight-man team from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration on Canada's application to take part in the development of the first 'true' space ship. The request is in line with Canada's policy to foster a 'Canadian industrial capacity' for the design and the construction of space systems. Canada has applied to develop the remote manipulator arms for handling payloads for the shuttle vehicle.

OTTAWA - The government has been attacked by the opposition parties for granting loans to Chile and Iran. They argued that both of these countries follow policies which are contradictory to the foreign policy and to the ideals of Canada. Iran has already benefitted from more than $80 million in loans from Canada's Export Development Corporation (EDC). Presently Iran has an $8 billion budget surplus due to oil revenue and was able to purchase $4 billion worth of military equipment from the United States last year. The EDC loaned money to companies operating in Chile. Chile is still under the control of a military regime. Andrew Brevin (NDP, Greenwood) stated that the Canadian foreign policy is supposed to be based on social justice and the public would object to any assistance, even indirect, to Chile. The foreign aid will allow the junta to continue its repressive practices.

PEKING - In a world of change not even Mount Everest stays the same. The world's highest peak is "growing even higher" as the result of the Indian subcontinent moving slowly northwards, according to an article in the current issue of the Chinese magazine, China Pictorial.

TORONTO - Mr. Donald Irvine, provincial housing minister, has announced that the Ontario government will add $100 million to its $285 million budget for housing programs in the next two years. The government will provide low interest rate mortgages to encourage developers to provide more family rental accommodation. Irvine also indicated that there will be changes made in the Condominium Act, which will allow the units to be built on leased land by either public or private bodies. Units which are built on Crown Land will be sold under the Home Ownership Made Easy Plan. The plan requires that payments be made on the home only, not the lot. The lot remains government owned for five years.

Sepp's Ski Shop

Sepp's Pre-Season Special:

Fiberglass skis and quality binding for under $100.00. You save $45.00

Hagantifiberglass skis reg. $90.00 down to $65.00

Tyrolian binding reg. $52. (while quantities last) down to $32.00

New stock is in and selling fast.

SKIS

Hart Free Style
Hexcell
Kneissl
Volki

BOOTS

New Hanson (custom fitted)
Koflach
Rieker
Dolomite

Skiwear by Nancy Green
Complete line of Cross Country Equipment

Charlottetown
Festival's

ANNE OF GREEN GABLES

Wednesday & Thursday OCT. 30 & 31

Grand Theatre 8:30 p.m.

Tickets: $4.50, $5.50, $4.50, $3.50
(50% discount to students and senior citizens)
a Division of Concerts event

A sigh of welcome relief comes with the realization of the extra hour to kill early next Sunday morn. One more hour to write that overdue essay, have that last drink, or spend in blissful slumber.

Queen's Excursion Club

AMS begins investigations

Investigations have begun by the AMS Executive into the workings of the Queen's Excursion Club. On Tuesday AMS Vice-President Peter Druxer wrote to the managing director of the club, Don McVie, asking for several financial documents and records along with statement of the club's policy. Druxer also placed on the agenda for next Thursday's Outer Council meeting a motion that the organization's club status be revoked.

Safety for the bus riders is the AMS Executive's most major concern. For this reason, the Department of Transport was called in to check the buses before departure from Queen's last weekend. He has also requested to see the club's insurance policy for the buses, as the AMS is responsible for the club's actions and also liable should any accidents occur.

McVie, the Excursion Club's managing director, asserted that the buses are all safe and are checked prior to departure by Venturways, the firm leasing the buses.

Complaints of missed connections because of late buses of poor drivers and of unsafe vehicles have been voiced in Letters to the Editor in the Journal and have been taken directly to the AMS office. McVie attributes most of these delays to tie-ups on the highways which slow down the buses' arrival in Kingston to pick up the students. In the one incident where students deemed a bus so unsafe that they finally boarded another one outside of Belleville, McVie blames the bus driver. This man was fairly new at driving for the Excursion Club, according to McVie, and was definitely at fault for not instilling confidence in his passengers. McVie insisted that the bus in question was in safe condition and claimed that the driver was operating the gear shift and other mechanisms incorrectly.

McVie stressed that in over two years of operation, the club has never had any experience with accidents. He said that this was equivalent to "one million accident-free miles."

The club has also met with complaints of overselling. McVie denies that this has ever happened. He admitted that there was some trouble with those who sneak on the buses without tickets, or with forged tickets. However, he maintained that in most instances where this has happened, checks have been conducted to see if all people on the bus had tickets.

MBA students highly favour split with GSS

by Nancy Flood

The results of the recent referendum conducted among Master of Business Administration (MBA) students on the question of withdrawal from the Graduate Student Society now been finalized and have decided the course to be pursued by that body. Voting 2-1 in favour of the split, the MBS students as a whole have finally evinced a definite opinion on a question that has been around for some time. Acting on this information, the MBA Year Executives have initiated formal withdrawal procedures with a letter notifying the GSS as to their intentions.

One of the difficulties posed by the splits of a lack of precedence GSS spokesman Fraser Dunford (Past President of the GSS) describes the situation as one in which it is both possible and necessary to establish a formal procedure for such action in order to alleviate any chance of trouble in this case or in the case of a similar set of circumstances arising at some future date. He asserts however that red tape should not be a problem and that with a concerted effort, all arrangements could be completed in a short space of time. MBA 2 Year President John Steacy echoes this hope for a speedy resolution of the problems of withdrawal and also hopes that any red tape involved will be kept to a minimum.

In disassociating themselves from the GSS, the MBA students will be losing their representation on both the A.M.S. Outer Council and the University Senate. The MBA will seek to rectify this loss as soon as possible, hoping to have withdrawal arrangements completed (to exist as a separate MBA 'entity') by mid November, the next possible time for an A.M.S. campus-wide referendum. Such a referendum is necessary for expansion or reallocation of seats on the Outer Council. No difficulties other than those of delay are foreseen by the MBA in securing A.M.S. representation. They acknowledge however, as Dunford suggests that a Senate seat may be more difficult to come by, faculty rarely being amenable to expansion of student representation on that body. This situation is described by Steacy as perhaps the biggest problem the new MBA society will face.

As well however, there exists a financial matter, still to be settled between the two groups, involving confusion over this

(Continued on Page 5)

Peek Inside

Campus lighting

Page 3

Bloos resigns

Page 3

Letters

Pages 5, 7

Landlord-Tenant Act

Pages 8, 9

Quartet
Esterhazy

Page 12

Chronicles review

Page 13

Gael preview

Page 15

Queen's
Journal
Volume 102 Number 14
Friday, October 25, 1974

wat's hapnin'?

Pubs and Theatres

Manor - The Reflections
Frontenac - Muldoon's - The Moonshiners
Frontenac - Finnegan's - Nigel Russel
Commodore - Boojum
401 Inn - Ray Smith
Townhouse - Shannon

Odeon - Airport 75
Capitol 1 - Death Wish
Capitol 2 - Frankenstein
Hyland - Jeremiah Johnson

Friday, October 25

All Day - Women's Intercollegiate Field Hockey
OWIAA Part 1
7:00 pm - Diplomacy Club in the McLaughlin Room of the Student Union (main floor behind the coat room). New members welcome. Please bring a pencil and paper.
7:30 pm - The Department of Drama presents Chronicles XXIV Cue for Treason in the studio - Room 102 in Theology Hall. Tickets are free and available at the Drama Desk 547-6291. The production runs with two performances tonight. The second is at 9:30.

8:00 pm - G.S.S. Film Club presents Act of the Heart, a Canadian film with Donald Sutherland and Genevieve Bujold in Ellis Auditorium. Admission is $1.00 at the door.

10:00 pm - CFRC presents The Goon Show. The best in British humour. Tonight: "The Telephone".

8:00 pm - Spanish Club is holding a Sangria Party at La Casa, 90 Queen's Crescent across from Victoria Hall. Come to enjoy Spanish and Latin American music and culture. Bring your own music with you! All are most welcome. Vengan Todos! Spanish Club membership $1.00 on sale.

8:00 pm - 1:00 am - Bitter Grounds Coffee House and Good Times Emporium presents Champagne Charlie and his Good Time Guitar. Admission is $1.00 and tickets are available Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday in the John Orr room from 10:30 - 4:30.

8:30 pm - Division of Concerts presents the return of the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir conducted by Elmer Iseler. Works by Britten Stanford, Andre Prevest, Handel Vaughn Williams, Ligeti, Schoenberg and Copland will be performed. Tickets available at the door of Grant Hall.

Saturday, October 26

2:00 pm - Golden Gael Football: CFRC brings you live coverage of the Queen's - Guelph game, at Richardson Stadium.

7:00 pm - The Music Department - Dr. F.R.C. Clarke of the Queen's Music Department begins a two - part look at the piano music of Carl Maria von Weber.

8:00 pm - 1:00 am - Bitter Grounds Coffee House and Good Times Emporium presents Champagne Charlie and his Good Time Guitar. Admission is $1.00 and tickets are available in the John Orr Room from 10:30 - 4:30 today.

8:00 pm - Meet with members of the Indian Caravan, now the Indian Embassy in Ottawa. Discuss with them what they hope to achieve and how YOU can help achieve justice for Canada's native peoples. In the McLaughlin Room, the second floor of the Union Building.

Sunday, October 27

10:30 am - Morning Worship at Chalmers United Church

10:30 am - Folk Mass at Dunning Hall, followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House, 164 University Ave.

11:00 am - University Service in Morgan Memorial Chapel with sermon subject "Faith and Doubt".

12:30 pm - Wargames Club in the McLaughlin Room of the Student Union (main floor behind the coat room). New members and movies welcome. For information phone Mike Small 549-0741.

2:00 pm - Queen's Musical Theatre holds its third workshop in the dance studio at the Phys. Ed. Centre.
4:00 pm - Perchance to Dream: A look at J.R.R. Tolkien. "Smith of Wotton Major" presented by CFRC.
9:30 pm - "Galerie Victoria" presents Blevin, an improvisational pianist playing bogie and blues and accompanied by harmonica blues. In the Victoria Hall Common Room. Admission is free.

Monday, October 29

7:00 pm - Circle K presents its organizational meeting in Stirling B.

7:00 pm - Queen's Musical Theatre will be holding auditions for the chorus for "Gypsy" in the Red Room at Kingston Hall.

7:30 pm - Ukrainian Club Meeting in the Upper Meeting Room of the International Centre.

8:00 pm - Life or Death - Who Chooses? - Dr. Heather Morris of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, Women's College Hospital, Ontario will give a public lecture on abortion. A graduate of the University of Edinburgh, she did her postgraduate training in obstetrics and gynecology in England. In 1969 and 1971, Dr. Morris travelled 2,000 miles up the Amazon River to perform general surgery for the natives in a small Brazilian village. From 1971 to June of '74, Dr. Morris was the president of the Alliance For Life, Canada's non-sectarian, national coordinating organization for groups and individuals who believe that all human life, albeit before or after death, has the right to care and protection under the law.

Upcoming Events

Tuesday, October 29 - 7:00 pm - Queen's Musical Theatre will be holding auditions for the lead roles in the musical "Gypsy" in the Red Room at Kingston Hall. All people interested in technical work please come out on this night also.

Tuesday, October 29 - 7:30 pm - Canadian Crossroads International information session in the Lower Lounge in the International Centre. Selection and orientation for this year's programme will be discussed informally.

Tuesday, October 29 - Queen's Debating Union will be hosting a debate against Princeton. "Resolved that Western society is experiencing a decline." All welcome - especially as the decision will be made by the split of the house. Wallace Hall of the Student Union at 8:00 pm.

Tuesday, October 29 - Department of Film Studies presents Weekend. Directed by Jean-Luc Godard. Starring: Mireille Darc, Jeanne Yanne. Ellis Auditorium at 9:00 pm. Admission: $1.00 at the door.

Wednesday, October 30 - Women and Daycare meeting with invited speakers at women's centre, 110 Queen's St. at 8:00 pm. All women welcome. Baby-sitting provided.

Wednesday, October 30 - The Magic Flute, a filmed version in colour of Mozart's opera sung in German, directed by Peter Ustinov, with Horst Stein conducting and starring Nicolai Gedda, Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, Christina Deutekom, Edith Mathis etc. This film will be shown at 8:00 pm in Rm. 128 Jeffery Hall. No admission.

Wednesday, October 30 and Thursday October 31 - Finally Anne of Green Gables. "The most popular musical theatre production in Canadian history" comes to Kingston in a production from the famed Charlottetown festival. Tickets now available in the Agnes Etherington Art Center. Student prices are $3.00, $4.00, $5.00, $6.00.

Wednesday, October 30 - 8:30 pm - Queen's University Astronomy Club is holding a meeting in Ellis 332.

Monday, November 4 - 8:00 pm - We welcome you to join us in singing Gilbert and Sullivan in A115 McArthur. For more information call Dr. G. Southall at 546-5817.

Wednesday, November 6 - 7:30 pm - Michael Ondaatje will present a reading of his poetry and a screening of his most recent film The Clinton Special in Ellis Auditorium.

Elmer Iseler
conducts
TORONTO MENDELSSOHN
CHOIR
FRIDAY 25 OCTOBER 8:30 p.m.
Grant Hall
Tickets at Box Office
in Agnes Etherington Art Centre
547-6194
A Division of Concerts
Event

Application For SPEAKER AMS Outer Council

Should be submitted to the AMS Office by

5:00 Thursday
October 31, 1974

Interviews will be held that evening

Ontario Federation of Students Referendum Campaign

Information on issues will be presented to campus next week
If you want to know then look and listen and you'll find out

If you want to help phone the Queen's OFS committee
at 549-0551

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY
ENTERTAINMENT
in our Lounge
THIS WEEK:
Boojum
Amateur Night
every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

Sex crimes cited in case for better lighting

I'm sure that every Queen's student, whether returning from an "all nighter" at the pub or an evening class, has noticed the inadequacy of the lighting system on campus which literally leaves a student "in the dark".

The question of sufficient lighting of the campus is not a new issue at Queen's. Two years ago several night men were sent out to assess the lighting situation on campus. They concluded that there were five areas on campus where the lighting might need to be improved. Patty Muldoon, then president of the Women's Residence Council, (WRC) understood that new lights were to be put in. However, it was decided that the lights would be installed upon the completion of the extensive construction going on at Queen's during this period (Mackintosh-Cory and the Music Building).

But recent events which may have been prevented by sufficient lighting have prompted students and administration to action. Several incidents of indecent exposure near John Watson Hall and the rape case on Union Street in Sept., have proven the point that improved lighting is necessary on Queen's campus.

At a meeting with the dons in the women's residences on September 30, great concern was expressed over recent events and the inadequate lighting on campus. At the meeting, one of the dons suggested that a letter be written to the administration expressing the concern of the women in residence over the situation. ASUS President Sue Harper also suggested that the issue be presented in front of a meeting of the AMS Outer Council. On October 3, Outer Council passed a motion that Ferelyth Bruce-Lockhart, (president of the WRC), should write a letter to Russ Kennedy, Vice-President of Administration, concerning the insufficient lighting between

John Watson Hall and the Music Building.

Another motion was put forward by Miss Bruce-Lockhart on October 17. This motion, which was passed by Outer Council, listed the seven areas on campus which require additional lighting. These seven areas are:

- 1) The area between John Watson Hall and D wing of Victoria Hall
- 2) The area between Leonard Hall and E wing of Victoria Hall
- 3) The area between West Ban Righ and the John Orr House (32 Queen's Cres.)
- 4) The area on Queen's Cres. including Victoria Hall, Ban Righ and Agnes Etherington.
- 5) The parking lot and west stairway of Stirling Hall.
- 6) The parking lot between Victoria and Watson (behind Mackintosh-Cory).
- 7) The area between McNeill House and Gordon-Brockington

Before the Oct. 17 meeting of the Outer Council, Evelyn Reid, Dean of Women had contacted the Vice Principal of Administration, Kennedy in turn contacted the PUC (Public Utilities Commission) of Kingston about improving the lighting Queen's Cres., to which they agreed.

The issue is being taken very seriously by student representative bodies (AMS, WRC, and the Senate), and administration and both agree that improvements to the lighting system are necessary and will be implemented in the near future.

In a letter written to the Kennedy and to the director of residences Gerald McGrath, WRC President Bruce-Lockhart expressed the concern of all the students on this issue. She has "no doubts that they will co-operate" as student's well being and safety is a vital concern of the administration.

Grounds committee down on malicious painting

by Paul Steep

The Sub-committee on Grounds, a part of the campus planning committee, recently made the following recommendation: "That any painting on campus done in a malicious or vandalous nature be removed, and when possible, at the expense of the perpetrator."

The intent of this rule is to end the indiscriminate use of paint, particularly spray paint, around campus. In the past few years this has become more and more of a problem. When the painting is done on the sides of buildings or the cobblestone pathways it is almost impossible to remove unless sandblasting is used. This procedure is terribly expensive and in the past the cost has fallen upon the Department of Physical Plant.

John Gray, (Vice President University Affairs), remarked that there had been instances in the past when the university would have charged those involved with whatever expense was involved. However, they have been no rules upon which to base such action until this time. Even now the rule only exists in a recommended form. It has to be approved by the Campus Planning Committee as a whole and then the University Administration.

What constitutes malicious and vandalous use of paint will be up to the committee. However Gray does not view this as a serious problem. "It will only be used in cases where the damage is obvious. There should be no splitting hairs over whether or not the painting was malicious in any case serious enough to have the rule invoked."

Both he and Eric Thrift, the Campus Planner, pointed out that the painting of year crests was an obvious exception. Mr. Thrift views the crests as a benefit to the campus. "They're handsome and imaginative. They've obviously been done by someone with time and talent."

However even crests create somewhat of a problem unless painted on smooth areas, such as asphalt. On rougher surfaces, like the stone in front of Jeffery Hall the paint has a tendency to wear away, but not entirely, again necessitating an expensive sandblasting operation.

The first priority though, is to end the use of spray paint on walls and walks. The committee concedes that enforcement will be their biggest problem. They are hopeful that when students realize their intent in having such a rule that they will exercise a little self restraint. Eric Thrift stressed that, "We're not trying to squelch this thing altogether. We only hope that its done in an acceptable way in an acceptable place."

Bloos resigns as speaker

Keith Bourns

Marv Bloos, speaker of the AMS, Outer Council has tendered his resignation for that post. Making his decision with reluctance, Bloos feels that his academic progress would be jeopardized if he continued. He is involved this year as well as Chairman of the Brockington Visitorship Committee, a member of the Academic and Personnel committees, a residence don and as secretary of the Board of Directors.

Bloos emphasizes that his decision is in no way a reflection on the AMS or its executive but is rather the result of his workload. Disappointed at being unable to implement his plans for clearing up the procedural policies of the AMS, and for instilling a sense of order and self respect in the Outer Council members, Bloos leaves recommendations for future speakers. He feels that they should be law or graduate studies students or alumni who can maintain their posts long enough to go beyond the mistakes of fledgling speakers to really lead council.

In past years, Bloos has been president of Arts '72 President of ASUS 1971-72, program Director of CFRC (1970) and has maintained a continuing interest in the AMS, concerts, and various activities around campus.

CHINESE CLUB'S
MANDARIN CLASSES
Two classes for beginners and advanced learners
everyone welcome.
every Friday night 7:00 - 8:30 pm
Rm. 225, 234 Jeffery Hall

THE GUN CLUB
2ND ANNUAL
Halloween Rant
WEAR A COSTUME IF YOU WANT.
TUESDAY OCTOBER 29
CLARK HALL 8pm-1am
75¢
GET WITH GUN CLUB CARD
GOOD LOUD RANT MUSIC

ASUS

Notice of election for:

2 ASUS Senators (1 yr)

Election Day is TODAY

Polling Stations:

Student Union	10:30 am - 7:00 pm
Library	10:30 am - 3:30 pm
Leonard	4:45 pm - 6:15 pm
Ban Righ(upper)	4:45 pm - 6:15 pm

QUEENSNAPS '74

"and if you don't give me a dollar I'll push you down again"

KINGSTON FINEST NIGHTCLUB

Town House Pub

SHERATON SEAWAY MOTEL
686 PRINCESS ST.

Applications available for CUSO

by Catriona Vallance-Jones
I hate to disappoint you all but, CUSO is not the Communist Underground Secret Order.

Basically CUSO is a way of bringing interested employers into contact with potential employees. The only difference is that the jobs are in the "third world".

TM lecture explains student benefits

Gregg Wilson of the Student International Meditation Society of Kingston gave a most fascinating introductory lecture on the benefits of Transcendental Meditation last Wednesday night in Stirling Hall. The SIMS is one of the fastest growing student movements in North America with 80,000 members in Canada alone. Maharishi Mahesh Yogi founded the organization in 1966 and established centres throughout the world. In Canada alone there are ninety centres staffed by five hundred teachers who have each been personally trained by Maharishi.

Transcendental Meditation or TM is not an exotic religious cult from the Far East. Neither is it a mystical set of beliefs or even a philosophy. It does not require any change in life style or diet, nor does it demand any sort of extreme and disciplined activity.

TM is a natural technique, effortless and requires no concentration. It is practical and will work for even the most sceptical person. The process involves a very short investment of time (15-20 min. in the morning and afternoon) as opposed to the benefits received from its practice. TM fits right into the hectic lifestyle of the student. While a quiet place is good for meditating, it is not necessary. "Commitment" is the key word, according to SIMS representative Gregg Wilson. In order to reap the many possible benefits of TM, regularity in the practice of meditation is mandatory. In fact TM works automatically with regular practice. However, the experience of meditation is so pleasurable that the commitment should be painlessly met.

Meditation is the fourth state of consciousness in addition to waking, sleeping and dreaming. It is distinct from these other three states as the mind is fully awake while the body is in deep rest.

In contrast to the usual experience of thinking at the surface level of the mind TM allows one's conscious attention to be automatically drawn to the deepest and most refined level of thinking. This spontaneous process is increasingly pleasant as the mind is attracted deep within to the source of thought. Then the mind transcends the subtlest thinking activity and is expanded to a state of pure awareness or consciousness. It is at this point that the meditator has found his own unlimited reservoir of energy and creative intelligence.

TM provides a state of deep relaxation and rejuvenates and removes stress. Studies show that meditators experience a

The easiest way to explain it is to follow the path of Henry Applicant. (Joe Applicant didn't make it.)

Henry heads over to the International Centre for Information and an application form. Applications are handled by a volunteer committee located at the International Centre.

TM lecture explains student benefits

deep level of rest with increased alertness of the mind, increased spontaneity, expressiveness and liveliness improved health (both physical and mental), better interpersonal relationships, greater creativity, and increased acceptance of self, of others and of nature.

Research along educational lines indicate improved memory and grades. A pilot study by Allen Abrams from San Francisco indicates improved memory with length of practise. He found that meditators learned faster, were able to learn difficult material more easily and remembered it longer.

The theoretical knowledge of the practise of TM is SCI (Science of Creative Intelligence) and is being taught as a formal course of study in Canada at York University in Toronto, and at the University of Quebec at Montreal.

The SIMS in Kingston has been in operation for three years under the guidance of Gregg Wilson. At present there are over 1,000 meditators enjoying the benefits of TM in Kingston. A course of instruction in the technique of TM is available. For further information drop in at the SIMS at 457 Princess Ave. or phone 542-4693.

(excerpt excluded from Virginia Morse's campaign statement)

My community involvement has included work at Beechgrove (short-term regional assessment centre, KPH), the Birth Control, VD & Abortion Centre, Collins Bay & Millhaven Penitentiaries (weekly, non-salaried participation), and as a volunteer probation officer with a juvenile offender for a 1-year court term ended August, 1974.

My non-academic responsibilities are currently limited to membership on the Advisory Council of the Volunteer Probation Service, Kingston Family Court. I have arranged my class schedule so as to accommodate all regular meetings of the senate, Arts & Science Faculty Board, and the AMS. With academics as my top priority, I have given considerable thought to the demands of Senate membership and in soliciting your vote, I pledge to strive for responsible and representative decision-making and for a degree of compromise best suited to growth and solidarity within the Queen's community. Thank you

Henry fills in his application and soon he is called for an interview. At the interview, which is held here at Queen's, it is decided whether he is capable and suitable for work in the "third world". After all, if Henry hates blacks he's in the wrong line of work!

If Henry is rated suitable his application is sent to Ottawa. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred Ottawa will accept the application and file it.

The "third world" countries have sent in job openings to Ottawa. The files are pulled and a suitably qualified candidate is chosen.

Henry, who has gone through three sets of fingerprints, is accepted. He is one of approximately fifteen people from Queen's who will go overseas.

Henry has two initiations during the summer before he goes to work for two years. The first one is in Canada and the second is in the country where he will be working. During the two years he will be in regular contact with CUSO at conferences and at one of the field offices where every ten CUSO workers meet regularly.

Henry will be paid the same as a native would for the same job. He will live with them and probably become fluent in their language. He will have a great deal of responsibility. If he is an Engineer he may be in charge of a project, whereas in Canada it would take him years to be put in charge.

Henry's air fare will be paid both ways. After the two years he has a chance to stay or to return to Canada.

About CUSO is supported by CIDA, a much larger organization with access to funds.

Henry will gain an experience of a lifetime. On Nov. 5 two representatives from Career Placement and Planning will be talking on CUSO, Lower Vic Common Room at 7:00 pm. Why not stop in?

Bite the one you love

STEAK & STUFF
LICENCED DINING ROOM 1399 Princess (near the station)
AUNT LUCY'S RESTAURANTS LTD.

Alpine Ski Notice

There will be a meeting at 7:30 pm on Tuesday Oct. 29 in Seminar Room A, Upper lobby of the Phys Ed Centre for all former and prospective new members of the Men's Intercollegiate Alpine Ski Team

$1.00 UNITED WAY $1.00

Hay-Ride and Marshmallow Roast
To-nite 7:15
B.Y.O.B. Wolfe Island Ferry

PROBLEM in DESIGN

Design deadline Oct 15 - final project Oct 31

Competition: ON SUNDAY EVENINGS Galerie Victoria, INVOLVING MUSIC AND THEATRE, IS HELD IN THE LARGE COMMON ROOM OF VICTORIA HALL. THE DESIGN PROBLEM IS TO FOCUS THE AREA INVOLVED IN THE LARGE ROOM, AS A BACKDROP FOR PERFORMANCES. THE COMPLETED PROJECT WILL BE RELATIVELY PERMANENT BUT MUST BE STORABLE, AND ABLE TO BE TAKEN DOWN.

Materials: are at the discretion of the artist and will be supplied by the project office. The site can be seen in the lobby common room in Victoria Hall.

Honorarium: $50 WILL BE AWARDED TO THE WINNING ARTIST. HE/SHE WILL PERSONALLY CONSTRUCT HIS/HER OWN PROJECT.

Further information: Office of the Dean of Women, Victoria Hall

BITAEMO,
To all new members to the UKRAINIAN CLUB

Next Meeting:
Monday, Oct. 28 1974
At The
International Centre

MBA separation from GSS

Continued from Page 1

fiscal year's fees paid to the GSS by MBA students. The control of these funds, already budgeted for by the GSS, but now desired by the separating MBA's is not as yet designated and will require some discussion between the two parties. Although it is a matter of some concern, neither Steacy nor Dunford expect it to spark any ill feeling or discontent during negotiations.

The GSS itself is a body supplying its members with a variety of services, one of the most important (according to Dunford) being the political representation of graduate students in province wide organizations such as O.G.S.A. (Ontario Graduate Students Association) and C.U.G.S. (Canadian Union of Graduate Students). Such representation is necessary Dunford maintains, in order to press grad students' demands and desires in an organized way, their dependency on the provincial government for grants, loans, setting of tuition rates etc., being so great. He expresses concern over the lack of interest he describes as being manifested by the MBAs in this regard, for although, unlike other grad students, MBAs do not receive financial support from the province, they are still affected by any decisions it may make (or be prevented from making) in so far as tuition is concerned. He points out that any MBA connections with province wide organizations will be severed by their withdrawal from the GSS. David Rose (MBA-1, Year President), Bob Moore (MBA President, Vice President GSS) and Steacy reply in general to this by saying that the MBA students have in the past not regarded this issue as one of prime importance, have consequently made little or no use of these GSS connections and thus will not miss them when the split is made final.

Steacy and Rose both cite a general lack of interest in the GSS as shown by MBA students as one of the reasons for the withdrawal. The MBAs are in themselves a cohesive group and duplicate many of the functions that the GSS attempts to provide. Steacy asserts that MBA students make little use of GSS facilities (e.g. Grad House, TGIF) for which they are required to pay $1,500 yearly. He suggests then that the withdrawal will also serve to make available these monies for the exclusive use of the MBAs. Both Steacy and Moore concur that a certain "nationalistic" feeling on the part of the close knit MBA body is involved as well.

The letter of notification sent by the MBA Executive to the GSS is the first step in the formal separation. Ensuing action according to Dunford and Steacy, will be directed towards the setting up of a proposed negotiation committee of 4 members, 2 from each party involved. Discussion will be aimed at the formalising of a withdrawal procedure, at the settling of financial matters, and the measuring of GSS support for any future action of the MBA 'entity'. Dunford regards the move to withdraw as a reasonable one considering MBA feelings and describes it as proceeding in a "harmonious" fashion. Steacy agrees relations between the MBAs and the GSS have been, and are at present, amicable and few difficulties are expected to arise during subsequent negotiations.

Sixty new trees planned for Mackintosh-Corry

Sixty new trees will be planted around the Mackintosh-Corry complex within the next two-three weeks. A grove of cedar trees has already been planted earlier this week. Other trees to come will include oak and ash trees.

The Mackintosh-Corry complex heads the priority list for trees of the Subcommittee on Grounds of the Queen's Senate. Other areas on the list are University Avenue, the areas behind Grant Hall, Theology Hall and Ontario Hall. These are long term projects.

Another long term project of the committee is to tear up the large concrete slabs behind Grant and Ontario Halls and replace them with lockstone pathways and grass.

Some of the trees on Campus have been donated by old grads, such as the trees planted by the Arts '49 last Saturday, families of Queen's grads who have died and groups like the ASUS 'Queen's Forever Green' campaign last year.

Unfortunately, some of the trees planted last year have been broken in half by vandals and must be replaced.

Circle K: a service club hits Queen's

There is work to be done: nobody denies that, but there are an awful lot of people who would like to ignore it for the nonce. People do care about others in need of help, as evidenced by the tremendous success of the Student Volunteer Bureau in recent years, but there are so many who claim that they just don't have the time to devote to "charitable activities".

Did you happen to notice how dull that last party you went to was, how all the socializing just seemed to turn you off? Try this next time: raise a thousand dollars to buy wheelchairs for those crippled kids down the street; organize an emergency blood donor clinic; hold a candle sale, raise $700 (it's been done!) and donate it all to fight multiple sclerosis; run a 1920's dance marathon and give all the proceeds to the United Way; take some folks from an old people's home out bowling.

Now have that party. You'll be amazed, you'll be exhilarated, and you'll be having one hell of a good time. And you'll never forget that special feeling when someone singles you out of a group and thanks you for bringing just a little bit of cheer into their lives. You'll never forget.

The question now begs to be asked: "HOW?" How do we propose to go about all this?

Counter-question: "Given that there was an active student group on campus; given that it had the spirit, the manpower, and the influence necessary for this type of concern; given that it could raise the hundreds and perhaps thousands of dollars needed, what would you ask it to do?"

That active student group has finally arrived. This year, Circle K Clubs will exist on approximately twelve university and college campuses across eastern Canada and the Caribbean. They include Western (the oldest club in existence in North America), Chicoutimi, Dartmouth, and many more.

After our initial success at Clubs' Night, Queen's Circle K has more than 35 members to start off with. We will have one more organizational meeting before we get under way. Mark down Monday night, October 28th at 7:00 in Stirling Hall B, as a most important date to remember. There will be a banquet on November 3rd to make the official presentation of the charter. If you cannot make the meeting Monday, please phone 542-6361, as soon as possible, sometime this week. That meeting is very important to present members, but they are asked to bring a friend as well. Anyone at all interested is welcome.

Circle K is involved with the cause and cure of people problems - the real problems, created by people and for people. Circle K pledges its help to anyone or any group that needs it. Circle K has arrived. Talk about what this campus really needs, then ask what you can do. Ask what we can do. It's a start, people. Just a start.

All Journal staff members, contributors and others interested are invited to a workshop on Saturday, Oct. 26 at 1:00 pm in the Journal office. Mr. John Morris editor and publisher of Prescott Journal will be conducting the workshop on such areas of newspaper work as layout, reporting, interviewing and photography.

ACADEMIC RESEARCH LIBRARY

Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date, 176-page, mail order catalog of 5500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage (1-2 days delivery time).
519 GLEN ROCK AVE.
SUITE #203
LOS ANGELES, CA. 90024
Our materials are sold for research purposes only.

DOMUS

Kingston's most exciting gift shop and kitchen shop
68 Brock Street
Between King and Wellington

IBM?

Let's talk about it

IBM Canada Ltd. needs people to work in an environment that's always interesting, and often demanding, but never dull.

We need technically-oriented people and people-oriented people. We need thinkers and we need doers.

Our recruiters will be coming to campus soon, to talk with people who think that they could have a future with IBM. If you would like to set up a meeting, tell your college Placement Office, and at the same time give them a copy of your personal resumé. Then let's talk about it.

Interviews on Nov. 27, 28

IBM
IBM Canada Ltd.

THE DEPT OF ART HISTORY
ANNOUNCES A GUEST LECTURE BY
PROF. JOSEPH BURKE
(UNIVERSITY OF MELBOURNE)
"THE ENLIGHTENMENT AND ENGLISH ART"
FRIDAY OCT 25th 1974

8 p.m. - Rm. 217 WATSON HALL (FOLLOWED BY A RECEPTION IN WATSON 517)

QUEEN'S RIFLE CLUB

MEETS EVERY Thursday 9-11 pm
Sunday 4-6 pm

in projectile range

For information phone 544-2926
or 544-9054 after 6 pm

STEVE AMEY'S Lakeview Manor

PLAYING THIS WEEK IN
THE CENTENNIAL ROOM

Reflections

28 Yonge St., Kingston

Queen's Musical Theatre

Audition Announcement

for roles in the Production

"GYPSY"

Monday Oct. 28 at 7:00 pm at Kingston Hall in the Red Room. Auditions for chorus.

Tuesday Oct. 29 at 7:00 pm at Kingston Hall in the Red Room. Auditions for leads.

All people interested in Production and technical work only please come out on Tuesday night to the Red Room.

letters to the editor

AMS constables not fascists

Dear Editor,

I was shocked and dismayed by the letter which appeared last Tuesday in the Journal, condemning all "fuzz" and AMS constables as fascists and-or buffoons, and advocating having no enforcement of order whatsoever at University pubs and football games. The letter's mental midgetry makes me wonder if the writer should be at university. He is either so naive, or so stupid, that a good dose of life in the real world might do him an immeasurable amount of good.

The sheer all-encompassing hatred expressed by this student is exactly the same sort of hatred which leads radical pseudo-revolutionaries to call everyone with two cars in their garage and $5,000 in the bank 'capitalist pigs' and the same sort of abhorrence which leads members of the establishment to refer to everyone with hair below their ears and books besides the Bible under their arms 'pinko Commies'. It is the same hatred which catapults dictators into power, which puts Nixons in the White House which rips apart the fabric of society - and which leads eventually to repression far greater than that so roundly condemned by the writer.

The jingoism and anarchic idealism is so unrealistic, it is sad. Men form societies for mutual protection. They delegate law enforcement to certain people so that they can go about their business without fear of having their rights or welfare endangered by any other citizen. The freedom of each must be curbed to preserve the liberty of all.

It's really a lovely dream to say "Hey we're mature enough, civilized enough to do what we want. We live in a free society don't we - then let us do what we bloody well please. We don't want or need fuzz." But this is the real world. Yes, even University. In the real world we need cops - or AMS constables. We need to be constrained sometimes, to protect the rights and welfare of others. Some of us are not mature - although I'm sure there are not many who'd agree. Most of us can be irrational - all of us are irrational when we're drunk. To call these who break up or prevent brawls in the Pub by telling those who've had enough to drink to leave, or those who risk people at football games to prevent violence or property damage - to call these people fascist buffoons is ridiculous.

Sure, some may be ego-tripping. That's not the point. The point is we sometimes need someone to tell us when enough is enough, to constrain us so we don't harm others. Isn't it good that we have students among us whose egos (or financial needs) demand that they take on such an unwelcome and difficult task? We may not like them, but we need them.

One only has to recall the soccer riots that occur in the British Isles, killing or trampling dozens of innocent spectators, or the recent events in the States, where beer was sold at some baseball stadiums - but had to be cut out because of violence and vandalism.

If one wants to revert to the law of the jungle, then one can go to the Amazon - or one can stay right here with enough other people like himself, and forment hatred until anarchy breaks out here at home. The writer of the letter was a foreigner - I would respectfully suggest that he learn to act as if he's part of society, or maybe remove himself from it.

Sincerely
Leo Hagen

Reply to A. Foreigner

Dear Editor,

This letter is in reply to "a foreigner's" letter in the Oct. 22, 1974 issue of the Journal.

The writer proposes that the only choices that Queen's has are: a) to have no control system on campus, relying on outside help solely in the event it is needed, or b) having AMS constables or Kingston police on campus - he does not make a distinction between the two. He concludes that from his experience at a previous university, the choice to be made is the first one.

In the past few years there has been a marked change in the attitude of police enforcement - from that of reaction to one of prevention. The AMS constable system's raison d'être is exactly that - primarily one of prevention rather than reaction. To wait until someone (and who would that be, say, at a football game) deemed it necessary to call in outside intervention would be foolishness. This outside intervention would create far more antagonism than now exists between students and AMS constables (and yes, I do admit some antagonism does exist).

Finally I must make a personal observation on the writer's style. The constant use of such emotional and loaded terms such as "fascist" and "swastika" do not help in a rational argument, but only serve to prejudice people. My last point is presented in the form of a request to the staff of the Journal - why not insist that all letters be signed, giving the writer the option to have it published anonymously if he/she so desires? The lack of a signature weakens the argument being presented.

Brian Livingston

Just one more cliché

Dear Editor,

Funny how so few people actually realize how much detail goes into the preparation of an extravaganza like Homecoming weekend.

The rewards for involvement can't be measured in actual terms of accomplishment. For example, after the completion of Oom-Pah-Pah, do you really think the person or persons associated with the vent went home patting each other on the back for a job well done, unfortunately not... they cleaned up until approx 3am.

The United Way gang were not really aware that the football game was going on last Saturday (believe me it wasn't because they were blitzed) but rather that they were too busy running around like chickens with their heads cut off while collecting money from the good people who contributed to this worthy cause.

How about the semi? People looked great all done up in their Sunday best, talking, dancing, and drinking. By the way who ever painted all the excellent Disney cartoons for decorations? How did they ever keep the beer cold in Clench's game room of Kingston No. 102? Questions that go unanswered!

Last but not least... How about Lou baby who really does walk on the wild side? Not a bad stage set up, extremely fine lighting. Funny how these little details go unanswered.

Hopefully next time you go bee bopin' and have a good time you will think, just how much work and determination went into the event or better yet you'll get involved yourself.

Special thanks for Homecoming 74 should reach Commerce 75, Carl Fety, Ian, Brian, P. Rose, Dave McSearle, Queen's Bands, Engineer Variety Show, Lawrence Paul Ron, the Parade people Mickey and Minney Mouse, Wizard House, the Pub.

Regards,
J. Gray

Who's suitable - computers or men

Dear Editor,

I find Mr. Wolman's "State of the Union" address as printed in yesterday's Journal rather terrifying in its naivety and feel some effort should be made to rebuke it before too many students have rushed to the registrar's office to resign from their courses.

There seem to be two basic issues outstanding: why do high school graduates choose the option of attending a university as opposed to a technical

editorial

Why not come clean?

Why won't the Excursion Club come clean? If it were to bare its chest, so to speak, by supplying the AMS Executive with the documents they requested, then both parties could fairly and intelligently resolve this heated problem. Assuming these papers showed that the club was doing nothing wrong, then everyone could relax.

But these documents have not been produced. On Tuesday, Peter Druxer wrote the club's managing director asking for their policy, financial statements for 1973-74, account books and legal contracts (all for the purpose of carrying out a complete audit). Copies of minutes of the club's meetings, and "an explanation as to the reasons why the Queen's Excursion Club has been falsely representing itself as the Queen's Bus Service through advertisements printed in the Journal" were also requested.

At deadline for production of these items, only a small ledger had been produced.

The most major concerns of the AMS Executive in this case are safety and insurance. The AMS is legally responsible for the actions of this club, and liable should a bus be in an accident. Even more important, it is up to the AMS to make sure that the buses used by the club are safe. (Several allegations that the buses are not fit for highway travel have been addressed to members of the Executive and have been printed as Letters to the Editor in the Journal.)

All these investigations are urgently necessary, considering that the AMS is responsible for the club's operation, and more importantly, considering the concern bordering on panic that many students who have ridden the buses have experienced.

It is only fair in a situation such as this, when sufficient information is not available on which to base conclusions, that the Excursion Club be given the benefit of the doubt. But people won't wait very long to be appeased. It is in the interests of the entire university and especially those who use the Queen's Excursion Club that the club's executive produce the necessary documents. After all if everything is in order and there is nothing to hide, why won't the club follow through and produce these papers?

more letters

institution?; and, what should the universities do with these people once they've got them? If students are here because they expect a "better" job at the end of a four-year stint, then I agree with Wolman in saying that they may very well be disappointed.

However, let's continue the analysis with the, perhaps, idealistic assumptions that students attend university because they want to be here and because they have the intellectual ability and that the decision as to what they are to do afterwards is not foremost in their minds from the day they first register. Would these people still be better off learning a trade? I would be willing to venture that as many of us cannot use a hammer without bruising a thumb and cannot connect a circuit without electrocuting ourselves and would be thoroughly miserable if we had to spend the rest of our working lives concentrating on how to get through the days without maiming ourselves. (I realize that there is bound to be a protest at this stage from the "Universal" people of our community and, to them, I apologise, saying that I believe them to be the exception rather than the rule). A technical skill requires an aptitude which most people know whether or not they possess an intellectual "skill" also requires an aptitude - it must be hell for those who are floundering in a university because they do not have it.

Now comes the burning issue - our "suitability" for university life now is small compensation for the fact that we'll be no use to the world when we've graduated. Wolman gives the impression that computers are about to take over the world or, at least, to replace our intellectual community. I admire Mr. Wolman's courage in adopting the role of soothsayer in a time when change seems so very rapid, damaging, and unpredictable. If computers are to be able to diagnose our diseases to the extent of eliminating the medical professional, why then won't they be able to hammer all nails? Instead of entering trades, should we not all now be banging down the doors of the computing centre in our search for suitable training for the future?

We must all remember that there is one fundamental difference between the computer and man - the former is not entirely the child of the latter in that it has not inherited man's brain - an organ which not only permits man to perform mechanical functions but also to think, to ponder, and to reason. The computer certainly has developed to the extent that it can perform many operations much more quickly and accurately than man but it has not the ability to judge the applicability nor, more importantly, the social and moral benefits to mankind of its product. Therein lies the role of the university. It is a very necessary institution to guide the development of minds which can function logically and with humanity. As the sophistication of the hardware increases so must the sophistication of the human mind so that the machine may not take over the world in the classic sense of good science fiction.

The university, at this stage must strengthen the rigour of its intellectual training - stressing the need for logical thought and humanitarian concern. Only then (and now I am going to adopt the role of soothsayer for which I have criticised Mr. Wolman) can we hope to have graduates who, in future, will be happy, well-adjusted people, thus automatically making a positive contribution to the society in which they'll be living.

Thank you.

Helen Cooper
Arts '68
Research Assistant
Dept. Economics

Queen's
Journal
Vol. 102, No. 14
Fri., Oct. 25, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Editor-in-Chief: Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager: Terry Collins
Managing Editor: Dan McClelland
News Editor: Sarah Yarnell
Features Editors: Wendy Reynolds, Laurel J. Gibson
Arts Editors: Kerry White, Peter Haworth
Photo Editor: John Cameron
Backpage: Val Cotton
What's Happenin': Rosemary Knight, Jennifer Hastings
Classifieds: Leslie Gaukrödger.

Trish Brooks
Photos: John Bottomley, Keith Bourns, Ernie Sparks, F.U.D., Chuck Parker
Business Staff: Anne Robertson, Cathy Armstrong, Jane Gulleridge
Contributors: Azim Mohamud, Elaine Parker, Suzanne Woods, Nancy Spies, Dave Selander, Hugh Agnew, Sharon Koefes, Nancy Flood, Simon Lewis, Uncle Woody with his words of wisdom, and Bennelli who we forgot last week.

Comments: We're all so full of pizza and beer we can hardly peep. These peeps are too pooped to pop. L. J. saved the day as usual - what would we do without her (till in the blank) presence? Why do they make me type these dumb old comments? No one but the staff reads them anyway!

Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (416) 547-2606. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newspaper.

New York Sunday Times available every Sunday
at 10 a.m.
Regular Sunday edition direct from New York
Reserve your copy now.
Lou Williams Smoke & Gift Shop
213 Princess St. 546-1616

Queen's Ski Club
Crest Contest
1st prize $25 credit on any ski trip
and 1 case of Brador

entries to special box in
John Orr Room by Nov. 9

Winner will be announced at Ski Club
Smoker in November in Clork Hall
(Tri colour maximum on crest)

NON-RESIDENT MEAL CARD

A very limited number of Meal Cards are available for purchase by non-resident students. These cards are valid for all lunches and or all dinners, Monday to Friday inclusive, from date of issue to 18 December 1974. The cards will be honoured in the Ban Righ Dining Room or the Leonard Hall Dining Room or in the Social Centre West Campus.

The cards and further particulars may be obtained from the Business Office, Leonard Hall 9:00 a.m. to 12:45 p.m., 1:45 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday to Friday.

There is still time to get an unclassified ad FREE . . .

Fill out the questionnaire in Tuesday's

Queen's
Journal

Famous Brand
Names at Discount Prices

Howick GWG
North Star Baby Jane
Landlubber Apple Bee

and many more
27 Princess St.

544-1227

PIZZA CHALET

PIZZA AND ITALIAN DISHES
TAKE OUT ORDER AND DELIVERY
359 PRINCESS ST.

Hillel presents

The "Fixer"

The story of an innocent man's fight against Czarist anti-semitism

Wednesday October 30
7:00 and 9:30 $1.00

RELAXATION TRAINING

A one-month program in relaxation training is being offered by the Student Counselling Service to aid students in dealing with anxiety and tension.

The program is to begin Friday, November 1st. Students participating must have access to a cassette tape recorder at home for the duration of one month.

Please call the Student Counselling Service at 547-2893.

HOUSE AVAILABLE

6 BEDROOMS

AMS Housing Service has a house near campus available Nov. 1 for 5-6 Queen's students at $295 per month.

Tenants will be selected by a LOTTERY to be held WED OCT 30 at 7:30 pm in the UNION THIRD FLOOR Common Room. The house will go to the first person whose name is drawn so groups should submit all names. Entry names may be submitted at the AMS office before 5 pm Oct. 30 or at the lottery.

More info from AMS Housing Office or from Laurie at 544-5358

Landlord-Tenant Act

Ignorance of the Law is no excuse

by Azim Mohamed

With the second half of the first term, I anticipate that every student has accommodation. Such anticipation is based on a sound observation, in that I don't see any tents pitched on Leonard Field. The quality of such accommodation is another debate however, but certainly not to be discarded.

Students in residence, irrespective of whether their roommates are remedial retards, are lucky in the sense that they have no legal hassles regarding their housing. They simply pay their residence fees and adhere to the rules in their particular halls, for their money they receive a compact deal. This package gives them a standard room to live in, common rooms and other such paraphernalia associated with residence living.

These very students will be looking for accommodation and housing off-campus along with many others who live off-campus at present. Most students leave residence for their own reason, one basically being that they wish to disassociate themselves from the juvenile toilet humour of next year's frosh.

Examine the laws, by-laws, and tri-laws

But as we all know, such action is like jumping from the frying pan into the fire since they end up with fellow uncultureds anyway. Ah! But there is no way to escape this barbaric community since the Director of Residences and company give the boot to a majority of residence dwellers and rightly so, to facilitate the placement of frosh for the next school year.

Since we will all be out looking for off-campus housing, I see fit to bring to light some laws, by-laws and tri-laws that govern the housing industry in Kingston - yes sir, that very industry that we will all be nourishing next year.

A domestic housing industry has developed around the Queen's campus. Basically the justification for the existence of such an industry is that it provides the students with housing and accommodation close to the campus. Oh good! But it is provided at a cost - poor quality housing plus high rents. It's like putting a dog in a kennel in the backyard during the winter. Not that I am insinuating that Queen's students are dogs nor that students presently living off-campus live in kennels. The parallel may be faulty but I think the analogy is pretty clear.

You will find once you get out that landlords in Kingston on the whole are not of gentle birth nor of perfect breeding. They are professional rip-off artists. Regarding ethics in their business, remember what virtue is, a fig. And what is there to protect us from these power-hungry materialistic people? The Landlord-Tenant Act of course! This is a municipal law enacted some time ago, in the words of John Richardson, Director of Housing & Property Management at Queen's, "to bring equity between the landlords and tenants". The act is a long, soberly written legal document that is apparently aimed at protecting both the rights of the landlords and tenants. Undoubtedly there are loopholes in the act and to exactly define such is very difficult; it takes specific circumstances and particular problem cases to identify the loopholes. Improvements have been made in the act by way of amendments that minimize the abuse of the law.

Take nothing for granted; never assume

Since the act covers a wide spectrum of tenant-landlord dealings, I will restrict myself to presenting relevant information and pitfalls to watch out for. We are all well aware of the fact that there was a housing "crunch" this year and with constant deterioration of chronically substandard housing, the crunch is going to get even tougher to cope with.

It seems that not too many people are aware of the laws as such; there seems to be a general ignorance about them.

Too many people take things for granted or simply assume something is right or wrong. This is rather poor. We must be well aware of the law. The act cannot produce any positive aspects in the relationship between the landlord and the tenant if either one or both parties decide to overlook certain clauses. The system simply breaks down. One has to exercise one's rights effectively to keep the system healthy.

Most landlords adhere rigidly to the laws and acts in force and have lawyers and solicitors who keep them informed of their legal status. There are of course certain small landlords, undesirable ones who are not too sure of the act. However it seems students come out with the sour end of the deal because they allow themselves to be lured into situations without any legal knowledge. Ignorance of the law is no excuse. You may end up paying penalties due to this ignorance in the form of damage expenses or higher rents.

If you are planning to live in a house next year, begin to look for it now. Have the house lined up before you move out for the summer. Usually it is the practice of many students to leave things to the last moment. They turn up towards the end of the summer looking for housing. This creates the problem of the housing crunch, which degenerates into gross abuse and misconduct on the landlords' part because he is pressured into presenting some form of housing to meet the demands, unfortunately resulting in higher rents for depressing and substandard housing. So, look high and look low, but look early!

Once you have a house, make sure it will be available to you when the school year starts. If, however, the landlord cannot guarantee that, you may be forced to rent it right then. However, before you hand him a rent cheque, there are a few things you ought to do.

Avoid hassles by knowing your rights

Take a trip around the house with the landlord and mark all the physical damages, from cracks in the wall to peeling paint and damages on the floor. Note it all down. Check all windows, doors and mechanical fixtures such as locks and hinges. If you are not satisfied with their condition, mention this to the landlord and make a note of this too. Legally he is responsible for keeping his property in good repair. Inform the P.U.C. of your tenancy and departure or you may end up paying somebody else's bills. Do not overlook anything. You will be saving yourself a lot of hassles (about the condition of the house) when you move out. Do not assume the landlord knows. This is because the landlord assumes otherwise. If you don't complain, he will presume that the house was in perfect condition and will expect it to be so when you move out. If there are any particular problems, iron them out before you rent it so that you know where you stand.

The landlord is required to present the tenant with a signed copy of the lease and the tenant does not have to pay rent until he receives it. Many people will sublet the house during the summer. Beware of the subtenant, since any damage to the property is your responsibility. So exercise great care in selecting your subtenants.

Once you start living in the house and find certain physical damages due to regular wear and tear, report them to the landlord. Don't wait and let it deteriorate. Under no circumstances make any repairs or alterations on your own in the hope that you will be able to defray the cost of such repairs from the landlord. Experience shows that they constantly hassle the tenant in such cases and constantly question the validity and justification of such repairs. The result then is that you are never paid back for repairs on his property.

After he has rented you a house or an apartment, he legally has no right to enter your house unless in an emergency. This is aimed at protecting your privacy. It would be pretty embarrassing if your landlord walked in when you are eating spaghetti with chopsticks. By the same token, if asked for repairs and you are not home when the repairman calls, he has no right to enter the premises. He will normally bill you for a visiting charge. So, be at home when you expect the repairman. You might also feel itchy once you get into a house. If you do, you have fleas; yes sir, you will be giving blood every day, but not to the Red Cross, to the parasitic flea. Fleas are common in some houses. If you detect their presence, inform the landlord and demand their eradication immediately.

If you are planning to fix an egg carton on your ceiling or paint a mural on the wall, beware. Egg cartons are fine but be prepared to pay a small fee for their removal and restoration of the ceiling to its original state. Painting the wall follows the same procedure. Most landlords do not like what students paint on their walls and thus charge them for repainting before you leave. If you want to leave a fish tank in the house, tell the landlord so. He may not like the idea of a killer shark on his property. If you exercise your side of the law, you should be free of hassles.

Many landlords will try to bend the law rather than break it in which case you bend the landlord's neck. Surely we don't want to be manipulated by the tentacles of unprincipled big time real estate tycoons, many of whom are in the coronary and lung cancer belt. Vigilance is the price of freedom. Know the law and don't be made a stooge.

It is true the act is very complicated and certain clauses are particularly confusing. If you are not sure consult a lawyer. Usually the Queen's Legal Aid at 200 Montreal is a good place to start when seeking legal advice.

RACKETS RESTRUNG

for fast and guaranteed service
Brown's Racket Restringing Service
546-6429

George Rudy
sporting goods
40 Prince Street
Kingston, Ontario
K7L 1A4
Tel. 613-542-2293

WOODS
DOWN INSULATED
Jackets
for hiking or skiing

Reg. 59.95

$53.96

with student card

Bargains Bargains Bargains come to the ### Rotary Garage Sale

at 370 King St. W.
(across from the entrance to St. Mary's Hospital)

Saturday October 26
10 am - 1 pm

Wide assortment of items

Davy Real Estate

Wanted: Part time
maintenance
handyman.
Required immediately.

Phone 546-2256
ask for Mrs. Teaford
or Mr. Davy

If Chancellor Roland Michener can give, how about you?

The United Way (We are still short)

All donations accepted in
AMS Office
(Thanks to you - last night's proceeds from The Pub went to the United Way.)

GET SOME CHANGE FOR A CHANGE.

McDonald's

277 Bath Rd.
Kingston

Pick-me-up

There are many ways to enjoy Mother's perfect pizzas, super subs or superlative spaghetti. You can relax in the cheery comfort of Mother's Dining Room. You can enjoy the convenience of neighbourhood delivery to your door. Or you can pick up your order and personally carry it home.
Just call in advance and allow 15 to 20 minutes for baking.

Mother's Pick-me-up service.

MOTHER'S
PIZZA PARLOUR

"More than just a place to eat"

455 Princess St.

Call 549-0006

FROM SCOTLAND

NaZareth

AND RUSH

IN CONCERT

Grant Hall
Sunday, Oct. 27

Two Shows: 7:00 & 9:30

Tickets on sale: John Orr Room,
House of Sounds,
Vern Napiers
- all week. $3.50 $4.00 at door

unclassifieds

More on Page 11

THE DATE FOR THE AUCTIONS
OF THE ARTS '78 NIGHTCLUB has now been set for Nov. 11. More details as to time and place to be posted later.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT CLAP LOOKS
LIKE? See it November 15 and 16.
Tickets on sale soon.

THANK YOU to everyone who helped with the Homecoming Semi-Formal. Special Thanks to Kathy
Wright, Lawrence Gordon, Diana
Fletcher, Peter Rose, John Gibson, all the AMS Constables, Marg
Reid, Jett VanSienberger, Eric
Cousineau, Victoria Cameron,
Kevin Marsh, Bonnie Resnikoff,
Rhonda Kilchen: the set up crew,
Paul Bell, Ken Orford, Steven Walker, Pol, Ron, Alan Richardson; the clean-up crew, Nancy Kihl, Paul, Dave Gordon, Sami
Henley, Sherri Curtis, Barry
O'Neill, Dave Bullis, Neil Ford,
Barry Bresnahan, Sam Melvin,
Don McKay, Mark Slinson, John
McQueen, Bev Waters, Mary
Barbridge, Johann Belistedi,
Mary Hawkins, Genevieve Wolski,
Nola Fulcher, Kerry, John Fowler,
Cathy Cullison, Doug Ruby, Gail
Trotter, Tina Donkers, Jane Scott,
Cathy Speel, Louraine Pelk, Margo Hulton, Karen Heagle, the girls at 301 Earl, Wendy Miller and dole, Ruth McKechnie, and Dale,
Mary Simonsen, Gary Smith,
Sharon Taylor, Katrina from 4-D,
Alison Erps, Tim Amanda, Gary
Strengs, Rick West, Howard
Campbell, and all those who helped on decorations. Poll's
Paint and Wall paper for the free
paint and brushes; and the rest
who gave their time to help.
Thanks, Sue Seale.

PREMIER BASH AT THE S.S.
CRETIN (SATURDAY NIGHT)
BEER will be sold. 364 Brock
infiltrate the Cretin. We will expect all friends of Bubba, Lee, Couser,
Jimmers, Chris, and Halupka.

ROOM: Large, furnished, kitchen privileges. 319 William St. Dial 549-7942.

KEYSTONE 395 Calculator for sale.
Has Memory. Square root, percentage, exchange key, +1 key, c-co key. Price is negotiable. Phone 549-4832.

REWARD: 1 pair of Men's Gold Rim
glasses lost in the Gym. If found,
please call Phil at 546-1634.

HEY NOW! Thanks to Ingrid, Anne,
Laurel and Bear, for the surprise
on Sunday I love you. I really do.
Fraser.

PROFESSIONAL PHOTOGRAPHER
REQUIRES MALE
AND FEMALE MODELS for a visual Circus Brochure being produced by the Canadian Association of Optometrists. Subjects to be portrayed include school nurse, optician, ophthalmologist, pharmacologist, and various aged patients. Call Or. Ron Mac-Pherson at 1-345-5650 or write to
129 John St. Napanee Ont.

SCIENCE FORMAL TICKETS: Still
available for all Queen's Students,
Staff, and Faculty. Clark Hall
9:00am to 4:30pm. Weekdays.

CURLING BONSPILL: All those wishing to curl in the Queen's
Curling Club Bonspiel on Sat. Nov.
9. Please attend meeting Mon. Oct.
28 at 7:30 in Stirling O. or call 548-
3701 and ask for Ari or Malcolm.

INTERESTED IN THE MUSIC OF
THE '60's and '70's in the Big Band
sound for your dance? If so, contact W.J. Babe (542-9740) or
G. Hallam (542-9740) for bookings. Also more modern stylings, Latin, etc. available.

THE BELL BOYS ARE HAVING A
BASH and invite all friends and relatives to the Arcade at 229
University this Friday Oct. 25.
We've got the stuff so just show
up.

BING GAY MEANS LIVING GAY
CALL Terry Watson 547-2636 Mon.
to Thursday 8-9pm, or write
Student Affairs Centre c/o Terry
Watson.

ATTENTION GAELE GROUP NO. 72:
Reunion time Saturday Oct. 26 at 9:30, 261 King St. East - A party
Rod, Arto, and Carline.

ARTS '78 cards are available only
through Ougu Thomson at 546-0057.
Remaining cards will be sold on a first come first serve basis. Get to it! Fresh!

TO MARGRET J. OIKIE, Class of
'74: Congratulations on a job well done. Eat 'em raw. From two fellow Hagers, Ben and Curt.

LOST. ONE PAIR OF WIRE RIM-
MED GLASSES AT THE football
Game - Rich. Stadium last Sat. 11 found please phone 544-7229, after
4pm.

1974 REIKER SE, 9 1/2 SKI BOOTS.
Never used at all. A Hat 74 Dollars.
Telephone 546-7132.

FOUND: A WATCH in squash courts
last Tuesday. Phone 544-7044.

FOUND: A SUM OF MONEY in Anatomy Building last week. Call 547-2409.

FRIENDS OF DJ. JONI AND LINDA:
a reminder to attend the Bash this Saturday Oct. 26th. We're expecting you!

DO YOU KNOW WHAT CLAP LOOKS
LIKE? See it November 15 and 16.
Tickets on sale soon!

IF YOU'D LIKE TO TRY HORSE-
BACK RIDING but don't know where to find the horses, Queen's
Riding Club can enlighten you.
Free transportation to stables at 9:00 Saturday from Union.

CLEVELAND OHIO: OCT. 15 Bus
ride Kingston through Toronto.
Placement No. 249; Montreal and Neuchâtel; please contact: Don
Gamble, c/o St. John's College,
Oxford England.

CALCULATOR FOR SALE: Four
functions and square, square root,
inverse, percent, memory,
floating and fixed decimal. Cheap.
30. Phone after 7pm. 549-5034.

TO THE RAIDERS OF 4th Gordon:
Alison Erps, Tim Amanda, Gary
Strengs, Rick West, Howard
Campbell, and all those who helped on decorations. Poll's
Paint and Wall paper for the free
paint and brushes; and the rest
who gave their time to help.
Thanks, Sue Seale.

PREMIER BASH AT THE S.S.
CRETIN (SATURDAY NIGHT)
BEER will be sold. 364 Brock
infiltrate the Cretin. We will expect
all friends of Bubba, Lee, Couser,
Jimmers, Chris, and Halupka.

ROOM: Large, furnished, kitchen
privileges. 319 William St. Dial 549-7942.

KEYSTONE 395 Calculator for sale.
Has Memory. Square root, percentage, exchange key, +1 key, c-
co key. Price is negotiable. Phone 549-4832.

REWARD: 1 pair of Men's Gold Rim
glasses lost in the Gym. If found,
please call Phil at 546-1634.

HEY NOW! Thanks to Ingrid, Anne,
Laurel and Bear, for the surprise
on Sunday I love you. I really do.
Fraser.

PROFESSIONAL PHOTOGRAPHER
REQUIRES MALE
AND FEMALE MODELS for a visual Circus Brochure being produced by the Canadian Association of Op-
tometrists. Subjects to be portrayed include school nurse, optician, ophthalmologist, phar-
macologist, and various aged
patients. Call Or. Ron Mac-Pherson at 1-345-5650 or write to
129 John St. Napanee Ont.

SCIENCE FORMAL TICKETS: Still
available for all Queen's Students,
Staff, and Faculty. Clark Hall
9:00am to 4:30pm. Weekdays.

CURLING BONSPILL: All those
wishing to curl in the Queen's
Curling Club Bonspiel on Sat. Nov.
9. Please attend meeting Mon. Oct.
28 at 7:30 in Stirling O. or call 548-
3701 and ask for Ari or Malcolm.

INTERESTED IN THE MUSIC OF
THE '60's and '70's in the Big Band
sound for your dance? If so, contact W.J. Babe (542-9740) or
G. Hallam (542-9740) for bookings. Also more modern stylings, Latin, etc. available.

MEG GLASSES AT THE football
Game - Rich. Stadium last Sat. 11
found please phone 544-7229, after
4pm.

1974 REIKER SE, 9 1/2 SKI BOOTS.
Never used at all. A Hat 74 Dollars.
Telephone 546-7132.

FOUND: A WATCH in squash courts
last Tuesday. Phone 544-7044.

FOUND: A SUM OF MONEY in Anatomy Building last week. Call 547-2409.

FRIENDS OF DJ. JONI AND LINDA:
a reminder to attend the Bash this Saturday Oct. 26th. We're expecting you!

DO YOU KNOW WHAT CLAP LOOKS
LIKE? See it November 15 and 16.
Tickets on sale soon!

IF YOU'D LIKE TO TRY HORSE-
BACK RIDING but don't know
where to find the horses, Queen's
Riding Club can enlighten you.
Free transportation to stables at 9:00 Saturday from Union.

CLEVELAND OHIO: OCT. 15 Bus
ride Kingston through Toronto.
Placement No. 249; Montreal and
Neuchâtel; please contact: Don
Gamble, c/o St. John's College,
Oxford England.

CALCULATOR FOR SALE: Four
functions and square, square root,
inverse, percent, memory,
floating and fixed decimal. Cheap.
30. Phone after 7pm. 549-5034.

TO THE RAIDERS OF 4th Gordon:
Alison Erps, Tim Amanda, Gary
Strengs, Rick West, Howard
Campbell, and all those who helped on decorations. Poll's
Paint and Wall paper for the free
paint and brushes; and the rest
who gave their time to help.
Thanks, Sue Seale.

PREMIER BASH AT THE S.S.
CRETIN (SATURDAY NIGHT)
BEER will be sold. 364 Brock
infiltrate the Cretin. We will expect
all friends of Bubba, Lee, Couser,
Jimmers, Chris, and Halupka.

ROOM: Large, furnished, kitchen
privileges. 319 William St. Dial 549-7942.

KEYSTONE 395 Calculator for sale.
Has Memory. Square root, percentage, exchange key, +1 key, c-
co key. Price is negotiable. Phone 549-4832.

REWARD: 1 pair of Men's Gold Rim
glasses lost in the Gym. If found,
please call Phil at 546-1634.

HEY NOW! Thanks to Ingrid, Anne,
Laurel and Bear, for the surprise
on Sunday I love you. I really do.
Fraser.

PROFESSIONAL PHOTOGRAPHER
REQUIRES MALE
AND FEMALE MODELS for a visual Circus Brochure being produced by the Canadian Association of Op-
tometrists. Subjects to be portrayed include school nurse, optician, ophthalmologist, phar-
macologist, and various aged
patients. Call Or. Ron Mac-Pherson at 1-345-5650 or write to
129 John St. Napanee Ont.

SCIENCE FORMAL TICKETS: Still
available for all Queen's Students,
Staff, and Faculty. Clark Hall
9:00am to 4:30pm. Weekdays.

CURLING BONSPILL: All those
wishing to curl in the Queen's
Curling Club Bonspiel on Sat. Nov.
9. Please attend meeting Mon. Oct.
28 at 7:30 in Stirling O. or call 548-
3701 and ask for Ari or Malcolm.

INTERESTED IN THE MUSIC OF
THE '60's and '70's in the Big Band
sound for your dance? If so, contact W.J. Babe (542-9740) or
G. Hallam (542-9740) for bookings. Also more modern stylings, Latin, etc. available.

THE BELL BOYS ARE HAVING A
BASH and invite all friends and
relatives to the Arcade at 229
University this Friday Oct. 25.
We've got the stuff so just show
up.

BING GAY MEANS LIVING GAY
CALL Terry Watson 547-2636 Mon.
to Thursday 8-9pm, or write
Student Affairs Centre c/o Terry
Watson.

ATTENTION GAELE GROUP NO. 72:
Reunion time Saturday Oct. 26 at 9:30, 261 King St. East - A party
Rod, Arto, and Carline.

ARTS '78 cards are available only
through Ougu Thomson at 546-0057.
Remaining cards will be sold on a first come first serve basis. Get to it! Fresh!

TO MARGRET J. OIKIE, Class of
'74: Congratulations on a job well done. Eat 'em raw. From two fellow Hagers, Ben and Curt.

LOST. ONE PAIR OF WIRE RIM-
MED GLASSES AT THE football
Game - Rich. Stadium last Sat. 11
found please phone 544-7229, after
4pm.

1974 REIKER SE, 9 1/2 SKI BOOTS.
Never used at all. A Hat 74 Dollars.
Telephone 546-7132.

FOUND: A WATCH in squash courts
last Tuesday. Phone 544-7044.

FOUND: A SUM OF MONEY in Anatomy Building last week. Call 547-2409.

FRIENDS OF DJ. JONI AND LINDA:
a reminder to attend the Bash this Saturday Oct. 26th. We're expecting you!

DO YOU KNOW WHAT CLAP LOOKS
LIKE? See it November 15 and 16.
Tickets on sale soon!

IF YOU'D LIKE TO TRY HORSE-
BACK RIDING but don't know
where to find the horses, Queen's
Riding Club can enlighten you.
Free transportation to stables at 9:00 Saturday from Union.

CLEVELAND OHIO: OCT. 15 Bus
ride Kingston through Toronto.
Placement No. 249; Montreal and
Neuchâtel; please contact: Don
Gamble, c/o St. John's College,
Oxford England.

CALCULATOR FOR SALE: Four
functions and square, square root,
inverse, percent, memory,
floating and fixed decimal. Cheap.
30. Phone after 7pm. 549-5034.

TO THE RAIDERS OF 4th Gordon:
Alison Erps, Tim Amanda, Gary
Strengs, Rick West, Howard
Campbell, and all those who helped on decorations. Poll's
Paint and Wall paper for the free
paint and brushes; and the rest
who gave their time to help.
Thanks, Sue Seale.

PREMIER BASH AT THE S.S.
CRETIN (SATURDAY NIGHT)
BEER will be sold. 364 Brock
infiltrate the Cretin. We will expect
all friends of Bubba, Lee, Couser,
Jimmers, Chris, and Halupka.

ROOM: Large, furnished, kitchen
privileges. 319 William St. Dial 549-7942.

tonight. Boxes of beer will be available or bring your own.
Leader, J.E.E.M.Y. Duke, Mack the Knife, P.W., the little guy with the mustache.

RIE WANTED: From Montreal Fri.
Nov. 6, p.m. and 10 Montreal.
Sunday Nov. 3 pm phone 549-3352. Evenings best. Will share gas.

WANTED: two installables (sex irrelevant) for Dave Opreved and the other half of the Craig
House sun porch pervert pair.
Interested applicants phone 549-5652. Specify choice - Engineer or Gynecologist.

BASH: Doug, Doug, Tom and Scott
(The Bell Boys) extend an invitation to all friends to attend their first party tonight at 229
University. 544-5647.

A car I would sell to a friend 1971
Datsun 510, Ziebarted and in excellent condition, economical to run, has given me up to 40 miles to a gallon. Call 549-0310.

FOR SALE: 1 Pioneer SA-1100 stereo amp, 5450; 2 JBL 100's century speakers, 5600; 1 healthkit receiver, 5240; 1 Traxor 220 watt guitar amp, 5200; 1 ovalon acoustic artist Belladere 1121-4 guitar, 5300. Call 546-4197.

LOST: Toronto weekend, one pair of blue underwear. Great sensational value. If found, place on tree outside Chown Hall and yell loudly. Bug Beknown.

GAELE GROUP 84: This is the free unclassified I won. Sparky says
"Everybody be at Barry's Saturday or Doc and I would personally destroy your room".
All our love. P.S. Barry's phone is 544-8889.

HEY MONDAY? What if I can't make it to Stirling on time. Call for help and watch this place. Circle K is on its way. Circle K is on its way to help. HELPR!!!

TO THOSE WONDERFUL 6-A
GIRLS! Thanks for the Sunday Dinner good food, good atmosphere and the superb company proved once again a great combination. 3rd Gordon Dudes.
CALCULATOR FOR SALE: four functions, and square, square root,
inverse, percent, memory,
floating and fixed decimal. Cheap.
30. Phone after 7pm. 549-5034.

CLAP IS COMING... SPREAD IT
AROUND! Medical Variety Night
1974 November 15 and 16. Tickets on sale soon!

REWARD: 1 pair of Men's Gold Rim
glasses lost in the Gym. If found,
please call Phil at 546-1634.

HEY NOW! Thanks to Ingrid, Anne,
Laurel and Bear, for the surprise
on Sunday I love you. I really do.
Fraser.

PROFESSIONAL PHOTOGRAPHER
REQUIRES MALE
AND FEMALE MODELS for a visual Circus Brochure being produced by the Canadian Association of Op-
tometrists. Subjects to be portrayed include school nurse, optician, ophthalmologist, phar-
macologist, and various aged
patients. Call Or. Ron Mac-Pherson at 1-345-5650 or write to
129 John St. Napanee Ont.

SCIENCE FORMAL TICKETS: Still
available for all Queen's Students,
Staff, and Faculty. Clark Hall
9:00am to 4:30pm. Weekdays.

CURLING BONSPILL: All those
wishing to curl in the Queen's
Curling Club Bonspiel on Sat. Nov.
9. Please attend meeting Mon. Oct.
28 at 7:30 in Stirling O. or call 548-
3701 and ask for Ari or Malcolm.

INTERESTED IN THE MUSIC OF
THE '60's and '70's in the Big Band
sound for your dance? If so, contact W.J. Babe (542-9740) or
G. Hallam (542-9740) for bookings. Also more modern stylings, Latin, etc. available.

THE BELL BOYS ARE HAVING A
BASH and invite all friends and
relatives to the Arcade at 229
University this Friday Oct. 25.
We've got the stuff so just show
up.

BING GAY MEANS LIVING GAY
CALL Terry Watson 547-2636 Mon.
to Thursday 8-9pm, or write
Student Affairs Centre c/o Terry
Watson.

ATTENTION GAELE GROUP NO. 72:
Reunion time Saturday Oct. 26 at 9:30, 261 King St. East - A party
Rod, Arto, and Carline.

ARTS '78 cards are available only
through Ougu Thomson at 546-0057.
Remaining cards will be sold on a first come first serve basis. Get to it! Fresh!

TO MARGRET J. OIKIE, Class of
'74: Congratulations on a job well done. Eat 'em raw. From two fellow Hagers, Ben and Curt.

LOST. ONE PAIR OF WIRE RIM-
MED GLASSES AT THE football
Game - Rich. Stadium last Sat. 11
found please phone 544-7229, after
4pm.

1974 REIKER SE, 9 1/2 SKI BOOTS.
Never used at all. A Hat 74 Dollars.
Telephone 546-7132.

FOUND: A WATCH in squash courts
last Tuesday. Phone 544-7044.

FOUND: A SUM OF MONEY in Anatomy Building last week. Call 547-2409.

FRIENDS OF DJ. JONI AND LINDA:
a reminder to attend the Bash this Saturday Oct. 26th. We're expecting you!

DO YOU KNOW WHAT CLAP LOOKS
LIKE? See it November 15 and 16.
Tickets on sale soon!

IF YOU'D LIKE TO TRY HORSE-
BACK RIDING but don't know
where to find the horses, Queen's
Riding Club can enlighten you.
Free transportation to stables at 9:00 Saturday from Union.

CLEVELAND OHIO: OCT. 15 Bus
ride Kingston through Toronto.
Placement No. 249; Montreal and
Neuchâtel; please contact: Don
Gamble, c/o St. John's College,
Oxford England.

CALCULATOR FOR SALE: Four
functions and square, square root,
inverse, percent, memory,
floating and fixed decimal. Cheap.
30. Phone after 7pm. 549-5034.

TO THE RAIDERS OF 4th Gordon:
Alison Erps, Tim Amanda, Gary
Strengs, Rick West, Howard
Campbell, and all those who helped on decorations. Poll's
Paint and Wall paper for the free
paint and brushes; and the rest
who gave their time to help.
Thanks, Sue Seale.

PREMIER BASH AT THE S.S.
CRETIN (SATURDAY NIGHT)
BEER will be sold. 364 Brock
infiltrate the Cretin. We will expect
all friends of Bubba, Lee, Couser,
Jimmers, Chris, and Halupka.

ROOM: Large, furnished, kitchen
privileges. 319 William St. Dial 549-7942.

KEYSTONE 395 Calculator for sale.
Has Memory. Square root, percentage, exchange key, +1 key, c-
co key. Price is negotiable. Phone 549-4832.

REWARD: 1 pair of Men's Gold Rim
glasses lost in the Gym. If found,
please call Phil at 546-1634.

HEY NOW! Thanks to Ingrid, Anne,
Laurel and Bear, for the surprise
on Sunday I love you. I really do.
Fraser.

PROFESSIONAL PHOTOGRAPHER
REQUIRES MALE
AND FEMALE MODELS for a visual Circus Brochure being produced by the Canadian Association of Op-
tometrists. Subjects to be portrayed include school nurse, optician, ophthalmologist, phar-
macologist, and various aged
patients. Call Or. Ron Mac-Pherson at 1-345-5650 or write to
129 John St. Napanee Ont.

SCIENCE FORMAL TICKETS: Still
available for all Queen's Students,
Staff, and Faculty. Clark Hall
9:00am to 4:30pm. Weekdays.

CURLING BONSPILL: All those
wishing to curl in the Queen's
Curling Club Bonspiel on Sat. Nov.
9. Please attend meeting Mon. Oct.
28 at 7:30 in Stirling O. or call 548-
3701 and ask for Ari or Malcolm.

INTERESTED IN THE MUSIC OF
THE '60's and '70's in the Big Band
sound for your dance? If so, contact W.J. Babe (542-9740) or
G. Hallam (542-9740) for bookings. Also more modern stylings, Latin, etc. available.

THE BELL BOYS ARE HAVING A
BASH and invite all friends and
relatives to the Arcade at 229
University this Friday Oct. 25.
We've got the stuff so just show
up.

BING GAY MEANS LIVING GAY
CALL Terry Watson 547-2636 Mon.
to Thursday 8-9pm, or write

Quartet restores grace of a bygone era

by Hugh Agnew

The concert by the Quartetto Esterhazy in Dunning Hall on Tuesday evening was undoubtedly a musical event of the first order. Playing works of the 17th and 18th centuries on authentic, unaltered instruments, the members of the quartet opened a new and enticing vista of the Classical era for the listeners. The greatest single factor contributing to the exciting differences in the group's sound was use of authentic instruments. During the last hundred years, the structure of the violin has been changed to accommodate a greater tension on the strings, and wire has replaced gut as the material of the strings themselves. This allows a modern violin to compete with the brass in a symphony orchestra, and to fill the large concert halls of today with its greater dynamic range and carrying power. Unfortunately, these developments have also changed the sound quality of the instrument from that which was imagined by composers like Mozart and Haydn when they wrote their music. It is the belief of the Quartetto Esterhazy that an appreciation of these works is enhanced by hearing them as they were meant to be played. This belief was definitely borne out by the evening's performance.

The first composer represented on the program was England's Henry Purcell. The Quartetto chose three of his instrumental fantasias; imitative, highly contrapuntal works which received restrained and delicate treatment from the performers. The music was immediately impressed with the ensemble's tremendous cohesiveness—it seemed at times that the four individuals had become one artist playing one instrument. This togetherness was also evident in the next selection, four dances by the Italian, Salomon Rossi. These pieces were admirably suited for demonstrating that the unaltered instruments were capable of a tone quality of immense vitality and even exuberance, as well as the limpid clarity and restrained power shown in the Purcell.

The Esterhazy Quartet is, however, a string quartet; and it was with the next two works, quartets by Haydn and Mozart, that the ensemble truly demonstrated the abilities of the instruments and performers. The sonority produced ranged from a limpid, singing, almost ethereal line to a clear, precisely articulated attack to a subtle, transparent layering of sound in perfect tune due to the lack of vibrato. Although the instruments do lack the strident fortissimo of their modern descendants, they are certainly capable of the finer, more delicate nuances of dynamic expression and also a warmly emotional colour especially evident in the 'cello part of the Adagio movement in Haydn's string quartet. The Quartetto Esterhazy restored some of the grace and finesse of a bygone era with a concert that was truly a gem, and left the audience hoping to hear them again.

Organist provides enjoyable evening

by Sharon Keates

Last Monday marked the second in a series of six organ recitals to be held in Grant Hall, sponsored by the Music Department. These concerts, as most music department events, are free to the public and offer a fine calibre of musical performance. There was a surprisingly small turn-out Monday evening, and it's a curiosity that more people don't take advantage of these opportunities for an enjoyable listening experience.

This evening featured John Gallienne, organist and Master of Choristers at St. George's Cathedral. In spite of his uncertainty in maintaining a steady metre and some stumbling in passages throughout, his recital was quite effective and displayed a variety of styles and time periods. Pieces included those of Buxtehude and Bach, and also a selection by the more contemporary Hindemith.

The recitals thus far have offered works by both popular and lesser composers. In effect, they offer something for everyone. A notable number of scheduled recitalists have been drawn from the city of Kingston, and this evening was proof the worthy contribution they will make. The dates of the upcoming concerts are November 24, January 19, February 24, and March 16—dates to keep in mind.

If you like to deal in dollars and are looking for a challenge in one of the most competitive fields around

We're looking for people with fresh ideas and the ability to back them up.

NOVEMBER 25TH, 1974

NOVEMBER 26TH, 1974

PLEASE CONTACT
YOUR PLACEMENT
OFFICE FOR FURTHER DETAILS.

DEADLINE DATE FOR APPLI-CATIONS IS NOVEMBER 4TH.

The First Canadian Bank

Bank of Montreal

The Queen's Journal, Friday, Oct. 25, 1974

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT
SUNDAY 10 AM TO 8 PM

the MARKET
BARBER SHOP
& hairstyling salon
Peter Smits invites you
to his new hair core shop
549-2110
43 BROCK ST., KINGSTON ONT.

- GREB-KODIAK BOOTS-
Waterproof, Insulated, Plain or Steel Toe.
Sizes 4 to 13
Always Your Size in Stock at the Best Price

LARRY'S Men's Wear at
354 King St., East
Just 3 Doors from Princess St.

Charlottetown
Festival's
ANNE OF GREEN GABLES
Thursday OCT. 31
Grand Theatre
8:30 p.m.
Tickets: $6.50, $5.50, $4.50, $3.50
(50¢ discount to students and senior citizens)
a Division of Concerts
event

The Queen's Journal, Friday, Oct. 25, 1974

Sculpture exhibit at Agnes

by Nancy Spies

Presently on display at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre is a fascinating exhibit of works created by students from the Bachelor of Art Education Programme. One of the most striking features of the show is the individuality of the artists' work, which results primarily in a great variation of subject matter, media and style. This is particularly true of the sculpture which tends to dominate the exhibit.

The Bachelor of Art Education Programme is relatively unknown to many people on campus for enrolment is limited to twenty-five each year, and so only a small group of students are directly involved. Judging from the show, however, the programme is a very significant and successful one at Queen's. It is designed for students who wish to gain a basic introductory training in Fine Arts, along with an opportunity to continue and specialize in areas of interest. As a result the first two years of the programme concentrates on a formal training of the basic elements, with more freedom for self-direction in the final two years. Although the works in the exhibit are drawn from all four years, the proportion is greater from the upper levels which largely explains the marked individual nature of many of the pieces.

Variations in technique

Sculpture and prints are the dominant form in the exhibit, but variations in material and technique are so great that it is impossible to deal with the works in such general categories. For this reason it is also very difficult to single out any particular piece, for each one is of interest and deserves merit.

One of the strongest pieces in the show is a sculpture by Peter Johnston, which was a major project for him in his final year at Queen's. Construction of this work was a very complex undertaking. The idea was first sculpted in a small wax maquette and cast into resin for permanence. This model was then sliced into six sections and the form was analyzed very carefully. Once the artist was satisfied the sections were translated into styrofoam to give the sculpture its present size. The surface was filled with polyfiller to give a smooth finish, and sealed with shellac in order to prepare it for the polyester resin coating which would form the mold. The styrofoam was then dug out of the sections and the final form was cast in fiberglass giving the work durability. The sections were then joined and the entire piece was given a dull black finish.

This black finish reinforces the feeling of the density and stability of the work. If one approaches it from various angles, however, one experiences a change from this static quality to one of dynamic movement. In fact, due to the nature of the contours, the sculpture almost appears fluid from certain vantage points. The artist was also studying the idea of transition between sculpture which is of the upright "wall" type and that which rests upon the floor. Thus this form combines these two types and shows a transition from one plane to another.

Another excellent sculpture is a work by Debbie Sinclair which was completed in her first year in the B.A.E. Programme. As Francis Smith, the curator at the Art Centre pointed out, the piece is notable for it successfully combines the sense of a smooth, hard surface with that of a soft malleable one, which is a difficult problem to tackle.

Sculpture in mirrors

With the use of material as common as broken glass and pieces of mirrors, Marlene Creates completed two very intriguing sculptures in her final year. The observer becomes directly involved in the sculpture because of the mirrors, and the works provide a very interesting study of degrees of transparency. Closely connected to her sculpture is a silk screen print which reflects her idea that positive and negative space is of equal importance.

One of the curious features of the prints in the art show, is that unlike the sculptures, they do tend to fall more easily into themes. Several pieces, for instance are reminiscent of the early 1900's, and this nostalgia appears to be a growing movement not only in art, but in music and other areas as well. To achieve this effect, the artists have used old photographs which were re-photographed onto half-tone film (the type used in newspapers) and by a special process this image was transferred to a screen and printed. Ken Frost has, for example, created an excellent print in this manner and Lee Kozlik also has an interesting one with this theme, entitled "When She was Twenty".

There are a group of prints in the exhibit which were created by the students during the summer, when they were attending Falmouth Summer School. The influence of the coast was a source of obvious inspiration and there are several prints reflecting this. "The Sea at Cornwall" by Lee Kozlik is an excellent one in this respect.

The only disappointment in this exhibit is the lack of representation of paintings. Although this may reflect a bias in the choice of pieces for the show, it is more likely due to the fact that recently upper year students have tended to specialize more in print-making and sculpture. Gerry Banting, however, who is a graduate of the programme, has some very interesting pieces in this area.

Peter Johnston, who both exhibited and helped to set up the display, remarked that some of the best pieces didn't make it to the exhibit since they weren't readily available. He felt that the Art History Department should have taken more responsibility in choosing pieces for the show, and had as such not treated it seriously enough.

Despite such difficulties the exhibit on the whole is of an excellent calibre and Mr. Heywood, a new instructor in the B.A.E. Programme was very impressed with the quality of the show and indicated that it was far better than any he had seen previously. The exhibit will remain on display until November 3, 1974 and provides an excellent opportunity to become more familiar with the B.A.E. Programme and its students.

One of the sculptures on display during the B.A.E. exhibit at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre

Journal Advertisers

Please note that Journal advertising deadlines are as follows:

5 pm Tuesday for Friday issues

5 pm Saturday for Tuesday issues

There is no guarantee that material submitted after these deadlines will be printed

IF YOU LIKE

TEQUILA

Come to the
QUEEN'S PUB

ON TUESDAY

FOR OUR TEQUILA
BASH!

G.S.S. Film Club

Friday Film Series
Presents

Act of the Heart

Canadian Film with Donald Sutherland and Genevieve Bujold

Friday October 25

Ellis Auditorium

8:00 pm

Admission: Series ticket or $1.00 at the door

ASUS ORIENTATION COMMITTEE

Applications now available in ASUS Office,
Mackintosh-Corry B105 (547-3069)

Deadline for submission of applications is Friday, October 25, 12 noon at ASUS Office.

For further information call 547-3069 or 544-8583

Cue for Treason reminiscent of high school play

by Donovan D. Baxter
Chronicles XXIV, a rendering of Cue For Treason adapted and directed by John Reeves, opened last Tuesday, and proved a very funny but confusing short play. The confusion may be attributed to several things. First, the plot was at times incomprehensible. Secondly, the play was presented in the scripted improvisational, and since there were twenty actors on the stage, the execution of the rather intricate blocking tended to be sloppy and lacked the necessary focus.

Much of the problem of focus could have been alleviated by cutting down the size of the cast. A smaller group would have been more vital, less distracting. The characters were exaggerated, animated, and colourful as was the dialogue. The majority of the production would have made good "children's" theatre. However, several of the ribald scenes and jokes were inconsistent and frankly inexplicable. They succeeded, nonetheless, in drawing smirks and glee with lewd suggestion, vaguely reminiscent of a high school Christmas show.

Reeves' script was extremely humorous, and the full house enjoyed it thoroughly. Most gimmickry was tight, well timed and successful.

The cast marched about dutifully; they sang and recited for us, but it lacked energy and enthusiasm. The performers seemed present only during their own individual moments. An analogy could be drawn to a bowl of Beaver vegetable soup - interesting little chunks floating about in a rather cloudy, messy broth. The chunks were played by Kathryn Bronskill in the lead role of a young man struggling to save his queen. She struggled not only against the most dastardly of villains, but also against some rather ludicrous dialogue. She won the struggle and succeeded in being very funny in doing so.

Other chunks in the show were comfortable Peter Palmer doing a variety of thick rather clued out roles Peter Meech who played a princely king with presence and charm, and Lorraine Forbes who was refreshingly sane. In retrospect there were many "chunks" in the person of Jeanne Prevost as the delightfully dumb older brother and Stephen Caldwell who played the slimy, very evil villain, top-hatted yet. The list includes the whole cast "too numerous to mention", all of whom had shining moments.

Cue for Treason is presented in the studio of the Old Arts Building, as part of the popular Chronicle series. Tickets are free and are available from the Drama Department Office.

Kathryn Bronskill as the hero in Cue for Treason

Tom times two

The first English Department poetry reading this year features Tom Wayman of Vancouver and Queen's own Tom Marshall, each reading his own poetry. Tom Wayman has written two books of poems. Waiting for Wayman and For and Against the Moon. Tom Marshall's latest volume, the third in his Elements quartet and entitled The Earth Book, is on the verge of publication and may be introduced at the reading. The earlier volumes were Magic Water and The Silences of Fire. The poetry reading will take place Tuesday, October 29, at 8:30 pm, in room 517, John Watson Hall.

AMS Education Commission Presents

A Public Lecture And Film

The Lecture: "Reappraising Human Prospects"

"WOULD YOU NOT HAVE A CHOICE BETWEEN GROWTH AND A STABLE SOCIETY; WE ONLY HAVE A CHOICE BETWEEN A STABLE SOCIETY AND DISASTER"

Dr. Aurelio Peccei

PRESIDENT OF THE CLUB OF ROME
ITALIAN INDUSTRIALIST
AUTHOR - CHASM AHEAD

WEDNESDAY OCTOBER 30
8 P.M. ELLIS AUDITORIUM

THE FILM:

"LIMITS TO GROWTH"

7 P.M. - ELLIS AUDITORIUM

AMS EDUCATION COMMISSION

ABRAMSKY

Men's Wear

Queen's students 10% off

full line of men's clothing and furnishings

259 Princess St.

50 TIMES MORE POWER!

CKLC
98.3

Now people EVERYWHERE can enjoy Kingston's wonderful world of FM Stereo Music!

Bews complaints

Thefts and defaults ruin Bews

by Carl Fitzpatrick
Hockey season has started and the competition is tough as usual.

With the start of hockey each team is given the privilege of using the dressing rooms in the arena. These rooms must be kept clean and tidy and locked at all times. Unfortunately this year thefts have again been reported. To avoid this it is the responsibility of each team manager to secure the key to the room from the arena superintendent at the deposit cost of one dollar. Also it is advised that the manager should bring a lock with him so that valuables may be kept in the locker provided in each room.

Doors opening on Division St. as well as Clergy and Union are kept locked so that unauthorized people may not enter the building. However it is the practice of some people to let people in through these doors. For your own protection do not do this. A custodian is posted at the main entrance of the P.H.E. building and it is his job to screen everyone. Please follow these simple rules and I am sure that further thefts will not occur.

The Bews program is so set up that all non-collegiate team members can play their favourite sports. However this year the system has caused a few problems for the convenors and the director. The problems do not lie with these hard working individuals but with the teams themselves. For a team to default out of sport is very common this year. This not only causes havoc with the schedules but it also penalizes the team by taking points away from their year in the Bews race. Not only do you lose points in that sport but to enter the next scheduled sport event your year must give up 2000 points to enter.

This practice of defaulting must stop. It is the responsibility of the Athletic Stick to make sure that his managers are aware of this rule and to ensure that a team is present and dressed for each game. If, for reasons beyond the control of the team, they cannot be present for a scheduled game they must notify the convenor in writing, 48 hours prior to the game so that it can be rescheduled.

Bews sports are for your enjoyment and only you can make them work. Teams that default only deprive others of the chance to play and win-lose fairly. Please conform to these suggestions and Bews will once again be fun for all.

Wic-ly

This week an honourable mention goes out to Law '76 for the great turn out they had at the Swim Nite. Thanks to you the Inner Tube Water Polo games turned out to be a big success. Presently leading in the SWIMATHON is Kathy Brace (Grads.) with 204 laps. The next SWIM NITE will be held Nov. 14, featuring a Syncho Swim Clinic starring the Syncho Team for expert instruction.

Watch out for the BASKETBALL finals starting soon.

The PADDLEBALL arrange-your-own-matches tourney continues.

CO-ED BADMINTON got off to a good start last Sunday. If you're interested you can come out this Sunday as well, between 7:00 - 10:00 pm.

All female students of Queen's University are informally invited to come out to the SKATATHON. Any number of laps on any of the nights will earn you five participation points towards your intramural Queen's mug, Queen's bookends or silver tray. If you skate the highest number of laps over the three nights, you will earn a pennant award and 1,000 points for your faculty towards the "Marion Ross trophy." So girls come out and skate (or learn how-instruction will be given) on Wed. Oct. 30 and Nov. 6 - 8:00 pm, Jock Hartly Arena. You are welcome to bring guys for support.

WIC activities are really rolling. Don't be left behind. And a word of thanks to the hard working Convenors who are making it all happen. Wic - Just for the fun of it.

Fencing

This weekend on Saturday Queen's will be hosting the Fourth Annual Women's Invitational Fencing Tournament. Action will start at 9:45 am in the Bews gym and will run until approximately 5:00 pm.

unclassifieds

APPLIED SCIENCE STUDENT wishes to thank Arts and Science student for her helpful understanding. I couldn't have made it without you Barb. Love Jackson.

NEED A ONE BEDROOM furnished apartment or room close to campus starting May 1st. Get one worry off your mind. Call Jim 549-5755.

GAEL GROUP '78: Reunion starts at 184 University Ave. at 8pm tonight. If you can't make it, please phone us. Ounc, Elaine, Mo, Ted.

MCNEILL 3rd South asks Ron to please stop messing up their car. First you bleed all over the sink with the Finch cash in your big toe, then you barf all over the toilet seat. Congratulations to Dave on the birth of a handsome Foo-Man-Choo muskache.

OEBBIE, contrary to popular belief you are not a so called alcoholic. Signed an apologetic alcoholic.

GAEL GROUP 84 Purple Jesus Party Saturday morning 11am, Barri Bell's room in Vic. Attendance compulsory. Phone me or Doc or Barry (544-689) for more info. If you want it. Love, Sparky

IF YOU HAVE ANY STRONG OPINIONS about the state of student housing at Queen's, phone Art at 549-4250. By giving your opinion, you'll be helping us in the production of a 1/2 hour television documentary on the student housing situation.

ONTARIO WOMEN'S INTERCOLLEGIATE ASSOCIATION COMPETITIONS. Part One Field Hockey Tournament, Fri. October 25, 12:30 pm and Sat. October 26, 8am-3pm. Teams: University of Toronto, Laurentian, McGill, McMaster, Ottawa University, Queen's. Fencing Sat. October 26, 10am-5pm, Bews Gym. Also Queen's Invitational Volleyball Sat. Oct. 25, Bartlett Gym.

MEN'S ALPINE SKI TEAM, organizational meeting Tues. October 29 8:00 pm, Upstairs Phys. Ed. Foyer.

ASHBURY COLLEGE in Ottawa is on the prowl. Would all those Old Bews of our school attending Queen's please get in touch with Steve Tanos, 544-7167.

OCT. 26, Queen's at R.M.C. Present the first annual Ottawa Valley Association Volleyball Tournament. Place: physical education centre. Time: 8am to 6pm. Admission free. Everyone welcome.

I'D LIKE TO THANK whoever the nice person was who returned my I.O. to Vic last week. Thanks Barb Johnson.

MANY THANKS to the girl who called to report the finding of my missing bicycle wheel. Your friendship was much appreciated. Thanks again, Sharon Reynolds, Victoria Hall.

DESIGN A CREST FOR PSYCHOLOGY. The shrinks are counting on YOU!! We guarantee the winner all the FREE BEER he or she can drink at the Psych Smoker, Nov. 14. Our minds are still trying to think up a really super award. Contest ends Nov. 7, please hand in your crest at the Psychology office in Humphrey Hall. Leave your phone number as well as your name.

OWIAA title bout held at Queen's

by Kathy Keely

The past month and a half of running up and down the pitch has boiled down to two weekends of play for the women's field hockey teams. Both the senior and intermediate teams will be competing in the OWIAA championships in the next two weeks. Queen's is fortunate enough to be hosting Part 1 (east) of this event on Friday, October 25 and Saturday, October 26. The games will be played continuously on the Lower Campus field behind Vic Hall.

The Intermediates have demonstrated good scoring punch and team play throughout the exhibition games. The team has a solid offence as well as a defence which consistently feeds the offence to put them in scoring position. This team certainly has great potential to win their section of the tournament (touch wood!!) providing they continue to perform as a team.

The Seniors ran into injury problems during the first part of the season. This initially hampered their team play but Coach Carson has introduced a new system of play which may prove to be the needed addition. They have a very strong defence with Cathy Smith in goal and Gail Thompson and Paula Luck at fullback. Thus with a little more luck in putting the ball in the net, this team could be in contention.

Let's get out there and support the girls. The Seniors will be playing on Friday at 1:30 pm and on Saturday at 9:30 am and 12:30 pm. The Intermediates will take to the field on Friday at noon and on Saturday at 8:00 am and 11:00 am and 2:00 pm.

Gaels in close finale

by Jim LeMesurier

The Golden Gaels close their 1974 gridiron campaign, Saturday, against the visiting Guelph Gryphons. The game is virtually meaningless for the 2-4 Gaels but could be interesting (close) with Guelph laying their slim playoff hopes on the line.

As anti-climatic as the game is for the Gaels, it is hard to imagine them as underdogs against a team as perennially poor as the lowly Gryphons, but Guelph have won their last two games (they were winless in their first 4 starts) and are a serious threat. They will rely on hard running halfbacks Bruce Morris and Dave Lane to provide most of their offense but could have trouble if Queen's stay with the 5-3 defense which saw relative success against Varsity's ground attack.

For the Gaels, Raoul Scerbrin will start at quarterback, joined by Dave Hadden, Peter McNabb and Brian Tiley in the Backfield. If they can generate a reasonable amount of offense Queen's should prevail in this tight contest and add a satisfying finish to an otherwise disappointing season.

The Installation Of Principal Watts

The Convocation for the Installation of Dr. R. Watts as Principal of Queen's will take place at 3 pm in Grant Hall on Friday November 8th. The Alma Mater Society will distribute a student allocation of tickets on a first-come-first-served basis.

For further information regarding tickets contact John Gray (University Affairs) 547-6165

OPT OUTS

For the Specific Fees Collected for:

TRICOLOR $4.00

AND

CONCERTS $3.00

Will Be available in the AMS office starting
Monday, October 28

to

Friday, November 1

Students wishing to opt out must
bring their student cards with them

"I'm from Women's Lib and I don't actually want any shoes—I just like to have a man kneeling at my feet."

quickies!

LOURENÇO MARQUES, Mozambique-Portuguese and African nationalist troops toured the streets of the Mozambique capital Tuesday appealing for calm after a night of racial violence in which at least 49 people were killed. The Central Hospital reported that the dead included 32 whites, 15 black Africans and one unidentified person. There were approximately 160 people injured. The violence erupted after an attack on the troops of Mozambique's black transitional government by former Portuguese soldiers. The Portuguese servicemen who were involved had been demobilized last month after Lisbon had agreed to turn over Mozambique to the Mozambique Liberation Front.

WASHINGTON (EARTH NEWS)—The Food and Drug Administration has issued a recall for 50,000 silicon breast implants and 2,000 silicon testicle implants.

The agency said the implants were improperly packaged and could result in infections. They were distributed over the past years to doctors in five nations, including the United States and Canada.

OTTAWA—New regulations were announced by Robert Andras, Minister of Manpower and Immigration, relating admission to Canada more closely to the job market. Candidates for immigration that will be affected are those assessed on factors such as education, age, and whether or not they have relatives in Canada. The minister feels the restrictions are necessary because immigrants are arriving in increasing numbers at a time when employment levels are uncertain. As well housing facilities are scarce and expensive. The new requirements demand that the immigrant have a job lined up and will be going to a part of the country where his skills are needed.

OTTAWA—The proposed legislation to give Indians higher royalties for oil and natural gas found on their lands has been given a second reading in the House of Commons. The bill sets forth a new schedule which would increase revenues to $40 million this year from $9 million last year. The present schedule of royalties was set up in 1966. The opposition spokesman criticized that the proposed bill would not give any voice to Indian leaders and hands. The legislation would give the cabinet the power to adjust fees regularly to take price changes into account.

MONTREAL—Ralph Salerno, formerly of the New York City Police Intelligence Department, has provided information to the Quebec Police Commission's inquiry into organized crime. Salerno told the Commission that organized crime is seeking new activities which have fewer risks involved. The various groups are moving out of the 'drug field' where prison sentences have become increasingly stiff, and into pornography. Pornography is not only profitable but it brings criminal convictions related to it bring only minor sentences. Gambling, pornography and other activities that are restricted by law but are in public demand are extremely profitable. Salerno said Salerno also commented on methods used by organized crime to reach the powerful government positions. Attempts at bribery of minor officials or senior officials is an on-going process. The aim is not to run but rather to manipulate administrations to make way for greater profits in illegal activities. DENVER—The cost of living is forcing up the cost of dying. The president of a string of funeral homes said the best way to beat inflation at the funeral home is to buy now. He blames the rising cost of personnel, caskets, urns, burial vaults and even gasoline used in hearses for the slump in profits.

PARIS—French government officials yesterday stated publicly that the FLQ kidnappers of British Diplomat James Cross can remain in France as political exiles. Interior Minister, Michel Poniatowski declared that they have a right to political exile in France as long as they do not engage in any violent action. The same policy, Mr. Poniatowski said applied to refugees from the Basque region. He added that there had been no request for the extradition of the Quebec terrorists from the Canadian authorities.

Last summer all of the Quebec terrorists who had abducted the diplomat in Montreal in 1970 landed in Paris. They had been granted safe passage from Canada to France 4 years ago.

In Ottawa, the federal government indicated that it will not apply for the extradition of the kidnappers as this was part of the original deal for exchange of the British diplomat.

Doug Sneyd

"Will there be lots to eat in heaven?"

"Women and Madness"

MONTREAL (CUP)—"Women in psychiatric terms are considered crazy no matter what they do," according to Dr. Phyllis Chesler, clinical psychologist and author of "Women and Madness."

"Those who accept the stereotype of the 'feminine' woman are called neurotic and those who don't are called other names like castrating or dyke."

Chesler was speaking to an audience of more than 500 at the opening of a three day Women's Health Seminar at McGill.

"We live in a male-homosexual culture," said Chesler, "one in which men are both worshipped and dominant." According to Chesler, "Women have low esteem, hate themselves, and are as least as conformist as men." Chesler attributed these feelings to female acceptance of a male-conceived role - one that portrays women as compassionate, helpful, altruistic creatures whose work need not be rewarded, but whose failure to produce the expected is inevitably punished.

"Women need help," Chesler asserted, "a kind of help that even the best psychotherapy can't provide." Therefore, she said women need economic help—in the form of direct wages for labour—as well as education, child care and adequate housing.

"Ideally," said Chesler, "there should exist a society where basic needs are met routinely for all people. I don't think that the feminist vision will ever be successful without some form of communism." But the women who desire equality in our society and institutions must first achieve personal strength. Only strong people can make strong changes," Chesler said.

Trudeau to bury hatchet

PARIS—As of Monday, Canada and France have agreed to bury past differences and to re-open relations between the two countries. French-Canadian relations had come to a standstill in 1967 with DeGaulle's proclamation in Montreal, "Vive le Quebec Libre!"

In his speech at the Elysee Palace, French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing said that the two nations had much in common and had the potential to be "first class partners."

So far, the only concrete decision derived from the reconciliation has been the agreement to erect an energy study group consisting of individuals from the two countries. The group is to meet within the next month to begin studying energy matters that affect both countries.

Canada's attitude toward the matter however, is one of caution. She realizes that France hopes to obtain certain Canadian resource commodities, especially uranium for use in nuclear reactors.

France has offered to aid Canada in developing the process by which uranium is upgraded before it can be sold for this purpose. Canada in return, hopes to see some of its own nuclear reactors to France.

backpage

WIN AT SOLITAIRE

Give your Queen of Hearts an Ace of Diamonds. A dazzling, glorious diamond solitaire... with all the brilliance of your special love. It's in the cards... she'll be yours forever... and you'll be the happy winner.

KINNEAR d'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

John Bottomley

Premier William Davis speaks to Queen's students Thursday.

No fee increase

by Sue Wishart
"There will be no tuition fee increase next year", Ontario Premier William Davis told the Journal on Thursday.

He made this statement during a meeting with representatives of the Queen's press following a question-and-answer session with students and faculty members.

Davis emphatically denied an Ontario Federation of Students' prediction that tuition fees will be raised six weeks after the next provincial election, which is expected next fall. He labelled the OFS forecast as "totally wrong", and added that he expects students to see through it.

When asked what the government intends to do to ease the student housing crisis, Davis stated that the situation is "something we're trying to improve". He explained that fluctuating enrolments (at other universities) have made it difficult to estimate the number of student housing units needed each year. Another problem facing the government, he said, is that there is only limited capital available to finance the construction of new residences.

Davis admitted that the Ontario Student Awards Program (OSAP) has no provisions for subsidizing students who are forced to live off campus in housing they can't really afford, and promised to mention the problem to the Minister of Colleges and Universities.

He would not comment directly on whether or not the $32 per month OSAP living allowances is adequate. The government is looking for ways to make more money available for OSAP, he stressed, but he gave no indication that the living allowance will be changed.

On the question of university financing, Davis responded that the government is aware of the problems Ontario universities are having as a result of a progressively tighter squeeze on their financial support. Provincial grants to universities have failed to match increased costs for several years in a row, causing financial crises at many institutions. Davis insisted that the government has no intention of forcing a decline in the quality of university education in Ontario, but claimed that this quality does not depend only on the amount of money spent. The government hopes to release soon its preliminary estimates of the support it will give universities during 1975-76, he said.

Senators elected

Virginia Morse and Sue Wishart were the first to cross the finish line in the race held Friday to fill two ASUS vacancies on the Senate, according to Chief Electoral Officer. Morse came in first with 281 votes, followed by Wishart who collected 273 votes.

Three other contestants, while left far behind by these two, also did fairly well. Dunnean MacDonnell received 172 votes, George Laidlaw 103 and Steve McGirr 93.

Another race, this one to fill vacancies for ASUS reps on Outer Council, never amounted to much of a contest. The only two students who showed interest in the positions were acclaimed to

200 rehash old topics, ignore student issues

by Paul Steep
Ontario Premier Bill Davis was at Queen's last Thursday afternoon speaking to a group of about two hundred students. The meeting between Premier and students highlighted two things, Davis's expertise as a politician and the reluctance of the students to confront him on matters that concerned them as students.

Davis delivered a short speech stressing the social implications of our economic problems rather than the specifics of the problems themselves. Mr. Davis felt that as a nation, we were in fair economic shape, but that a national feeling of instability was growing out of our inability to halt inflation. This instability was further emphasized in our economic dependence upon the United States. He pointed out that the current problems of the U.S. will have an effect on the Canadian economy sooner or later due to that dependence.

The social problems produced by inflation require programs that cost money. A healthy economy is essential in providing a source of revenue to fund those programs. That, Davis felt, was one of the dilemmas of modern government. Our ability to effectively deal with the economic problems of our time lessens as the problems grow larger.

Davis delivered his speech in a formal and reserved manner. One could almost describe him as having been ill at ease. However, when he'd concluded his speech and began to answer the questions from students he relaxed noticeably.

Student questioning centred around issues that the Premier must be used to answering now. The proposed rapid transit system for Toronto, a monorail type arrangement, came under fire for its inflated price of one and a quarter billion dollars. Davis answered this by stating a theme that he returned to several times during the afternoon that of communication. He felt that figures like one and a quarter billion dollars unfairly represented the situation. He blamed this lack of communication on the media.

The sharpest criticism was saved for the Pickering Airport and Cedarwood, a planned community that will be built next to the airport. Davis took no responsibility for the site of the airport saying it was not chosen by the provincial government. The site of Cedarwood was a provincial matter though, and again before answering the question Davis credited poor communication for most of the problem.

Cedarwood is not displacing a lot of farmers off of prime land. According to Davis there are very few bona fide farmers in the area. Most of the land was owned by speculators in which case there will be a great saving to potential homeowners now that the government has expropriated the land.

He further stressed that there was a real need for a community near Toronto and that Cedarwood, being east of the city, was encouraging development away from the already crowded west end.

Davis's political aspirations were only hinted at. When asked if he has any designs on the federal Conservative Party leadership he declined a "yes" or "no" answer, paused, and then said "I'm doing what I can do in this province and I'm going to keep doing that."

Davis's adept defense of his government's policies was low key politicking. He was only overtly partisan in one remark: "Unless you get into the entirely different ideology of the N.D.P., do the Liberals really present a credible alternative to the Conservative government?" It is testimony to his ability as a professional politician that in this one statement he could so effectively nullify the credibility of his opponents.

The questioning of Mr. Davis by Queen's students has to be labelled disappointing. The issues discussed were all broad topics that are rehashed time and time again. Student issues, ones that receive only sporadic coverage in the press, were virtually ignored.

Educational spending was only lightly touched upon, and only then in a context that was irrelevant to the university community. The Land Speculation Act, so seriously affecting student housing all across the province was not brought up at all. Neither was the problem of antiquated liquor licensing laws, or the role of the O.F.S. and its influence in Ontario politics. This is not to deny the importance of the issues discussed, but it is unfortunate that other issues, more directly affecting the university and its students, were so badly neglected.

Referendum proposed by Golden Words

Bill Horricks, Editor of the Engineer's newspaper Golden Words, is presently collecting signatures for a November referendum in order to allow Queen's students the decision of whether to pass or defeat the proposals of the Honoraria and Salary Review Committee.

The referendum now reads: "That by law No. 8 section 4 dealing with the honorarium paid to volunteers of the AMS remain as formally stated in the constitution effective Sept. 1, 1974 that any changes to this by-law must be effected through another referendum."

Outer Council has already approved the Honoraria report. Horricks, however, does not feel that it is up to representatives of students to pass or defeat this bylaw change.

In response to this, Ian Nordheimer, Chairman of the committee stated, "I don't believe in government by referendum. Students have to trust the people they have elected to represent them. They can't keep second guessing the people they put into office or there is no point in having them there."

Queen's

Journal

Volume 102 Number 15

Tuesday, October 29, 1974

wat's hapnin'?

Upcoming events

Friday, November 1 - Bitter Grounds Coffee House and Good Times Emporium presents Black Creek An evening of the bluegrass, featuring banjo picking and fiddleplaying. Tickets available in the John Orr Room Wednesday, Thursday and Friday 10:30 - 4:30.

Friday, November 1 - Communist Meeting - Bill Stewart, provincial party leader, will speak on Health Services and Unemployment followed by questions and general discussion. All are welcome. Time: 8pm. Place: Room 517, John Watson Hall, Queen's Crescent. For details phone 542-5079.

Monday, November 4 - 7:30pm - History Department presents Career's Night. Room 517, John Watson Hall. Representatives from Career Planning and Placement, McArthur College, and Department of graduate studies will discuss opportunities for history students.

Monday, November 4 - 8 pm. We welcome you to join us in singing Gilbert and Sullivan at McArthur A115. For more information call Dr. G. Southall 546-5817.

Monday, November 4 - 7:30 pm - Life Science Rounds Brain Tumours. Richardson Amphitheatre.

Tuesday, November 5 - Franzpeter Gebels - piano. With astounding reviews from Germany - 'immense musicality and technical command,' 'the most stimulating musical experience on could imagine' - his concerts have ended with 'never ending Applause! a standing ovation,' and 'several encores.'

Wednesday, November 6 - Micheal Ondaatje will present a reading of his poetry and a screening of his most recent film, The Clinton Special, on Wednesday, Nov 6, at 7:30pm in Ellis Auditorium. Ondaatje is well known in the Canadian Literary world for his works "The Collected Works of Billy the Kid" and "Rat Jelly". His films have also received critical acclaim, beginning Sons of Captain Poetry. A study of poet B.P. Nicol. The Clinton Special, his latest film is a documentary of the Theatre Passe Muraille Company on tour with their play "The Farm Show". Following the screening, Ondaatje will discuss aspects of his work with the audience. This event is jointly sponsored by Queen's Department of English and the Department of Film Studies. There is no admission charge for this event.

Saturday November 9 - 9:00 pm The Queen's West Indian Club at Kingston will be having their annual Fall Dance in Leonard Cafeteria. As in the previous years all Queen's students are invited to come.

Pubs and Theatres

Frontenac - Finnegan's - Liam Maguire
Frontenac - Muldoon's - The Moonshiners
4th Inn - Ray Smith
Townhouse - Shannon
Commodore - Slewoff

Hyland - Gravy Train
Hyland - Loving Molly
Odeon - Airport 75
Capitol 1 - Death Wish
Capitol 2 - Frankenstein

Tuesday, October 29

7:00 pm - Queen's Musical Theatre will be holding auditions for lead roles in the musical Gypsy in the Red Room at Kingston Hall. All people interested in technical work please come out on this night also.

7:30 pm - Canadian Crossroads International information session in the Lower Lounge, International Centre. Selection for this year's program will be discussed.

7:30 pm - Play Reading of Trojan Women presented by the Department of Classics in Watson 542.

8:00 pm - The Queen's Debating Union hosts Princeton University, "Resolved That Western Society is Experiencing Its Decline". Parliamentary style with audience participation. Wallace Hall and all are welcome.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies presents Weekend in Ellis Auditorium. This film is directed by Francois Truffaut and stars Charles Aznavour and Nicole Berger.

Wednesday, October 30

8:00 pm - The Magic Flute, a filmed version, in color, of Mozart's opera, sung in German, directed by Peter Ustinov, with Horst Stein conducting and starring Nicolai Gedda, Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, Christina Deutekom, Edith Mathis etc. In room 128 Jeffery Hall and there will be no admission.

8:00 pm - Women and Day Care Meeting with speakers at Women's Centre, 110 Queen Street. All women welcome. Baby sitting provided.

8:00 pm - Introductory lectures on Transcendental Meditation are given every Wednesday evening in Stirling Hall, Room 412A. Transcendental Meditation is a major scientific discovery. The practice is unique and its effects are unprecedented in their range. Admission is free.

8:30 pm - Anne of Green Gables at the Grand Theatre. Finally, "the most popular musical theatre production in Canadian history" comes to Kingston in a production from the famed Charlottetown Festival. This tour celebrates ten years of "Anne" playing to sold out houses in Kingston and in the major theatre capitals in the English speaking world. A company of over 50 artists to entertain you! For additional information telephone the Division of Concerts Box Office, Agnes Etherington Art Centre, 547-6194. Prices are $3, $4, $5 & $6.

8:30 pm - Queen's University Astronomy Club Meeting in Ellis Hall room 332. (Please note room change).

Thursday, October 31

7:00 pm - Campus Movies presents Play Misty For Me in Dunning Hall Auditorium. This movie stars Clint Eastwood. Admission is $1.00. A second show will be at 9:30 pm.

7:30 pm - Regular meeting of Queen's Skydivers will be held this Thursday night in Brockington Common Room. This week there will be a talk on Water and Night Jumping. As well, a film of the 1972 Provincial Championships held at Gananoque will be shown. Prior to the meeting, jump refunds, crests, etc. will be given out. As always, interested parties are most welcome. HAPPY HALLOWEEN! HAPPY HALLOWEEN! HAPPY HALLOWEEN!

Phys. Ed. Centre

The hours for skating are as follows:

Monday: 4:30 - 5:20; 8:30 - 9:20
Tuesday: 4:30 - 5:20
Wednesday: 4:30 - 5:20; 8:30 - 9:20
Thursday: 4:30 - 5:20
Friday: 12:30 - 1:20; 4:30 - 5:20; 10:30 - 11:20
Saturday: 4:30 - 5:20
Sunday: 4:30 - 5:20; 8:30 - 9:20

VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S

VAN'S GIFTS and BOOKS LTD.
282 Princess St.
KINGSTON 542-6676

"RONSON" "SCRIPTO" "BENTLEY" "DUNHILL" "ZIPPO" etc. Are Bought at the Old Price and these famous quality brandname lighters are sold at the old price.

At Van's of course! Buy these bargains now before the Christmas rush starts! EXTRA SPECIAL - 2 Pouches of "DRUM" or "BOUKANEER" Reg. $1.06 at Van's 2 pouches, mix or match, for 89c

STORE Mon.-Fri. 9:30 am - 10 pm
HOURS Saturday 9:30 am - 9 pm
OPEN Sunday 12:00 noon - 9 pm

VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S

CAMPUS MOVIES presents

'Play Misty For Me'

- with -

CLINT EASTWOOD

Thursday, 31 October 7:00 and 9:30

Dunning Hall $1.00

Charlottetown Festival's

ANNE OF GREEN GABLES

Thursday, Oct 31
Grand Theatre
8:30 p.m.

Tickets: $6.50, $5.50, $4.50, $3.50
(50c discount to students and senior citizens)
a Division of Concerts event

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT in our Lounge

THIS WEEK : Slewoff

Amateur Night
every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

Hi, ho Excursion Club

The Queen's Excursion Club Bus is seen insurance policy discrepancy arose between boarding from in front of the Union. The club's Vice-president Peter Druxman and Don charter was revoked last Friday when an McVie, managing director of the club.

Excursion Club

Charter revoked by 'executive prerogative'

When on Friday afternoon the Queen's Excursion Club still had not come forward with the insurance policy demanded by Peter Druxman of the AMS Executive, the club's charter was revoked by "executive prerogative".

Druxman did not want to let the buses depart from Queen's without proof that there was adequate insurance to cover the students on the buses.

Don McVie, managing director of the Excursion Club, protested that Druxman's actions were "wholly unreasonable". He had sent for the policy when the AMS had asked for it, he said, but had not received it by Friday.

McVie had, however, informed Druxman that the bus, passengers and third parties were protected to the tune of one million dollars. Druxman, on consulting Heino Lilles, legal advisor to the AMS and member of the AMS Board of Directors, concluded that one million was grossly inadequate. He felt at least $20 million would be necessary to cover liability of any persons injured on an Excursion Club bus.

When it became clear that the AMS Executive did not feel that one million dollars of insurance was enough, McVie telephoned an insurance agent and obtained another one million dollars worth of protection he told the Journal. "Purely to please the AMS. I took on another policy," he explained.

The decision to revoke the club's charter still has to be approved by Outer Council, which is made up of representatives of the students.

McVie may apply for reinstatement as a chartered club of the AMS. He stated, however, that the Excursion Club's organizers are uncertain as to their plan of action.

This upset seems to have been confined to offices in the Student's Union - its impact doesn't appear to have been felt by most students. Druxman encountered this nonchalance when he explained the move to passengers on the buses leaving Queen's on Friday. When he asked if anyone had any questions, the only reply was, "Is the bus going to stop at West Campus on the way back?"

A touch of Tradition and a pinch of Wizardry

by Connie McLeese

A touch of Tolkein, a dash of Scottish tradition and a pinch of wizardry mixed with pseudo-liberation, describes Candlelighting 74. The annual ritual officially welcoming Queen's Frosh into the ranks of Queen's women began as it has since its misty origins, with the piper announcing the platform party. Deana Reid extended her welcome to all new women and was followed by Forelyth Bruce-Lockhart (president of the W.R.C.) who introduced the Candlelighting speaker, Mrs. Lily Englis. Being one of the few women architects in Ontario, Mrs. Englis explained her profession and its male-female integration. She closed by saying that rather than abolishing a ceremony as beautiful as Candlelighting, and viewing it as the last vestige of anti-feminism, in future years young men should be invited to share the experience.

The "climax" of the evening was the ritualistic passing of the flame from candle to candle. During the candlelighting procedure the quasi-medieval atmosphere was maintained by flute music from the balconies. The ceremony ended with the extinguishing of candles. The newly incorporated Queen's women were piped to Victoria Hall for the ensuing reception.

We wish to go wherever the Spirit leads in order to cooperate in man's complete development and sanctification.

We try to follow Christ by living a communal life, being present among our fellow men, sharing their joys and sorrows, their aspirations and their legitimate struggles for a more human world.

We are the Holy Cross Fathers.

For further information, write.

Vocation Director
Holy Cross House
Fredericton, N.B.

Please send me information about your community.

Name _____
Address _____

BEAUTIFUL GIFTS

Arts and Crafts Show and Sale
St. Margaret's United Church,
Sir John A Macdonald Blvd
Near Shopping Center

Friday, November 1. 2pm - 10 pm
Saturday, November 2. 10am - 4 pm

Bite the one you love

STEAK & STUFF

LICENCED DINING ROOM 1399 Princess (near the station)

AUNT LUCY'S RESTAURANTS LTD.

FINLAY'S SPORT SHOP

This week's special

Pinetree tube socks reg. $2.00
only .79

All table tennis accessories 20% OFF

SPECIAL: Carleton 3.9 badminton rackets
Only $27.95

PLEEEZ, PRAY FOR SNOW

One man's politics

by Doug Bonnell

On July 8th of this year, Pete Trudeau and the Liberal Party scored yet another victory at the polls. They were, according to the most perceptive of newsmen, the choice of the people. Their win was a result of our democratic process in action. Sound plausible? Wrong again.

The Canadian political system might be considered democratic if our vote had an equal effect to every other vote in the country, if the information disseminated to the public was both informative and unbiased; and if every major political force was given equal opportunity to express policy from an equal starting point. None of these conditions are entirely existent in the Canadian process.

The constituency system, for example, exaggerates the plurality of the winning party and promotes the growth of regional political groups. In 1988 the Diefenbaker Conservatives received 52 percent of the popular vote but over 78 percent of the seats in the House of Commons. With the latest Trudeau win the ratio was 46 percent-53 percent. Sound fair? What this means is that a supporter of the winning party received greater representation in the House than a supporter of an opposition party. It also means that a national third force, as the NDP, receives far less electoral representation than its popular support indicates. In the last election the NDP received sixteen percent of the vote but only sixteen seats in the House for six percent of the 264 Commons seat total.

The second condition cited was the dissemination of accurate political information, in other words, a fair press. Recall some of the events of 1974. Stanfield was photographed fumbling a football at the outset of the campaign. It was the only one of ten throws he missed. Guess which one hits the stands? The Toronto Daily Star goes out of its way to advocate the Conservative policy of wage-and-price controls both in and out of the editorial sections of the paper. But the CBC poll puts the icing on the cake. Near the end of the election a CBC poll predicted a Conservative minority government. Some two days later, and apparently under political pressure, the network reversed its prediction and called for a Liberal minority. It was a blatantly underhanded action, and one which does not give the average citizen a chance to make a fair choice.

Yet another unequal situation is the financial outlay of different parties. The NDP's lack of funds meant both less advertising and a less high-powered campaign. As a result, the feeling of a battle between the two giants, Liberals and Tories, was more augmented.

Finally, the ruling party often ignores its responsibilities as the government of the country. The dishing out of patronage by Trudeau in 1972, and the release of government policy through Liberal campaign headquarters in 1974 gave the Grits an unfair advantage during those two crucial months. I don't advocate sweeping reform of the electoral system, for most often large-scale change breeds more problems than it solves. I'd just like to see a more perceptive outlook on the part of journalistic theoreticians before referring to "the choice of the people" and our great "democratic process".

Peccei to lecture on prospects for mankind

by Jim Dawson

"I am prompted to write this book by the conviction one gets traveling far and wide in the world and observing the growing confusion and complexity of the problems and expectations of our age. This conviction is that mankind is galloping in the direction of assured and possibly total disaster. It follows that a radical change of azimuth and saner control over its course are both imperative and urgent. As man himself has embarked on this reckless course, it is possible for him to correct it. The correction, however, will have to be radical, and the hour is already rather late." (D. Aurelio Peccei, The Chasm Ahead)

Dr. Peccei is an Italian industrialist who has a PhD in Economics (University of Turin) and is Managing Director of Italcementi, Olivetti and Company and is Chairman of the Board of Fiat as well as being Chairman for the Committee for Atlantic Economic Co-operation.

He has shown his concern for humanity in a most profound way since he wrote his book The Chasm Ahead. He founded the Club of Rome in April 1968 and is now president of that organization. The Club of Rome has many important aspects including the fostering of world co-operation and promoting world wide knowledge of problems presented from a global view rather than a continental or national view. It has almost 70 members representing (informally) 25 nationalities and it is important to note that none of these hold public office.

The Club reported one of its studies in the book The Limits to Growth, a controversial book which explores the direction in which present trends in population, food production, industrial growth, natural resource depletion and pollution will affect the future of mankind. It simply states that "the limits to growth on this planet will be reached sometime within the next one hundred years.

Dr. Peccei is coming to lecture at Queen's on October 30th and will speak on the Reappraisal of Human Prospects in Ellis Hall at 8:00 p.m. In order to enhance the lecture, the film, "The Limits to Growth" will be shown at 7:00.

Hillel presents

The "Fixer"

The story of an innocent man's fight against Czarist anti-semitism

ELLIS HALL

Wednesday October 30
7:00 and 9:30 $1.00

Imm of Shoes
231 Princess St.
544-4993

- ★ Hand made boots and shoes made to measure
- ★ All styles of ladies leather handbags - something for everyone

AMEY'S
TAXI 546-1111

The Super 'C' presents:

Music Radio

wall to wall
5:15 to midnight
Monday to Friday

CKLC 1380

Queen's University

Music
Department

Contemporary Sounds

room 120

Harrison - LeCaire Hall
(Music Building)

8:00 PM Tuesday, October 29

ADMISSION FREE

DON'T GROPE AROUND IN THE DARK
LET US TURN-ON THE LIGHTS

How does a customer become a diamond expert?
By getting expert advice from a professional jeweler you can trust... from us.
People trust us for very good reasons... we offer sound advice that turn on the lights of diamond knowledge... so you can be sure of the finest diamond.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

A.M.S. PAGE

REFERENDUM IS IRRESPONSIBLE

It seems that the gentlemen over at Golden Words got impatient waiting for someone to take up their suggestion and demand a referendum on the A.M.S. Honorary Report. For the last few days they have been busy gathering the required 200 signatures on a petition which calls for such a referendum. Demanding a referendum on this issue is nothing but irresponsible. The Honorary Report is the product of some hard work by people who have good knowledge of the time and effort required by the various jobs and positions for which honoraria are paid. These are not people who would recommend more money for themselves or for anyone else so that they could buy a new stereo system or go to the Bahamas for Reading Week.

There was plenty of opportunity for anyone on this campus to voice his or her objections to the contents of the report. Before each of the two meetings at which the Honorary Report was discussed and voted upon, it was advertised on this page that the subject of honoraria was on the meeting's agenda. Any Queen's student can come to an A.M.S. Outer Council meeting and is allowed to move and second motions, and to participate in debate. If even 15 people were to show up at a meeting and express a strong position on an issue such as honoraria, the mere fact of their presence might well be enough to make Council agree with them.

Last week's Golden Words editorial began by asking, "Is it really possible that the Inner Council of the A.M.S. has given themselves a substantial increase in honoraria without a squeak of objection from the Outer Council or the student body at large?" The squeak could have been a resounding yell and the boys from Golden Words still wouldn't have heard it. They weren't at the meeting. GW's star A.M.S. reporter, Ronch (a member of Outer Council), was conspicuous by his absence.

If Ronch and his cohorts at GW are so concerned about honoraria that they are going to bring about a referendum on it, why weren't they at the meeting with all their supporters to debate the issue. At the meeting there was a motion made which asked for several of the honoraria sums to be reduced by half. There were few people to speak for the motion and it was defeated.

If someone is going to insist on having a referendum for every major issue (especially those concerning money), we should abolish Outer Council. We could make every second Wednesday a referendum day and post a list of resolutions to be voted on. But let's not. Government by referendum doesn't work.

-Craig Miller

Ed. note: The opinions expressed here are not necessarily those of the Journal. This is a paid AMS advertisement.

ARTS FESTIVAL '75
MEETING
Tonight 6:30

3rd Floor Common Room
Students' Union
Newcomers Welcome

Debate

The Queen's Debating Society is hosting a debate again against Princeton, "Resolved that Western Society is experiencing its decline". All welcome. Audience participation in parliamentary style with question period and house vote. Wallace Hall of the Student Union Building, 8:00 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 29.

Excursion Club motion

This Thursday night the Queen's Excursion Club and its infamous bus service will be discussed at the A.M.S. Outer Council meeting. There is a motion before Council that the club's charter be revoked if you feel you've been ripped off, have had your safety endangered, or otherwise been inconvenienced by the bus service, why not come to the meeting and voice your opinion on this motion. Anyone who supports the Excursion Club in its efforts to bring us low cost transportation had better come out as well - your support will likely be needed

A.M.S.
OUTER COUNCIL MEETING
Thursday, October 31 7:30 pm
McLaughlin Room, Students' Union
Agenda Items Include:

- 1- O.F.S.
- 2- Excursion Club
- 3- Referendum

OPT OUTS
For the Specific Fees Collected for:
TRICOLOR $4.50
AND
CONCERTS $3.00

Will Be available in the AMS office starting
Monday, October 28
to
Friday, November 1
Students wishing to opt out must bring their student cords with them

unclassified

More on Page 10

MAG WHEELS 12" - 51. Shelby's made in California. Excellent condition. Suitable for Datsun, Toyota, Dodge 4M and Vega. New price $105.00, asking price $75.00. Phone 544-8554.

GAIL GROUP '88 HOLDING one mother of a reunion this Thursday. Meet at eight (the evening) on the steps of Vic Hall. Affectionately yours, Toots, Gange and Dark. WANTED - pair ladies skates in good condition. Size 7 1/2 and reasonable price. Call 544-8554.

WE WANT 3 to 8, one person apartments in the same building or area (ie block), for Sept (or May) 1975. If you have anything that might interest us, call Brent or Bruce, 542-1382, or Pat, 544-4339.

SMALL WOMAN'S BICYCLE FOR SALE. New tires, generally in excellent shape. Carry a good cheap transportation 525 or best offer. Call 549-1393 after 5:00 pm during week, or anytime on weekends.

LOST ONE black contractable umbrella left in Ellis Rm 224 on Thursday Oct 14. Return would be greatly appreciated. If you have it or know of its whereabouts, please call Simon at 548-7892. Thank you.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC Brass and Woodwind Sale. 20 per cent off Selmer, Buffet-Crampton, Armstrong, Olds, Leblanc, Artley, Dillard, Bossey & Hawkes, Lathour, Besson, Academy, Mulli, Getzen, and Conn.

Renaissance Music, 326 Princess Street, 542-5258.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC Guitar Strings. Classical strings by Savarez, Concourse, and Augustine and LaBella. Steel strings by Martin, D'Arco, D'Angelico, Gibson, LaBella, Fender, Rotondo, Earthwood, and Ernie Ball. Banjo strings by Vega, LaBella, and many more.

Renaissance Music, 326 Princess Street, 542-5258.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC Violin Strings by Thomastik, Pirastro, and Olive. Cello strings Lute strings, Viola strings, Resin by Hill, Hildersme, Tourte Mutes at Renaissance Music, 326 Princess Street, 542-5258.

CALCULATOR FOR SALE. Four functions, square, square root, inverse, percent, memory, and floating and fixed decimal. CHEAP! 570. Phone 549-5024 after 7pm.

VD IS SOMETHING TO CLAP ABOUT! Or is it CLAP IS SOMETHING TO VO ABOUT? Anyway, see Med's Variety Night 1974 Nov. 15 and 16. Tickets on sale soon.

Hold your held capacity and gain local relief 1984card 721 at the Third Annual Geography Hallows'een Smoker being held in the Gordon Common Room on Thursday Oct. 31st. First year Geography students especially invited. Admission 25c Beer 5 for $2.00.

THE DATE FOR THE AUDITIONS FOR THE ARTSCI '78 NIGHT-CLUB has been set at Nov. 11. More details as to place and time later.

ARTSCI '78 CARDS are available only through Ooug Thomson at 546-8059. Remaining cards will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis. Get to it Frish!

REWARD - I pair of Men's Gold rimmed glasses lost in the gym. If found, please call Phil at 546-1636.

ARTWORK NEEDED FOR use in Tricolour '75. Anyone interested in submitting works please contact Jennifer Hunter 544-8058.

ATTENTION ALL GRADUATES: If your Graduation Portrait is to appear in Tricolour '75 it must be taken by Nov. 15. Please make a definite appointment for a portrait sitting with Wallace Berry NOW!

MICROSCOPE FOR SALE - American Optical, Binocular, 4 Objectives, 3.5x, 10x, 45x, 100x oil immersion. Eyepiece 10x wide field. Base illumination just cleaned. Call John 544-7825.

FOUND Grey and white female cat, on University Ave. between Princess and Garrett. Phone 549-4958 for information.

GOING TO MONTREAL FRI NOV 15, (or any other weekend)? I need a lift and will share driving and gas. Phone Laurene 544-5575.

AURELIO PECCEI, Italian industrialist and President of the Club of Rome will be speaking Wed. Oct. 30 at 8:00 pm in Ellis Auditorium on "Reappraising Human Prospects". The film "Limits to Growth" will be shown at 7:00 pm. Everyone is welcome.

DROP-IN PROGRAM in North Kingston needs supplies. If you have anything that could be used for a crafts programme, please leave at the SVB bureau office between 10 and 3. Please help the kids.

ABORTION, MORGAN TAYLOR AND THE LAW. Mr. I.I. Liebman, lawyer, involved with the Morgentaler case from its inception 5 years ago, will deliver a commentary on the activities.

Thurs. Oct. 31 at 3:30 pm in Dunning Hall. Don't miss this! LARGE OFFICE DESKS - excellent condition and cheap. Phone 544-7242.

FOR SALE: Leather Science Jacket. Size 40 tall. Like new. Phone 544-

8886 anytime. OUTING MEETING - There will be a general meeting for all members on Wed. nite at 7:30 in Room 101 Jeffery Hall. We'll try to keep the meeting short. There will also be a meeting for those going on the Nov 1st trip at the same time and place.

WOULD THE PERSON WHO PICKED UP THE SR-50 CALCULATOR late Wed. afternoon, serial No. SR-50 814712, please phone Pat at 542-2737. I need it desperately. Reward for return.

AMPLIFIER - SONY TA 1150, 35 w. channel, lightly used. List $340, your price $225. Call 547-4972 or 544-5779.

ZOOM SCHWARTZ JELLO. You've got it Madeleine? Sobriety? Never! Let's try it again. 54. Wednesday 6pm at the Pub.

ARE YOU NOT COOL, feeling left out and want to get where it's at? Well then Now's your chance! Buy a pair of BOOT BOOTS. I bought 'em too small (size 8). Cost $35. new. I had 'em one week - will sell for $25. C'mon eh guys! I wanna be cool too! Call Pat 544-7892.

ABOUT 4 or 5 students interested in running a housing symposium are asked to contact Gaye Clemson at the AMS office 547-4165.

NOTICE TO ACTIVITY ORGANIZERS: The Education Commission has recently received an extensive list of Educational Films from the National Film Board and CBC. Anyone wishing to see this information, contact Gaye Clemson 547-4165. The Commission also has an extensive filing cabinet with articles on many interesting themes. For more information contact the Commission.

BAGPIPES AND BEER, BAGPIPES AND BEER, November 8th, 1974. A.O. BE THERE.

FOR SALE: Single bed, box spring and mattress. Phone 549-5244. FOR THE POSTER DONE IN GRANT HALL.

It really looked great on the wall. When our 9:30 rise Took you males by surprise I'm amazed it got there at all. Many thanks 4-D VIC.

YOU NAME REWARD for blue-faced Setto watch set in silver with blue band lost between Jeffery and Earl Halls. Thurs. Oct. 24. Please call Nancy 544-0389. Valuable.

YOU NAME REWARD for blue-faced Setto watch set in silver with blue band lost between Jeffery and Earl Hall. Thursday Oct. 24. PLEASE call Nancy 544-0389. Valuable.

LOST in or outside of the pub on Wed. night - a hairy purse with a shoulder strap. Please phone Meg (Margaret Doyle on identification) 549-2151. If you found it. Thanks.

INTERESTED in the music of the "30's" and "40's" in the big band sound for your dance? If so contact W.J. Babe (542-1920) or D.G. Hattam (542-9740) for bouloons. Also more modern stylings, latin, etc. available.

ABORTION, MORGENTALER AND THE LAW. Mr. Liebman lawyer involved with the Morgentaler case from its inception 5 years ago will deliver a commentary on the activities. Thurs. Oct. 31 at 3:30 pm in Dunning Hall. Don't miss this.

ARE YOU HUMAN? or ARE YOU PHYSICAL? It really doesn't matter. Even Dr. Osborne's culture geographers are invited. Third annual Geography Hallows'een Smoker on Thurs. Oct. 31 in Gordon Common Room. Admission 5.25. Beer 5 for $2.

HALIFAX TO STORM. LOVE YOU LIKE A ROCK?

editorial

GW: irresponsible errors

Gross misinterpretation and erroneous statements were the highlights of the last Golden Words editorial on the proposed honoraria increase. The editorial claimed that at the recent AMS meeting, not a "squeak of objection" was put forth by Outer Council on the question of the honoraria increase. Objection was voiced however, and very vehemently. Members Copeland and Bull both expressed heated opposition during debate on the honoraria motion.

The editorial raises the question whether Inner Council warrants such substantial increases. If Horricks believes that "the major accomplishment of the new council was to vote themselves an increase", then it seems odd that the AMS President is taking a 20 percent cutback in honoraria in the proposals for '74-75.

Honoraria is by no means financial remuneration for time worked, but rather compensation for benefits forgone by people in AMS positions. The few funds honoraria supplies is the difference between personal bankruptcy and a job well done. Without honoraria, only those people in a financially sound position could be accessible to such AMS positions as President, Vice-president, Journal editor etc. Therefore the question posing whether the executive is "in it for money or to solve the critical issues" is ambiguous, for without a few dollars compensation, the critical issues could only be handled by those who could afford financially to spend the time.

Horricks erroneously states that the Journal honoraria has been increased by $3400. The increase, according to an appendix in the agenda of Oct. 3 AMS meeting, is in fact less than one-third of that amount for 74-75. This year's honoraria allocated to the Journal editor-in-chief, is tuition - a far cry from the $2400 quoted by Horricks.

A responsible look at honoraria, you would think, would necessitate the presence of Golden Words editor Bill Horricks at the AMS meetings where the honoraria debate took place. Horricks was no where to be found.

Such errors and misinterpretations display irresponsibility in the editorial and point out the shocking incompetence of the editor. It is recommended that further GW editorials be taken with a very large grain of salt.

letters to the editor

Wolman's State again

Dear Editor,

Mr. Wolman's little speech is indeed disconcerting. Most shocking of all is his recommendation that "those students that don't know what they want from a university education" ought to get out. To the extent that he is speaking of specific, particular goals, this is quite wrongheaded, a dangerous fallacy. Rather, it is those who are uncertain of their destiny and dissatisfied with life as it is presented to us who ought to remain within the university, while those fortunate few already in possession of all the answers are the least likely to benefit from the traditions of doubt and criticism which persist perhaps only in the university among major institutions of our society. Second, Helen Cooper correctly points out that Wolman's modified Luddite sentiment is hardly sufficient basis for rational argument. Third, apropos of the comment that "our society is moving so quickly today that the training you receive now is obsolete when you are ready to use it", I am led to wonder precisely what Wolman conceives to be the function of the university. The inspiring people with whom I have come in contact rarely if ever referred to

Sincerely,
C.R. McKay

ARTSCI COUNCIL MEETING

Wednesday, October 30

Dunning Hall Conference Room

8:30 - 10:00

All ASUS Senators ASUS reps on AMS, DSC Chairmen, DSC Faculty Board reps, and ASUS executive members are requested to attend

For further information
phone ASUS office 547-3069
-- 8:30 - 12 a.m. weekdays

OF COURSE OUR BIGGEST COMPLAINT WITH THE HONORARIA REPORT IS THAT WE WEREN'T INCLUDED.

Queens
Journal
Vol 102, No. 15
Tues., Oct. 29, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario.

Editor-in-Chief: Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager: Terry Collins
Managing Editor: Dan McClelland
News Editor: Sarah Yarnell
Features Editors: Wendy Reynolds, Laurie Gibson
Arts Editors: Kerry White, Peter Haworth
Photography: John Bottomley, Jon Willmer, John Cameron, Ernie Sparks, Brock Macpherson, Fred vanDriel, Peter Case, Ian Osler, Lynn Atwood, Mary Bloos
Backpage: Val Cotton
What's Happin': Rosemary Knight, Jennifer Hunter
Classifieds: Leslie Gawkrager, Trish Brooks
Elders/Staffsmen: Woody and Boony
Contributors: Steve Blake, Chris Davies, Tom Cromwell, Sandy Naiman, Paul Luke, Paul Sleep, Sue Wishart, Connie McLeese, Jim Lemessurier, Rosemary Knight, Kathy Keely

Comment: Believe it or not there was another Sunday night concert this week, so Peter and I are spending yet another long evening in the old office waiting for a review (Paul, where are you? Ien just came in and bought me beer, and that's nice, but I'd really like to go home.

Founded in 1973 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (613) 547-2466. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint

If you'd like to know about us,
We'd like to know about you!

Meet us on campus
November 7 and 8.

CANADIAN IMPERIAL
BANK OF COMMERCE

Hoechst thinks ahead

Ideas: The spark we run on

Hoechst develops a constant stream of new ideas to keep its research pointed in the right directions. Ideas about what is needed, ideas about what is wanted. Ideas about what is possible, ideas about what is probable in the light of a constantly changing, ever-increasing body of basic knowledge.

Imagination steers the ship

Imagination is a prime source of the new ideas Hoechst uses constantly in order to keep developing better products - more effective medicines, better chemical and industrial materials. Imagination is only half the battle, but when good ideas are properly teamed with the discipline of applied research, they constitute a formidable force in the search for improved products in every area of modern life.

HOECHST

Canadian Hoechst Limited
4045 Côte Verre
Montreal 383, Quebec

40 Lesmill Road
Don Mills, Ontario

Helping Build Canada

Products and ideas from Hoechst have touched and improved the quality of people's lives in every area around the world, in a hundred countries on six continents. As an affiliate of the worldwide Hoechst organizations Canadian Hoechst Limited has a full century of research and achievement to draw upon. In Canada, Hoechst is an autonomous company employing Canadians to serve Canadian needs.

Hoechst in Canada concerns itself with supplying both the present and future needs of Canadians. The range of products and services covers the spectrum through industrial chemicals, dyestuffs, plastics, printing plates, human and veterinary medicines, pharmaceuticals, and textile fibres. Hoechst products and services, Hoechst techniques and know-how in these fields, combined with a large international fund of experience, have given the company a reputation for expertise which takes constant striving to live up to. Hoechst thinks ahead.

"Ladies and Gentlemen, how much am I bid for this one-of-a-kind - um, thing?"

There's just a little bit of magic in the country

An old time auction sale

Going once, going twice, gone! And we're off and running at a for real, old time country auction. If your feet can tolerate the cold Arctic winds, and your willpower - or your wallet - can withstand the lure of all the one-of-a-kind genuine Canadian artifacts, an auction can be great. It brings out the gambling instinct in everyone. Hence, you join the ever increasing numbers of weekend bargain hunters who are currently scouring the countryside for pieces of our Canadian heritage. You spy a rocking chair which you must have. You'll pay any price for it. Only problem is, four other people want that chair too. So you madly try to outbid everyone else for it - and end up overspending your budget.

The cross-section of people at these affairs is amazing. It's as interesting to watch everyone else as it is to get caught up in the bidding. Is that guy over there bidding against you for that ironstone washset a dealer who knows what he's doing or just another sucker like you who missed the Made in Japan sticker on the bottom of the water pitcher? But that's half the fun. Once you bring out that old competitive drive in a person, they're willing to pay any price for just about anything, from a mismatched cup and saucer to a washing machine with the original wringer that hasn't worked since Maytag made housecalls.

Then there's the little old farmer standing back surveying the scene watching the pressback rocker go for seventy dollars and saying, "They must really want to rock bad to pay that for a chair." Or the lady watching the homemade quilts getting snatched up for thirty dollars apiece and exclaiming, "I'm going to go home and start mass-producing these things."

In practical terms, it's difficult to explain just why some one would want an old butter churn or a treadle sewing machine, because they certainly aren't modern conveniences. But you buy old cracked coffee pots to use for flowers or think to yourself that that ironing board could be made into a coffee table. Why? Because it's unique and a part of our heritage, and the guy in the next apartment has factory-made furniture from the Eaton's catalogue. Besides, what better way to spend a crisp fall day than in the fresh country air in a farmyard?

Steve Blake

John Cameron

It's hard to resist the colourful quilts with designs that are generations old. The other pleasant thing about them is that they keep you as warm as an electric blanket without adding to the bill. With so many to choose from it's hard to choose the one you like best. We'll just have to buy two or three.

"Who cares about all that old junk anyway? All we came for was to play in the hay and watch the animals in the field."

City slickers may not be familiar with your average bull's disposition. For the uninformed, this sign gives you ample warning.

Steve Blake

unclassifieds

More on Page 8

LOST: one male grey kitten, part Singapura, vicinity of Albert and Johnson St. If found please phone 549-4620. Five girls are weeping for him.

OR: AURELIO PECCEI, Italian industrialist and president of the Club of Rome will be speaking Wed Oct 30 at 8pm in Ellis Auditorium on "Reappraising Human Prospects". The film "Limits to Growth" will be shown at 7pm. Everyone is welcome.

HAPPY 70th to the coolest guy on campus: we women of the world are worried: with increasing popularity of flared pants, can you uphold the title of BMOC for another year? If willing to accept the challenge, put on your stiletto heels, Bargain Basement shoes and prepare for a night on the town. Love from Earl Street's Wet Sponges Ltd.

TO CHAS, the S... you were anything but in fact, you were terryrip. But isn't smooth talking a step down from smooth operating?

TO THE GIRLS AT 221: Friday night was a dream. The kitchen floor met our every expectation. Don't destroy the evidence!! R.J. and Gord.

FOUND: Some money, north of campus, on weekend, call John at 548-0392.

OST: In vicinity of Kingston Hall, Tuesday 22 Oct. small house pet of sentimental value. Looks like broom head. Grey, shaggy long hair. Answers to "Well!" Finder please phone 544-8872.

APPLIED SCIENCE student wishes to thank Arts and Science student for her helpful understanding. I couldn't have made it without you Barb. Love "Jackson."

WHY WAIT FOR SPRING, do it now! Sublet for next May-August. Two bedroom house. Division and Brock. Cheap!! Call Mike or Peter, most likely Peter 542-8636.

ATTENTION GAEI GROUP 79: Don't forget the big reunion tonight at the pub! Meet in front of John Watson at 7:30 Sharp! See you all there! Love, Wendy, Sandy, Betsy.

BUNS! The QWPA is an organization dedicated to the relief of sex-starved females. If you are interested call Peter (542-7926) or Farm (542-4556). Don't delay! There are many positions to fill. Women's OEBATING union hosts Princeton "Resolved that western society is experiencing a decline." All welcome as decision will be taken by split of the house. 8 pm in Wallace Hall.

PLAN AHEAD! Have you got a one bedroom furnished place close to campus to get rid of by May 1979? Call Jim, 549-5753. I'd like to see it.

BIOLOGY SMOKER and Halloween party - sponsored by Queen's biology society. Everyone welcome. Prize for the best costume. 157 King Street east, (grad house) October 31, 8 pm. Come and meet the pros.

VANTEO A Hiling cabinet (preferably 2 drawers), just about any condition. I'll pay a fair price. Call Dave Gordon at 549-4499.

TO THE BIRTHDAY BUROS, we'll stand you up this year. Lan Lance and Crabbie!!

YOU NAME THE REWARD for blue-faced Seiko watch set in silver with blue band lost between Jettory and Earl Halls. Thursday Oct. 24. Please call Nancy at 544-0289.

GAEI GROUP 28 is finally having a reunion? Wednesday night (tomorrow) at 10 in the pub. Everyone is expected to attend.

LOST: Gold necklace with Hebrew letters on it. Friday night at Oxtoborbest in Leonard Cal or between Leonard and Chown. Great sentimental value. Please phone Anita 544-8033.

ABORTION, MORGENTHAU AND THE LAW: Mr. Lieberman lawyer involved with the Morgenthau case from its inception 5 years ago will deliver a comment on the action Thurs, Oct. 31 at 3:30pm in Ounning Hall. Don't miss this.

QUEEN'S HOMOPHILE: We have

82 Brock Street

over 50 members, all ages, all depts. Your affiliation with the group is kept strictly confidential with no chance of exposure. Come and meet us at the next private meeting or party. Call 542-3936, Tues to Thurs, 8-9 pm or write to Student Affairs Centre, care of Terry Watson.

BRUCE COCKBURN: Tickets go on sale Nov. 3 in John Orr Room. $20 with valid blue student card. $40 after Nov. 9. Bruce Cockburn Nov. 17 in Grant Hall, two shows 7 and 10.

COME IN AND GET PLASTERED at the Bandido Saloon featuring Turkey, Leonard Calsteria 8-1. Admission $1.25 Friday Nov. 1. CONCERT COMMITTEE meeting tonight in Q.E.A. office. All representatives to the Committee and working committee members should attend. Tonight at 7pm in Q.E.A. office.

Human Sexuality

sponsored by the AMS

and

The Birth Control Centre

Tuesday, 9:00 pm

Dupuis Auditorium

DIAMOND CHOP SUEY HOUSE

217 Division (between Queen and Colbourne)

Fine Chinese and Canadian Food

Open daily 11 a.m. - 2 a.m.

Sunday: noon - 12 p.m.

Take Out and Delivery 544-2927

Thank You

Doug, David,
Wendy, Linda

ASUS Orientation 75

Committee

from

ASUS and Artsci 78

Queen's Ski Club

Crest Contest

1st prize $25 credit on any ski trip
and 1 case of Brador

entries to special box in

John Orr Room by Nov. 9

Winner will be announced at Ski Club

Smoker in November in Clark Hall

(Tri colour maximum on crest)

FOR A GOOD TIME call 544-8107. Ask for Cher. Those light pink hair buns will do it every time. Fixations: eh sweetie?

OR: AURELIO PECCEI, Italian industrialist and president of the Club of Rome will be speaking Wed Oct. 30 at 8pm in Ellis Auditorium on "Reappraising Human Prospects". The film "Limits to Growth" will be shown at 7pm. Everyone is welcome.

INNOCENT BYSTANDERS? HAI! Poor Sue is making me poorer. Those Cornwall girls can drink! Besides, her reputation was finished long before I met her. What do I do next, Kathy? O.G.O. YOU CAN come into our parlour anytime, I was once said with a fractable simpler.

GALE AND JEN, the expert technologists of chocolate fondues, that was a great Sunday. Thanks, ME. Remember, you can't eat pens even if they are coated. AUSTIN, OVSTAAS, READSHAW AND CHURCH, purveyors of perversion since 1974, announce their opening party. All friends, clients and purveyors are invited. BYOB, beer sold Sat. Nov. 2 '74. The house at Pooh's Corner, 101 Young St. - on the way to the Manor.

GIRLS AT GREASE POLE: Would the girl wearing the blue sweater (sweatshirt?) back and shorts who was talking to the photographers near the St. John ambulance at the greasepole please call Mary at 544-7461. Thanks.

80 EARL (Cathy, Judy, Trish, Rosemary, Renda and Angie) is having a "Gay After Halloween Party" on Nov. 1. WE want all those who came to our last party plus all those who weren't. Plan your costume now. Mr. Vassos you make good cookies. THE QUEEN'S RIDING CLUB is organizing English riding lessons at Vahalla Stables at a special rate of four (4) for $20 including transportation. If interested please call Sue at 544-0936.

RIODING CLUB: Note new time - the bus will leave the Union at 9:30 am this Sat and for all the rest of the rides. Cost $2.50/hr. Everyone welcome.

LOST: ONE RED BICYCLE: CCM, one speed. Just plain bike except for "Canada" sticker on red and white seat. Believed stolen from 239 Barrie on Thurs. Reward is $5.00. Phone 544-5255 between 5 and 6 pm.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY

SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD

TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128

217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)

OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT

SUNDAY 10 AM TO 8 PM

TEQUILA SAUZA

Margarita SAUZA

1 1/2 oz. TEQUILA SAUZA

1/2 oz. Triple Sec

1/2 oz. lime or lemon juice

Shake with cracked ice

Moisten rim of champagne glass with lemon rind, then dip moistened rim in salt.

Sip cocktail over salted edge.

TEQUILA SAUZA NUMERO UNO

In Canada, and Mexico.

TEQUILA SAUZA

use it in a Bloody Mary and you've got a

TEQUILA SAUZA

Orange juice never tasted better when your screwdriver contains

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

Straight with salt and lemon and tequila like a man.

TEQUILA SAUZA

Great party starter. Mixes well. Everyone's instant

favorite.

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

TEQUILA SAUZA

Nazareth's audience a sacrificial lamb

by Paul Luke

Heavy metal music is less of a legitimate genre and more of a religion. Two of its smaller time clerics, Nazareth and Rush turned Sunday night into a worship service for the cult's reigning deity, Volume. The sacrificial victim was the audience who was tossed into the bass horns where its auditory nerves were flayed into an insensible, shrivelled condition.

Volume is a cruel God but he is also a merciful God and after sitting through two hours of sonic brutality in his name the survivors were permitted to depart, secure in the knowledge that Volume walked with them as he still manifested himself in a persistent ringing in the ear.

Rush are Canadian and their music is as grueling as an hour in the nude in mid-winter Baffin Island. Rush's influences are legion and they have not been integrated into a unique sound, with the result that the output is often irritatingly derivative. The drummer has been listening to Keith Moon and the vocalist mimics Robert Plant's range and gusto but is still far removed from that trademark shrill vocal authority and respect for the niceties of shading. The crude banality of the guitarist suggests that he spends his practice time watching Bruce Lee.

Volume is a two edged sword in the hands of incompetents and even as the audience winced at each new power chord Rush's music was increasingly reduced to an indistinguishable, homogenous clamour. The prominent guitar solos had a drained predictability which did little to fortify a sound so already remarkably free from good taste.

Nazareth is a successful formula group. They specialize in dressing up songs by people like Joni Mitchell and Randy Newman in steel-toed boots.

Marvellously enough, their workings are carried off with such boldness that they sometimes catch on. Even at their worst Nazareth proved that splitting the ear can have a certain raw aesthetic to it.

The group's vocalist, Dan McCafferty has an appealing grit and sandpaper edge to his voice, but often gave way to helium squeals when he tried to stride too far into the upper register. The bassist and drummer, respectively Pete Agnew and Donnell Sweet have a distinctive miserly thump to their playing. Manny Charlton is a 'fair technician on the guitar.

Randy Newman's song "Guilty" was stripped of its ironic hubbubbing and served up as an anguished and desperate plea. Another good moment was Leon Russell's "Alcatraz" which was unfortunately somewhat marred by a stoically plodding rhythm section. The audacious bludgeoning of Joni Mitchell's "This Flight Tonight" is undeniably interesting, if not completely acceptable. "The Shape of Things to Come" thundered down like the her semen of the apocalypse with some staggering ensemble work and ominous vocals. "Shanghai in Shanghai" and "Loved and Lost" were good examples of the groups vulgar and unmitigated displays of pure dreck.

Even when these two groups were bad, and they frequently were, one could take some solace in the fact that they were fostering the admirable qualities of endurance and resignation. Playing under the aegis of Heavy does not exclude a group from the rigours of good musicianship and both of these bands were all too often guilty of an appalling lack of it. Some might have welcomed the din of this concert, but these cars the level of noise was assume and completely in justifiable.

Nazareth in concert in Grant Hall

crim sparks

Ce n'est pas un concert - c'est une table de conversation!

Venez dîner avec nous en français, tous les jours à 11 heures dans "lower Ban High", si vous

désirez améliorer ou maintenir votre connaissance

de la langue parlée - alors venez nous rejoindre place

au bureau de la langue (au Hall) - voir nos

ou téléphonez à 544-4444 ou 544-4444

Revenue Canada (Taxation)

To meet its requirements for professionals, our Department has developed a one year training program for university graduates.

Through appropriate courses given at our training centre in Ottawa, alternating with on-the-job training sessions in our district offices throughout Canada, we intend to graduate qualified taxation officers, especially in the Audit, Verification and Collections areas.

We invite you to come and meet our recruiting teams for interviews Dec 2-3-4. For more information, contact your university placement office.

AMS Education Commission Presents A Public Lecture And Film

The Lecture: "Reappraising Human Prospects"

"WOULD YOU NOT HAVE A CHOICE BETWEEN GROWTH AND A STABLE
SOCIETY; WE ONLY HAVE A CHOICE BETWEEN A STABLE SOCIETY AND DISASTER"

Dr. Aurelio Peccei

PRESIDENT OF THE CLUB OF ROME

ITALIAN INDUSTRIALIST

AUTHOR - CHASM AHEAD

WEDNESDAY OCTOBER 30
8 P.M. ELLIS AUDITORIUM

THE FILM:

"LIMITS TO GROWTH"

7 P.M. - ELLIS AUDITORIUM

AMS EDUCATION COMMISSION

Domino review

6 Rms Riv Vu too stiff

by Sandy Naiman

There are some severe problems with the Domino Theatre's production of Bob Randall's slick little comedy, 6 Rms Riv Vu, most notably its lack of slickness. This cleverly quaint play dies in director Gary Thompson's hands. His actors are stiff as is his blocking. His timing is off, and what results is a collection of oddly disjointed lines, funny in themselves, but suspended, with no rhythm or comic delivery.

The problems are not easy to pinpoint. Barry Holmes and Ellen Glosier make admirable attempts at playing two pseudo sophisticated New Yorkers locked in an empty apartment. But even though they are strangers when they meet and even though they eventually have a short lived affair, they are still and always strangers. Because of a subliminal stiffness in their characters their relationship with its intrinsic potential for warmth and humour is never fully realized, but strained and unnatural. As a result, the play never gets off the ground, even though the dialogue is at times very funny on its own.

Miss Glosier is a very tense actress and Mr. Holmes has trouble playing with her. The play is at its best when Carl Logan, as a typical slovenly superintendant and Kathleen Roberts as a bitchy woman in the next apartment are on stage. Unfortunately their appearances are far too rare and the dialogue drifts back into an aching dull pace when the two principles are on stage alone.

No doubt Mr. Thompson was unable to prepare his cast for the infrequent laughs that they did receive and as a result the dialogue is lost because they are unable to pace themselves to the audience reaction.

These problems are magnified by a very gangly set which makes the vacant apartment seem too big. When the second scene picnic is spread on the floor it looks lost in a set which is much too large and spread out for two players to fill alone. The colours are drab and tiring to look at and this reinforces the slow pacing of the dialogue.

The only colour in the show comes from Dianne Snelman's costumes for Miss Glosier, who particularly in the last act looks like the wealthy New Yorker she is supposed to be.

It seemed strange, as well, that for an apartment on Riverside Drive, a well travelled thoroughfare in Manhattan, we never once heard a car driving by. After all, we are supposedly only four floors up. These are just little touches that might have made a significant difference in Thompson's overall production. It's a shame they were implemented. Randall's play has some extremely amusing bits of business, charming little fantasy sequences which the actors could barely pull off. We hardly knew what was for real and what was a joke because they seemed so unable to relax into their roles.

The inevitable explanation for the slowness of this opening night production is the age old opening night nervousness, an excuse I am quickly tiring of allowing. Why should an opening night audience have to put up with an inferior performance and still pay the same price as the closing night audience, who undoubtedly sees a far more seasoned production?

Perhaps it is time for Kingston theatre groups to introduce the preview. A night or two of reduced ticket prices, where the press is not allowed to review and where the cast gets a chance to practice with an audience, to find out where the laughs are and where the dialogue can be brushed up, might not hurt but help companies like the Domino, which run on a heavy rehearsal schedule.

A practice run would certainly have given 6 Rms Riv Vu the boost it needs and would have given this reviewer the opportunity to praise rather than pan.

of them do much acting, unless expressions of anguish and despair which is a common denominator of everyone can be considered acting.

Strangely enough, unlike the original Airport, where from the beginning the audience knew that something horrible was going to happen, in this updated version, the film drags interminably on for what seems like at least an hour without incident. It's just a normal flight, with the typical drinking stewardess eyeing businessmen, with the odd eccentric passenger and with a suggestion of romantic complications involving the head stewardess and someone who isn't even on the plane, yet.

The film is entertaining though, in a suspenseful way, although the ending is inevitably happy. I doubt that there has ever been an airplane film where subsequently the plane went down and everyone is killed. This would really surprise audiences. But, from our heritage of catastrophe movies, somehow doomed vehicles always end up all right. It is the social implications of this type of film that make it interesting, the strange preoccupation we have with horror which is more realistic than the supernatural specimens which are completely removed from reality.

Strange, isn't it, that Airport 1975 pulls in viewers far more numerous than films which exult in humanity. Recently a friend of mine went to see "Harry and Tonio" at a Toronto theatre which was also showing Airport 1975. He lined up and waited for a half an hour before realizing that he was in the wrong line and when he finally was seated in the theatre found himself among about four other viewers. Everyone else was waiting to see Airport.

What the conclusion of this tells us can be anything from the fact the people love to be immersed in misery to the sentiment that suspense is far more intriguing than poignant realism.

Whatever you do conclude, you must assuredly can do without seeing Airport 1975. It is predictable in its so called happy ending and aside from all this, it is scripted so poorly that all kinds of ends are left hanging.

Airport 1975 is playing to full houses at the Odeon Theatre.

The Handmaids

Princess Street, Kingston, Ontario

Exclusively handmade
gifts, clothing, accessories

349 Princess Street
542-8021

See All The New
Programs This Year
With 11 Channels to Choose From On . . .

📺 cable tv
544-6311

Are you or your group
doing something you
would like others to
know about?
Tell Us....

USE OUR BULLETIN
BOARD

📺 Cable Cast TV 13

Additional Outlets
Are Available For Television or Stereo
For 1.25 Month

No additional connection charge if ordered at time of initial installation.

📺 cable tv
544-6311

Iseler provides an education in twentieth century music

by Tom Cromwell

Grant Hall was filled Friday evening for the performance of the 200-voice Toronto Mendelssohn Choir, directed by Elmer Iseler. The choir performs rather infrequently outside Toronto, and the Division of Concerts is to be congratulated for presenting this group in concert in Kingston for the second consecutive year.

The choir's program was a daring one, composed almost exclusively of twentieth century music and including two works that could be considered avant-garde. The program put to the sword many widely held generalizations about musical style. Many in the audience were astounded that Vaughan Williams' setting of Shakespeare's "Full Fathom Five" sounded more "modern" than did Schoenberg's "Friede auf Erden", the latter work preceding and only occasionally hinting at Schoenberg's later and more familiar atonal idiom. The program was an essay in the diversity of Twentieth century musical style, and was masterfully devised to show the major trends from the Brahmsian style of Stanford and early Schoenberg, moving through Vaughan Williams, Britten and Copland, to the works of the present avant-garde represented by Prevest and Ligeti. Appropriately enough, Maestro Iseler included the father of the English Choral Tradition, by performing Handel's splendid Zadok the Priest.

The highlight of the evening was the performance of Andre Prevost's Missa de Profundis, a work commissioned for the Mendelssohn Choir by the C.B.C. Taking as his starting point the text of the proper of the Mass (Kyrie, Gloria, Credo, Sanctus and Agnus Dei), the composer interpolated the text of Psalm 129 (Out of the depths I have cried unto Thee O Lord) which is whispered, murmured, spoken and shouted by various sections of the choir, in a fashion which recalls the crowd scenes of Penderecki's St. Luke Passion. These sections of the mass itself are sung in a variety of styles, often making extensive use of canon ascending scale passages and ostinato tunes. One remarkable feature of the work is the fashion with which the singing parts and the speaking parts are interconnected and unified, as, for example, at the beginning of the Credo where the pitches gradually emerge from the murmur of the preceding Psalm verses.

The conclusion of the Mass uses a similar technique in reverse, in that while some of the choir hold a single chord others join in the murmuring of the final

Psalm verses until the chord gradually disappears and the murmur subsides into the bass section, and finally dies away. Of course, it is impossible to make value judgements about any work of art on one hearing; let it suffice to say that I was moved by this extremely expressive work and left with a desire to hear it again. Judging by remarks overheard at intermission, this view may not be generally shared. I think this points to a need for more exposure to this sort of music in order that we may be able to put aside our traditional musical assumptions and respond to new forms of creative thought.

It goes without saying that the Mendelssohn Choir is a very fine choir indeed, and this made the rather strident soprano sound and the several instances of imprecision of consonants all the more surprising. I felt that the first two Stanford motets would have benefited from a more delicate treatment, and that these works suffered most from the complaints registered above.

I must confess that I have always disliked Handel's Zadok the Priest, but the Mendelssohn Choir, by its elegant and controlled interpretation, convinced me of the magnificence of this work. The odd slip in the organ introduction did not materially detract from this stunning performance.

Champagne Charlie and his ragtime guitar

by Chris Davies

To some peoples' delight and others' chagrin, Champagne Charlie and his good-time guitar did not entail a raucous sing-along, but rather one man's attempt at rejuvenating a style of music which up until recently had long been forgotten and neglected: ragtime. Giving a sordid, sporadic first half C.C. recovered to play up to his high potential in the latter half and provided a very interesting and educational few hours.

C.C. played ragtime on his rather impressive chrome plated, bell brass Dobro guitar. The ragtime style demands that he try to make his guitar imitate a piano, and though this is a formidable task, he was most convincing. Incessant tapping of the foot, mechanical-like playing with his left hand and frequently twanging on the strings with the right produced a reasonable facsimile. The nature of the music did not allow for any clear, ringing chords but only a sometimes suspect form of guitar picking.

The first set that he played was totally unacceptable as he found himself fighting an inadequate sound system and first-night jitters. Starting with a Joplin number which he handled in a shuffled fashion, he proceeded to do a Blind Blake composition which suffered from faulty picking. Blind Blake was a studio musician for Paramount Pictures in the 1920's; in fact the latest piece done by C.C. was written in 1927. By the time he sang his third song, the inaudible lyrics of the two previous follies had made for a lack-lustre first impression. "Delilah" featured a bridge between ragtime and classical ragtime with a slow regimented marching cadence. It was in this tune that he exposed to us what he would continue to do, and do well: the syncopation which is inherent in ragtime music. The middle set of the show started as a carry over of the first: inconsistent guitar work and mumbled words. Let it be to his credit that he put together two fabulous songs halfway through, and linked them to a humorous and fascinating story. "Blake's Worried Blues" was a fine demonstration of finger picking, with the catching thing about "Emeneurs" being its rhythm and bass range. Working with a superior P.A. system and more self-confidence Champagne Charlie finally brought his act together, and the audience was with him at last.

The final portion of the program was certainly the finest. Roberts began with his namesake "Champagne Charlie", which portrays an inebriated old man gleefully singing in a jumbled fashion. And in that song is the real essence of ragtime. The music and the words are insignificant - ragtime is a spirit.

IF YOU LIKE

TEQUILA

Come to the
QUEEN'S PUB

ON TUESDAY

FOR OUR TEQUILA
BASH!

HOUSE AVAILABLE

6 BEDROOMS

AMS Housing Service has a newly-acquired house near campus available November 1 for 5-6 Queen's students at $295 per month (heat and utilities included)

Tenants will be selected by a LOTTERY to be held WED. NOV. 30 at 7:30 P.M. in the UNION THIRD FLOOR COMMON ROOM.

LOTTERY PROCEDURE: The house will go to the first person whose name is selected so groups should submit all names at the lottery or at the AMS office by 5 p.m. Oct. 30. The draw will be made at 7:30 so submissions must be made before that time (doors open at 7:00).

More info from AMS Housing Office or from Laurie at 544-5358

A SANDWICH YOU CAN REALLY SINK YOUR TEETH INTO.

277 Bath Rd.
Kingston

Intermediates undefeated

OWIAA finals at Queen's

Field hockey action from this weekend's tournament.

Soccer Gaels in second place

by Michael Barnes
The Soccer Gaels finished league play on Saturday as they edged Trent 1-0. This win puts them in second place behind York in the O.U.A.A. East division. In most other sports second place would guarantee a playoff spot. But under the present league setup only the first place team advances to the provincial championship.

The end of this season marks the last time a number of players will play for the Gaels and we would like to mention them at this time in recognition of their contributions. Those who are leaving this year are Nic Drysdale, Davey Robertson, Tony Louwman, Peter Dickie and Dave McKenny. Together they have logged nearly twenty years of service on the Queen's soccer teams. Replacements for them will be hard to find.

Coch John Walker should also be applauded for this efforts throughout the year. Coaching is never easy at the best of times, but with his wealth of experience the Gaels could not have asked for a better man.

The rookies this year were a

Grads hockey commences

The Queen's Loyalist Graduates Hockey League opened its 1975 season Saturday night with a match between the Nibers and the Tombstones. It was a close fought duel whose outcome was not determined until the final horn.

The Nibers jumped into an early 2-0 lead with goals by Bernie Blazer and Bruce Nichol. However this lead was soon erased by the Tombstones who came back for four straight goals, including two by Herb McCall. Due to the steady goalkeeping of Rick Potter, the Tombstones managed to hold a 6-4 lead with five minutes to go. But the Nibers applied tremendous pressure which paid off with two fast goals by Peter Shirokoff to end the game at a 6-6 tie.

The upcoming season should be just as exciting as this game for all the players and fans alike.

pleasant surprise and blended in well with the returning team members. Hopefully they will continue to improve next year. The team thanks all the supporters who came out during the season and hopes that you will all be back next year when the world's most popular game returns to Queen's.

Fencers undefeated

by Rosemary Knight
The Queen's girls' fencing team won the Fourth Annual Women's Invitational Fencing Tournament held here this weekend. Our team was undefeated, winning all five of their matches against other universities. The U. of T. team came second, their only loss coming at the hands of the Gaels. McGill came in third with three wins.

Fencing for Queen's on Saturday were Denise Cassidy-Aquist, Debbie Christian, Erika Cook, Rosemary Knight and Sue Seto. Queen's is very fortunate to have John Andru as coach this year. John is from Ottawa and is the technical director of the Canadian Fencing Association. The tournament was well run thanks to the organization of Erika Cook and made an enjoyable day for all those competing.

by Kathy Keely
This past weekend, Queen's hosted the OWIAA Part one (east) Championships for women's field hockey. Competition for both Senior and Intermediate teams took place.

The Queen's Intermediates demonstrated once again that they are a team of championship potential. They played a round-robin tournament, defeating McMaster 4-0, Ottawa 4-0, Laurentian 3-1, and tying Toronto 0-0. U of T also won three and tied one so these teams are tied for first after the first weekend of play. Another round-robin tournament will be held next weekend at McMaster and this will decide the actual champion. Carolyn Broadhurst lead the Queen's scorers with four goals, while Betty Dickie added three. Pearl Dixon two and Marg Bartlett and Lyn Atwood one apiece. The Intermediates consistently performed as a team. This as opposed to dazzling individual performances, is without a doubt the main reason why they have done so well. Coach Karen Carson has taken players of little or no experience and has formed them into a fine unit, both offensively and defensively. She certainly should be congratulated.

The Seniors also played in a round-robin tournament but they did not fare quite so well. They lost all three games by scores of 0-6 to U of T, 0-6 against McMaster and 1-2 against McGill. Janis Wager was the only Queen's marksman for the weekend. Actually, the scores are not really true indications of the calibre of play of our girls. They moved the ball well but lacked the finishing touch as they just could not put the ball in the net. They will meet a different set of teams next weekend, and although they will not be able to win the championship, they should play some good games. Hopefully they will have a little more luck around the goal so they can finish the season on a winning note.

Both teams would like to thank all those who helped officiate at the tournament as well as the spectators. Next weekend marks the close of the women's field hockey season. Queen's sends wishes of good luck to both teams in their tournament at McMaster... Go get 'em, gals!!!

ABRAMSKY
Men's Wear
Queen's students 10% off
full line of men's
clothing and furnishings
259 Princess St.

STUDENT HEALTH SERVICE

MEDICAL CLINIC — 547-6106 — 24 hours daily
(Answering service contacts a duty physician when the Health Service is closed.)

CLINIC HOURS — 9:00 am - 11:30 am
1:00 pm - 4:00 pm
Monday to Friday inclusive

PSYCHIATRY & COUNSELLING — By appointment
9:00 am - 5:00 pm phone 547-2889 or come to Health Service to make an appointment.

Flair
PHOTOGRAPHIC
Has A Limited
Number of Appointments
Available for
Graduation Portraits
Phone 542-7733 or visit 94 Brock St.
542-7733 (Corner of Brock & Wellington)

LONDRIY'S DRUGS
Special rates
to Queen's Students

471 Princess at University Ave.
464 Princess
Reddendale
Lasalle Park
Amherstview

Delivery Available
546-3696
OPEN 7 AM TO 11 PM DAILY change of course?

We've got a program for you that could change the course of your whole future—successfully.

It's called our Sales & Marketing Management Program, and it's for graduates who want the most out of their career and have the drive to earn it.

To find out more fill in the coupon below or talk to your Campus Recruitment Officer about an interview.

The Canada Life Assurance Company

The Canada Life Assurance Company
330 University Avenue Toronto, Ontario M5G 1R8
Send me more information about your Sales & Marketing Management Program.

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

COURSE _____

(Include resume if available.)

Gaels blow late lead to Guelph in season finale

by Jim Lemesurier

The Golden Gaels failed to hold on to an early fourth quarter lead as the visiting University of Guelph Gryphons scored two late touchdowns for a 20 to 10 O.Q.U.A.A. interlocking victory before just 1,500 Richardson Stadium fans, Saturday. The loss marks the end of the season for the Gaels who finish in the league's eastern division cellar with the McGill Redmen. Both have 2-5 win-loss records. The Gryphons, however, clinched third spot in the west and will start playoff action next week against the Western Mustangs.

The opening quarter was a defensive struggle with the only scoring by Guelph punter Jim Mossop at 13:46 who took advantage of a strong tailwind to boot a single. The Gaels went with a 5-3 defense hoping that the extra linebacker could contain the powerful running of all-star backs Dave Lane and Bruce Morris. This defensive alignment was initially successful but Gryphon coach Dick Brown had enough confidence in his talented pair to stick primarily with the ground game and only go to the air when necessary. The statistics indicate that Brown had the right idea as quarterback Brad Hall completed half of his 18 pass attempts for 70 yards and eight first downs. More specifically, five of these completions provided critical second down conversions which helped sustain Guelph's first two scoring drives. The Gaels on the other hand only moved the yardsticks three times through the air while giving up four interceptions, two each by starting pivot Roald Serebrin and reliever Tom Taylor.

Queen's however presenting a fairly consistent running game as Dave Hadden and Pete McNabb, operating out of a T formation, led an impressive 60 yard second quarter march before being stopped at the Gryphon 15, bringing Will Kennedy in for a 23 yard field goal and a 3-1 lead at 8:37. The drive cost the Gaels the services of "Beast" Hadden who may have suffered fractured ribs and was forced to leave the game early in the third quarter.

McNabb has best day yet

The Tricolour did not last long as Guelph came right back with a 75 yard scoring drive on 16 plays for a 7-3 halftime lead. The drive was highlighted by the same key pass play used twice. The spotters in the press box, realizing that the Gaels defensive backs were committing themselves too quickly in one direction and called for motion in one direction and countered with easy tosses to open receivers on the opposite side. One was successful to Vaughn Wright on a third and four situation from the thirty and the other produced flanker Jim Lalonde's major at 14:18.

Gaels Bob O'Doherty (no. 20) makes his cut behind no. 34 Murray Buchanan and no. 51 Keith Taggart.

Queen's regained the lead early in the third period as McNabb ripped off-tackle for 16 and 8 yard gains and then eclipsed his finest offensive performance to date and an outstanding five year collegiate career, with his first touchdown in a Tricolour uniform on a 7 yard burst. McNabb led Queen's rushers for the day with 102 yards on 19 carries.

The 10-7 was not enough as minutes later the Gryphons moved into Gaels territory for the game winning edge. Hall went almost exclusively with Morris and Lane on a 72 yard onslaught which Lane, who was the game's leading rusher with 121 yards, climaxed with a two yard plunge with just six minutes remaining.

There may have been enough time but there were not enough downs as Queen's relinquished possession on an unsuccessful third down faked punt at mid-field. The Gryphons took over but had to punt three plays later as well. Queen's gave it one more shot but Taylor's desperation bomb to Pollock was intercepted by John Kelly and run back to the Gaels' 10. From there the Gryphons had little trouble bringing the total to 10-10 with just 19 seconds remaining.

The defense were more reliable but also had to contend with injuries to key personnel such as veteran linebackers John Waddell and John Tovee who were often sidelined. Norm Haggarty was lost from the opening game with a broken arm.

The game marks the end of many brilliant and devoted careers for Queen's. Dave Hadden, Peter McNabb, Tom Taylor, Mike O'Shaughnessy, Wes Garrod, Jim Daley, Ian Anderson, Peter Sabistan and Bob Cooke have all played their last game as Gaels. It is also possible that Bruce Pollock, Keith Taggart, John Waddell, Alex Morris and Greg Anderson will not be back next year.

Last game for some

The loss was not as upsetting as the previous setbacks. It merely added the salt to Queen's Bruce Pollock no. 23 is brought down by Gryphons' no. 74 Stan Strecker.

"A PROFOUND AND DEEPLY DISTURBING SOCIAL DOCUMENT THAT IS A SCARIFYING INDICTMENT OF THE WORLD
WE LIVE IN"
D. P. GUMBEEY

Queen's Journal

Volume 102, No. 16
Friday, November 1, 1974

QEC service scrapped, AMS has alternate plan

After a long and heated debate, the AMS Council finally voted to discontinue the Queen's Excursion Club (QEC). The motion for the revocation was prompted by numerous allegations directed to the club's management, inferring that the service failed to provide sufficient passenger service coverage, as well as proof of the safety of the bus vehicles.

Don McVie, manager of the club, staged his defense at last night's AMS meeting at which he claimed that the AMS had not given him a fair chance to present proof of the legality and the safety of his operation. However, according to Peter Druxer (VP finances), McVie had received several letters previous to this date requesting these documents which would make claim to the club's status. McVie credits his not responding to the requests as a "breakdown in communications".

Upon discontinuing the Queen's Excursion Club, the AMS has prepared itself for an alternative bus service. Chartering Wager Coach Lines, school and highway buses, the service will continue to be provided at the same half-premium rate.

John Beech, (Services Commissioner) pointed out that one of the essential differences in the two services concerned the matter of safety. Between Wager Coach Lines and the government the AMS Bus Service will be providing a two million dollar per student insurance coverage instead of the one million dollar per bus insurance policy of the QEC.

The motion to pass this service will face council next week.

NUS attempting to upgrade housing

SASKATOON (CUP)—The National Union of Students has begun efforts to provide students with better housing.

The NUS standing committee on housing, met Oct. 12 in Saskatoon, and mapped out a campaign to obtain federal government housing fund for students and other low income groups.

A meeting was set for January with the Ontario Federation of Students to consolidate students' positions on housing. Participants will contribute specific data and points of view from their campuses and communities.

Much of the data will be sent to a team of students at Dalhousie University during the next few weeks. This information, including numbers of students living off campus, percentage of out of town students, and vacancy rates, will appear in a report written by the Dalhousie students.

Meanwhile NUS members will make contact with other low income groups in their area with the intention of setting up a joint housing conference.

The housing committee's long term plan is for these combined interest groups to make a joint appeal to government agencies for housing funds.

"Housing is not a problem for students alone," said Sidney Shugerman, Alberta NUS representative. "It is a problem for native people, unemployed people, single parent families, nearly all young people, and nearly everyone in the vast areas of this country that are economically depressed," he said.

"All of these people are unable to get adequate housing. If we work together in demanding that a share of corporate profits be used to provide adequate housing we can win."

Peek inside

Fire in Union	page 3
Letters	pages 6, 7
Room-mate blues?	pages 8, 9
Night of the Iguana	page 13
Unbackpage	page 15

Enrolments up across Canada

OTTAWA (CUP)—Most Canadian universities have reported an upswing in the number of students on campus this autumn.

Many spokesmen attribute the increases to a renewed interest in higher education and to the current economic situation. They say students are taking courses that will guarantee them a job after graduation instead of the unemployment line.

Many of the new students are taking professional courses because of the inflationary spiral and the uncertainty of the job market.

An exception to the general trend appears to be Memorial University in Newfoundland where total undergraduate enrolment this fall dropped to 5,500 from 6,048 last fall.

However, Memorial spokesmen say that first year enrolment is up over last year.

Some spokesmen are attributing the increases to the rising interest of women in obtaining an education. The Registrar at the University of New Brunswick says there are about 5,650 full time students at the university this year, an increase of about 50 over last year. He attributes the increase to more women.

The University of British Columbia in Vancouver anticipated the number of undergraduate and graduate students this year would be as much as 10 percent higher than 21,368 registered last year.

A spokesman for the university of Victoria also expected enrolment to be higher than last year's 6,069. Victoria's enrolment record of 6,341 was set in 1972-73, the year that many other Canadian universities registered a drop in students.

An admissions officer at Ottawa's Carleton University said the number of non high school graduates wishing to enter Ontario Universities this year is up 15 per cent over last year.

At McMaster University, total 1974-75 enrolment is estimated at 8,850 and the number of first year students 2,730, both records.

The University of Toronto anticipated a total enrolment of 43,772, about 1,225 more students than last year.

ernie sparks

"Mankind is at a turning point," spoke Dr. Aurelio Peccei to an audience in Grant Hall Wednesday night. In his view, we must develop a philosophy of humanism predicated on justice and human development or risk the destruction of mankind.

wat's hapnin'?

Upcoming Events

Tuesday, November 5 - 1:30 pm - Workshop with pianist Franzpeter Goebels in Harrison-Le Caine Hall, Room 120. Topic: Interpretation of form and the form of the interpretation. Admission is free.

Tuesday, November 5 - 8:00 pm - Informal introduction to Transcendental Meditation with instructors Gregg Wilson and Michael Barclay, in the third floor common room of the Union. Meditators welcome too. Refreshments available.

Tuesday, November 5 - Department of Film Studies presents Shoot the Pianiste (France, 1960). Directed by Francois Truffaut. Starring: Charles Asnavour, Nicole Berger. Ellis Auditorium. Admission: $1.00 at the door.

Wednesday, November 6 - Professor Gifford, Professor at the Latin American Linguistic Center of St. Andrews University will be giving a talk on "The Fortunes of Spain in South America" at the Casa, 90 Queen's Crescent, at 8:00 pm. All interested persons are welcome. There will be no admission charge.

Wednesday, November 6 - 7:30 pm - Michael Ondaatje will present a reading of his poetry and a screening of his most recent film "The Clinton Special" in Ellis Auditorium. Following the screening, Ondaatje will discuss aspects of his work with the audience. This event is jointly sponsored by Queen's Department of English and the Department of Film Studies. There is no admission charge for this event.

Thursday, November 7 - 8:00 pm - Benefit Concert for Orphans in Vietnam. Bill Bosworth Quartet, Easy Company, Kirk Elliot, Norm Nurmii and Karen Skidmore. Speaker: Moli Warren (Vietnamese Buddhist Peace Delegation). Ellis Auditorium. Donations at the door. All proceeds to orphanages sponsored by the Unified Buddhist Church of Vietnam.

Thursday, November 7 - Artsci '77 proudly presents a Smoker, Drinker, Dancer, or your idea of a good time. Clark Hall. Dance to the sound of Boojum. November 7-9, 11-16 - Queen's Department of Drama Presents Night of the Igoana by Tennessee Williams. Convocation Hall at 8:00pm. Tickets and info at the drama desk. 547-6291.

Saturday, November 9 - 9:00 pm - The Queen's West Indian Club at Kingston will be having their annual fall dance in Leonard Cafeteria. As in previous years all Queen's students are invited to come and have a great time.

November 12-14-15 - 10 am - 5:30 pm - The Multi Media Artists will be holding their exhibit and sale in the McArthur College main foyer. Everyone welcome. On Display will be batik, pottery, weavings, silk screen cards and writing paper, and hand-wrought pewter jewellery.

Thursday, November 11 - A slide competition open to anyone affiliated with the university is being sponsored by the Queen's Camera Club. Deadline is Nov. 14, slides will be judged that night. Entry fee is 10¢ per slide. There is a limit of 10 slides per person. Slides should be placed in an envelope, along with the fee and put in the box provided in the A.M.S. office (downstairs of the Union). Each slide should indicate name of entrant and phone number.

Friday, November 1

7:00 pm - Diplomacy Club Meeting in the McLaughlin Room in the Union (first floor behind the coatroom). New members welcome. Please bring pencil and paper.

8:00 pm - CFRC 1490 AM presents The The Goon Show, the best of British humour with The Histories of Pliny the Elder.

8:00 pm - Communist Meeting - Bill Stewart, provincial party leader, will speak on Health Services and unemployment followed by questions and general discussion. All are welcome. Room 517, John Watson Hall for details phone 542-5279.

8:00 pm - Bandido Saloon featuring Turkey in Leonard Cafeteria. Tickets at the door, $1.25.

8:00 pm - Bitter Grounds Coffee House presents Black Creek, an evening of bluegrass featuring banjo picking and fiddle playing. Tickets available in the John Orr Room Wednesday, Thursday and Friday 10:30 - 4:30.

9:00 pm - CFRC 1490 AM presents Free Folk; lots of singing and guitar playing resulting in an enjoyable hour of music.

Saturday, November 2

12:00 noon - CFRC 1490 AM presents Saturday Sounds: Five hours of easy-listening music.

2:00 pm - Rugby at West Campus field. McMaster vs Queens.

2:00 pm - Cross Country O.U.A.A. Finals.

7:00 pm - Basketball at Queen's. They play Bishops U. in an exhibition game.

8:00 pm - Hockey - Bishops plays Queen's in exhibition game.

8:00 pm - Hockey Broadcast; Bishops at Queen's.

Sunday, November 3

10:00 am - Morning Worship at Chalmers United Church.

10:30 am - Folk Mass, Dunning Hall, followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House, 164 University Avenue.

12:30 am - Soup on Sunday: until the tureen is empty. $1.25 for soup, bread, dessert and coffee. Agnes Etherington Art Centre.

12:30 pm - Classics by Request: A selection of our listeners' favourite classical music. To have your request included, please telephone CFRC at 547-6677 after 11:45 am.

2:00 pm - There will be a "Picture of the Month" discussion and a tour of the Art Centre by a Gallery Guide, at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre.

2:00 pm - Queen's Musical Theatre presents in its fourth of a series of workshops in the dance studio at the Phys. Ed. Centre.

3:30 pm - Galerie Victoria presents Margrethe De Neergaard, a modern vocalist, in the common room at Victoria Hall.

Monday, November 4

7:30 pm - Life Sciences Rounds - Topic: Brain Tumours. Richardson Amphitheatre.

7:30 pm - History Department presents Career's Night. Room 517, John Watson Hall. Representatives from Career Planning and Placement, McArthur College, and Department of Graduate Studies will discuss opportunities for history students.

8:00 pm - Feature film Swamp Dwellers, fourth in the Third World Film Series will be shown in Dunning Auditorium. Free admission. Coffee and donuts after. Everyone welcome.

8:00 pm - Department of Biology Special Lecture: Scientific Creationism versus Evolution by Dr. Duane T. Gish, Associate Director, Institute for Creation Research, San Diego, California, Earl Hall, Room 114.

8:00 pm - We welcome you to join us in singing Gilbert and Sullivan. A115 McArthur. For more info call Dr. G. Southall. 546-5817.

Pubs and Theatres

Manor - The Reflections
Frontenac - Finnegan's - Liam McGuire
Frontenac - Muldoon's - Moonshiners
Townhouse - Shannon
Commodore - Slewfoot
Hyland - The Odessa File
Odeon - Airport '75
Capitol I - Death Wish
Capitol II - Uptown Saturday Night

Domino Theatre - 6 Rms Riv Vu - Curtains rise at 8:30 pm. Playing dates: November 1, 2, 7, 8, 9. Tickets are available at Mahood's Drug Store or at the theatre on playing nights.

ARTSCI '77 PROUDLY PRESENTS A SMOKER-DRINKER-DANCER

or
Your idea of a good time
Dance to the sound of Boojum

Thurs., Nov. 7, 8:00pm-1:00am

Beer 50¢, Admission: $1.00/year card
5/$2.00 $1.25 General

Queen's Ski Club Crest Contest

1st prize $25 credit on any ski trip and 1 case of Brador entries to special box in John Orr Room by Nov. 9

Winner will be announced at Ski Club Smoker in November in Clark Hall (Tri colour maximum on crest)

Grant Hall
Concert

FRANZPETER GOEBELS
piano

TUESDAY, November 5

Some tickets still available

Box Office in Agnes Etherington
547-6194 Art Centre

a Division of Concerts
event

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY
ENTERTAINMENT
in our Lounge

THIS WEEK :
Slewfoot

Amateur Night
every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

Firemen carry burned-out chair down from third floor Union lounge, where it caught fire Monday night. Cause of the fire is unknown.

It was down and out for drinkers during fire

by Ace Bonanzo

Amid spilled beer and billowing smoke, drinkers were hurriedly ushered from the Queen's Pub by AMS constables late Monday night due to a fire located in the third floor lounge. The fire, although minor, scorched the floor surrounding an easy chair and completely ravaged the chair. No damage was done to the building.

D.A. Saunders, Business Manager of the Union, suspects vandalism but has no evidence to support this. The alarm was set off by a Pub constable working near the stairwell, when he saw the smoke pouring down from the third floor.

A spokesman from the Kingston Fire Department cited a definite problem in the Student Union for firefighters in that "You are faced with all those people rushing to get out." The upper floors of the building, which house the Graduate Student Residence, have been a worry to the Fire Department for a long time according to Fire Inspector Captain Hogan.

An AMS constable at the scene of the fire protested that complicated hose arrangements were the only fire fighting materials located in the Union. He remarked that in a small incident such as this, use of an accessible extinguisher may have put out the fire more quickly.

Dr. Morris at Agnes: abortion laws too lenient

by Ian Jarvis

"A fetus is still a human life and no line of thinking can alter this fact. Only those who let emotionalism override rational thinking can believe that abortion is anything other than taking the life of an unborn being."

With statements such as these Dr. Heather Morris of Women's College Hospital in Toronto, who was speaking to a capacity audience in Etherington Hall Monday night, quickly dispelled any doubts about where she stood on the issue of abortion.

Her dramatic opening remarks set the tone for the rest of her lecture in which she decried the leniency of our present abortion laws.

To make her first point, Morris showed several slides depicting early fetus development, emphasizing that the fetus was sensitive to such things as taste and touch. This done, she asked the audience whether they could still think of the fetus as "just a blob of tissue."

Morris stressed that personal feelings do not alter the biological fact of human existence. In other words, a doctor's "feeling" that abortion is warranted is not proper justification for it. In her view, an abortion is only in order if there is evidence that having the baby will physically endanger the health of the mother.

She identified the major proponents of abortion as affluent university graduate males who are "anxious to walk away from their responsibility."

The existence of lenient abortion laws encourages promiscuity and sends the pregnancy rate soaring, she claimed, since people are apt to be less careful about contraception.

Girls who come to Morris with unwanted pregnancies are encouraged to follow through their pregnancies. She said that women who come to her are really saying, "I've got a problem. Help me." The problem as Morris explained it is not so much the pregnancy as it is the social stigma attached to it and the severe emotional anxiety this brings on. She maintained, however, that an unwanted pregnancy "is not the horrendous situation that people make it out to be." Morris closed her remarks with a plea for "more positive, life sustaining solutions."

Immigration referendum Swiss keep foreigners

GENEVA (CUP-ENS) - Switzerland's 3.7 million voters have decided not to expel nearly half of the foreigners currently living in the country.

The referendum which would have limited the foreign population to just 500,000 persons.

was prompted by threats of overpopulation, inflation and unemployment.

Switzerland has the lowest unemployment rate in the world with, at last count, 74 persons out of work.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT
SUNDAY 10 AM TO 8 PM

SR-50

Slide rule calculator
by Texas Instruments
New Stock Just Arrived

- Performs all slide rule functions in free floating decimal or scientific notation.
- Features an algebraic keyboard with easy single function keys.
- Full memory system, stores and recalls numbers.
- Automatic conversion to scientific notation.
- 14 character display - 10 digit, 2 digit exponent, 2 signs.
- Includes rechargeable batteries, AC adapter & charger.

184<sup>95</sup>

SR-11

109<sup>95</sup>

SR-10

94<sup>95</sup>

OTHER TEXAS INSTRUMENT CALCULATORS FROM $64.95

GRAND & TOY
LIMITED

115 Princess Street ..... 548-4469

Do U type or write?
Journal needs you

KELLY'S

STEREO MART

110 PRINCESS ST. KINGSTON 544-4014

$250,000 STOCK REDUCTION SALE !!!

WEA JETHRO TULL — reg. 7.29 WAR CHLO — reg. 7.29 BAO COMPANY — reg. 7.29 SWAN SONG — reg. 7.29	CAPITOL HAWKWIND — Hall of The Mountain Grill — reg. 7.29 TRIUMPH — Illusions on a Double O'le — reg. 7.29	COLUMBIA HERBIE HANCOCK — THRUST — reg. 7.29 RICK OERRINGER — All American Boy — reg. 7.29	POLYDOR ROO STEWART — SMILER — reg. 8.29 ERIC CLAPTON — 461 Ocean Blvd. — reg. 7.29
--	--	--	---

2nd Floor Classical Sale

Haydn
Mahler's Head
Bach's Head
Stanley Black
Beethoven
$1.99

ELECTRA
AM-FM RECEIVER
BSR Turntable
EDS 80 Speaker
List $294.85 - Save 95.85
Sale $199

SAVE

SPARKS Kimona My House
RANDY NEWMAN
Good Old Boys NECTAR
Remember the Future
10cc. Sheet Music
RENAISSANCE
Turn of the Cards
MIKE OLOFIELLO
Hergest Ridge
MAHOGANY RUSH
Child of the Novelties
EAGLES
On the Border
BEACH BOYS
Wild Honey

SANSUI
210 RECEIVER
SHURE CARTRIDGE
Garrard Turntable
Ultimate 101 Speakers
List $414.80 - Save 81.80
Sale $333

2nd Floor

OLIVIA ROSS
& THE SUPREMES
THE VENTURES
FRIENDS OF DISTINCTION
GARY LEWIS
& THE PLAYBOYS
ARLO GUTHRIE
Thousands More
93¢ to $1.99
8 TRACKS — Reg. 4.98 & up
20% List Price

ELECTRA
AM-FM RECEIVER
With Built-In 8 Track
BSR Turntable
EOS 80 Speakers
List $344.85 - Save 75.85
Sale $269

SAVE

RUFUS
Rags to Riches
GRAHAM CENTRAL STATION
CHICAGO TRANSIT AUTHORITY
CHICAGO V & VI
STEELY OAN
Pretzel Logic
CAROL KING
Wrap Around Joy
CROSBY STILLS NASH
8 Young So Far
STEVIE WONDER
Innerversions
MINNIE RIPERTON
Perfect Angel

AKAI AA910
AM-FM RECEIVER
Garrard Zero 92
Turntable
Senry 35 Speakers
List $1133.90 - Save 284.90
Sale $849

Main Floor Classical Sale

20% off
ALL REGULAR STOCK

GXC 40
CASSETTE With Built-In Amp.
2 LSP101 Speakers
List $499.95 - Save 200.95
Sale $299

DEMONSTRATOR SALE — ONE ONLY!

SHARP — 20" BLACK & WHITE TV — 189.95 159.00
SHARP — 12" BLACK & WHITE TV — 179.95 149.00
SHARP — 4" BLACK & WHITE TV — 179.95 149.00
SHARP — 20" COLOR TV — 449.95 339.00
SHARP — 20" COLOR TV — 499.95 319.00
SONY — 17" COLOR TV — 669.95 549.00

SPECIAL SALE AKAI SPEAKERS - Demos - 20% OFF

SANSUI AM/FM RECEIVERS

1000x — REG 489.95 SALE 369.00
2000x — REG 559.95 SALE 439.00
SEVEN — REG 729.95 SALE 559.00
SIX — REG 639.95 SALE 499.00

OUR BEST- SELLING SYSTEM

- * AKAI AA5500 Amplifier
- * AKAI AT500 AM/FM Tuner
- * Dual 1214 Turntable
- * Ultimate 303 Speakers

List $1029.75
SAVE $699
$330.75

MASTER CHARGE

CHARGEX

EASY CREDIT

OPEN THURSDAY &
FRIDAY UNTIL 9:00 PM

CCI: Intercultural exchange with third world

by Ian Gemmill
International cooperation, intercultural understanding, and global community awareness are rather vague terms, concepts of which Canadians have some general understanding. Canadians intellectualize questions of international aid, Third World development, and culture shock, but their conclusions remain within the scope of the Canadian way of thinking. They are divorced from the reality of living and working in another culture. They have little concept of how people in developing countries view themselves and the world. Canadian Crossroads International is an organization which works to make intercultural experiences a reality for Canadians who want to broaden their awareness of the human community. C.C.I. began as the Canadian committee of the parent American organization, Operations Crossroads Africa. In 1968, it became a separate and autonomous organization, which has expanded its operations to send 70-80 francophones and anglophones each year to Africa, India, the Caribbean, South America, and south-east Asia. Volunteers work on projects of three to ten months duration in agriculture, education, construction, health care, youth leadership, and research.

The assignments are established by, and respond to the needs of the local community. Crossroads have rebuilt flooded villages, dry wells, constructed village pipelines and reservoirs, built schools, roads and bridges, medical clinics and market places. They have organized camps for underprivileged children, taught physical education, and agricultural methods, provided medical assistance, trained secretaries, and written bulletins on child care.

But C.C.I. is more than an international aid organization. It provides an opportunity for a cross-cultural education for the Crossroads volunteer. Through the working-living situations, they have the chance to gain a deeper understanding of the cultural, social, political, and economic differences and similarities between themselves and the people of a developing country. C.C.I. also allocates 25 per cent of its budget to bring people from developing countries to Canada to work on community development projects here.

Participants, who must be at least 19 years of age and who need not be students, are given living expenses but no salary while on assignment. They are chosen by national selection committee on recommendation of local committees across Canada. Selection is based not on special skills, but on emotional maturity, social awareness, adaptability, range of interests, motivation, and understanding of the aims of C.C.I. Applicants selected by the national committee are required to raise $750 towards the project, on about 25 per cent of the cost of sending each volunteer. Moreover, returned volunteers have a continuing commitment in Canada to share the awareness they have gained through their experience. This may take the form of educational activities and the support of C.C.I. and other organizations involved with intercultural understanding.

Applications are available in the Dean of Women, Victoria Hall November 15 is the application deadline.

After the open discussion period, a hand count was taken from the floor, resulting in forty votes supporting the motion and sixteen opposing.

Why not?

If you want your motivation to inject others, then there's no reason why not.

Think about us and yourself; then think about what we can accomplish together.

For more information on the diocesan or religious priesthood contact:
Priests of the Sacred Heart
Delaware, Ontario
NOL 1E0

Peter Pumpkin sez: Hope you had a happy Hallowe'en and don't forget that the Journal needs writers, typists, and artists. Now where could you find a friendlier bunch of people and creative outlet for all that midterm frustration? There is also one request for a sensuous young lady with a taste for the bizzare.

Queen's Bridge Club

FIRST MEETING

Tuesday, November 5

7:30 pm

McLoughlin Room, Student Union

Everyone Welcome

Whether you are an expert, beginner, or just interested in learning to play. We will have Rubber and duplicate games and lessons for beginners

Phone Pieter Geerkens at 544-7509
for more details

Famous Brand
Names at Discount Prices

Howick

GWG

North Star

Baby Jane

Landlubber

Apple Bee

and many more

Foot of Princess at Ontario

letters to the editor

Davis vague on Cedarwood

Dear Editor,

In his article on Premier Davis' visit to Queen's, Mr. Steep, like Davis, completely missed the point of the Cedarwood question, and fell to parroting the reasons and rationalizations used by the government in their decision. The actual question dealt with why Davis has seen fit to reject any form of democratic public inquiry that would enable the people of Ontario to confront the government with their legitimate objections.

"What have you done about creating a public inquiry board?" can only be answered by telling the audience what in fact has been done (which Davis is unable to do) or by admitting that the government will never agree to such an inquiry (which Davis is unwilling to do). Instead, he chose to evade the question by once again launching into a defense of the original decision with a mixture of political propaganda and plain old bullshit.

I have heard this tired trash many times already from government "information" centres and biased reporters like Mr. Steep: what I like to hear is Davis permitting public participation in his ivory-tower administration more often than once every four years.

I may be politically naive, but I think that in a democratic system, a government that wishes to steal thousands of acres from legitimate homeowners and farmers (NOT speculators, as reported by Mr. Steep) and furthermore wishes to do so with the taxpayer's money, must justify these wishes before the people. If Davis is allowed to railroad this monstrosity into being, yes it will save a few potential homebuyers some money, but the cost to Ontario in loss of democratic rights of the people will be infinitely higher.

Andrew Pemberton-Pigott

Defense for NDP; offense for Steep

Dear Editor,

I was not surprised to read the following quotation from Bill Davis on the front page of Tuesday's Journal: Unless you get into the entirely different ideology of the NDP, do the Liberals really present a credible alternative to the Conservative Party?

The comment by Paul Steep that followed this statement however, really concerned me. - It is testimony to his (Davis') ability as a professional politician that in one statement he could so effectively nullify the credibility of his opponents.

I think that it is high time that the Ontario electorate looked critically at the way the NDP is so matter-of-factly repudiated as a credible governing party in this province. It is time that we stop regarding the NDP as some kind of fringe group ideologically and recognized it as a major force in provincial politics. The Ontario electorate forgets and Bill Davis purposefully remains silent about the fact that the NDP came out of the last provincial election with 19 seats. That was only one less than the official opposition. The NDP is government for three of four provinces west of Ontario. The NDP may have an "entirely different ideology" certainly it has an entirely different set of priorities than Bill Davis and his government. That in the opinion of many Ontarians makes it the only credible alternative to the Conservative Party.

Wendy Hughes

Non-smoker is fuming

Dear Editor,

Hi. I'm a non-smoker. I belong to that 60 per cent of the population that is not exploited by the tobacco companies, the government tobacco tax, and ash tray manufacturers. You are a smoker. You probably have valid reasons for being one. You are very likely on the move all the time, and have to stop once in a while and relax. Okay. We have that in common. I too have essays and exposes and translations and exams. I calm my nerves in other ways, like going to the gym and walking through the park and sleeping more than three hours every night. That's where the difference lies: what I do affects only myself.

Let's get to the point. Nonchalantly blowing clouds of smoke into a crowded classroom, whether you realize it or not, does affect others. Because others don't say anything doesn't mean that they aren't slowly suffocating a) from smoke inhalation b) from anger. Let's face it. You are being extremely inconsiderate. I mean, it isn't everyone that finds it euphoric to inhale the stinking smoke from a weed that has been treated with exotic chemicals to make it burn satisfactorily. But I don't have a choice. I am trapped in the same classroom with you. It's not that I don't like you, it's what you're doing I can't "swallow", although I do not object most of the time. You see, I too have this dastardly habit. It's called breathing. I'd rather die than give it up!

I'm asking you only one thing. Have respect for me and others like me, poor demented creatures that we are. Clean air is good for you.

Sincerely

Peter Haines

President, Queen's Federation of Non-Smokers
P.S. I'm the only member too! Others wanting to join call me at 548-7873. My address is 26 Park St. for those who want to send letter bombs.

Don't opt out concert fees benefit you

Dear Students,

Since the week is approaching for those who wish to opt-out of their concert fee, I feel it necessary to outline some of the benefits of the concert fee in the past, present and future, which are not always realized.

To begin with, I would like to give a brief description of what each student's specific fee of $3.00 is for. In this age of high priced entertainers and unpredictable box office sales, it is necessary for a "buffer" in order to take chances on any name acts. Secondly is the factor of lower prices! Anyone going to concerts in Toronto or Montreal will realize that prices we charge for people to see acts like Genesis, Lightfoot, Lou Reed and Spirit were the cheapest on their tours. Therefore, from the concert committee more concerts, keep lower prices and to hire more expensive entertainment.

These are the benefits of the concert fee in general but let us take a look at how it can affect the individual student. To begin with, we have closed concerts on various occasions when tickets are only available for sale to those who have paid their concert fees. These concerts are closed at any event selling here (due to AMS regulations) and any event we feel is a sure sell-out. We have had two closed events thus far: "Kelly Jaye and Crowbar with Devotion" and "Eric Weisberg and Deliverance". There will also be some in the next term.

A benefit of the concert fee, which was used extensively last year was the opening of advance sales to Queen's students before being on sale to those who have opted out and to Kingstonians. We will attempt to maintain this policy this year. It was done with Lou Reed and will be carried through for Bruce Cockburn on November 17.

For Bruce Cockburn we are having advance sales and cheaper prices for the first week to people in the concert fee and then a dollar more for others after the first week. So, for some concerts this year, we will definitely have cheaper prices for those who remain in the concert fee programme.

Finally, in past years the concert committee has held free concerts at some time during the year. We have no definite plans at the moment for a free concert as it depends on availabilities and the total concert budget we receive minus opt-outs. As best as I could, I have tried to outline the possible advantages of your concert fee. It is up to the individual to decide if $3 is a large cost for these advantages.

David Finlay
Concert Committee Chairman

Gestapo agents?

Dear Editor,

Mr. Druxer has recently taken it upon himself to look into the activities of the Queen's Exclusion Club, which he has reason to believe is failing to fulfill its purpose. Perhaps he should look a little closer to home. I refer specifically to Mr. Nordheimer, Mr. Bonokowski and their gang of gestapo agents who are continually harassing the students with their nefarious activities. Let me detail. I encountered a quite reasonable soul at the west gate of Richardson Stadium who let me in with a plastic jug of beer during the home game previous to homecoming. At halftime I found it necessary to refuel, and upon returning, this time at the east gate, I had the unfortunate circumstance to meet up with a Mr. Rose who knew that I would smash people over the head with this weapon. He quite rightly refused to let a dangerous criminal run rampant in the stands and so turned me away. To cut a long story short, I naturally got in at the other entrance despite the agents advanced electronic communications system, and as you well know, several that the AMS is not diligent enough. Students have been known to carry matches into Richardson and actually light them. What's to stop one of these maniacs from burning the whole place down. Criminals are not treated this kindly and neither should students be; after all they are in an institution also. Therefore I propose that the present frisking procedure of the AMS be modified to include magnetic detection devices, and lie detectors to further insure our security. I am sure our government officials would gladly sacrifice their honorarium for a year to come up with the vast sums necessary for this investment.

At the Lou Reed concert I was not allowed to walk around the track to another section of the stadium because it was obvious that I intended to smash the spotlights and machine-gun the performers. I was frustrated in this attempt, but more cunning on my part might have resulted in success. A barbed wire fence and police dogs are the only answer.

On Friday at the Pub I managed to plug in the Juke box and play a song at the outrageous time of 4:30. Fortunately my effort was thwarted by a member of the AMS before anyone could get some sort of perverted thrill out of listening. However here too I might have caused hysteria to set in. My answer, a simple electrocution attachment to the plug that would quickly dispose of any music crazed weirdo-freak.

Seriously now folks, I object to the surveillance that we must undergo at football games, the moronic rules established to protect us from ourselves, and the attitude of many, not all, AMS constables, who think that an armband entitles them to order us about like cattle and treat us like schoolchildren who have no right to talk back to teacher.

Revision of rules is called for, as is a thorough assessment of constables, and their role at university functions. If something isn't done soon the situation can only deteriorate.

Yours truly,
Duncan Moodie.

Closer look at Wolman's state

Dear Madam,

In the Journal's Oct. 22 issue, AMS president Tony Wolman reminded us of five promises from his election manifesto, and told us how his team had fulfilled them. I think they are worth a closer look.

Promise 1 - To consolidate finances. What was delivered - the capital account was raised from $1500 to $40,000 "partly as 73-74 revenue over costs and partly due to the profit realized by the Pub this spring and summer."

We all know how the Pub profits were raised: by increasing beer prices. I doubt this is an effective means of restoring a flagging capital account, but it looks like treating the symptoms rather than the ailment itself. What about the gross inefficiencies which led to the sorry state of the finances in the first place?

Promise 2 - To promote more cultural activities. What was delivered - "QEA is attempting to bring in a Philharmonic Orchestra, or ballet company if the deal with the board goes through. The Education Commission is aiming for prominent speakers. ... I will approach the Prime Minister talk to the students." (my emphasis.)

I'm sure we are all impressed by these "achievements" - clearly a new concept of success has entered the arena of student politics. Trying or intending get to count as delivering the goods. This will certainly make for much more successful AMS governments in future. Queen's can be the first university in Canada to succeed in trying to have Gerald Ford, Fidel Castro and Groucho Marx come to campus. Of

Queen's Journal

Vol. 102, No. 14
Fri., Nov. 1, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario.

Editor-in-chief: Suzanne Sherkin
Business Editor: Terry Collins
Managing Editor: Daniel McCrelland
News Editor: Sarah Yarnell
Features Editors: Wendy Reynolds, Laurie Gibson
Arts Editors: Kerry White, Peter Haworth
Photography: John Bottomley, Jon Wilmer, Ernie Sparks, Keith Bourns
Backpage: Val Colton
What's Happin': Rosemary Knight, Jennifer Hunter
Classifieds: Leslie Gaukrodger, Trish Brooks
Contributors: Rosemary Knight, Ian Jarvis, Ace Bonanno, "Louisiana" Dave Selander, John McQuaig, David Card, Lipbeth Haworth, and Bonnell (twice)

Comment: All of us here decided to say Hi to our Mums, who'd kill us if they knew that we were up at 3 am. There also seems to be a lack of people here tonight. The gremlins must have got them on their way here. It's alright except Dan "perform an objective action on an abstract object and thereby convey an abstract action in which there is meaning."

Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (613) 547-2666. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

Editorial

You'll be getting, not giving

It appears that students are afraid that the AMS will be hitting them for more money in order to pay for the proposed increase in honoraria. Nothing could be further from the truth.

The honoraria is not a separate sum of money but an amount budgeted for in the overall AMS fee. How this money is allocated is definitely a matter for student's concern, however the responsibility of this allocation is ultimately up to those council members whom we have elected to represent our interests.

Through the increase in honoraria, the AMS, is attempting to better the student services by making these positions of responsibility more financially accessible. This will allow more students the opportunity of accepting these jobs.

By allocating the monies for this honoraria, students can only benefit from better management of their services.

Continued from Page 6

course ammunition is going to be more easy to come by for one's political detractors. Why did Queen's miss the opportunity to try staging the Ali - Foreman fight in the Harty arena - you can't say there wasn't enough room, because attempts don't take up much space.

Promise 3 - To provide stronger and more meaningful input in the Senate. What was delivered - "In the area of Senate we have been lacking with (sic) input from the AMS. We will try to improve this situation, and I will keep you informed." (Again, my emphasis.)

Ditto for promise 2, except that now a further concept of success has emerged - actually failing to carry out one's programme. This new standard is, of course, guaranteed to put Queen's out ahead in the field of student management.

Promise 4 - To stimulate more interfaculty interaction. What was delivered - "Here too we have been lacking, but not entirely of our own fault" (new standards in grammar too?) "...again, all I can try to do is elicit some action from Council Reps..." (No need for emphasis.)

Ditto for promises 2 and 3.
Promise 5 - To be responsible for what we say and do. What was delivered - "the policy of Mr Wolman, Mr. Druxer and Mr. Gray is to be honest."

So there it is - if you had your doubts about the honesty or responsibility of these people, then forget them, for you have their personal assurance that they are indeed honest and responsible.

Yours sincerely
Lawrence McFarlane

the MARKET
GARDEN SHOP
& hairstyling salon

Peter Smits invites you
to his new hair core shop
549-2110
43 BROCK ST. KINGSTON, ONT

OPEN HOUSE '75

Organizational meeting,
3rd floor Common Room
Student's Union

7:30 PM, Wednesday, 6 Nov.
all DSC Chairpersons and other interested people should attend.

THIS WEEKEND AT AGNES
(open Saturday & Sunday 1 to 5)

Exhibitions:

Bachelor of Art Education
Western Odyssey: Sydney Prior Hall
Mary Rawlyk: Prints

Selections from Permanent Collection

Soup on Sunday at 12.30 p.m. until the tureen is empty. $1.25 for soup, bread, dessert & coffee. A Gallery Association event - students specially invited.

Sunday at 2 pm: PICTURE OF THE MONTH and a tour of the Art Centre by a Gallery Guide

fresh flowers
delivered around the corner
and around the world

176 Ontario St.

Singing the room-mate blues

Getting rid of that thorn in your side

by John McQuaig

If, after two months you still look at your room-mate and say to yourself, "Why me?", then you have a problem. How to let your room-mate know he's leaving. This may be a difficult thing to do if you are not on speaking terms. It is not the type of thing you like to break to him a casual note attached to his bags out in the hall.

The problem is that room-mates are not normally matched as well as they might be. If you will recall that when you applied to residence at Queen's, you were required to fill out a form and to enclose a picture of yourself. This is probably where you bombed out. Unless you cut your picture out of an Eaton's catalogue it was probably not enough to save you from serving a one year term with your room-mate. Any defect will trigger an equal and opposite reaction in the selection of your room-mate. In other words your room-mate is an inverse function of your enclosed photograph (which seems only fair). If your eyes appear dark and beleaguered, then you will be slated to live with an insomniac.

To get rid of your room-mate you must disgust him, alarm him, repel him, and totally revolt him remembering that it is important to stay on favourable terms with him.

There are several obvious options open to you:

- Bring about an emotional breakdown by constant ridicule and abuse.
- Induce fits of depression.
- All of the above.
- Homicide.

Any one method could be effective if you play on his fears, slander his ideals and harp on his inadequacies through some gross form of malpractice. You should, however, be careful not to hurt his feelings.

One method which is popular and a lot of fun is the "connption" method. This works on the principle that it is better to have him leave on his own accord than to have him lay the blame on you. Starting at the soonest possible moment in which you are in his presence, move your wrist and any two fingers in a circular motion for several seconds. Repeat this every seven minutes until your room-mate asks you what you are doing. Without responding, try cutting the time in half to three and a half minutes per connption. If this method does not at least get him on his feet and packing, then you are living a sick, sick man.

There is no guarantee that any given method will drive your room-mate out of the "skitso" technique is a failed bet. This method must be used in the early months of residence these are the wonder months which your room-mate is still in his basic conceptions of where and who you are, and probably a hard time answering questions. Here is a sample of the dialogue being used to its best advantage in a recent dialogue between room-mates during the first days of week:

Mom: Hi, my name is Bill.

Wahours.

Mom: My name is Frank.

Mom: That's nice Frank. . .

Remember what I told you my name being Bill, well, I was kidding.

Mom: Oh really.

Bill: Well, my name is Ralph.

X: Whatever you say.

Bill: I'm glad we straightened out. You can call me Sam.

X: Hey Frank, I'm an astronaut and I'm going to land on you.

X: Bye.

This method is both severe and damaging and therefore should be used discriminately. It is recommended that this harsh method be used unless you are absolutely certain that you have a mild dislike for the person you are living with.

Many of the so-called "skitso" is its lasting effect. The first such an encounter will not be sufficient to chase your room-mate out, it may well haunt him for the rest of his university career. The prices of his returning are slightly higher (he is a bear for punishment is bigger than you).

There are several other methods of room-mate elimination. The first established at Queen's was first established at Queen's. Fourth year Life Science student Bill Finch recommended a technique he described as the "old trick". This severe course entails purchasing a mass spectrum equipped with all the common methods of room-mate elimination which makes a loud gurgling sound. For best results the aquarium should be placed in the middle of the room and should be stocked with alligators and a variety of iguanas. This method is designed to combine the raw terror of dangerous reptiles with the chronic irritation of an all night water pump. If you are serious about this method then you should make sure that the animals are fed regularly with any food your room-mate keeps on hand for snacks or Sunday meals. If your room-mate persists in his habit of returning to your room to live, floodlights should be added to the aquarium to provide night viewing of the reptiles.

Remember, don't be unfair to him, he's been working night and day for several years to carve out a place for himself at Queen's. Maybe he is simply a little shy for the first seven months.

If these techniques don't work, look at him with an objective, open mind and put him in one of the following categories:

- a. shy - the type that only talk on weekends and civic holidays.
- b. backward - the type that can't maintain a conversation with a telephone operator.
- c. unpopular - the type that doesn't even get junk mail.

Any one of these characteristics can be used to your advantage.

If you have no scruples at all simply begin by removing his personal belongings over a period of several days. Start with his bed as this is what makes him return to the room each night. By bringing in a ping pong table for your personal use, start to lay the format for the renovation of the room. Throughout the week, remove fixtures and mirrors on his side of the room. Make sure that all damages are reported to the dean of residences and that the responsibility form is signed with your room-mate's forged signature and falsely witnessed by the guy across the hall. Using a razorblade, cut the carpet out of his side of the room so that in the morning when he gets up off the ping pong table his bare foot hits the sub-zero tile.

Queen's Psychology major (who we will call Mr. F.B.), says that he overcame the problem of room-mate elimination during his first year. "Oh yea, I remember my room-mate

Sam," he says proudly. "I had a new room-mate by Thanksgiving." Mr. F.B., a compulsive napkin writer from way back, summarized (on a serviette) what he called the "klepto method."

This method requires the removal of one's own personal belongings, an interesting reversal of roles. By hiding his most treasured possessions and by giving away his deodorant, toothpaste, etc., Mr. F.B. created valid grounds for falsely accusing his room-mate of being one who steals things unconsciously (kleptomaniac). By spreading vicious rumours to his close associates, Mr. F.B. succeeded in providing an environment threatening enough to drive his room-mate out. (What Mr. F.B. failed to mention was that he also had a new room-mate at Christmas and Easter and that by late April his room was getting fairly crowded.)

If none of these methods have proved effective, maybe you have overestimated your room-mate's intelligence. Maybe you could get away with using the old standard methods. From a recent survey of upper year students who successfully got rid of their room-mates, 64 per cent felt that the common methods worked more effectively and saved time. (i.e., those methods such as changing door locks, stealing and setting the room on fire).

The impact of the survey's findings could be seen graphically by using a supply and demand curve for room-mates. At the beginning of frosh week the demand and supply of room-mates gives us the equilibrium price for room-mates; that is, every person was paired with another and all were accommodated. Because of the early advent of room-mate terrorization, more room-mates were pushed out into the housing market against their will. Residence killings which would rise later in the year (room-mates who could not otherwise be eliminated) would trigger a slight drop in the supply of room-mates (cateris paribus).

It should be remembered that getting your room-mate to make the big move may not be easy. He may resist and he might even retaliate. Remember how different you two are as individuals. If you are tall, he is short. If you are a normal, clean-living person, he is a total bore. If you are quiet, unaggressive and easily irritated, he is likely someone like Howie Meeker.

If the opportunity should ever arise you might even sit down and explain to him how you are two different characters and that even though you like him, you think he would be more comfortable living somewhere else, where he didn't run the risk of being stabbed in his sleep.

unclassifieds

THE QUEEN'S RIDING CLUB is organizing English riding lessons at a special rate of four for $20 at Vahalla Stables. If interested in signing up for the next set or for further information call 544-0928.

LOST ONE RED CCM BICYCLE. Really miss it, my shoes are wearing out 24" wheels, red and white seat. Canada sticker on seat. Just an old bike but please return it. Reward $10. Call Dan at 544-5358 between 5 and 6.

LOST 1 man's ID bracelet Sat 24 between football game and main campus. Inscription on back and "Don R. MacKay" on front. Please if I don't get it back my girl will kill me. You name reward. Don 544-7486 or 243 Gordon house.

ATTENTION GRADS: Grad pics must be taken by Nov. 15. Contact Wallace Berry studios for appointment.

ARTS 74 Dance Leonard Hall Cafeteria. "Naah" Wed. Nov. 6 8 pm.

CONGRATULATIONS, Kathy, on the Independent Studies. Irish Histrionics beware! Mike.

BROCK MANOR ANNOUNCES a combined Birthday extravaganza in honour of Captain Marvel, Bubbles Deporneau, and the nefarious Dr. Helmschilt on the first evening of the 9th of November at 8:30 pm. Byob sub, birthday kisses are on the house. All lovers and friends we still can recall are more than welcome. For details, phone 542-2737, and ask for Brad, Jay, Lynn Pat or Sue.

EXPERT TYPING. Essays, letters, thesis etc. grammar, spelling, punctuation. Corrected and automatically Error free, ask for Jim Easton, 542-7462, 151 Earl Street.

SCIENCE 77 and 78 T-shirts are being ordered now. You must order yours in advance today or Monday till Wednesday next week in the Eng. Soc. offices, 3 pm till 7 pm today.

FREE BEER on Nov. 14 at the Psychology Smoker in Clark Hall. The person who gives us the best idea for a crest. Entries close on Nov. 7.

The Queen's Riding Club is organizing English riding lessons at a special rate of four for $20 at Vahalla Stables. If interested in signing up for the next set or for further information call 544-0928.

Queen's Riding Club. Note New Time the bus for the western trail riding will leave at 9:30 am this Sat and from now on. Everybody welcome. Cost $2.50.

ROOM in a 4-bedroom apartment to sublet. Choice of Furnished or unfurnished. Near campus. Phone 542-4439 after class.

D.O.D. Jealousy will get you NOWHERE FAST. Just because all you have are ordinary balls with which to play, you are not entitled to mock those with better ones. (With which to see in the night). Any student interested in a game in the dark phone 549-4623 and ask for govt. DEUCE.

FREE BEER. All you can drink at the Psych Party Nov. 14 if you are the winner. Design Psychology students a crest. Hand in your design at Humphrey Hall, the Psych office. Contest ends Nov. 7.

PSYCH US OUT!!!

LOST Man's ID bracelet on Sat. 24 between football game and Main Campus. Inscription on back and "Don R. MacKay" on front. Please, if I don't get it back, my girl will kill me. You name reward. Don 544-7486 or 243 Gordon House.

Queen's Riding Club. NOTE NEW TIME the bus for the western trail riding will leave at 9:30 am this Sat and from now on. Everybody welcome. Cost $2.50.

FOR SALE. Scuba equipment. One U.S. divers scuba tank with harness, boot and reverse valve. One U.S. divers regulator. Excellent condition. Phone 544-2856 evenings.

THERE ONCE WAS a lad named Hight, Whose eyes were brown and not blue. Now all I can say, in my own little way, is a Happy 21 birthday to you. Love Sis.

ATTENTION PHOTOGRAPHERS: slide competition sponsored by Queen's Camera Club. Last date of entry Nov. 14. Slides to be judged by a panel of competent judges. Top 3 slides to be enlarged to 8 by 10 prints by cibachrome (nonlating) process. Entry fee of $10 per slide with a limit of 10 slides per person. Put slides with name and phone no. on each side in envelope along with entry fee and place in special box in AMS office before Nov. 14. Open to anyone connected with the university.

Gael Groups 74 and 13 are invited to participate in the excitement of Frontenac Fantasia Be at 454 Frontenac St. at 8 on Sat Nov. 2. Fantasia Frolic and fun for all. Jim, Annie, Hugh and Steve, Jane and Brian.

FOR SALE. 10k gold man's Queen's University ring, ruby stone. Never worn. Best offer. Please phone 544-6589.

FRIENDS AND ENEMIES of Marl Mollie are reminded of his second annual Birthday bash. Games room, Victoria Hall, Sat Nov. 3 at 8:30. Music, dancing, Free cake, BYOB.

WELT THANKS you for your concern. Was not lost but taking an extended detour in the Red Room. Description unflattering. Beware the Welp's Revenge. Incidentally phone number wrong. Thank God!!

LATE 1968 FORD FALCON for sale. Excellent shape all round - same owner. Drive it yourself. Call 544-6658 or 542-0465 Sat or Sun.

DON'T FORGET THE BENEFIT CONCERT ON THURSDAY. All proceeds to go to orphanages in Vietnam. Nov. 7 at 8pm in Ellis Auditorium. Donation at the door. RIDING CROSS COUNTRY is enjoyed every weekend by the Queen's Riding Club. Everyone is welcome to join. Bus leaves Union Saturday at 7am.

WHO'S WHERE CHANGES: to be printed in Golden Words Nov. 20. Anyone who wants a correction, give your name and correction to info Bank.

FRONTENAC FANTASIA - SAT NOV. 2 at 8pm. 454 also invites Wendy and Erdahl, Mary, Pat, Scottland Sue, Cathy, Helen, Taggy, Wendy, Snubs, Bob, and the Gang. Gael Groups 13 and 74 also. All you bring is the imagination and we will supply the FANTASIA.

BANDAID SALOON - come in and get plastered. Leonard Cafeteria 8pm TONIGHT - live band.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: Guitar Strings. Classical strings by savares, Concertiste and Augustine and Labella, Steel Strings by Martin, Darco, D'Angelico, Gibson, Labella, Fender, Korosound, Earth Wood and Ernie Ball - Banjo - strings by Vega, Labella and many other.

Gael Group 13 reunion tonight in the pub. Meet you inside the union 8 sharp. See you all there. Your loving Guds.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: Violin Strings by Thomas, Pirastro, and Olive. Cello Strings, lute strings, Viola strings, Rosin by Hill, Hildersheim, Tourle

Mutes at Renaissance Music. 326 Princess Street. 542-5258.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: Lessons by Thomas Hardy, Walt Menee and Gary Muller. Renaissance Music. 326 Princess 542-5258.

WANTED DESPERATELY: One desk I'm tired of writing on my lap, phone 549-5229.

VO IS SOMETHING TO CLAP ABOUT! Or is it CLAP IS SOMETHING TO VO ABOUT? Anyway, see Med's Variety Night 1974 Nov. 15 and 16. Tickets on sale soon!

WANTED TO LEASE 3 or 4 Bedroom apt. starting January. Call 544-7015.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: BRASS AND WOODWIND SALE 20 percent off Selmer, Buffet, Crampton, Armstrong, Olds, Labian, Arley, Delford, Bessy and Hawkes, Lallier, Besson, Academy, Muller, Getzen and Conn. Renaissance Music. 326 Princess. 542-5258.

OUTING CLUB SPORTS LOTTERY - Win cash vouchers for Findlay's Sport Store worth $100 (first) $25 (second) and $10 (third). Tickets available from outing club members for only 35c or 5 for $1.00. Draw will be on Nov. 28th.

ARE YOU DISPLEASED WITH YOUR PRESENT QUARTERS? Due to a sudden change of plans, our bedroom set up has a vacancy. Excellent comfortable accommodations for mature male student. This is located in West end of the city so a car is recommended. For further information, call 542-0982.

ARTS 78 Cards are going last. Make sure you get yours from Doug Thomson at 544-0659 and HURRY FROSH!

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: RECORDED SALE...10 percent off all recorders. Heinrich, Moeck, Yamaha, and Dalmeth. Special Heinrich Soprano Recorder reg. $28. now $22. Renaissance Music. 326 Princess Street...between Clergy and Barrie. 542-5258.

GET YOUR ACT TOGETHER: AUDITIONS for Arts 78's Nightclub Night are being held on Monday November 11. Phone 544-8672 for a time slot reservation.

BRUCE COCKBURN is coming Nov. 17. Two shows at 7 and 10pm in Grant Hall. Tickets on sale Nov. 4 to Nov. 9 for $3.00 in the John Orr Room for those who have been smart enough not to opt out. The Rest of you will have to pay $4.00 if you can get a ticket after Nov. 9.

LOST 4 Stainless-steel Papermate pens with name (D. Goolinich) engraved on it; in Watson Hall, Room 420 on Thursday 24th Oct. If great sentimental value. If found please call Don or leave message at 549-4111.

Gael Group Nov. 7: Our reunion is this Sunday at 5:30pm at Robyn's House. If you need a guided tour to get there just call Greg. Hope you can come.

DILDO'S BIRTHDAY PARTY: The Ottawa House wishes to announce the anniversary of birth of its resident surgeon. The Doctor (alias Sodomy man, Pedophile, incest, Brain Raul, Emdorph, Nairb and numerous others) turned 20 on Tuesday. We will celebrate this momentous occasion Friday Nov. 8 at 8:00. All friends are invited to the party at Queen's not so common bawdy house.

THE CONTINUING MISADVENTURES OF DON WON: No. Don, you shouldn't have taken Len up to your room while your roommate was bawling all over the floor. Don't blow it tonight. Dood.

MIDTERRIS GETTING YOU DOWN: GIRLS? Depressed, listless, lonely? 4th Brockington Stud Service Inc. offers you a lift. Dial 544-7706 day or night and ask for Ronny, Steve, or Sheldon. You ring we spring! (satisfaction guaranteed)

IT'S NICE TO KNOW that three-quarters of the Big Four have class. To the fourth, "B.B.", who thought Sunday night would be a joke, YOU AIN'T GOT NONE!!! When is this return to be?

FOR FRIDAY'S rapidly-rally, beastly jolly time at the Pub, we would like to thank all lumberjacks with or without bixing boots (Steve). Monty Python would have been quite at home.

THE CARPENTER'S INN, COFFEE HOUSE in the Union Coffee shop Saturday, Nov. 2nd, 9:00 to 12:00. Com in and relax with live music and refreshments. Admission 75c. Sponsored by Queen's Christian Fellowship.

BRIDGE PLAYERS: The Queen's Bridge Club is being revived Tuesday Nov. 5 in the McLaughlin Room of the Student Union. Duplicate and Rubber Bridge. Contact Peter Geierkens 544-7509 for more details.

DEFINITIONS: What is the difference between an Honorary

Engineer and an Engineer? An Honorary engineer has wit charm, intelligence, CLASS, AND IS NOT AN ENGINEER. (courtesy of Honorary Engineers, Class of '77 for Bubba and the Animals)

ROOM AVAILABLE IMMEDIATELY for two people in Elrond College. Large, comfortable, newly painted $128 per month with two meals a day Monday through Saturday. Call Joan 544-9501.

FOR THE POSTER DONE IN GRANT HALL. It really looked nice on the wall when our 9:30 rise took you males by surprise. I'm amazed it got there at all. Thanks to Vic and 3rd floor!

LOST: Dark brown key case approximately 6 or 7 keys in it. Call 544-9400 and ask for Mark.

Gael Group Nov. 13: Reunion Sunday Nov. 3rd. Having a spaghetti dinner. Meet us at Adelaide Hall at 4:00 in Lobby. Phone Dave and confirm please. 542-2485.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: We have a large assortment of VanDoren records which will arrive Nov. 5. The Conductors Manual for Choral Music and other pieces needed for courses at Queen's have arrived. Renaissance Music. 326 Princess Street...between Clergy and Barrie. 542-5258.

BOOZERS, BABES AND SCUZZY PIGS TAKE NOTICE: GORDON HOUSE SMOKER, November 7th, 8 till 1:00 in the Gordon Common Room. Who knows? You might get lucky...

FOURTH GORDON RAIDERS AND TRADERS LTD., in expectation of a surplus of Phantom, Andy Panties, some of which, no doubt, will be hot from the oven, announces an Up-coming Sale of sizes 26 and 30.

Gael Group Nov. 5 Reunion tonight at the Pub and maybe we'll go bowling. Happy Halloween! See you there. Jane, Brian and Marie.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: GUITAR SALE. Yamaha FG-800 reg $359, now $255; Aria "Dove", reg $149, now $119; El Degas "Telo" reg $149, now $110; Magenta "Dobro" reg $159, now $110; Fender Acoustics 35 percent off, Aria 12 string reg $149, now $129. Renaissance Music...326 Princess Street...between Clergy and Barrie. 542-5258.

TO THE PERSON WHO RIPPED OFF MY SHETLAND SWEATER from the West-wing stairwell of Elrond: I will condone your act of petty larceny if you put it in a brown paper package and mail it to H. Heimbecker, 226 Elrond II. I will even pay the return postage. P.S. All tip-offs from anyone else who has knowledge of the said crime-criminal, will be greatly appreciated and of course remain anonymous.

WANTED: A girl to share 3-bedroom apartment. Preferably upper year student or working. Phone 542-9926.

FOR THE LAST TIME 80 EARL (Judy, Trish, Ronda, Cathy, Angie, Rosemary) is reminding you about our party tonight! Costumes if you've got them. We're going to have a good time. BYOB. The Earl Girls.

TURNPIKE 21: Here's to all the chickens having orgasms down the middle of the highway of life. May you have many more honey-no, not orgasms, Birthdays. Happy Chickens!

LOST: Ladies black wallet somewhere on campus containing all my ID and some money. If found phone 544-9403. There is a reward offered. Thank you.

DOUGIE: Glad you enjoyed it as much as I did. After all, can't spend all your time with your calculator, can you? V.P.

STAMPS FOR COLLECTORS: The Queen's Stamp Club will hold its fourth meeting on Monday Nov. 4 at 8:00 in the Red Room at Kingston Hall. All collectors welcome.

OUTING CLUB TRIP: Those interested in going on a rideau trail hike on the weekend of Nov. 9-10, there will be a meeting in Room 101 in Jeffrey Hall at 7:30 pm on Monday, Nov. 4. More info phone Rob at 544-7049.

IT'S ABOUT TIME! ALL FRIENDS OF NANCY AND M.J. are invited to our housewarming party this Saturday night at 9:00. BYOB.

FOOTBALL'S OVER but don't get lonely. The basketball and hockey Gaels start their own treks for championships. Come out and help the Queen's Gaels cheer them on. Kazoos of all sizes welcome.

Exhibition Hockey: Sat. Nov. 2, 8pm Queen's vs. Bishops. Exhibition Basketball: Fri. Nov. 1, 8:30 pm. Sat. Nov. 2, 7pm. See you there.

LOST: one red wallet at ELLIS HALL, Fri. Oct. 25. 12 cards very important. Please phone 542-1164.

TOUR FOUR CHARMING CHOWN HOSTESSES: Thanks for the fantastic Sunday evening, the best yet. Al, Gord, Watson, P.S. The menu is in preparation.

INTERESTED IN THE BIG BAND MUSIC of the 30s and 40s in the big band sound for your dance? If so contact W.J. Babe (542-1920) or G.G. Hallam (542-9740) for bookings. Also more modern stylings, latin, etc. available.

ATTENTION ALL GRADUATES: If your graduation portrait is to appear in Tricolor '75 it must be taken by Nov. 1574. Please make a definite appointment for a portrait sitting with Wallace Berry 542-2891 now.

BRUCE COCKBURN: Tickets go on sale Nov. 3 in John Orr room. $3.00 with valid blue card. $4.00 after Nov. 9. Bruce Cockburn Nov. 17 in Grant Hall, two shows, 7 and 9.

QUEEN'S HOMOPHILE: We have over 50 members, all ages, all

unclassifieds

ARTS 78 Cards are going last. Make sure you get yours from Doug Thomson at 544-0659 and HURRY FROSH!

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: RECORDED SALE...10 percent off all recorders. Heinrich, Moeck, Yamaha, and Dalmeth. Special Heinrich Soprano Recorder reg. $28. now $22. Renaissance Music. 326 Princess Street...between Clergy and Barrie. 542-5258.

GET YOUR ACT TOGETHER: AUDITIONS for Arts 78's Nightclub Night are being held on Monday November 11. Phone 544-8672 for a time slot reservation.

BRUCE COCKBURN is coming Nov. 17. Two shows at 7 and 10pm in Grant Hall. Tickets on sale Nov. 4 to Nov. 9 for $3.00 in the John Orr Room for those who have been smart enough not to opt out. The Rest of you will have to pay $4.00 if you can get a ticket after Nov. 9.

LOST 4 Stainless-steel Papermate pens with name (D. Goolinich) engraved on it; in Watson Hall, Room 420 on Thursday 24th Oct. If great sentimental value. If found please call Don or leave message at 549-4111.

Gael Group Nov. 7: Our reunion is this Sunday at 5:30pm at Robyn's House. If you need a guided tour to get there just call Greg. Hope you can come.

DILDO'S BIRTHDAY PARTY: The Ottawa House wishes to announce the anniversary of birth of its resident surgeon. The Doctor (alias Sodomy man, Pedophile, incest, Brain Raul, Emdorph, Nairb and numerous others) turned 20 on Tuesday. We will celebrate this momentous occasion Friday Nov. 8 at 8:00. All friends are invited to the party at Queen's not so common bawdy house.

THE CONTINUING MISADVENTURES OF DON WON: No. Don, you shouldn't have taken Len up to your room while your roommate was bawling all over the floor. Don't blow it tonight. Dood.

MIDTERRIS GETTING YOU DOWN: GIRLS? Depressed, listless, lonely? 4th Brockington Stud Service Inc. offers you a lift. Dial 544-7706 day or night and ask for Ronny, Steve, or Sheldon. You ring we spring! (satisfaction guaranteed)

IT'S NICE TO KNOW that three-quarters of the Big Four have class. To the fourth, "B.B.", who thought Sunday night would be a joke, YOU AIN'T GOT NONE!!! When is this return to be?

FOR FRIDAY'S rapidly-rally, beastly jolly time at the Pub, we would like to thank all lumberjacks with or without bixing boots (Steve). Monty Python would have been quite at home.

THE CARPENTER'S INN, COFFEE HOUSE in the Union Coffee shop Saturday, Nov. 2nd, 9:00 to 12:00. Com in and relax with live music and refreshments. Admission 75c. Sponsored by Queen's Christian Fellowship.

BRIDGE PLAYERS: The Queen's Bridge Club is being revived Tuesday Nov. 5 in the McLaughlin Room of the Student Union. Duplicate and Rubber Bridge. Contact Peter Geierkens 544-7509 for more details.

DEFINITIONS: What is the difference between an Honorary

Engineer and an Engineer? An Honorary engineer has wit charm, intelligence, CLASS, AND IS NOT AN ENGINEER. (courtesy of Honorary Engineers, Class of '77 for Bubba and the Animals)

ROOM AVAILABLE IMMEDIATELY for two people in Elrond College. Large, comfortable, newly painted $128 per month with two meals a day Monday through Saturday. Call Joan 544-9501.

FOR THE POSTER DONE IN GRANT HALL. It really looked nice on the wall when our 9:30 rise took you males by surprise. I'm amazed it got there at all. Thanks to Vic and 3rd floor!

LOST: Dark brown key case approximately 6 or 7 keys in it. Call 544-9400 and ask for Mark.

Gael Group Nov. 13: Reunion Sunday Nov. 3rd. Having a spaghetti dinner. Meet us at Adelaide Hall at 4:00 in Lobby. Phone Dave and confirm please. 542-2485.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: We have a large assortment of VanDoren records which will arrive Nov. 5. The Conductors Manual for Choral Music and other pieces needed for courses at Queen's have arrived. Renaissance Music. 326 Princess Street...between Clergy and Barrie. 542-5258.

BOOZERS, BABES AND SCUZZY PIGS TAKE NOTICE: GORDON HOUSE SMOKER, November 7th, 8 till 1:00 in the Gordon Common Room. Who knows? You might get lucky...

FOURTH GORDON RAIDERS AND TRADERS LTD., in expectation of a surplus of Phantom, Andy Panties, some of which, no doubt, will be hot from the oven, announces an Up-coming Sale of sizes 26 and 30.

Gael Group Nov. 5 Reunion tonight at the Pub and maybe we'll go bowling. Happy Halloween! See you there. Jane, Brian and Marie.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: GUITAR SALE. Yamaha FG-800 reg $359, now $255; Aria "Dove", reg $149, now $119; El Degas "Telo" reg $149, now $110; Magenta "Dobro" reg $159, now $110; Fender Acoustics 35 percent off, Aria 12 string reg $149, now $129. Renaissance Music...326 Princess Street...between Clergy and Barrie. 542-5258.

TO THE PERSON WHO RIPPED OFF MY SHETLAND SWEATER from the West-wing stairwell of Elrond: I will condone your act of petty larceny if you put it in a brown paper package and mail it to H. Heimbecker, 226 Elrond II. I will even pay the return postage. P.S. All tip-offs from anyone else who has knowledge of the said crime-criminal, will be greatly appreciated and of course remain anonymous.

WANTED: A girl to share 3-bedroom apartment. Preferably upper year student or working. Phone 542-9926.

FOR THE LAST TIME 80 EARL (Judy, Trish, Ronda, Cathy, Angie, Rosemary) is reminding you about our party tonight! Costumes if you've got them. We're going to have a good time. BYOB. The Earl Girls.

TURNPIKE 21: Here's to all the chickens having orgasms down the middle of the highway of life. May you have many more honey-no, not orgasms, Birthdays. Happy Chickens!

LOST: Ladies black wallet somewhere on campus containing all my ID and some money. If found phone 544-9403. There is a reward offered. Thank you.

DOUGIE: Glad you enjoyed it as much as I did. After all, can't spend all your time with your calculator, can you? V.P.

STAMPS FOR COLLECTORS: The Queen's Stamp Club will hold its fourth meeting on Monday Nov. 4 at 8:00 in the Red Room at Kingston Hall. All collectors welcome.

OUTING CLUB TRIP: Those interested in going on a rideau trail hike on the weekend of Nov. 9-10, there will be a meeting in Room 101 in Jeffrey Hall at 7:30 pm on Monday, Nov. 4. More info phone Rob at 544-7049.

IT'S ABOUT TIME! ALL FRIENDS OF NANCY AND M.J. are invited to our housewarming party this Saturday night at 9:00. BYOB.

FOOTBALL'S OVER but don't get lonely. The basketball and hockey Gaels start their own treks for championships. Come out and help the Queen's Gaels cheer them on. Kazoos of all sizes welcome.

Exhibition Hockey: Sat. Nov. 2, 8pm Queen's vs. Bishops. Exhibition Basketball: Fri. Nov. 1, 8:30 pm. Sat. Nov. 2, 7pm. See you there.

LOST: one red wallet at ELLIS HALL, Fri. Oct. 25. 12 cards very important. Please phone 542-1164.

TOUR FOUR CHARMING CHOWN HOSTESSES: Thanks for the fantastic Sunday evening, the best yet. Al, Gord, Watson, P.S. The menu is in preparation.

INTERESTED IN THE BIG BAND MUSIC of the 30s and 40s in the big band sound for your dance? If so contact W.J. Babe (542-1920) or G.G. Hallam (542-9740) for bookings. Also more modern stylings, latin, etc. available.

ATTENTION ALL GRADUATES: If your graduation portrait is to appear in Tricolor '75 it must be taken by Nov. 1574. Please make a definite appointment for a portrait sitting with Wallace Berry 542-2891 now.

BRUCE COCKBURN: Tickets go on sale Nov. 3 in John Orr room. $3.00 with valid blue card. $4.00 after Nov. 9. Bruce Cockburn Nov. 17 in Grant Hall, two shows, 7 and 9.

QUEEN'S HOMOPHILE: We have over 50 members, all ages, all

Show Her The Way You Feel with a Petite Diamond Ring from

Brock Jewellers

Love diamond ring Set in 10k yellow gold $42.00

THE QUEEN'S JOURNAL

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

161 Princess St.

We waited for Wayman

by Kerry White

The first of the English Department poetry readings for this session was held last evening in Room 517 of John Watson Hall. A large audience assembled to hear readings by Tom Wayman, a poet from the Canadian West, and Tom Marshall, one of Kingston's own poets.

Wayman is an informal and extremely likeable young man; he seemed to enjoy this opportunity to read his work before an audience. This obvious enjoyment, plus a wry sense of humour and a perfect sense of timing, created a strong rapport between him and his listeners. He read from his two volumes of poetry: Waiting for Wayman, published in 1963 and For and Against the Moon, published in 1974.

The two most striking aspects of Wayman's earlier poetry are its humour and its evidence of a never-ending search on Wayman's part to describe external scenes or other people — his poetry is focused upon himself, his work, his travels. Nowhere are this intensity and his humour more evident than in a poem entitled "Life on the Land Grant Review". The title refers to a magazine for which Wayman was the poetry editor. In it he presents a hilariously ironic picture of himself ensconced in a small office, furiously scribbling "NO!" over the manuscripts of thousands of aspiring young poets, and feeling a riotous sense of power over "the poets who knew me when" and "all America with a poet under every rock".

Wayman's humour was as apparent in the informal monologue between the poems as it was in the poems themselves. His comment on the permanent faculty and the "revolving door faculty" of a certain university at which he taught is a perfect example.

Wayman worked for a time as a labourer in heavy construction, during this period his poetry became more serious, and at the same time widened in scope, perhaps because he found in the world of the working man problems with which he could identify.

These characteristics are evident in "A Cursing Poem: This Poem Wants Gordon Austin Clarke. Austin Clarke will be reading from his own work in Ban Righ Lower lounge on Monday, November 4, at 8:30 p.m. He is the author of four novels, the latest of which is Storm of Fortune (1973) and a collection of short stories under the title When He Was Free and Young and He Used to Wear Silks (1971).

He was born in Barbados and educated at the University of Toronto. Since then he has taught school in Barbados, and at several American universities, besides working on the Metropolitan Library Board, and writing scripts for the CBC.

paper they pull out to write on is drawn from the week of work graveyard".

Wayman's poetry is rough, but its warmth and sensitivity cannot be denied.

Tom Marshall's readings were taken mainly from a new volume, The Earth Book, which has only recently been published. The first copies were available at the reading, and the reviewer will suspend opinion until she has had the opportunity for further study of the poems.

"Black Mischief"

"Black Mischief" is the phrase used by a Time reviewer to sum up the work of novelist Austin Clarke. Austin Clarke will be reading from his own work in Ban Righ Lower lounge on Monday, November 4, at 8:30 p.m. He is the author of four novels, the latest of which is Storm of Fortune (1973) and a collection of short stories under the title When He Was Free and Young and He Used to Wear Silks (1971).

He was born in Barbados and educated at the University of Toronto. Since then he has taught school in Barbados, and at several American universities, besides working on the Metropolitan Library Board, and writing scripts for the CBC.

The good old days of jazz again

Live at Jimmy's
Maynard Ferguson No. 4 & 5
Columbia

by Tim Runge and David Card
There are still many who identify the "big band" sound with Glenn Miller and Benny Goodman, and lament the passing of the "good old days of jazz". Today's big bands exist in a highly competitive musical world and will probably never achieve the universal recognition of their predecessors, simply because some people refuse to believe that anything new has happened to jazz, and others can't be convinced that jazz will appeal to them. However, Maynard Ferguson's newest album, recorded live about a year ago, could change a lot of minds. For sheer boldness of presentation it has few rivals in any musical genre.

Maynard Ferguson is a Canadian born trumpet player who has worked under some of the greatest names — Stan Kenton, Jimmy Corsey and others, and who has had for many years his own "big band". The band, although changing its members quite frequently, has been remarkable for two reasons: the excellent musicianship of its members, including Ferguson himself, and its exceptionally tight and well rehearsed sound. Both of these come across on the album.

The album begins with a somewhat traditional presentation of two long pieces — "Teonova" and Jimmy Welsh's

"MacArthur Park". If the album can be taken as a prolonged concert, then these two songs represent the opening numbers, designed to introduce the listener to the band and to acquaint him with the technical excellence of Maynard Ferguson's musicians. Side one is characterized by the bold and brassy sound of the band as a single unit, and hints at the exuberance that overflows in the later pieces. It is worthy to note that although Ferguson himself is a masterful trumpeter, his band is never reduced to the level of a back-up group, and at all times the 5 trumpets, 2 trombones and 3 saxophones, drums, bass and piano share the burden of the carrying of the album to its completion.

Sides two, three, and four are presented as successively more progressive treatments of jazz. With each number the atmosphere is given an extra charge of electricity by the sheer impact and originality of the music. "Stay loose with Bruce" features the mesmerizing beat of Rick Petrone's string bass accenting the baritone saxophone of the extremely talented Bruce Johnston. Peter Jackson's electric piano along with Andy MacIntosh's alto sax combine in the appropriately titled "Nice 'N' Juicy".

Without a doubt the climax occurs on the last cut of the album. The opening articulations of Bruce Johnston's seductive baritone saxophone are indications that the listener is in store for a real treat. The band joins Johnston's innovative saxophone style to create almost a negro spiritual number.

The album was recorded live at Jimmy's in New York City's night club district. From an engineering point of view, the quality is superb. The music is clear, precise and full of impact. Audience noise is reduced to an absolute minimum. The album displays that wide open improvisational quality that is found on live albums recorded by a good quality band when the band was feeling good and their music was being appreciated.

And that is just what Maynard Ferguson's band has — good quality. The album is a delightful listening experience in good jazz, and highly recommended to both the nostalgic listener of the bands of days gone by and the connoisseur of modern jazz.

The Handmaids

Princess Street, Kingston, Ontario

Exclusively handmade
gifts, clothing, accessories

349 Princess Street
542-8021

Imm of Shoes

231 Princess St.
544-4993

- ★ Hand made boots and shoes made to measure
- ★ All styles of ladies leather handbags - something for everyone

LEONARD CAFETERIA Art's 76 Dance

Wed. Nov. 6 8 PM - 1 AM
Beer $5/2.00

Admission - 50¢ with year card
$1.00 without
ENTERTAINMENT BY NOAH

Women In Residence

Come and talk with the Queen's Committee
of the

Ontario Federation Students
Monday, 3 November

Drama Department to present Williams' Night of the Iguana

Tennessee Williams' play, The Night of the Iguana, won for him his third New York Critics Circle Award. It has been widely produced and acclaimed, and was filmed memorably under John Huston's direction with Richard Burton, Ava Gardner and Deborah Kerr in the leading roles. The Queen's University Department of Drama will be offering its production of the Williams classic in Convocation Hall on November 7, 8, 9 and 14, 15, and 16.

Tennessee Williams has always been fascinated by losers, "two-time losers who're likely to lose once more," but who "possess the charm of the defeated". Like Blanche in A Streetcar Named Desire, they cling to weakening illusions which are slowly torn from them by brutish but often strangely attractive outside forces. Williams has worked this theme in many plays, but always with the sense of moving ahead to new visions, not simply retelling the same old story. A peak in his artistic ascent is The Night of the Iguana.

Set on the verandah of a decaying hotel on the tropical Mexican coast, the play focuses first on the Reverend Shannon, a priest who lost his church because he lost his conventional religion and could not face his own fleshly passions. He has been on a pilgrimage which consists of his leading groups of tourists through the tropics. He seeks momentary refuge at the hotel run by the gutsy Maxine, who offers him herself as the best human refuge of all. But Shannon is more moved by the cool and humane Hannah, herself on a perilous journey with her ancient grandfather, making a fragile living by painting quick sketches and reciting old poems. Her courage in accepting the fact of life's brutalities without letting herself be corrupted by them deeply moves Shannon. His own salvation, however, lies elsewhere.

The Night of the Iguana is filled with magnificent Williams' words and images — at once harsh and tender, vulgar and sweet. The characters are memorable, the scenes deeply moving, and often roilingly funny. The stage setting has been created by Gavin Semple and direction is by Rod Robertson. The play is not for children, and will reach the hearts of anyone who has laughed a lot and suffered a lot.

The production opens on November 7 at 8:30 p.m. in Convocation Hall. Tickets and information are available in the Old Arts Building at the Orama Desk (547-6291). The production runs November 7-9, and 14-16.

"Lewd-icous British humour"

by Elizabeth Haworth
The Nasty Book is for the first attempt at writing by Bert Fegg, with illustrations by Martin and Lolly Honeysett, satirical cartoonists, whose misshapen, half decayed creatures resemble escapees from the Tar Sands. Despite the washable cover bordered with flowers, the book is not written for little children. It will, however, almost certainly cure you of the mid-term Blues.

Or Fegg, who previously made a career of defacing bus shelters and sticking old chewing gum on mums, uses the Monty Python style of lewd-icous British humour. The Nasty Book parodies the children's annual, detailing unabashedly those things they should tell their parents about such as the "Tally-Ho" Automatic Bed-Wetter, How to Cross the Andes by Frog and What to do With String. Of the long list of contents, about a quarter are marked as "deleted by the Publisher", "omitted on legal advice" or, in the case of the essay How to be Nice, "deleted by Fegg".

Each tongue-in-cheek article degenerates into Fegg-style Nasties: each story hurries to a Horrid end, each poem lapses into a Reth, only to be cut short by the Publisher's censorship. Many pages are scornfully footnoted in Fegg's own black vulture scratchings and signed "yervluvinuclle Bert".

There is a variety of topics, from the Wonderful World of Nature (featuring the West Bromley Fighting Haddock) to the Interesting Foods (Nude Chickens in Provocative Poses, Anaconda Slices in 25 foot tins) and the Famous Five Go Pillaging. Anyone who has ever struggled to produce an essay in Grade school will appreciate the Instant Essay Chart, far more entertaining if only slightly less informative than that in Who's Where 75. The sentence structure is given and you just fill in the appropriate descriptions. Not unexpectedly for those "Weeds" who share Fegg's destructive streak, one page is blank and totally useless and may be torn out without damaging the rest of the book.

One of the best features gives instructions for building a Boeing 747 for under 1000 pounds. The author suggests using extra-light chicken wire for easy take-offs and such necessities as cheap disposable cardboard lavatories (10 pounds for a gross).

Although the Nasty Book might not be suitable for children under 12 or queasy maiden uncles, it would make a perfect Halloween or April Fools' gift. Don't plan on reading it in a library — your snickers and out-right chuckles will draw crowds to your side and you will soon find the book being passed around.

The price is reasonable but if the smarmy humour bores you, or if you enjoy it so much you forget to do any work, page 62 describes in detail how to destroy the Nasty Book. This is easily adapted for Kingston residents: (1) Stand at the bow of the Wolf

Islander. (2) Tie an ENORMOUS text book to your waist. (3) Hold the book firmly and jump into Lake Ontario. (4) Release the book.

unclassifieds

ROOM AVAILABLE for first year girl in Coed Morris. Call Suzanne at 544-7229.
FRONTENAC FANTASIA: 3rd long line times at 454 from the "Gratituti Productions" crew on Sat. Nov. 2. Invited are Gael Groups 13 and 24; second Brockington alumni, 458, 456, Alf, Doug, Bruce, Jerry, Dave, Anne, W. Harry, Ken K., V.S. from D.S., Janel, Diane, Naomi, Hans, Nancy, friends and lovers. From D.D., J.P.M., B.G.M. and B.G.
DID YOU GET SHAFTED IN WHO'S WHERE? Golden Words is running a supplement Nov. 20. Give your name and correction to Info Bank.

OPT OUTS

For the Specific Fees Collected for:

TRICOLOR $4.50
AND
CONCERTS $3.00

Will Be available in the AMS office starting

Monday, October 28
to

Friday, November 1

Students wishing to opt out must bring their student cards with them

WANTED

Assistant Director

For Queen's Entertainment Agency

A POSITION WITH NO DEFINITE FUTURE THAT WILL TAKE UP A LOT OF TIME. IF YOU'RE INTERESTED IN BOOKING AND WORKING WITH ENTERTAINERS THEN THIS MAY BE FOR YOU. AN INTEREST AND A KNOWLEDGE OF MUSIC, RECORDS AND A KNOWLEDGE OF MUSIC, RECORDS AND GROUPS IS A NECESSITY.

IF INTERESTED LEAVE YOUR NAME, PHONE NUMBER AND A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF YOUR EXPERIENCE AT THE A.M.S. OFFICE NO LATER THAN WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 16.

See All The New
Programs This Year
With 11 Channels to Choose From On...

cable tv
544-6311

Are you or your group
doing something you
would like others to
know about?

Tell Us....

USE OUR BULLETIN
BOARD

Cable Cast TV 13

Bews News

Hockey

Bews hockey, even this early in the season, shows the team to be last year's champions. Arts 76. Player Coach Al Bell has been able to put together a team that plays well as a unit, with the power to pot goals. As well the defence has yet allowed a goal scored against them. Other teams to watch out for are Commerce 75, Commerce 77, and Arts 78.

In games played Thursday Oct. 17, Comm 75 defeated Law 76 3-1 with goals by Revell, Scarlett and Melloy. Moole was the lone scorer for Law 76.

Wed. Oct. 23 saw Arts 76 smother Chem Grads 12-0. Russ Thorn halted a three goal performance while Bobby Hull and Skip Morrison scored two each. In another game Civil Math defeated Electrical 6-1. Draper led the way for Civil with four goals, followed by singles from Kennedy, Hewitt, Moody, and Lalonde, with the only Electrical point coming from the stick of Coleman.

Last Thursday Oct. 24, Mining and Arts 77 fought to a 2-2 tie. Boniwell and Beoj bagging for Arts and Wright and Lewis answering for Mining. On Monday, Arts 78 overhauled Electrical 10-2. Three goal performances by Morgan and Campbell paced the way for the Arts team. Viljakewen netted the only two goals for their opponents.

In Tuesday's action, it was Comm 75 over Mining 5-0. Science 78 outlasted Meds 2-1. Civil Math blanked Comm 78 5-0.

Flag Football

Flag Football has neared the end of the season and playoffs are to begin Monday Nov. 4. At the time of publication, some playoff spots had not been decided; however all results would have been calculated and playoff berths decided by now. Games played this week and last are as follows.

On Oct. 22, the Business Grads whipped Mining 30-0 to assure themselves a playoff spot. Arts 77 defeated Civil Math 17-7, and Meds beat Law 77.

The next day, Law 75 downed Civil Math 13-6, Comm 75 blanked Arts 75 18-0 and Comm 76

defaulted to Electrical. In a well played game with good defensive plays, and hard hitting, Arts 76 was able to knock out Meds 14-0. In another game won by default, Mechanical was awarded the win over Arts 78.

On Monday of this week, the Business Grads were able to defeat Mechanical 21-6 while Comm 75 bombed Electrical 38-0. Meds squeezed by Comm 77 26-25 in a see-saw battle that was decided late in the final minutes of the game. Both teams showed that each could score with good play calling and execution. Fine Football, guys. In other games it was Chemical 25 and Civil Math 6; Law 76 over Electrical 14-7; and Arts 78 defaulted out the league with the win awarded to Mining.

For playoff schedules check the Bews Board in the Men's Locker Room and Good Luck to all teams involved.

Soccer

Soccer season has come to a close with playoffs to begin Monday Nov. 4. Check the Bews Board in the Men's Locker Room for game times and place. Games played last week and earlier this week are as follows:

On Thursday Oct. 24 Meds blanked Comm 75 1-0 with the loan goal going to S. Cramer. On Monday Oct. 28, a close battle resulted with a slim win for Mechanical over Eng. Grads, 2-1. Brian De Nontboun counted for both Mechanical points.

Law 75 and Bus Grads fought to a 1-1 tie, goals going to Zielinski (law) and Knowlton (Bus Grads). Tues. Oct. 29, one game was played with Arts 77 bombing Mining 4-0. Goals went to M. Barnes, with 2 and J. Lambert and J. Beoj each netting one apiece. Chemical outlasted Civil Math 2-0 in a game played in less than ideal weather conditions on Wed. Oct. 30.

Standings: Division I: Comm 76-8, Independent 6, Mech 4, and Eng. Grads 0; Division II: Arts 77-6, Mining-4 Civil Math-3, PHE-2, Comm 77-1; Division III: Chem-6 Sci. 78-6, Meds-3, Law 77-1, Comm. 75-0; Division IV: Law 75-8, Arts 76-3, Bus Grads-3.

Arts 78, Comm 78, Arts 75 defaulted out of league.

number of laps on any of the nights will earn you five participation points towards your Intramural Queen's mug, Queen's bookends or silver tray. If you skate the highest number of laps over the three nights, you will earn a pennant award and 1000 points for your faculty towards the Marion Ross Trophy. So girls come out and skate for learn how-instruction will be given) on Nov. 6, 7:00 to 8:20 p.m., at Jock Hardy Arena. You are welcome to bring guys for support.

WIC activities are really rolling. Don't be left behind. And a word of thanks to the hard working Convenors who are making it all happen. WIC- Just for the Fun of it!

Journal Advertisers

Please note that Journal advertising deadlines are as follows:

5 pm Tuesday for Friday issues

5 pm Saturday for Tuesday issues

There is no guarantee that material submitted after these deadlines will be printed

BIRTHDAY BASH

Friends and friends of friends of Mart Molle, and anyone else who's interested, are reminded of his second annual surprise Birthday Bash. Games Room, Victoria Hall, 8:30, Saturday Nov 2nd. Music, dancing, free birthday cake. B.Y.O.B. Karen, you'd better come.

Soccer Gaels finish second

by Michael Barnes

The Soccer Gaels finished league play on Saturday as they edged Trent 1-0. This win puts them in second place behind York in the OUAA East Division for the year. In most other sports second place would guarantee a play-off spot. However, under the present league setup only the first place team advances to the provincial championships.

The end of this season marks the last time a number of players will play for the Gaels and we would like to mention them at this time for their valuable contributions. Those players are Nic Drysdale, Davey Robertson, Tony Louwman, Peter Dickie, and Dave McKenny to whom we owe this thanks. Together, they have logged nearly 20 years of soccer for Queen's. Their replacements next year will be hard to find. We would also like to thank our coach, John Walker for guiding us through the year. Coaching is never easy, even when you are winning, but with his wealth of experience of the game, we could not have asked for a better man.

The rookies this season were very pleasant surprises and blended in well with the "old guard." Hopefully, they will continue their progress into next year as well. We thank all supporters this year and look forward to next year when the world's most popular sport returns to Queen's.

- GREB-KODIAK BOOTS-

Waterproof, Insulated, Plain or Steel Toe.

Sizes 4 to 13

Always Your Size in Stock at the Best Price

LARRY'S

Men's Wear at
354 King St., East

Just 3 Doors from Princess St.

Bite the one you love

STEAK & STUFF

LICENCED DINING ROOM 1399 Princess (near the station)

AUNT LUCY'S RESTAURANTS LTD.

WE KNOW OUR DIAMONDS INSIDE-OUT... AND SO WILL YOU

There's more to a diamond than meets the eye. A large diamond may not have the clarity of a small one. Trust us to show you the difference, give you the finest value... whatever the price. You'll know every facet, and appreciate your diamond more.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE

JEWELLERS

168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

An International glance

NICOSIA (Reuter) The prisoner exchanges have now been completed in Cyprus. The 11 exchanges were supervised by the International Red Cross Committee and carried out by the United Nations peace keeping forces on the island. There were 3,300 Turkish Cypriots and 2,499 Greek Cypriots exchanged.

The majority of the Greek Cypriots were those captured during the Turkish invasion last July while the Turkish Cypriots were those men detained in Limassol in southwestern Cyprus.

Cyprus has formally proposed to the United Nations that the General Assembly call for the immediate withdrawal of all foreign armed forces from the island and an end to all foreign intervention and interference in its affairs. The draft resolution has also requested that the UN peace keeping forces in Cyprus be strengthened in order to restore and maintain peace.

SEOUL - Korean police used tear gas against 2,000 co-eds as thousands of students demonstrated against the Government of President Chung Hee Park at four universities. It was one of the first major outbreaks of student discontent since South Korean newsmen rallied across the nation last week to protest the suppression of the press. The students demanded a new constitution and the release of students, church leaders and others jailed for political activities against the South Korean government.

SANTIAGO (AP) - Diplomatic sources have said the ruling junta of Chile intends to release about 2,000 political prisoners, 500 of whom will be deported. General Augusto Pinochet, the junta leader, announced Sept. 11 - the first year anniversary of his rule - that his government was ready to empty the detention centres except for "some of the especially grave cases". Intelligence sources in Washington have said that the junta has eased its domestic policy because they are more confident of their hold on the country and because they have received threats from the US Congress to cut off military aid unless the repression ends.

MOSCOW (Reuter) The Soviet Union has launched another unmanned moonship, Luna 23. The moonships are sent out to continue scientific exploration of the moon and the lunar vicinity. The Soviet agency Tass did not report whether the moonship was scheduled to land on the moon or not.

WASHINGTON - The Commission on U.S.-Latin American Relations have urged President Gerald Ford to improve relations with Cuba. The commission, headed by Sol Linowitz, has proposed that the government vote, at a conference of the Organization of American States in Quito next month, to suspend the trade sanction imposed in 1974. If Cuba's response permits it has been suggested that the President should seek legislative changes necessary to facilitate commercial and cultural relations with Cuba.

The report by the commission called for the signing of a new Panama Canal treaty and the withdrawal of the U.S. Southern command from the canal zone. They further suggest the withdrawal of the U.S. military assistance groups from embassies in the region, and that the Government support arms limitation among Latin American States.

THE HAGUE (Reuter) Four convicts held 16 hostages in the prison chapel in The Hague. They besieged the chapel last Saturday day. The leader of the four, Palestine Adnan Ahmed Nuri has demanded air passage to an undisclosed location. In return he will release 3 hostages. The remaining 13 hostages, under Nuri's conditions, would be transported to the airport with the convicts in a bus provided by the authorities. The authorities have informed Nuri that his actions are not supported by the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) but have been unable to sway the Palestinian terrorist. A deadlock remained after 27 hours of negotiations on Tuesday.

LOURENCO, MARQUES Mozambique police and military units staged surprise attacks last weekend. They detained about 1,200 people, most of who were blacks. The police said these people were suspected of being agitators. Military sources said the suspects are being detained at an Army camp for questioning. The order came from Portugal's High Commissioner to Mozambique as a result of the riots which occurred last week. Mozambique's full independence from Portugal does not come into effect until next June.

QUEBEC - The National Assembly resumed its debate on the bill respecting human rights and freedoms. The bill re-introduced on Tuesday would guarantee all citizens of the province the right to "life and to personal security and freedom".

The bill has nothing really new except the recourse to court injunctions to halt specific acts of discrimination based on race, colour, sex, religion, political conviction, language or ethnic, national or social origin. The new legislation would be subject of suspension during emergencies, wars or revolutions. The police could still conduct mass round-ups of people on the basis of their expressions and associations should any of these situations be so much as apprehended.

TOKYO - Margaret Trudeau landed in Japan on Tuesday for a two week visit. The only public function Mrs. Trudeau will be responsible for during her stay is to attend the christening ceremony of a 274,000-ton oil tanker, the World Canada. The ship is owned by the World Wide shipping group, headed by W K Pao of Hong Kong.

unbackpage

Britain to extend Socialist Policy

LONDON - Prime Minister Harold Wilson and his ministers have announced that their government intends to extend nationalization of private industry and to inject more socialism into British society. Their proposals were announced by the Queen in her speech marking the opening of the new session of parliament. The Labour Party program called for state ownership of the ship-building industries and aircraft industries and the formation of a new national oil corporation to ensure greater profits and greater control over development of North Sea oil. The economic program, the government claimed, stems from the "social contract" - an unwritten agreement with trade unions to hold down inflationary wage demands in exchange for programs of social equity.

The government is also pursuing proposals for increasing taxes on the wealthy in an attempt to fulfill its "aim of achieving a fair redistribution of income and wealth".

Come in and git plastered at the Bandid Saloon

This Friday in Leonard Hall Cafeteria.

Featuring "TURKEY"

Admission $1.25

8.P.M.

VANDERMEERS
MEAT MARKET
Custom Cut Meats
Freezer Orders
Groceries
171
WELLINGTON ST.
542-1134

VACANCY

Artsci 78 Executive needs a Bews Athletic Stick

Nominations to be submitted by Friday, 8 November in ASUS box in AMS office. Must have nominee's signature

DOMUS

Kingston's most exciting gift shop and kitchen shop
68 Brock Street
Between King and Wellington

STEVE AMEY'S

Lakeview Manor

PLAYING THIS WEEK IN
THE CENTENNIAL ROOM

Reflections

28 Yonge St., Kingston

George Busby
sporting goods
40 Prince Street
Kingston Ontario
K7L 1A4
Tel 615-542-2292

Woods Down Insulated
Hiking or Skiing Boots - $53.96

Vasque Hiking Boots - $39.95

Mini Rucksacks - $3.95

With Student Card

Sears

Digi-matic M8-2 69<sup>98</sup>

Full memory function and keyboard (MR, MC, M+, M-) lets you keep track of any figure you enter, recall it later, then add to it or subtract from it. Automatic % key. Exchange register, too. Floating decimal ensures you get no 'wrong' answers. Plus addition, subtraction, multiplication, division and mixed and chain calculations. Automatic constant for continuous multiplication and division means there's no need to enter each calculation. Clear entry function lets you clear incorrect last entry. Credit balance function allows minus read-out. Overflow indicator tells when total has more than 8 digits. Powered by rechargeable ni-cad batteries with 6 hrs. portable use. Recharges in 8 hrs. from AC outlet. Recharger and vinyl carrying case incl. 1-yr. guarantee. 03R 410 19.

Digi-matic MR-10 89<sup>98</sup>

Exclusive Digi-matic MR-10 has many features of more expensive calculators: Large 10-digit, easy-to-read display. % key for decimally correct calculations. Full 4-key memory (M+, M-, MR, MC). Automatic square root ( $\sqrt{x}$ ) and reciprocal ( $1/x$ ) keys. Full memory. Floating decimal system guards against 'wrong' answers. Algebraic logic. Sum/accumulate mode switch. Change sign (+/-) for full mixed calculation ability. Automatic mark-up and discount. 4-function automatic constant (+, -,  $\times$ ,  $\div$ ). Chain or constant operations. Clear entry key. Memory, negative number and overflow indicators. Positive-action keyboard. Up to 5 hrs. continuous use on built-in ni-cad batteries. Recharges in 7 hrs. from AC outlet. Charger, handy carrying pouch incl. 1-yr. guarantee. 03R 041 021.

Our Digi-matic D-8 is our best hand calculator... it's a scientific brain!

139<sup>98</sup>

It's our best calculator and it's an invaluable aid to students, engineers, architects and technicians. Performs all standard and memory functions. Plus a whole new range of scientific functions. Trig functions include sine, cosine, tangent; inverse sine, cosine, tangent. Calculates in degrees or radians. Performs natural logarithms, common logarithms, exponential powers ( $y^x$ ), exponential functions ( $e^x$ ), square root, reciprocals and pi ( $\pi$ ). Has change sign and exchange register content keys, too. You can pay so much more for a calculator that performs all these scientific functions. Or you can pay Sears low price. Tough, high impact plastic housing. Recharger and handy vinyl carrying case included. 1-year guarantee. 03R 041 024.

Simpson - Sears Ltd.

1100 Princess St.
Kingston Shopping Centre

MBA waits until spring for move to join AMS

by Nancy Flood
A motion proposing that recognition of a new M.B.A. society be included in the campus-wide referendum was withdrawn from the agenda for the Outer Council meeting of Oct. 31, on the morning before the meeting.

The proposal had originated in a letter sent by Gail Campbell, M.B.A. rep to the Graduate Student Society (G.S.S.), to Ian Nordheimer, A.M.S. Commissioner of Internal Affairs. Nordheimer, in accordance with the constitution, then formulated the request for membership on the coming referendum in a motion which was to be presented to Outer Council at the Thursday meeting.

This action on the part of the M.B.A. was completely unanticipated by the G.S.S.; they did not learn of it except by chance. Nordheimer, when questioned why the G.S.S. was not informed of a matter so pertinent to them and their relations with M.B.A.s, informed the Journal that he had simply assumed that the G.S.S. already knew of Campbell's letter.

Negotiations between the G.S.S. and the M.B.A. concerning M.B.A. withdrawal from G.S.S. have ensued for some time now. Kathy Bindon (President, G.S.S.) feels it may have been evidence of a desire on the part of some M.B.A.s to present the G.S.S. with the accomplished fact of separation as soon as possible in order to speed up negotiations. She asserted, however, that if the motion had not been withdrawn from Outer Council's agenda it might have had disastrous effects on attempts to carry out the separation in a reasonable fashion.

Thus, when she learned of the M.B.A.'s request in this regard, a meeting between Bindon and M.B.A. Year Executives was called to discuss the situation. The decision was reached at this meeting to withdraw the motion in the best interests of all concerned. Bindon stressed that this course would provide the best atmosphere for further talks as well as ensure the most propitious and functionally equitable arrangements for the split and the future M.B.A.-G.S.S. relationship.

Negotiations between the two groups will now center on terms of M.B.A. social membership in the G.S.S. and on the exact timing of the separation. The G.S.S. have asserted their willingness to see the M.B.A. with their own society and their desire to aid the fledgling entity in achieving functional and political stability. The question of M.B.A. recognition will likely be presented to the campus in February as a referendum.

Gary Gannage resigns as Rector

by Paul Steep
Gary Gannage, who has been the Rector for the past two years, recently handed in his resignation to the A.M.S. The rector holds a position on the Board of Trustees and is usually thought of as the student voice in administrative affairs. For the past four years the position of Rector has been held by a student although that has not always been the case. With Gannage's resignation, an election will likely be held in the near future to fill the position. It could come as early as the A.M.S. referendum which will be voted on later this month.

Gannage is a third year History student who cited academics as the main reason for his resignation. He felt that the rectorship required more time than he could give it while still maintaining personal standards in his academic work.

He felt that over the past two years he has kept the position of Rector visible and open. He preferred to think of the position as an everyday liaison one where he would channel student concerns to the appropriate people. "I was not one who helped to instigate great plans. I just didn't have the manpower for that sort of thing."

"Intellectual stagnation"
See GANNAGE, Page 3

Gary Gannage

Lost: one Commissioner Found: one Speaker

by Connie McLeese
The Alma Mater Society, fondly known as the A.M.S., has appointed a new speaker in the personage of Ian Nordheimer. Nordheimer was chosen by Outer Council out of four applicants who answered an advertisement run in the Journal. He commented upon his appointment: "I just hope to do the job Mary Bloos did in keeping the workings of the Outer Council effective."

As speaker, Nordheimer is responsible for seeing that motions proposed to the A.M.S. council are in order, the ensuing debate is relevant, and Council's actions are constitutional. In essence he must see that business is quickly and effectively dispensed with.

Since spring, Nordheimer has been Internal Affairs Commissioner. The AMS is advertising in the Journal for applicants to fill the position he vacated.

Here's one miner who lost his poke to a different sort of gold miner at Chilkoot, we hear he got it back later.

Chartered utility buses to replace defunct club

by Virginia Kelly

A new bus service sponsored by the AMS is to replace the defunct Queen's Excursion Club. John Beech, (Services Commissioner) of the AMS says that the new bus service will be "ready to start as soon as Council OK's it". The motion will be voted on at the next Outer Council meeting on Thursday Nov. 14. If passed the new bus service's first trip will be on Friday Nov. 22.

The round trip fare will be the same or less than that charged by the Queen's Excursion Club. Although exact times have not yet been worked out, buses will leave from the front of the Union every Friday afternoon and will return on Sunday evening.

The AMS will charter buses from Wagar Coach Lines, a Kingston based company for the service. Each passenger on the bus will be insured for two million dollars. The QEC leased their buses from Reid Leasing, a Toronto based outfit. The Club was then responsible for providing the insurance, gas and part-time drivers for each trip. With a charter service the bus company provides a full time "professional bus driver", in Beech's words, gas and insurance coverage for its passengers.

If the motion is passed by Outer Council on Nov. 14, tickets for the new bus service will be sold in the John Orr Room starting on Monday Nov. 18. Do not bring your old Excursion Club pass with you as it is not valid, a flash of your Queen's Student card and a little cash is all you'll need to obtain your ticket.

Whereas the buses used by the Excursion Club had no storage space, leaving the aisles as the only place to put luggage, the AMS buses will have luggage racks. Several of the seats at the back of the bus will be removed to allow for more storage space. Vice-President (Operations) Peter Druxerman told the Journal.

The Excursion Club had its charter revoked Oct. 31 and is therefore no longer an AMS club.

No classes

Classes after 11:30 on Friday, Nov. 8, will be cancelled in order to allow those students who have tickets for the installation of Dr. Ronald Watts as Principal, to attend the ceremony.

Queen's

Journal

Tuesday, November 5, 1974

Volume 102 Number 17

wat's hapnin'?

Pubs and Theatres

Frontenac - Finnegans - Liam McGuire
Frontenac - Muldoons - Moonshiners - an Irish Band
Townhouse - Becket
401 Inn - She: an all girl band
Commodore - Shanti
Hyland - The Odessa File
Odeon - Airport 75
Capitol I - Death Wish
Capitol II - Uptown Saturday Night
Domino Theatre - 6 Bms Riv Vu - Curtains rise at 8:30 pm and tickets remain $2.50 per adult and $1.75 for students (on Thursday only). Tickets are available at Mahood's Drug Store or at the theatre on playing nights. Playing dates: November 7, 8, 9.

Tuesday, November 5

1:30 pm - Workshop with pianist Franzpeter Goehls in Harrison-Le Caine Hall, Room 120. Topic: Interpretation of form and the form of the interpretation. Admission is free.
1:00 pm - Department of Political Studies visiting speakers is Professor T.H. Quaker. University of Waterloo. Topic: "Graham Wallis: Empiricist, Moralist and Teacher". Room 2604 Mackintosh-Corry Hall.
8:00 pm - Informal introduction to Transcendental Meditation with instructors Gregg Wilson and Michael Barclay in the third floor common room of the Union. Meditators welcome too. Refreshments available.
9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies presents Shoot the Pianiste (France, 1960). Directed by Francois Truffaut. Starring: Charles Aznavour, Nicole Berger. Ellis Auditorium. Admission $1.00 at the door.

Wednesday, November 6

7:30 pm - General meeting of the P.C. Club will be held in the McLaughlin Room of the Student Union. John Fraser will be guest speaker. All welcome.
7:30 pm - Queen's Debating Club meets in the Upper Lounge in the International Centre. Topic for debate: Be it resolved that any nation gets the government that it deserves. All welcome.
7:30 pm - Michael Ondaatje will present a reading of his poetry and a screening of his most recent film, "The Clinton Special." Ondaatje is well-known in the Canadian literary world for his works "The Collected Works of Billy the Kid" and "Rat Jelly". "The Clinton Special", his latest film, is a documentary of the Theatre Passe Muraille Company on tour with their play, "The Farm Show". Following the screening Ondaatje will discuss aspects of his work with the audience. This event is jointly sponsored by Queen's Department of English and The Department of Film Studies. There is no admission charge for this event, held in Ellis Auditorium.
8:00 pm - Introductory lectures on Transcendental Meditation every Wednesday evening in Stirling Hall, Room 412A. Transcendental Meditation is a major scientific discovery. The practice is unique and its effects are unprecedented in their range. Admission free.
8:00 pm - Professor Gifford, Professor at the Latin American Linguistic Centre of St. Andrews University will be giving a talk on "The Fortunes of Spain in South America", at the Casa, 90 Queen's Crescent. All interested persons are welcome. There is no admission charge to this event.

Thursday, November 7

12:30 pm - Brown Bag Lunch in Agnes Etherington with artist Ray Spiers. Bring your sandwich, coffee will be provided.
Ray Spiers: Sculpture opens today and continues until December 4.

7:00 pm and 9:00 pm - The Conformist in Dunning Hall. Admission $1.00.
8:00 pm - Benefit Concert for the Orphans in Vietnam. Bill Bosworth Quartet, Easy Company, Kirk Elliot, Norm Nurm and Karen Skidmore. Speaker: Mohi Warren (Vietnamese Buddhist Peace Delegation). Ellis Auditorium. Donations at the door. All proceeds to orphanages sponsored by the Unified Buddhist Church of Vietnam.
8:00 pm - Artsci '77 proudly presents a Smoker, Drinker, Dancer or your idea of a good time. Clark Hall. Dance to the Sound of Boojum.
8:00 pm - Classics Department presents Professor A. J. Marshall talking on "Roman Women in the Provinces". Watson 542. Admission free. Everyone welcome.
8:30 pm - CFRC presents Music of Canada. Harry Freedman hosts a program featuring Canadian artists and compositions.
8:30 pm - Queen's Department of Drama presents Night of the Iguana by Tennessee Williams in Convocation Hall. Tickets and info at the drama desk. 547-6291. This runs November 7-9, 14-16.

Upcoming Events

Slide Competition - open to anyone affiliated with the University, is being sponsored by the Queen's Camera Club. Deadline for entries is Thursday November 14th. Entry fee is 10c per slide and sorry - there's a limit of 10 entry slides per person. Slides should be placed in an envelope, along with the fee and put in the box provided in the AMS office (downstairs of Union). Each slide should indicate name of entrant and phone number. Slides will be judged on the Thursday night by a panel of 3 competent judges. The top 3 slides will be enlarged to 8x10 color prints by the cibachrome (non-fading) process. So get all those prize slides together and down to the AMS office by Nov. 14.
November 8th - Concert: The Vaghy String Quartet. Programme: Quartets by Haydn, Karol Szymanowski and Maurice Ravel. To be presented in Dunning Hall 8:30 pm in conjunction with the official opening of Harrison-Le Caine Hall.
November 9th - Concert: Queen's Chamber Orchestra, Director, David Keane; and Queen's Chamber Singers, Director, R. Schmitzler. To be held in Grant Hall.
November 9th - The Queen's West Indian Club at Kingston will be having their annual fall dance; in Leonard Cafeteria. As in previous years, all Queen's students are invited to come and have a great time. Time 9:00 pm.
November 12th - Queen's NDP Meeting on Tuesday at 7 pm in the Senior Students Common Room No. C115 McArthur College. Screening of the feature film The Inheritance - the history of the North American Labour Movement in story and song.
November 12, 14, & 15th - The Multi Media Artists will be holding their Exhibition and Sale in the McArthur College main foyer from 10 am to 5:30 pm. Everyone welcome. On display will be batik, pottery, wearings, silk screen cards and writing paper and hand-wrought pewter jewellery.
November 16th - Donald Gow Memorial Lecture. Speaker Dr. Andre Raynould, Chairman of the Economic Council of Canada. Topic: Social Indicators. Panel guests: Dr. J.J. Deutsch, Gail Stewart and Scott Campbell. This luncheon-lecture will be held in Wallace Hall and tickets are available from the Alumni office at a price of $8.00 per person.

Phys. Ed. Centre

Court Reservations: The book for the reservations of squash, handball-paddleball and tennis courts is available for bookings daily starting at the times listed:
Monday, Wednesday, Friday - 7:45 am
Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday - 8:00 am
Sunday - 2:00 pm.

ARTSCI '77 PROUDLY PRESENTS A SMOKER-DRINKER-DANCER

or
Your idea of a good time
Dance to the sound of Boojum
Thurs., Nov. 7, 8:00pm-1:00am

Beer 50¢, Admission: $1.00/year card
5/$2.00 $1.25 General

LONDY'S DRUGS Special rates to Queen's Students

471 Princess at University Ave.
464 Princess
Reddendale
Lasalle Park
Amherstview

Delivery Available
546-3696
OPEN 7 AM TO 11 PM DAILY

CAMPUS MOVIES

THE CONFORMIST

by Bernard Bertolucci
(Director of Last Tango in Paris)

THURSDAY - 7:00 and 9:30
DUNNING HALL $1.00

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT in our Lounge

THIS WEEK: Shanti

Amateur Night every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

Peccei: Mankind has to change ways to survive world crises

by Ian Jarvis
"Mankind is at a turning point" spoke Dr. Aurelio Peccei to a crowded Grant Hall Wednesday night. If, in his opinion, we cannot develop a more humanistic philosophy and drastically alter our traditional institutions of government, we may be dooming mankind to oblivion.

Peccei is president of the Club of Rome, a body of public-spirited citizens from many nationalities who meet in a think tank fashion to try and develop imaginative solutions to present world crises.

We are warned by Peccei not to be deceived by small victories since in adapting temporary solutions we may be in fact selling out our future. Despite popular views to the contrary, Peccei stated that "the number of illiterate and starving and generally underdeveloped peoples has increased, not diminished". The gap between the rich and the poor has grown into a chasm and is continually growing larger. Peccei spoke critically of those nations such as our own "who have praised technology without deploring these inequalities". He emphasized that we, the developed countries, must realize that "our rationale and our dreams for the future have been built on false promises." To illustrate this, he pointed to the rude awakening we experienced during the oil crisis.

Peccei maintains that the future can only be saved through vigorous co-operation among nations. "No one country or group of countries can reverse this tide." It must be a global effort. Dr. Peccei decried the selfishness of our nationalistic ideals and referred to the fantastic stockpiling of nuclear armaments as nothing less than "sheer madness."

There are no realistic solutions to be found using present political machinery, according to Peccei, with the exception of the United Nations. Therefore we must develop a "new humanism" founded upon a philosophy of justice and human development, with which we can restructure the institutions of our society. We must "rekindle the artistic religions, esthetic and cultural values which we have left behind".

In describing the foundations of this new humanism he states, "a society of many cultures and different peoples will not succeed unless based upon the rock of justice". We have to create an equilibrium in world society which will maintain the freedom and dignity of all its members.

He went on to say that this form of justice cannot be conceived unless accompanied by human development. Human development in his opinion, goes beyond increasing employment and opportunity through education, and necessitates understanding the reality of such things as the delicate ecological system in which we live and learning how to adjust to these realities. At the moment he sees "a profound mismatch between our capabilities to adapt and the problems we face".

Dr. Peccei is not entirely pessimistic about our situation and does see glimmers of hope in institutions such as the U.N. He left the audience with the foreboding reminder, however, that "we must do tomorrow much more than we have done today." If we don't?

For those interested in a development of this theme Douglas Roche MP will be speaking on "Wanted, a more human world" Wednesday, Nov. 20 in Ellis auditorium.

Gannage resigns, says Rector a good position

GANNAGE, from Page 1

had descended upon the university when he assumed the rectorship two years ago, maintains Gannage. He feels that it is hard to measure whether there has indeed been any change in this regard. He doesn't see in the Queen's students any great spirit of change; they tend to accept the status quo, having little interest beyond academic achievement.

Gannage hoped that the rectorship would always be a student position. "It's a damn good position. I wish I could continue now that I've spent the time learning what the rectorship is all about." He is sure now that when he ran for the rectorship two years ago he did not know what he was getting into. He has been frustrated by not being able to win a majority over to his opinion. As a result he hasn't had the direct effect upon the Board of Trustees that he would like to have had. He described it as a position of diplomacy, one that takes about a year to a year and a half to learn.

Gannage wouldn't answer whether the position of Rector was an effectual one or one merely looked upon by the university administration as a political necessity. He didn't feel that anyone could answer that. "The university listened to my opinion but I am not 'the' student voice, I'm only one of many."

ACADEMIC RESEARCH LIBRARY

Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date, 176-page, mail order catalog of 5500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage (1-2 days delivery time).
519 GLENROCK AVE.
SUITE #203
LOS ANGELES, CA. 90024
Our materials are sold for research purposes only

Why is this girl smiling? Does she know something about Mining Engineers? This scene of depravity was captured on film at the Mining Smoker in Clark Hall on Halloween. Must have been the full moon.

VACANCY

Artsci 78 Executive needs a

Bews Athletic Stick

Nominations to be submitted by Friday,
8 November in ASUS box in AMS office. Must have nominee's signature

FESTIVAL OF THE ARTS

DRAMA
ART MUSIC FILM POETRY
PHOTOGRAPHY

January 28 - February 1 1975

ONE DAY ONLY

Hadassah Auxiliary Mammoth Bazaar

Door Prize

New clothes
Nearly new boutique
New gift items
Home baking

35¢ admission

Sandwich and coffee bar
Sewing and knitting
White elephant
Appliances - dishes

Fix up your apartment!
Student Discounts!

BETH ISRAEL SYNAGOGUE
(Centre St. at Union)

Wednesday November 6

11 am - 4 pm

6:30 - 8:30 pm

A.M.S. PAGE

PUBLIC NOTICE

On October 31, 1974 the Outer Council of the Alma Mater Society revoked the charter of the Queen's Excursion Club. This advertisement shall serve as notice to all persons that the A.M.S. is no longer connected with the activities of the Excursion Club or any of its officers. The A.M.S. is not responsible for any actions taken by the Excursion Club and will not be liable for any future actions that the Club takes or may take to operate a bus service out of the University or the City of Kingston. Any members of the A.M.S. who continue to contract with the Excursion Club do so entirely at their own risk. The A.M.S. will accept no responsibility for inconvenience or injury caused to any person.

Nominations for the Position of RECTOR

are Now Open

Nominations should be submitted to the A.M.S. Office by 5:00 p.m., Thursday November 14, and must be signed by 200 members of the A.M.S.

Applications Will Now be Taken for A.M.S. Internal Affairs Commissioner

until 5:00 p.m.,
Friday, November 8

PLEASE SUBMIT ALL APPLICATIONS TO THE A.M.S. OFFICE IN THE BASEMENT OF THE STUDENTS' UNION.

FESTIVAL OF THE ARTS

January 28-February 1 1975

MUSICALLY INCLINED?

We are looking for all levels of talent and all types of music for the ARTS FESTIVAL:

FOLK, BLUES, RAGTIME, TRADITIONAL, CONTEMPORARY, OR CLASSICAL.

AMATEURS — you need the practice!
PROFESSIONALS — you need to be heard!

Contact:

Pat Jackman 544-7872
David Eadie 549-4749
Kathy Jarrett 544-4540

MUSIC

First in a continuing series of

A.M.S. Open Forums

Open Forum on the Honouraria Report

Listen, ask questions, criticize those students on campus who are most involved with this issue. Where do you stand on the Honouraria Report.

Thursday, Nov. 7, 7:30 p.m.,
Lower Vic Common Room

APPLICATIONS FOR THE POSITIONS OF MANAGER ASSISTANTS TICKET SELLERS for the new

A.M.S. Bus Service

WILL BE RECEIVED AT THE
A.M.S. OFFICE UNTIL 5:00 p.m., MONDAY, NOV. 11

OPENHOUSE '75

Openhouse '75 would like to meet briefly with all D.S.C. chairpersons Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the 3rd floor Common Room, Students' Union.

Any persons interested in working in publicity or some other aspect of Openhouse should also attend. If you are unable to attend please call Alan or Shelby at 546-7591.

Speakers Committee of the Education Commission MEETING

MEDITATION ROOM,
2nd FLOOR, STUDENTS' UNION
6:30 p.m.,
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 6.
AGENDA:
1) Evaluation of Visit of Dr. Peccei
2) Speakers for 2nd Term

XEROXEROXEROX Photocopies 5¢

Basement, Students' Union

We apologize for any inconvenience caused by mechanical problems. Dr. Xerox has finally fixed our 2400.

Universities criticized for mindless expansion

HALIFAX (CUP)—A Nova Scotia Royal Commission has sharply criticized the mindless fashion in which many universities have been growing.

The report which covers a wide range of problems in provincial-municipal relations and public services argues that universities have moved away from their proper function, in a search for larger enrolments and more money.

"By passively responding to higher and higher enrolment projections...without considering whether vastly increased numbers of university educated people are needed, whether there are jobs for them or whether all of the prospective students want or can benefit from a university education, the universities have abandoned one of their primary responsibilities."

The commission, headed by Dalhousie University economist John Graham, also blames society as a whole for part of the universities' problems because of its "misplaced preoccupation with academic credentials."

As a result, students are going to university not so much for a higher education as the "the certificates that would make them employable."

A better alternative for young people looking for credentials, the commission suggests, might in many cases be other post-secondary institutions or even on-the-job training.

"The function of the universities is, or should be, primarily to provide an opportunity for higher intellectual study to those both able to pursue and interested in pursuing it, and, in some instances, to prepare people for the intellectually demanding professions."

The arguments of the 1960s that society benefits in economic terms from the universities have also been shown to be extravagant, says the commission. If society is not reaping tremendous benefits from those universities, the commission asks, why should it subsidize them so heavily?

Guelph says yes to OFS referendum

TORONTO (CUP)—The Ontario Federation of Students referendum asking for a hike in their fees was passed at the University of Guelph with a strong majority.

Guelph is the seventh OFS member to pass the referendum raising the fees from 40 cents per student to $1.50. The fee will be collected along with students fees paid with tuition.

Out of 3,000 students at Guelph, 3,074 voted in the referendum with 2,307 voting for the increase and 768 against it.

"Guelph is the first referendum to run this year," said OFS fieldworker Ben Macdonald.

"Ryerson, Toronto, Western, Glendon College and Lakehead University all ran last year and passed."

"The University of Toronto graduate students' union is running a referendum this week which we hope will pass," he said.

"There will be one every week for the next few weeks at York, Brock, Queen's and then Waterloo. OFS expects to win all the referenda."

One man's politics

by Doug Bonnell

Without wanting to appear premature in my judgement, let me speculate on the prospects of the federal Conservative leadership convention likely to occur next year. With no definite saviour in sight the battle seems doomed to be yet another bloodbath between the left and right wings of the party.

For as long as I can remember, the federal Conservative party has divided into two camps on the question of ideological direction. One group argues that the party must offer a clear viable alternative to the Liberals. Men like Sean O'Sullivan, the young MP from Hamilton-Wentworth, desires a rightward shift in political thinking in an attempt to reinstate what they term a "proper Tory Stance". This wing of the party, strengthened in caucus by electoral cuts in the moderating Ontario wing, represents a dwindling point of view among the Canadian public. Their philosophy has solid backing among resource industrialists in rural areas, among ideologues who side with free enterprise, individualism, and yes folks, the American way. Their stance, however, cannot deal effectively with the changing problems of a modern, industrialized nation, problems like increased urban development, multinational corporations, and the growing inequity between the privileged and the underprivileged in society.

The other wing, for seven years directed by Robert Stanfield, feels that the party will never regain political power without adequately reflecting national interests-interests that lie at the centre of the political spectrum. Such a stance, strained with conservative philosophy, is evident in policies like David Crombie's limits on growth in Toronto, the federal Conservative aboriginal rights policy, the greenbelt policy of the David government, and a growing concern for economic nationalism.

The left offers a variety of potential candidates, including financial critic James Gilles, environment critic John Fraser, party president Michael Meighan, and our own MP, Flora Macdonald.

"God for her," you say. "A strong woman candidate even if she doesn't win" you reply. "Chauvinists!" I say. In two brief years Flora Macdonald has established herself as one of the most powerful voices in her party. She moves easily from the inner circles of power to the less political levels of her constituency. She maintains a high and favourable recognition factor with the public, and in an election where the Ontario wing was demolished, she held on with a comfortable majority.

The problem for Flora, as for any other leadership hopeful, will be to overcome the label of belonging to one or the other wing of the party. The victor will undoubtedly emerge from the centre of the party in an attempt to smother those divisions or be destroyed by them. Whether she can overcome those seemingly insurmountable barriers is a task that lies almost entirely within her own hands.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT
SUNDAY 10 AM TO 8 PM

GO SOUTH,
YOUNG MAN!

Enjoy Southern Comfort, smooth sweet satisfaction from the South. Mixes with everything within reason and it's great all on its lonesome. Try some. You'll love it. The grand old drink of the South.

SOUTHERN COMFORT

Bruce Cockburn

Nov. 17,

Grant Hall

7 and 10 P.M.

Tickets: $3.00 w/Student Card

John Orr Rm. Nov. 4-9

letters ★ letters

Commissioner explains excursion club expulsion

Dear Editor,

I would like to clarify the AMS's actions with respect to the closing of the Queen's Excursion Club. The Excursion Club, which operated a reduced-fare bus service for students has become a source of controversy due to a rash of complaints and criticisms, some of which have been aired on this page.

One of the issues with which we were most concerned was that of insurance. (The Excursion Club had only $1 million of third party liability insurance for each bus when its operations were suspended, as compared with a licensed public vehicle operator such as Wagar, who is covered up to $2 million per passenger.) The insurance coverage should not be judged solely on its dollar amount, for hopefully it will never be required, but for the responsibility which the operator feels, that the coverage implies. Our fears in this regard were further raised by the complaints which we received concerning the safety of the buses - complaints of buses with mechanical problems, overcrowded buses with people and luggage blocking the aisles, late buses and drivers who did not appear fully capable. These complaints were compounded by our knowledge of an investigation of the Excursion Club by the Department of Transport. Thus, our concern for the student's safety was our primary reason for closing the Excursion Club.

Some further considerations for this action were the failure of the Club to forward its books of record, insurance policies, and minutes of meetings when requested, as provided for in the constitution. Our examination of such documents as were finally received revealed inadequacies and serious financial discrepancies.

We realize, however, that the students use and appreciate a low-cost bus service; to this end, the AMS is starting its own operation which will offer substantially the same service as the Excursion Club. We intend to offer similar or lower prices through Wagar Coach Lines charters - Wagar is used regularly by the Department of Athletics of the University. By assuming direct control, the AMS will be better able to supervise the service and the responsibility it has for the students.

John Beech

AMS Services Commissioner

Quarry a closed shop?

An open letter to W. Barnes, editor of Quarry Magazine.

Mr. Barnes

As the apparent editor of an increasingly irrelevant 'literary' magazine, you owe me and everyone else interested in the continued growth and development of Canadian literature an explanation of your printed refusal to consider any submissions until 1976.

Thus Quarry is a totally closed shop, ruled over by a seemingly inscrutable cultural despot. What is the point of accepting enough material to fill up so many issues ahead?

I can only assume your magazine is no longer to be considered a contemporary, or a viable magazine.

Is it your plan that it become a personal collection of 'old favourites'?

What are your plans?

waiting,
Jim Smith

Queens
Journal
Vol. 102, No. 17
Tues., Nov. 5, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Features Editors - Wendy Reynolds, Laurie Giblin, Peter Hawthorn
Arts Editors - Kerry White, Peter Hawthorn
Photography Editor - John Cameron
Photography - John Bollowmley, Keith Bourns, Chuck Parker
Backpage - Valerie Cotton
Wags'n'Naps - Rosemary Knight, Mark Gabel
Classifieds - Leslie Gawkrödger, Trish Brooks
Advertising Staff - Anne Robertson, Meg Bollowmley
(with apologies for 2 missed mastheads)

Contributors - Ian Jarvis, David Card, Janet Ritchie, Doug Bonnell, Sandy Naiman, Sandra Bernstein, Ruth Ann Nicolson, "Louisiana" Dave, Barb Ashdown, and many thanks to Jan Purkiss for her great cheese and crackers.

Editor-in-Chief - Suzanne Sherkin
Business Editor - Terry Collins
Managing Editor - Oan' Mc-Clelland
News Editor - Sarah Yarnell
Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (413) 547-5856. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

JOURNAL

finances:
total cost-paper - $1,140.
cost-page - $63.
salaries: (with proposed honoraria)
editor - $1800. (summer pay) + $600 (tuition) - $2400.
managing editor - $300 (half tuition)

business manager - salary based on per cent of ads sold.
major contributors -
$700. pool to be divided among them.

GOLDEN WORDS

finances:
total cost-paper - $325.
cost-page - $27.
salaries - none

Yours truly,
S. Jackson

One man's politics rewarding and pertinent reading

Dear Editor,

This letter should possibly be addressed to Doug Bonnell. However, since it is the editor that decides what will and will not be printed in her newspaper I think it is appropriate to voice my opinion directly to you and indirectly to Mr. Bonnell.

As the author of 'One Man's Politics' Doug exhibits a competent prose style. This cannot be said for a lot of articles featured in the Journal. But more importantly Doug writes about pertinent issues both within and without the university setting. And it is the expression of opinion, especially about the topics external to Queen's that I feel are most rewarding to read. An occasional look beyond the campus keeps one in touch with the real world.

I sincerely hope that more articles of similar calibre will soon be featured in the Journal.

D. Hill

CHOOSING THE RIGHT CAREER ISN'T EASY

We'd like to offer you a challenge - a career in dealing with professionals - a career in Life insurance sales and/or sales management.

It's one of the few careers that offers you freedom of action and decision and an unusually high measure of security and personal satisfaction.

We know it isn't easy choosing the right career. Perhaps we at Metropolitan Life can help you make the right choice. Why not drop by and see us. We'll be on Campus on:

Mon. November 11, 1974

 Metropolitan Life
Where the future is now

unclassifieds

ANY STUDENT IN ARTSCI '77 who did not get a year card last year can get one now by calling Brian Young at 544-7291. You can get into our smoker cheaper with one.

THANKS TO ALL THOSE PEOPLE IN RESIDENCE WHO DONATED TO THE CFC Sports Trust fund during the canvas last Tuesday night. We collected almost $200.00.

LDS: I left my canvas over the shoulder bag in the Biology building Thurs. afternoon, Oct. 31. $5 reward for its return. Call Doug Mann at 542-3780. PLEASE FOUND Pair of reading glasses in brown case. Lost near corner of Union and University. Call 548-7494 ask for Richard.

COMMERCE '78: Thursday night, let's all get together in the Pub. Thursday Nov. 7: Commerce '78 Year.

Gael Group 24: Reunion at the Pub. Thursday Nov. 7, at 9:30 BE THERE OR ELSE!

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: Lessons by Thomas Hardy, Walt McKee, and Gary Mullen. Renaissance Music. 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

SKIERS: You could have the use of a ski chalet in the Laurentians for the entire season for only $90.00. For more information, call Graham Millington 546-9949, or 547-5748.

I LOST IT: one gold ring on Friday night, either in Leonard cafeteria or between Leonard and Morris. Initials on it are R.E.J. If found, call 544-7131. Thank and love.

THE 219 and 221 Stuart St. boys (Bono, Stew, Moose, John B., John F., Jim Malo, Mouse, Pollock, Woll, B.A., D.O., and Animal) hope to consume more than the mere 30 cases of beer drunk at their last bash. So, "come on down" Sat. Nov. 9th and help us celebrate the Rugby team winning the Ontario Championship. A special invitation to A.M.S. members, Pub and Commerce '75.

SMOKER TONITE! COMPUTER SCIENCE SMOKER in Clark Hall. Pub 8:12 Tonite (Tuesday) Beer 5 for 52. Watch Students' Profs' basketball game at 7 in the arena. Everyone welcome.

WANTED: ENTERTAINERS (folk singers and comedians) for the KIMOSABI COFFEE HOUSE. Opening soon. For more info call Steve 544-7224.

TO THE COMMERCE '77 guy who does "surveys" at 3:00 pm Tuesday mornings: If you screwed your survey you'd have one more statistic for it! Most sincerely, O.S.

SO YOU DON'T LIKE THIS AD? If you think you could do better come to the 1st Openhouse '75 meeting 7:30 Wed 6th, 3rd floor Common Room in the Union.

REWARD: person finding gold Caravelle ladies wrist watch lost Friday. Has great sentimental value. So its return would be greatly appreciated. Call Deb 544-8889.

DO YOU REALIZE THAT OUR UNIVERSITIES are being infiltrated by Australians, whose very presence denies the needy youth of Canada opportunities for higher learning? Join our battle to stamp these sheep-shearing, possum-bashing, Auzzies out of existence. Enlist now by contacting Dingo or Wallaby.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: Guitar Strings, Classical strings by Savers, Conceristie, and Augustine and LaBella, Steel Strings by Martin, Darco, D'Angelico, Gibson, LaBella, Fender, Rotosound, Earthwood, and Ernie Ball. And many strings by Vega, LaBella, and Banjo Strings by Renaissance Music. 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

BANANA AHO GLORIA! SE con-tingent of 41. Cool your jets! After mid-term Oct! Maybe we'll hit the Plaza again some time Gloria. Sue, Karen and Bruce.

SHOW IS COMIN' buy ski boots! L'Alpina, from Hall buckles, plastic coating, inner-lining, super ankle support, size 6, new. $45. 21 Val D'Isere, from Germany, buckles, moulded-sole, leather, size 6, great condition - $25. Call 544-7017.

CHUCK WOOD: This is "Bernette Beavertree" AHO OO I HAVE A TUNE FOR YOU. Chew, chew Do I love YOU - without you I'm blue - and to you I'll always be true: Chew Chew.

CAPTAIN WOLMAH: Congratulations on allowing me to retain my title; you actually landed on the runway. Keep up the good work. Signed, your co-pilot.

D.S.C. Chairpersons: please attend a brief meeting in the 3rd floor common room student Union 7:30 Wed. Nov. 6th. Thank you, Openhouse '75.

LOST: 1 man's bracelet - Sat. 24th between football game and main campus. Inscription on back, and "Don R. MacKay" on front. Please if I don't get it back, my girl will kill me. You name reward. Don 544-7498 or 243 Gordon House.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: VIOLIN strings by Thomastik, Piasastro and Olive. Cello strings, Lullie strings, and Viola strings. Tourte Mutes. Renaissance Music. 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

ATTENTION GRADS!!! Grad pictures must be taken by Nov. 15. Contact Wallace Berry Studios for appointment.

SCIENCE '77 and '78 T-shirts are being ordered now. You must order yours in advance Mon. 11th Wednesday next week in the Eng. Sec. offices 3:30pm 10day and tomorrow.

OUTING CLUB SPORTS LOTTERY: win cash vouchers for Findlay's sport store, worth $100 (first) $25 (second) and $10 (third). Tickets available from Outing Club members for only 25c or 5 for a dollar. Draw will be on Nov. 28th. VO IS SOMETHING TO CLAP

ABOUT: Or is it CLAP IS SOMETHING TO VD ABOUT? Anyway, see Meds Varsity Night 1974 Nov. 15 and 16. Tickets on sale soon.

RETRACTION TO NOV. 1. ARTS '76 Dance CANCELLED Wednesday Nov. 6th.

DNE TOP HAT MISSING: lost at Science Formal. Any information of its whereabouts would be more than appreciated. Reward for return. Phone Woll 542-3887.

JYOUS FELICITATIONS AND INFINITUM and all that to Vicki on the occasion of the 23rd? 14th? 20th? 911st anniversary of her release upon the world. Doug H. FDR IMMEDIATE OCCUPANCY: 2 bedroom house between Division and University on Brock 5100.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

BANANA AHO GLORIA! SE con-tingent of 41. Cool your jets! After mid-term Oct! Maybe we'll hit the Plaza again some time Gloria. Sue, Karen and Bruce.

SHOW IS COMIN' buy ski boots! L'Alpina, from Hall buckles, plastic coating, inner-lining, super ankle support, size 6, new. $45. 21 Val D'Isere, from Germany, buckles, moulded-sole, leather, size 6, great condition - $25. Call 544-7017.

CHUCK WOOD: This is "Bernette Beavertree" AHO OO I HAVE A TUNE FOR YOU. Chew, chew Do I love YOU - without you I'm blue - and to you I'll always be true: Chew Chew.

CAPTAIN WOLMAH: Congratulations on allowing me to retain my title; you actually landed on the runway. Keep up the good work. Signed, your co-pilot.

D.S.C. Chairpersons: please attend a brief meeting in the 3rd floor common room student Union 7:30 Wed. Nov. 6th. Thank you, Openhouse '75.

LOST: 1 man's bracelet - Sat. 24th between football game and main campus. Inscription on back, and "Don R. MacKay" on front. Please if I don't get it back, my girl will kill me. You name reward. Don 544-7498 or 243 Gordon House.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: VIOLIN strings by Thomastik, Piasastro and Olive. Cello strings, Lullie strings, and Viola strings. Tourte Mutes. Renaissance Music. 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

ATTENTION GRADS!!! Grad pictures must be taken by Nov. 15. Contact Wallace Berry Studios for appointment.

SCIENCE '77 and '78 T-shirts are being ordered now. You must order yours in advance Mon. 11th Wednesday next week in the Eng. Sec. offices 3:30pm 10day and tomorrow.

OUTING CLUB SPORTS LOTTERY: win cash vouchers for Findlay's sport store, worth $100 (first) $25 (second) and $10 (third). Tickets available from Outing Club members for only 25c or 5 for a dollar. Draw will be on Nov. 28th. VO IS SOMETHING TO CLAP

ABOUT: Or is it CLAP IS SOMETHING TO VD ABOUT? Anyway, see Meds Varsity Night 1974 Nov. 15 and 16. Tickets on sale soon.

RETRACTION TO NOV. 1. ARTS '76 Dance CANCELLED Wednesday Nov. 6th.

DNE TOP HAT MISSING: lost at Science Formal. Any information of its whereabouts would be more than appreciated. Reward for return. Phone Woll 542-3887.

JYOUS FELICITATIONS AND INFINITUM and all that to Vicki on the occasion of the 23rd? 14th? 20th? 911st anniversary of her release upon the world. Doug H. FDR IMMEDIATE OCCUPANCY: 2 bedroom house between Division and University on Brock 5100.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

BANANA AHO GLORIA! SE con-tingent of 41. Cool your jets! After mid-term Oct! Maybe we'll hit the Plaza again some time Gloria. Sue, Karen and Bruce.

SHOW IS COMIN' buy ski boots! L'Alpina, from Hall buckles, plastic coating, inner-lining, super ankle support, size 6, new. $45. 21 Val D'Isere, from Germany, buckles, moulded-sole, leather, size 6, great condition - $25. Call 544-7017.

CHUCK WOOD: This is "Bernette Beavertree" AHO OO I HAVE A TUNE FOR YOU. Chew, chew Do I love YOU - without you I'm blue - and to you I'll always be true: Chew Chew.

CAPTAIN WOLMAH: Congratulations on allowing me to retain my title; you actually landed on the runway. Keep up the good work. Signed, your co-pilot.

D.S.C. Chairpersons: please attend a brief meeting in the 3rd floor common room student Union 7:30 Wed. Nov. 6th. Thank you, Openhouse '75.

LOST: 1 man's bracelet - Sat. 24th between football game and main campus. Inscription on back, and "Don R. MacKay" on front. Please if I don't get it back, my girl will kill me. You name reward. Don 544-7498 or 243 Gordon House.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: VIOLIN strings by Thomastik, Piasastro and Olive. Cello strings, Lullie strings, and Viola strings. Tourte Mutes. Renaissance Music. 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

ABOUT: Or is it CLAP IS SOMETHING TO VD ABOUT? Anyway, see Meds Varsity Night 1974 Nov. 15 and 16. Tickets on sale soon.

RETRACTION TO NOV. 1. ARTS '76 Dance CANCELLED Wednesday Nov. 6th.

DNE TOP HAT MISSING: lost at Science Formal. Any information of its whereabouts would be more than appreciated. Reward for return. Phone Woll 542-3887.

JYOUS FELICITATIONS AND INFINITUM and all that to Vicki on the occasion of the 23rd? 14th? 20th? 911st anniversary of her release upon the world. Doug H. FDR IMMEDIATE OCCUPANCY: 2 bedroom house between Division and University on Brock 5100.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

BANANA AHO GLORIA! SE con-tingent of 41. Cool your jets! After mid-term Oct! Maybe we'll hit the Plaza again some time Gloria. Sue, Karen and Bruce.

SHOW IS COMIN' buy ski boots! L'Alpina, from Hall buckles, plastic coating, inner-lining, super ankle support, size 6, new. $45. 21 Val D'Isere, from Germany, buckles, moulded-sole, leather, size 6, great condition - $25. Call 544-7017.

CHUCK WOOD: This is "Bernette Beavertree" AHO OO I HAVE A TUNE FOR YOU. Chew, chew Do I love YOU - without you I'm blue - and to you I'll always be true: Chew Chew.

CAPTAIN WOLMAH: Congratulations on allowing me to retain my title; you actually landed on the runway. Keep up the good work. Signed, your co-pilot.

D.S.C. Chairpersons: please attend a brief meeting in the 3rd floor common room student Union 7:30 Wed. Nov. 6th. Thank you, Openhouse '75.

LOST: 1 man's bracelet - Sat. 24th between football game and main campus. Inscription on back, and "Don R. MacKay" on front. Please if I don't get it back, my girl will kill me. You name reward. Don 544-7498 or 243 Gordon House.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: VIOLIN strings by Thomastik, Piasastro and Olive. Cello strings, Lullie strings, and Viola strings. Tourte Mutes. Renaissance Music. 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

ATTENTION GRADS!!! Grad pictures must be taken by Nov. 15. Contact Wallace Berry Studios for appointment.

SCIENCE '77 and '78 T-shirts are being ordered now. You must order yours in advance Mon. 11th Wednesday next week in the Eng. Sec. offices 3:30pm 10day and tomorrow.

OUTING CLUB SPORTS LOTTERY: win cash vouchers for Findlay's sport store, worth $100 (first) $25 (second) and $10 (third). Tickets available from Outing Club members for only 25c or 5 for a dollar. Draw will be on Nov. 28th. VO IS SOMETHING TO CLAP

ABOUT: Or is it CLAP IS SOMETHING TO VD ABOUT? Anyway, see Meds Varsity Night 1974 Nov. 15 and 16. Tickets on sale soon.

RETRACTION TO NOV. 1. ARTS '76 Dance CANCELLED Wednesday Nov. 6th.

DNE TOP HAT MISSING: lost at Science Formal. Any information of its whereabouts would be more than appreciated. Reward for return. Phone Woll 542-3887.

JYOUS FELICITATIONS AND INFINITUM and all that to Vicki on the occasion of the 23rd? 14th? 20th? 911st anniversary of her release upon the world. Doug H. FDR IMMEDIATE OCCUPANCY: 2 bedroom house between Division and University on Brock 5100.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

BANANA AHO GLORIA! SE con-tingent of 41. Cool your jets! After mid-term Oct! Maybe we'll hit the Plaza again some time Gloria. Sue, Karen and Bruce.

SHOW IS COMIN' buy ski boots! L'Alpina, from Hall buckles, plastic coating, inner-lining, super ankle support, size 6, new. $45. 21 Val D'Isere, from Germany, buckles, moulded-sole, leather, size 6, great condition - $25. Call 544-7017.

CHUCK WOOD: This is "Bernette Beavertree" AHO OO I HAVE A TUNE FOR YOU. Chew, chew Do I love YOU - without you I'm blue - and to you I'll always be true: Chew Chew.

CAPTAIN WOLMAH: Congratulations on allowing me to retain my title; you actually landed on the runway. Keep up the good work. Signed, your co-pilot.

D.S.C. Chairpersons: please attend a brief meeting in the 3rd floor common room student Union 7:30 Wed. Nov. 6th. Thank you, Openhouse '75.

LOST: 1 man's bracelet - Sat. 24th between football game and main campus. Inscription on back, and "Don R. MacKay" on front. Please if I don't get it back, my girl will kill me. You name reward. Don 544-7498 or 243 Gordon House.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: VIOLIN strings by Thomastik, Piasastro and Olive. Cello strings, Lullie strings, and Viola strings. Tourte Mutes. Renaissance Music. 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

ABOUT: Or is it CLAP IS SOMETHING TO VD ABOUT? Anyway, see Meds Varsity Night 1974 Nov. 15 and 16. Tickets on sale soon.

RETRACTION TO NOV. 1. ARTS '76 Dance CANCELLED Wednesday Nov. 6th.

DNE TOP HAT MISSING: lost at Science Formal. Any information of its whereabouts would be more than appreciated. Reward for return. Phone Woll 542-3887.

JYOUS FELICITATIONS AND INFINITUM and all that to Vicki on the occasion of the 23rd? 14th? 20th? 911st anniversary of her release upon the world. Doug H. FDR IMMEDIATE OCCUPANCY: 2 bedroom house between Division and University on Brock 5100.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

BANANA AHO GLORIA! SE con-tingent of 41. Cool your jets! After mid-term Oct! Maybe we'll hit the Plaza again some time Gloria. Sue, Karen and Bruce.

SHOW IS COMIN' buy ski boots! L'Alpina, from Hall buckles, plastic coating, inner-lining, super ankle support, size 6, new. $45. 21 Val D'Isere, from Germany, buckles, moulded-sole, leather, size 6, great condition - $25. Call 544-7017.

CHUCK WOOD: This is "Bernette Beavertree" AHO OO I HAVE A TUNE FOR YOU. Chew, chew Do I love YOU - without you I'm blue - and to you I'll always be true: Chew Chew.

CAPTAIN WOLMAH: Congratulations on allowing me to retain my title; you actually landed on the runway. Keep up the good work. Signed, your co-pilot.

D.S.C. Chairpersons: please attend a brief meeting in the 3rd floor common room student Union 7:30 Wed. Nov. 6th. Thank you, Openhouse '75.

LOST: 1 man's bracelet - Sat. 24th between football game and main campus. Inscription on back, and "Don R. MacKay" on front. Please if I don't get it back, my girl will kill me. You name reward. Don 544-7498 or 243 Gordon House.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: VIOLIN strings by Thomastik, Piasastro and Olive. Cello strings, Lullie strings, and Viola strings. Tourte Mutes. Renaissance Music. 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

ATTENTION GRADS!!! Grad pictures must be taken by Nov. 15. Contact Wallace Berry Studios for appointment.

SCIENCE '77 and '78 T-shirts are being ordered now. You must order yours in advance Mon. 11th Wednesday next week in the Eng. Sec. offices 3:30pm 10day and tomorrow.

OUTING CLUB SPORTS LOTTERY: win cash vouchers for Findlay's sport store, worth $100 (first) $25 (second) and $10 (third). Tickets available from Outing Club members for only 25c or 5 for a dollar. Draw will be on Nov. 28th. VO IS SOMETHING TO CLAP

ABOUT: Or is it CLAP IS SOMETHING TO VD ABOUT? Anyway, see Meds Varsity Night 1974 Nov. 15 and 16. Tickets on sale soon.

RETRACTION TO NOV. 1. ARTS '76 Dance CANCELLED Wednesday Nov. 6th.

DNE TOP HAT MISSING: lost at Science Formal. Any information of its whereabouts would be more than appreciated. Reward for return. Phone Woll 542-3887.

JYOUS FELICITATIONS AND INFINITUM and all that to Vicki on the occasion of the 23rd? 14th? 20th? 911st anniversary of her release upon the world. Doug H. FDR IMMEDIATE OCCUPANCY: 2 bedroom house between Division and University on Brock 5100.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: 326 Princess St. 542-3258.

BANANA AHO GLORIA! SE con-tingent of 41. Cool your jets! After mid-term Oct! Maybe we'll hit the Plaza again some time Gloria. Sue, Karen and Bruce.

SHOW IS COMIN' buy ski boots! L'Alpina, from Hall buckles, plastic coating, inner-lining, super ankle support, size 6, new. $45. 21 Val D'Isere, from Germany, buckles, moulded-sole, leather, size 6, great condition - $25. Call 544-7017.

CHUCK WOOD: This is "Bernette Beavertree" AHO OO I HAVE A TUNE FOR YOU. Chew, chew Do I love YOU - without you I'm blue - and to you I'll always be true: Chew Chew.

CAPTAIN WOLMAH: Congratulations on allowing me to retain my title; you actually landed on the runway. Keep up the good work. Signed, your co-pilot.

D.S.C. Chairpersons: please attend a brief meeting in the 3rd floor common room student Union 7:30 Wed. Nov. 6th. Thank you, Openhouse '75.

LOST: 1 man's bracelet - Sat. 24th between football game and main campus. Inscription on back, and "Don R. MacKay" on front. Please if I don't get it back, my girl will kill me. You name reward. Don 544-7498 or 243 Gordon House.

OXFAM

Any student interested in heading up an
OXFAM- CANADA PROJECT
on campus, contact:

Tony Wolman, Pres.
AMS office
547-6165

In Concert

to mark the occasion
of the opening
of Harrison-LeCaine Hall

VAGHY STRING QUARTET

Friday 8 November
Dunning Hall 8:30 p.m.

Admission is free
A Division of Concerts
and Department
of Music event

THURSDAY NOV. 7 8PM-1AM

IN THE GORDON HOUSE COMMON ROOM
25¢ admission
BEER 5/25

A SPLENDID TIME IS GUARANTEED FOR ALL

Used to be ...
Vegas and New York
were the only way to Stardom
Now
ARTSCI 78
presents
November Nightclub
Auditions: November 11 - 7 p.m.
Phone 544-8672 for time reservation
Talent from ALL YEARS WELCOME

One morning, chained in the Tiger Cages
We met, and understood each other's heart.
I saw the blood still red on your shoulder
And the scars of terrible lashes on your back;
As I lay there
My bones and skin crying out in hunger and thirst,
We understood each other through simple looks.
Full of faith, looking to the eternal future of our country
And yet before the enemy, our spirit hardened
As our eyes met
And smiles flourished on our lips comforting one another.
We shall fight to death, though they beat us,
We shall hold our hands, and live or die together.
A deep love exists in our hearts
As though we have known each other since long ago,
Long ago when the earth began to turn.

Mobi Warren

The war in Vietnam still continues. There are thousands of refugees and at least 200,000 political prisoners, many of them subjected to severe and brutal torture. Not the least of the victims in Vietnam are the children. Many of them are homeless, often with their parents dead or imprisoned. They have great difficulty surviving and there are too few orphanages in Vietnam to help the majority of them.

Mobi Warren has been actively involved in trying to bring assistance to Vietnam. In 1972, after undergraduate studies at the University of Texas, she joined with the staff of the War Resisters League in order to work more actively in opposition to the war in Indochina.

In 1973, she agreed to go to France to assist the Vietnamese Buddhist Peace Delegation in Paris with its English-language correspondence and publications.

She has since learned to speak Vietnamese and,
in addition to her other responsibilities, she has been translating children's stories and other Vietnamese texts for publication in the English language.

Currently, Mobi is on a speaking tour in North America. Thursday, November 7, at 8:00 p.m. in Ellis Hall, she will be speaking during a benefit concert for the orphans of Vietnam. All proceeds from this concert will be sent to Vietnamese orphanages.

Her own writings have often appeared in Fellowship magazine, a monthly pacifist magazine published by the Fellowship of Reconciliation. The following are a few excerpts from her published diary.

The miracle is not to walk on water; the miracles to walk on earth

October 14, 1973: "There is no sun. The sky is cold and quiet. The news by telegram Friday of the intense flooding of the northern provinces of South Vietnam left us without words. School of Youth workers will, in the coming days, be trying to help people plant secondary crops of manioc roots and sweet potatoes. These will only take 4 months to yield food and might be able to ease the problem of hunger until another crop of rice can be cultivated.
We sent many telegrams to organizations calling for immediate aid. I pray we will have responses.
The mail brought more. 15 children under 10 years old have just been deported from central Vietnam to Con Son Island prison. One of the little boys is named Ceasefire.

A few days ago the moon was full and it was also the 17th anniversary of the death of Thay Nhat Hanh's mother. The house is still filled with flowers."

November 25. In the French countryside: "The leaves have fallen. Walking up a hill. Thay Nhat Hanh, Phuong, Huong and I passed the dry huts and stalks covered with frost in the cornfields, left from late summer. Two fields had been sown fresh with winter wheat and already the shoots have risen green, brushing against each other in the cold wind, making a hushed sound, something like the crackling wood in the fireplace, but softer."

On the path of service, we discover the moon.
On the path of service our friends are torn by bullets. All the light of the moon coolly streaming down seems unable to stop the blood from flowing.
Only you and I, using the moonlight to see, can wrap and heal the wounds. Why do some people see both moon and blood, and others, as yet, see neither? I think about Chi Phuong's words, "It is not unusual, it is even ordinary, to be killed on the path of social service."

June 5, 1974: "Last night's full moon, obscured by a dark storming sky, marked the ninth month
I've been here."

Yesterday we translated many letters from Vietnamese orphans to their overseas sponsors.
Such gentle, respectful words - and such faithfulness to their situation, in a word or two acknowledging their hunger and griefs, and their joys too. Their neat round script can only be felt as miracles of human-ness, of children. Children too young to write have drawn little boats or baskets for rice."

July 9: "More letters from orphans have arrived. There are several from Quang Tri, a province which was completely destroyed by bombs. Not a house, water buffalo, or even a tree was left standing. All these children have returned to their home province from refugee camps. One little boy wrote, 'The seagulls call for summer to return. Everywhere the red phoenix flowers are blooming. They make the summer heat less hard. I was so happy to be able to go to school! Now school is out - three months to relax - it will make me healthy to start school again!' One little girl wrote: 'I am sitting looking at the phoenix flowers, feeling very pleased. I do not know what to say - this is the first time I've been able to sit under the roof of a school.'"

The Paris Ceasefire Agreement for Peace in Vietnam provides for humane treatment of prisoners. Following is an excerpt from Article 8B of the Protocol on Prisoners: "All Vietnamese civilian personnel captured and detained in South Vietnam shall be treated humanely at all times, and in accordance with international practice."

"They shall be protected against all violence to life and person, in particular against murder in any form, mutilation, torture and cruel treatment, and outrages against personal dignity. The detaining parties shall not deny or delay their return for any reason, including the fact that captured persons, may on any grounds, have been prosecuted or sentenced. These persons shall not be forced to join the armed forces of the detaining party."

In actual practice a multitude of tortures have been devised to extract information from prisoners.
One common practice is to tie the prisoner's hands behind their backs and hang them from the ceiling by the arms. Often prisoners lose consciousness within a few minutes after being suspended in this manner.

Another torture is to place the prisoner in a barrel of water and beat on the barrel. The water distributes the pressure over the prisoner's body, and although there may be little, if any, outward bruises on the body, the prisoner suffers severe internal injury, and the pain is almost unbearable.

The tiger cages

In 1970, the "Tiger Cages" of Con Son Island were disclosed. From a report of five students who have returned from Con Son prison, "this is a room, or more correctly a small cage, about three meters (10 feet) long and one and one half (five feet) wide, in an area separate from the other cages by many walls and totally isolated from all life outside. They threw three people into this narrow cage. On the average, each person had only about two hand-breadths of space in which to lie and live. The legs were shackled and held high each day - even while eating, sleeping, washing - fastened to a metal rod about four or five meters long. They forced us to lie in silence; we couldn't sit or stir in this hot, dark, narrow cage. The cages are separated by stone walls more than a meter thick. A small door is kept tightly shut all day, except for a few minutes when it is opened and reclosed during meals. Above it are metal bars running horizontally lengthwise, with a small space or passageway left for the orderlies who make regular checks. We had to lie there all day. Sitting or standing was not allowed."

Public uproar brought about at least temporary closing of these cages. Three months later the prisoners were ordered to build new cages as a self-help project. They refused and were put back in shackles. Then in 1971 the American firm of Raymond, Morrison, Knudsen-Brown, Rott and Jones received a $600,000 contract to build new "isolation cells" of tiger cage design except two feet smaller.

"Con Son Today", a report from a released prisoner, says "At present (August, 1973) There are over 4,000 political prisoners on Con Son Island, being held in camps II, IV, VI, VII and VIII. Camp II has 281 women, Camp IV has 493 women and six small children, Camp VI has 1,545 men, Camp VII
(where the tiger cages are located) has 1,128 men, 28 women and 9 small children. Camp VIII has 600 men. The total is 3,272 men, 802 women and 15 children from two months to five years of age."

Nguyen Lac Le, the author of "Return From Con Son", was arrested in November, 1968, with his wife, two sisters and one brother. His family was harassed by the Phoenix program during the 1968 Tet offensive because of their peace activities. His two sisters were released after nearly six months at the interrogation center. His brother was tortured to death at the Saigon Municipal Police Station because he would not sign confession papers stating that he was a communist.

Le's wife was sentenced under An Tri law to two years in Thu Duc Women's Prison. Because of torture, she is paralyzed and can only crawl.
Despite her two year sentence, she actually spent almost five years in prison, being moved from Thu Duc to Chi Hoa and finally to Con Son Island. She was kept in isolation in both the old and the new tiger cages.

In late 1974 Le's wife was released from prison.
"Return from Con Son" is the song he composed for her return.

Return From Con Son

From the Isle of Con Son
You have returned home
In the peaceful afternoon sun.
Your legs paralyzed
Your hands covered with scars
From years of shackles and pain.

This late afternoon I hear you singing
Under the warm sky of our country.
Life blossoms afresh
In the sparkle of your loving eyes

Your song is strong
And makes our blood surge through our bodies.
Your sacrifice has been made
So the rice can bloom in joy.
Your song resounds over the Guns, bayonets and dark prisons.
Your sacrifice has been made
So our motherland will grow in freedom.

Here are the seeds of rice for our country
Here is the love of your fellowmen
Which will warm your heart
And carry your voice to the sky.
Here are the caring hands.
Here are the loving hands
Which will lessen the suffering and anger
Contained in your heart.

AMEY'S TAXI 546-1111

BENEFIT CONCERT

for orphans in Viet Nam

with

Bill Bosworth Quartet

Easy Company

Kirk Elliot

Norm Nurmi & Karen Skidmore

Speaker: Mobi Warren

Thursday Nov. 7

8 pm - Ellis

Donations at the door
All proceeds to orphanages

Sponsored by: Unified Church of Vietnam

A SNEAK PREVIEW OF OUR PROGRAM

What is our program? It's our Sales & Marketing Management Program and it gives you inside information on what it takes to become a successful insurance sales manager. It covers subjects such as selling techniques, law and taxation in relation to insurance and estate planning, to name a few.

The "why" of our program is simple; we need young graduates with management potential. Your own reasons may have to do with ambition and high income potential.

Why not fill in the coupon below and we'll let you look at the whole program.

The Canada Life Assurance Company

NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
CITY _____ PROVINCE _____
COUNTRY _____
ZIP _____

Hall & Oates' album for everyone

RECORDS

War Babies
Daryl Hall & John Oates
by Wes Lack

War Babies, Daryl Hall and John Oates' new album soon to be released by Atlantic in the Kingston area, is an album for everyone.

This album serves as an excellent follow-up to Hall & Oates' record Abandoned Luncheonette, an album showing excellent production and studio performances of Hall & Oates. On Luncheonette, Hall & Oates also delved into the intricacies of synthetic, electronic sound, which crossed with their extensive rhythm and blues background, produced an impressive series of tracks. One such track was 'She's Gone', the only cut in their concert with Lou Reed not originating on War Babies.

War Babies has many stars. Todd Rundgren produced, engineered, and played lead guitar on this album, all of which is reflected in its tight, professional sound. Hall & Oates are at their best instrumentally. Their rhythm and blues background shines through at times and steals the album in a cut entitled 'You're Much Too Soon'. Hall's vocals are superb, and point him out as an up-and-coming talent.

Though this album is generally weak lyrically, Hall & Oates are able to set a theme for their album. Hall has said, 'The essence of our album is what we're trying to drive at. We are living in very unromantic, very sterile times, and we have to get as much as we can out of a very lifeless situation. That's what '70's Scenario' is about; that's what 'I'm Watching You' is about.'

The first side of the album belongs to Hall & Oates. The first three cuts concern the lives of various musical entities, perhaps fictitious but never named. 'Can't Stop the Music' deals with the life of a has-been star, 'Is It a Star?' deals with life as star, and 'Beanie G and the Rose Tattoo' concerns the life of a glitter rock'n' roller going nowhere.

It is hard to define exactly what these tracks portend musically, for the influences are many. At times they are rhythm and blues, at times they rely on Todd's mastery in the studio and his electronic 'erratae', but at worst they are very interesting. The next two tracks steal the album for Hall & Oates with 'You're Much Too Soon', employing their extensive rhythm and blues background and '70's Scenario' features Hall's vocal intensity. One can listen again and again.

Side two of this album belongs to Rundgren, and makes this an album for his many fans. His electronic studio sounds are over-bearing or even gimmicky, for example the air-raid siren which opens 'War Baby, Son of Borro', the title track. Todd plays lead guitar on the album and his background and solo licks complement every cut on the side.

Hall has also said of success, 'It enables us to do what we want to. It enables us to continue with our projects in the present and what we like to do in the future.' Considering the excellence of their second album and, indeed, of War Babies as well as the apparent progressive interest Hall & Oates have shown in Electronic and synthetic sound, we are in for pleasant surprises in the future from these talents.

Buy War Babies and feel no regrets.

"Absolutely triffic"

The Brand New Monty Python Paperbok Eric Methuen Publishers

by Tony Davis

The Brand New Monty Python Paperbok - yes, that's how they spell it, is the second book to be published by the British comedy team which calls itself Monty Python. They had a successful long-running television series on the BBC and CBC, and thousands of Python fans screamed in anguish when it was dropped from the air. It was one show where even the re-runs were enjoyable. The popular movie written and produced by the same crew: And Now for Something Completely Different (which will be shown at Dunning Auditorium on Thursday, December 5) also drew great acclaim.

The book itself, the new "paperbok" edition, has received much praise: "A triffically good book", "a mantelpiece", "absolutely triffic", and "really triffic" - what more can be said? To read Monty Python is to risk a love-hate relationship. One either falls madly in love with the book, or walks away with a look that says "that's stupid". Monty Python is superb British humour - undiluted insanity. British comedy is dry, droll, absurd and very insane. And being good colonials, we should have no trouble picking up this humour.

Paperbok is composed of a hodge-podge of comics, articles, advertisements, and other various delights. A sampling will suffice here: how to become a "Master of Llap-Goch", a Welsh Kung-Fu; "You will no longer look pitiful and spotty to your Girl Friends when you leave some unsuspecting passerby looking like four tins of cat food!" - rat recipes, of special note to those students who are doing their own cooking this year - a fractured fairy tale to sate the simple mind. Read along as the courageous Prince Charming (a unique name) speaks to the crowd of his devotion for the Princess - Mitzi Gaynor (another unique name): "For this most perfect of God's creatures, for this finest and most delicate flower in the whole of this geographical area, I will face in mortal combat, that most dreaded of all creatures... 'An emu!!' gasped the crowd... people who have luridly followed The Joy of Sex and More Joy will find in the 'Paperbok' a booklet on 'Sex-Craft' (Masters and Johnson are still trying to figure it out - it is so profound...) and for the aspiring life science student the authors of this... (the word escapes me), have included a page dealing with self-taught surgery. And if the reader follows the instructions carefully the Government will no longer have to worry about overpopulation.

In the immortal words of John Gumbly, village idiot extraordinaire, you are hereby invited to "beat your head 'gainst a wall", and if that proves painful, you are advised to read the Brand New Monty Python Paperbok instead.

Many thanks to W. H. Smith-Hill bookstore, 193 Princess St., for their generous donation of this book for review.

Queen's Bridge Club

FIRST MEETING

Tuesday, November 5

7:30 pm

McLaughlin Room, Student Union

Everyone Welcome

Whether you are an expert, beginner, or just interested in learning to play. We will have Rubber and duplicate games and lessons for beginners

Phone Pieter Geerkens at 544-7509
for more details

IF YOU HAVEN'T CHECKED THE PRICE OF RECORDS LATELY, THEN IT'S POSSIBLE YOU DIDN'T KNOW THAT WE HAVE THE BEST REGULAR PRICES ON ALMOST ALL YOUR FAVORITE ALBUMS.

Why Not Save

It Here?

TREMBLAY'S

274 PRINCESS ST.

MEDICAL VARIETY NIGHT '74

CLAP!

AN EVENING OF INFECTIOUS FUN!

FRIDAY and SATURDAY
NOVEMBER 15 and 16
8:00 pm GRANT HALL

Tickets: $2.00 and $1.50 in John Orr Room
10:30 am - 1:30 pm

Death Wish examines a contemporary pioneer

by Sandra Bernstein

Death Wish is one of those movies more noteworthy for audience reaction than for artistic merit. It is less a film than a hypothesis with mass exposure: What would happen if a man whose family had been devastated by thugs decided to start a one-vigilante campaign to clean up New York?

What happens in the movies is that muggings drop drastically after a few criminals get killed, and people start to defend themselves in the streets. What happens in the theatres of large American cities is that the crowd rises en masse and cheers for Paul Kersey (Charles Bronson) every time a thief bites the dust. This identification with the vigilante crosses class lines - poor blacks applaud this affluent white when he pumps black thugs full of lead.

Such reactions alarm many psychiatrists, social workers, liberals, and, no doubt, muggers.

Michael Winner, the director, has however produced an uneven effort. He hides his more tasteless moments in campy references to melodramatic conventions such as the Western: a clever plan, but it doesn't work.

Kersey identifies with the pioneer spirit, as represented by a white-hatted Arizona cowboy who gives him a gun and takes him to an old movie set where a scene from a Western is being enacted for the tourists. A narrator is saying, coyly, "They shoot movies here sometimes." Ha ha.

Winner tries to provide a little dramatic tension by providing Kersey with a 'mighty opposite', the police chief who reluctantly dogs him. The rather unlikely circumstance of a chief handling one case is not explained. The role demands little except that he constantly strides around, feeding himself or fiddling with his mouth and nose. Even less demanding are the parts of the unconscious daughter, the officers stolen directly from TV police dramas, and the goons from films of the 'torturers in the asylum' genre. One of these is however distinguished by his resemblance to Mr. Clean.

Herbert Hancock's music seems too controlled by the demands of the footage. Some is quite good but more often it is trite. Violins denote sentiment, with the same tune used for the Hawaii scene as is heard later when Kersey opens his gun box. Dramatic moments lapse into the old "da DA (plunk), da DA" trick. Hancock seems most at home with the primitive drum beats of the Vigilante killings, or the jazzy music of the thug "ballets".

Winner avoids flashbacks to the murder scene by throwing red paint and stepladders into Kersey's view from time to time, reminding him and us of the red spray paint the villains used on his home and family.

There are some good details: nuns cross between the killers and the wife as she is followed home, then turn up as matrons in the daughter's sanatorium. An Ontario Hall type of staircase is used cleverly in the san scenes and later in city hall scenes when the chief speaks about the mysterious vigilante. Also colours are linked with aspects of the narrative.

Orwitz's photography varies greatly, from unbearably sentimental compositions (probably Winner's fault) in Hawaii to some very interesting shots in the city. We are, however, asked to accept too many obviously stock shots. Furthermore, we are shown some snaps we saw Kersey take in Hawaii, and his pocket instamatic has managed near close-ups at over thirty feet. Really, now!

Winner does not attempt to do more than ask us a few questions about society: What constitutes civilization? When are we justified in reverting to the law of the jungle? What happens when we do? (Paul Kersey becomes rejuvenated, redecorates his home in op art style, and blasts Herb Alpert-type music on his stereo.) You could ponder these questions at home or see the film at Capitol One.

Piano music of our own era

This Tuesday the Division of Concerts offers a piano concert by Franzpeter Goebels. Goebels is a German pianist who is known chiefly for his interpretations of contemporary music, and while it is true that he cherishes the music of the twentieth century, it is also true that he places great emphasis on the original reproduction of older music. This diversity of interest is shown in the program planned for Tuesday evening-Goebels will begin with three sonatas by Scarlatti, and then move into the works of twentieth century composers such as Schoenberg and Messiaen. Goebels' reviews from European performances have been astounding: "A superior master of his instrument" (Bamberg) "Goebels displayed an enormous technique and original musicality" (Munich) "Whatever its manifestations may be like, the basic ideas of music have not changed... To have perceived this truth, to have served it with a superior competence and yet honest humility of the true musician is one of Goebels' merits" (Saarbrücken).

Tickets for this concert are available at the Division of Concerts Box Office, Agnes Etherington Art Centre, 547-6194. General $5, $4, $3, students $4, $3, $2.

Our apologies

The Journal wishes to express its sincere regret to W.H. Smith-Hill bookstore for the omission of the acknowledgement in Friday's paper. Bert Fegg's Nasty Book for Boys and Girls was donated by W.H. Smith-Hill for the Journal to review. The book is available at the bookstore on 193 Princess St. for $5.50.

Bite the one you love

Arts 76 Dance

Leonard Hall

Wed. Nov. 6

CANCELLED

Due to circumstances beyond our control

Have a look at our great selection of men's and women's winter wear at
ABRAMSKY'S MEN'S WEAR 259 PRINCESS

Donald Gow

Memorial Lecture

Saturday November 16

12 Noon

Wallace Hall

luncheon

lecture

Speaker — Dr. Andre - Raynauld
- chairman Economic Council of Canada

Topic — Social Indicators

Panel — Dr. J.J. Deutsch
Ms. Gail Stewart
Mr. Scott Campbell

Luncheon tickets available
from the Alumni office at
Price of $8.00 per person

Queen's Riding Club

We are offering English group riding lessons at a special rate of four for $20.00 (including transportation) starting this Saturday afternoon and next Wednesday afternoon. To sign up, and for more information, call 544-0938.

Maud Whitmore as Mrs. Rachel Lynde in Anne of Green Gables.

Anne rejoices with life

by Sandy Naiman

L. M. Montgomery's novel, Anne of Green Gables, is a Canadian classic and the musical adapted by Donald Harron with music by Norman Campbell, has achieved universal status since the Charlottetown Festival first produced it in 1965. Amazingly the show never gets tired, even though it does at times become almost embarrassingly sweet, this sweetness is never saccharine. The characters have been carefully and faithfully scripted from Montgomery's novel, as have the episodes which make up the story of the imaginative and wistful orphan girl who is adopted by an old maid and her brother in a small Prince Edward Island village.

The story is well known, the music is charming and light and even hummable. And Anne of Green Gables remains fresh and popular, despite its constant exposure. This is usually the case of the greats in musical theatre history, shows like My Fair Lady, Gypsy, and the others that immediately spring to mind when discussing this genre.

Is Anne of Green Gables one of these greats? It certainly has a lot of the necessary ingredients. A good story, interesting characters, a pleasing score which is well integrated into the plot line, and colour all create a world which in its simplicity and honesty tickles our imagination and engulfs us in its wholeness.

Where this show misses out, however, is in its degree of greatness. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say that Anne approaches greatness but never quite succeeds. This particular production, however, like the original, has energy and spunk, nonetheless.

George Mermer as Matthew and Elizabeth Mawson as Marilla are extremely effective, perhaps because they are able to mix warmth with brittleness when relating to Anne. Mermer's portrayal is incredibly complete both physically and emotionally. He epitomizes a country coarseness and an inability to express emotions with a superb sense of comic timing. This warmth allows us to empathize with him and thus his death in the second act becomes beautifully poignant.

Malorie-Ann (without an "e") Spiller as Anne is also equally as exciting because she brings to the role a profoundly intriguing sense of innocence. It isn't easy to be so energetic and naive, so imaginative and temperamental without seeming somewhat contrived and yet Miss Spiller pulls the feat off with real pinache.

Opposite Anne, as Gilbert Blythe, Calvin McRae gives a fine performance even though his musical numbers become problematic since he cannot always be heard over the orchestra. And Mary Trainor as Diana Barry, Anne's kindred spirit, is hilarious in her drunken scene in the second act.

Alan Lund's choreography is one of the highlights of the entire production in its simplicity and unsophistication. He is able to imitate, through dance, the rural murmurings of the setting without ever for a moment becoming too commercial.

Added to this are the costumes and sets which again are not overly lavish and which work well with Lund's dance numbers and the varied settings of the play.

The success of Anne of Green Gables never surprised me although its continuous popularity as a stage vehicle does. Even though the play brings to the flesh all the imagined vistas and people in L.M. Montgomery's novel, we somehow lose something in the transition; our ability to create these people in our own minds. Naturally, this is a common failing of most descriptive works of fiction when they are adapted for another type of presentation. Naturally, those who are avid Montgomery fans might see the chinks in any adaptation of her work. And naturally nothing looks as good in real life as it does in our own imaginations.

So it is extremely exciting to know we are able to see, almost annually, a production of this popular musical which brings a small slice of Canadian rural life into our hearts in a romantic almost idyllic way. There is something to be said for entertainment which is not particularly relevant or acutely timely. I am the last person to deny a bit of joy to anyone who seeks it. And, if nothing else, Anne of Green Gables is and always will rejoice in life and the imagination. All power to her.

Charming and irrepressible Anne

by Ruth-Ann Nicolson

In 1964 Lucy Maude Montgomery reread a notebook entry: "Elderly couple apply to orphan asylum for a boy. By a mistake a girl is sent them." Although her first intention was to work this notion into a short story, the character "grew on her", and eventually became the heroine of six novels, three movies, two three act plays, and most recently—a hit musical.

The first dramatized version of Anne of Green Gables was a silent film done in 1921 which the Canadian author had the misfortune of seeing. She was particularly enraged at the sight of the American stars and stripes flying bravely over the P.E.I. schoolhouse. Unfortunately she had sold the dramatic rights to an American publisher, so losing all control over the production. Since then Norman Campbell and Don Harron have successfully adapted the distinctively Canadian setting and the lyric romanticism of Montgomery's writing to the production of a witty and altogether charming musical.

The touring Charlottetown Festival did an admirable job of recreating the staid little P.E.I. community which is shaken out of its Presbyterian complacency by the coming of Anne, the demonic redheaded orphan.

Although Montgomery wrote it "ostensibly for girls", she was surprised and delighted to receive thousands of fan letters, not only from children, but from missionaries in Africa, monks in remote monasteries, soldiers in India, and grizzled trappers in the Canadian north. An English boy of nineteen, leaving for the front in World War I, wrote to say that before he left he wanted to tell her how much he loved, especially Anne, had meant to him.

So if you haven't read the book whose title has become synonymous with Prince Edward Island, I strongly recommend that you do. As for the musical it can be appreciated by those who aren't interested in "children's literature" and those of us who have been reading the Anne books for years.

Elizabeth Mawson as Marilla is superb. Her interpretation of the dour middle aged spinster runs like a power line through the production, dispensing exactly the right amount of emotion all the way along. The humanizing process of this incommunicative woman culminates with the most touching scene in the play; she breaks down after Matthew's funeral and admits that she has loved Anne ever since she came to Green Gables.

Matthew was less convincing as the lonely old farmer who loves Anne as tenderly and as openly as his shy nature will permit. He loses part of his quiet rustic charm by having too many lines to say, which are delivered at times with a rather exaggerated Maritime drawl.

The minor characters have very fine moments throughout. The scene where Anne unwittingly gives Diana an overdose of Marilla's current wine is a small piece of comic perfection.

As a whole the musical is a great piece of entertainment and a credit to Canadian theatre. The novel Anne of Green Gables is a credit to Canadian literature. Many critics continue to be patronizing, regarding it as naive and sentimental children's literature, and yet no other Canadian novel has been so widely read or remained so consistently popular.

Malorie-Ann Spiller, who plays the irrepressible Anne, has the voice and energy to portray her vivid imagination and indomitable spirit. There are times however when she has trouble shifting out of high gear long enough to let the audience feel, for example, the anguish this sensitive child endures because she is to be driven out of her first home to make room for a boy. She is charming when angry, but less effective in relating to the other characters on a more sympathetic level. She is also frequently overshadowed by minor characters.

Elizabeth Mawson as Marilla is superb. Her interpretation of the dour middle aged spinster runs like a power line through the

TONIGHT 8:30

Franzpeter Goebels, piano

GRANT HALL

Works by Scarlatti, Schonberg, Messiaen, Busoni, Cage, Pousseur, Goebels

Tickets at door

a Division of Concerts event

Night of the Iguana

with Peter Haworth

Journal: I'll ask the obvious question first, and that is why you chose this play, Night of the Iguana?

Robertson: The obvious answer is of course, I like it. But why do I like it? The leading character in the play, Shannon, is a person who is going through a very traumatic experience, and I find that while my own life experiences have been different from his, there are enough parallels to what I have, and perhaps am still going through that it becomes very personal to me. It is a very personal play, but it is in no sense my biography. On the other hand, there are more general reasons. I think it is well put together, and beautifully written with good acting parts, and so forth. But I think the main reason is a very intense personal one.

I have resisted going the play for a number of years, because I didn't have the actors or maybe I felt it was too close in ways. But this year it seemed to me time to say "Let's go ahead and do it anyway". It has long been a favorite of mine; for a least ten years I have loved it.

Journal: What do you see as one or two of the major points that Williams makes, and what are some of the points you want to make?

Robertson: The central theme in the play revolves around this character Shannon, a young man who has been a minister and has lost his faith, or become fed up with his faith, and yet he tries to find some other kind of faith. He calls God, the familiar conception of God, a senile delinquent, and he says he wants to find a God who is also a God of thunder, and dogs vivisection, and a God that can encompass the horrors of the world as well as the beauties of it or the delights of it.

This is also a very central problem in religion. God brings us the wonders of youth and the delights of old age, but what do you do about evil sins, corruptions? What relations does God have to those? Williams presents a man who is struggling with this, and at the same time he is struggling with another side, his passions, in particular, his sexual passions. He feels that they are sinful and yet they are a good part of life. It's really secondary to his religious hang-ups, although in the play it comes across more predominantly.

We can look out of this office and see the lovely leaves turning colour, people walking along the paths, and we can see what a wonderful day it is. And someone said to me what a wonderful day it is. And it is a wonderful day. But someone is dying from leukemia over in KGH at this very moment, or something. How can I resolve a God that would work both these things at the same time? How do I resolve within me my higher feelings and my lustier ones? We, in the western society, feel this sort of conflict, and Williams feels it very deeply as well.

This sounds somewhat abstract, but in the play it is all presented in terms of character and action and so forth. And so that is what I would hope a few people would be sensitive to.

Journal: Does Williams' God have anything to do with your idea of God, and does Williams come to any conclusions?

Robertson: When you look at Williams' whole writing as much as I have read—and I guess he progresses, he moves along, he gets perhaps not better, but he changes. To me he gets better. In this particular play, he introduces another character, Shannon, who is a woman who is both deeply sensitive to the cruelties and harshness and insanity of the world, and yet has been able to find some sort of peace, some successful way of life for herself, and it is not an easy life by a long shot. It has some of the cool serenity that we associate with the eastern religions. She has found a way of life that doesn't have the gross excesses of the physical side of life. She is perfectly aware of evil. She says that "Nothing human disgusts me, unless it is unkind, violent." In other words she has learned to accept a lot of things that we might think are disgusting or unpleasant, or less than ideal. The only place she draws the line is unkindness, or violence.

Journal: About the production, when I read the play it seemed like a particularly difficult one. Do you think that the Drama Department can cope with such a play?

Robertson: Well, we can cope with it technically, first of all. We have an excellent designer, Gavin Semple. He has done the setting and lighting. We have the staff to bring this to life, to execute it.

With the actors there is a problem. It is a play, as many plays are—Chekov for example—in which for some of the characters it is better if you are middle-aged, at least. But even so, I am impressed with the quality, and particularly, to be candid, that in some places that I thought in auditions that I was taking a big gamble, that up till now the gamble seems to be paying off.

Journal: Because the characters have such experience, do you have any special ways of helping your actors understand those experiences?

Robertson: Well oddly enough, the way I usually go about directing—and even here where the experience might be far beyond the actors'—is to work first of all very technically. With Williams it makes sense to do that; he writes very well. The words are there, they are very speakable. We worry about very technical things, about standing here, and saying it this way, and putting a pause here. And what I find is that gradually the actor begins to soak in these things and that the inner level gradually begins to emerge. Obviously you can't have experienced the same thing as a character has. It seems to me a fatuous argument that you have to feel the precise emotion in order to express it. Expressing an idea and feeling it are two different things, related but different.

Judith Thompson as Maxine in Night of the Iguana

Then there are times in rehearsal, after we have worked in this technical way, when someone says "I don't see what's going on here." or "We are having difficulties." Then we stop the rehearsal, and we talk it out, and each of us brings to it what our own experience has been, or what we can interpret to be the experience. But we wait until the actor is ready, and the actor needs some other dimension. The point is, we don't start from the inner level but from the surface, and we gradually work in. Now, I hope that by the time we get to performance, there will be a melding of both technique and whatever this inner richness is.

Journal: Can I ask you what sort of problems you have had working with your actors?

Robertson: Yes, without mentioning names. With one of the people in the show, for example, the problem has seemed to have been focussed on the psychological side, that is the actor is not emotionally relating to the character, or in some instances, feeling a little embarrassed by what the character has to do or say, but that is a dirty play or anything of that sort. But you can feel emotionally embarrassed and awkward. On the other hand, with another person in the play, one of the problems has been vocal, words, that when this person works with the lines, it is sometimes physically difficult to understand. And we have tried to see how it works.

Nancy Palk as Hannah and John Frizzell as Shannon

Women's Senior Volleyball won all four matches at the Queen's Invitational held on Saturday. Dorothy Cosgrove no. 6 spikes against Carleton.

B-ball gals open season at York

by Maye B. Good

This past weekend the women's Senior Intercollegiate Basketball Team officially opened the new season with an exhibition, four team tournament at York University. The team were York, Loyola, Guelph and Queen's. It was supposedly played under International Rules but inexperienced referees and a general lack of knowledge about the rule changes hindered the officiating.

However, Queen's handed York a 76-18 defeat in the first game. Queen's strong man-to-man defense forced turn overs and constantly enabled the gals to run a fast break offense. This provided most of the scoring punch.

In the second game Queen's lost to Loyola 80-60. However, the score does not really indicate the distribution of play. Queen's outscored Loyola 56-52 from the floor but lost the game from the line as Loyola outscored us 28-4. It was not that Queen's foul-shooting was a disaster; it was just that the referees seemed determined to give Loyola free shot practice. One again the fast break dominated our offense as any semblance of controlled offense seemed to be lacking. However, coach Bouris has some new tricks in store and will no doubt put them to good use.

This tournament certainly did prove that Queen's has a skilled, well-balanced team. Rookies Sue Gillies, Barb Carey and temporarily injured Mary Brunton have blended well with returnees Pat Quigley, Laney Marshall, Pat Patterson, Jean Crichton, Penny Wedd, Mary Ann Drinkwater, Kathy Keely and Karen Carson (who missed this tournament because of field hockey responsibilities). The team has been fortunate in inheriting Pat Smith, a centre form formerly from Laurentian.

All in all the gals showed great potential and certainly will be a contender for the league championship. They travel to Guelph next weekend for another exhibition tournament in which most of the league teams will be competing. This will be a good indication of things to come. The regular season opens at Queen's November 15 and 16 with games against perennial rival U of T and York. The gals certainly would appreciate your support to come out and watch some good basketball!

Elrond college won the interservice flag football championship defeating Brockington

Students' rites.

BLACK & WHITE

SPECIAL BLEND OF BUCHANAN'S VIEUX SCOTCH WHISKY

CHOICE OLD SCOTCH WHISKY

SELECTED BLENDING AND DISTILLED IN SCOTLAND

James Buchanan & Co. Ltd. DISTILLERS GLASGOW & LONDON

40% alc./vol.

Black & White.

Enjoyed in over 168 countries

See All The New Programs This Year With 11 Channels to Choose From On...

cable tv
544-6311

Are you or your group doing something you would like others to know about?
Tell Us....

USE OUR BULLETIN BOARD

Cable Cast TV 13

Volleyball Gaels finish second at Waterloo

by Joe Austin

The Gaels played at the Waterloo Invitational tournament over the weekend and competed in their own section against Western, Waterloo, Brock and RMC and the winners of the other section consisting of Ottawa, Laurentian, Guelph, McMaster and the second place Canadian team last year, York University.

During the two-game round robin of the day, the gals started with the toughest competition of Western, Waterloo and Brock, splitting each series at one game apiece and finished with RMC, defeating them two to nothing.

This record got them into the semi-finals against the strong Laurentian team where Queen's played their toughest match in years.

The Gaels fought as a true team with each of the six players moulding into one fighting unit, a machine which Laurentian found difficult to battle. In the two-of-three series Queen's took the first game with a close 15-12 win by playing basic volleyball combined with errors by the opposition. The second game was a different story, however, as the errors of the Laurentian team decreased and the battle raged even higher. The teams real talent began to show its potential as spikers Joe Austin and Frank Massong finally got back the knack of how to hammer the ball to the floor along with other greats Al Scott and the 'Golden Hammer', Yon Capek.

The momentum switched hundreds of times during the game with neither team gaining more than two points at a time. Rookie Ted Scharf came through to complete the offense with some well hit spike and Pete Khignesse set perfectly and dug some amazing balls from the floor to aid the team to a 15-10 victory and a greatly needed rest. The Final was against the strong Waterloo team, whom Queen's already defeated once in the day, started ten minutes after the finish of the Laurentian match with Waterloo having over an hour's rest. The Gaels were almost exhausted as they walked onto the floor but in the great tradition of Queen's volleyball they played as hard and as well as they could until they dropped to the floor. But late blocking and slightly weaker spiking took their toll as Queen's lost two games 15-12 and 15-11 leaving the second place OUA team last year to the gold medallions.

Everyone on the team, especially the captain and player-coach Yon Capek, are very confident that they will devastate Waterloo at the McMaster Invitational next weekend.

Rookies Bruce Wormbold, John Shoemaker, Pat Clancy, Dave Wright and Pete Wood all played well during the day and are bright prospects for later in the season.

Final Note: Toronto has held the championship in Women's Field Hockey for the history of the O.W.I.A.A. except 1971-72 when Laurentian took first place in the Intermediate division.

Field hockey: tie drops gals second behind T.O.

by Lyn Atwood

Field hockey season is over once again. Part two of the final tournament was held at McMaster this year (the first part being held last weekend at Queen's), bringing to a close what must be the sport with one of Queen's shortest seasons. From the first practice during Frosh Week to the final weekend, five big tournaments and countless practices were compacted into a short seven weeks.

Karen Carson, winner of the Alumni '55 Trophy and '74 graduate of Queen's P.H.E., sacrificed the opportunity to play field hockey this year in order to take over the coaching responsibilities when she heard that field hockey was going to come up with the short end of the stick this year as far as a coach was concerned (not an uncommon occurrence at Queen's among the teams of "lesser status"). She coached both teams - turning grey in the process.

The Queen's Senior team this year experienced some of the problems of last year's Senior team, in that the potential never actually became a reality. Although fully half of the team was new this year the individual players were for the most part quite highly skilled. Somehow, they just couldn't put it together, from the beginning of the season to Saturdays final game against Guelph.

On Friday Queen's Seniors challenged Waterloo (0-1) and Western (0-0). On Saturday it was the same story with York (1-3) (goal by Cathy Curvain) and Guelph (1-2) (goal by Janice Wager) with Guelph breaking a tie in the final five seconds of play from an offside position.

The story of the Intermediates is something else again. Out of ten new players (two of twelve were returnees from last year's team), four of whom were totally new to the sport itself - coach Karen Carson formed a team - and a championship team at that.

From the first tournament where players did not even know each others names - to the climax this past weekend it seemed the Intermediates could do no wrong. Last weekend (Part 1 of the O.W.I.A.A. Field Hockey championship tournament) was the high point of the season with the big Queen's machine rumbling down the field to topple Ottawa (4-0), McMaster (4-0), Laurentian (3-0) and tie Toronto (0-0) (a psychological win).

This weekend, with all the teams being "up" for the big tournament, perhaps Queen's found itself in a position of being overpsyched. They had a hard time getting into gear right from the first game, coming off the field at halftime in the Ottawa game with only a 1-0 lead (goal by Lyn Atwood). In the second half things started to happen with four goals being put in and Queen's retaining full control of the game (goals by Lyn Atwood 1, Pearl Dixon 2, and Marg Bartlett 1).

The next game on Friday found McMaster challenging Queen's first place position and Queen's hard pressed to come up with a goal. A break-away halfway through the second half with a dodge around the defence and a scoop which beat the goalie resulted in the lone goal of the game (goal by Lyn Atwood).

After an O.W.I.A.A. banquet hosted by McMaster, a Halloween Party hosted by Queen's and a restless pre-final game night by most, the Queen's Intermediates found themselves facing the U. of T. Blues on the pitch for a final showdown between the two first place teams. However it seems that Queen's entered the spirit of the battle only after a goal was scored by Toronto and we were all forced to listen to that nauseating U. of T. varsity song. After many clashes in front of both nets, centre Carolyn Broadhurst finally laced one in the net for Queen's to pull us into tying position in the last ten minutes of the game. After that Queen's was in full control of the game with the ball in the Toronto end until the final whistle. Unfortunately the net was rather elusive and Toronto managed to hold onto the tie. The final game of the day proved to be the real heart-breaker. Laurentians challenge to the ball in the Toronto end until the finest game that those girls from Sudbury had ever played, an unfortunate turn of events prevented.

Queen's Seniors: Janice Wager, Nanette Cuddy, Cathy Curvain and Les Ferrari in an offensive drive on Guelph in their final game Saturday.

that ended in a 1-1 tie (goal by Lyn Atwood) and resulted in the O.W.I.A.A. championship going to Toronto in the Intermediate Division because of the one point deficit which a win over Laurentian would have prevented.

Pearl Dixon of Queen's Intermediates Field Hockey team strives towards Laurentians goal with teammates Lyn Atwood, Carolyn Broadhurst, Deb Stretton and Betty Dickie in final game of O.W.I.A.A. championships which resulted in a tie with Laurentian and a loss of their first place berth to T.O.

Kurds vs. Iraq Hidden revolt:

BAGDAD, Iraq - Iraq is torn by the war that is still raging there between the Iraq government and the Kurds. The Kurds, numbering about 2.5 million, occupy a northern province of the country. The revolt began last March when the Kurds broke a four year truce with the Iraq government. They have accused the government in Baghdad of failing to honour the terms of the 1970 agreement, which guaranteed the Kurds full autonomy with Iraq. The fighting is mainly in the area surrounding the city of Kirkuk. This area is the major source of oil in the country and the Kurds are demanding a greater share of the revenues from the oil.

The government officials insist that there is no civil war, not even a military campaign - "just a mopping up operation in the mountains of wild Kurdistan. The Iraq news media never refers to battle going on. However the government has committed nearly the entire army - 80,000 Iraq troops - to the cleaning up operations. The government has been attacking the strongholds of the Kurds with Soviet-made bombers and heavy artillery. Some of the Kurdish towns are paralysed constantly by Iraq troops armed with automatic rifles. Jeeps and open-backed trucks with mounted machine guns are also used for the same purpose. The Kurds have a guerrilla force of about 60,000 and have radar-guided anti-aircraft guns, scores of jeep-mounted recoilless rifles and other up to date weapons. The government intends to sustain its campaign despite heavy casualties and severe financial losses in order that they may profit from ever rising oil revenues.

The situation has become more complex of late due to Iraq accusing Iran of assisting the Kurds. This is one of the major causes for the sporadic outburst of fighting on the Iran-Iraq border. It has been estimated that 90,000 Kurdish refugees have fled across the border to Iran.

backpage

Human Sexuality
Sponsored by the Birth Control Centre and the A.M.S.
Tues. 9:00 P.M. Dupuis Auditorium
This Week: Abortion

Farmers to get government aid

OTTAWA - A bill has been introduced into the Commons that would provide greater financial assistance to farmers. The bill proposes that an amendment be made to the Farm Credit Act. The capital available to the farmers would increase to $100 million from $66 million. The maximum loan to farmers under the age of 35 would increase from $100,000 to $150,000. The bill further stipulates that a ceiling of $100,000 would be set on loans to older farmers and to farm co-operatives.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan has announced that he will introduce legislation to further aid farmers. He has suggested that a type of guarantee income be established for farmers. The plan proposed would involve a central fund into which the government and the farmers would contribute. If a farmer's income fell below his production costs the fund would be used to make up the difference.

Whelan has also been approached by the farmers over the issue of beef prices. They feel that it is necessary to increase the price. Their stand is based on the fact that they are selling beef at a loss. Farmers in Quebec slaughtered 600 calves to demonstrate how strongly they feel about the needed price increase. The controversy has arisen in reaction to the inquiry demanded by consumers into the high cost of beef. The Food Prices Review Board was required to form a commission to investigate the problem. The Chairman of the board reported to the Minister that the higher costs merely reflect the higher cost of feeding cattle and the consumers complaints were just nonsense. To handle the dilemma - another inquiry. Whelan announced that he will initiate a government investigation into the "entire beef industry".

briefly..

MONTREAL - Last Thursday night 2,400 firemen walked out. The firemen are demanding a $750 cost-of-living bonus. The strikers were ordered back to work by Mayor Jean Drapeau but the men have refused to honour the superior court injunction obtained by Drapeau. A force of fifty men, made up of district and divisional fire chiefs, is attempting to deal with fires which break out.

The city will not negotiate the issue of a cost-of-living bonus until a settlement is reached on the firemen's 1975 contract. The firemen have demanded the bonus now and will not wait.

NEW YORK - The city of New York has instituted a new series of smoking ordinances. People are no longer permitted to smoke in elevators, supermarkets and several other public places. The ban requires that 80 per cent of the seats in all public halls be reserved for non-smokers. This ratio extends to most enclosed public spaces in which 50 or more people are gathered. The purpose of the ban, "to protect the right of non-smokers". Violators may be fined $1,000 and can be jailed up to a year.

OTTAWA - External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen has stated that Canada will help to establish an international food-security plan. MacEachen told the House of Commons, "It is our intention to support the necessity for international co-ordination and if possible to set up the mechanism by which the co-ordination and flow of resources can be carefully monitored." A proposal was made earlier in the year that countries be asked to adopt a minimum safe level of foodstocks for the world. MacEachen is attending an eleven day food conference in Rome to discuss such a set up.

OTTAWA - Former Prime Minister Diefenbaker is making waves on Parliament Hill again. He wants to know where the Liberals have stashed the statues of former Prime Minister R.B. Bennett and Arthur Meighen. Both of these men were leaders of the Conservative Party. Diefenbaker has charged the Liberals with concealing the statues. The Liberals have remained silent. A so-called "secret source" in the privy council office has unofficially told Diefenbaker's aids that the reason the statues are not along side Mackenzie King is because the two statues display "uneven look-alike qualities". The Meighen statue looks too much like Robert Stanfield and the Bennett statue resembles Marcel Lambert, the West Edmonton Conservative MP. The hiding place of the statues is still unknown.

SAN FRANCISCO (Earth News) - Fifteen-year old Danny D. Bonaduce, better known as Danny Partridge of the television programme the "Partridge Family" has been arrested for the possession of marijuana. He was released in the custody of his parents.

THE OLD WAY IS STILL THE BEST

For years, the traditional way to seal your engagement was with a diamond ring... a tradition that is more relevant today than ever before. We'll help you seal your troth with a dazzler that suits your budget. A brilliant promise of tomorrow.

KINNEAR d'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

And yet another resigns

by Paul Steep

Richard Hamm, chairman of the Concert Committee and co-director with Dave Finley of the Queen's Entertainment Agency, resigned from that position this week. Hamm cited a variety of reasons for his resignation but felt that the most important one was discouragement with his co-workers. "I think that the committee has to be run like a business and since it wasn't it was becoming a waste of time for me." During the course of his directorship the ticket and promotion managers both quit and others were just not giving their jobs the attention that they required, he said.

He felt that the co-directorship was further handicapping the efficient functioning of the committee. Hamm told the Journal, "I understand the reason for having two directors and I think that it could be made to work. In this case there were just two separate personalities that saw things from different points of view." He added that he thought his co-director, Dave Finley, should be allowed to run things alone.

Hamm was also concerned about faculty representation on the committee. Each undergraduate at Queen's pays three dollars in fees towards the concert and is entitled to a faculty representative on the committee, he believes.

Both Hamm and A.M.S. Commissioner for Campus Activities, Robert Wood, stressed that the faculty response was poor to say the least. As a result decisions about what bands to hire rest in the hands of a small group who can choose according to their own personal biases. Neither of them felt that this had or would happen this year. Wood remarked, "The diversity in concerts has been excellent. They have reflected a broad outlook in tastes, from the bluegrass of Eric Wiesberg and the folk of Lou Reed and the heavy metal sound of Nazareth." Still, Hamm saw representation as a point of principle and Wood thought that the lack of faculty participation was resulting in inefficiency. This apparent inefficiency led Wood to speculate that the current agency might be replaced by a committee of A.M.S. commissioners and outer council reps. He noted that despite one hundred dollars worth of Journal advertising QEA had been unable to attract

OFS referendum

Housing, LLBO OSAP issues

by Ian Jarvis

Those of you who happen to read notice boards around campus are probably aware by now that next Wednesday we, the students of Queen's, will decide whether this university maintains its membership in O.F.S.

The decision will involve answering in our own mind two questions. First, does the O.F.S. represent our interests and do we want it as our spokesman to the provincial government? Second, do the benefits available to us from O.F.S. justify a student contribution equivalent to "Three beer in the pub"? As an aid to understanding these questions, outlined below are the four principle issues with which the O.F.S. has involved itself on behalf of the students it represents. These include financial aid to students, tuition, liquor licensing on campuses and student housing.

The topic of financial aid concerns primarily O.F.S.'s dissatisfaction with the present Ontario student Awards Program. Their biggest gripe is that students who rely solely on O.S.A.F. must get by on $2.00 a week. As our delegate Terry Mach explains "this means that a student must find accommodation, feed himself, pay phone bills as well as live on about $130.00 a month, which is well below the poverty line. This state of affairs has been conceded to James Auld, Minister of Colleges and Universities but no indication was given that it will be changed.

The present objectives of the O.F.S. as outlined by Mach are "to have the living stipend increased to at least $40.00 a week as well as to achieve a change in the appeals system so that a student may receive more grant instead of loan." As quoted from another O.F.S. source, "Students, along with the public, must force the government to respond to continuing rises in the cost of food, rent, books and other necessities."

With regards to student fees O.F.S. has committed itself to a policy of free tuition since it views education as a social right. It is particularly worried by inferences made by the Commission on Post-Secondary Education in Ontario that students should pay between 1-2 and 2-3 of the cost of operating universities. Translated into monetary terms, it could mean that tuition fees will be $2,000.00 or more in the future.

The licensing issue revolves around the L.B.O.'s refusal to allow students to operate their own pubs and instead has placed them under the control of university administrations. "For reasons best known to themselves the government does not like student pubs," explains Mach, and the L.B.O. has in the past denied special occasion permits to campus groups without giving any reason for

(continued on Page 3)

AMS court prevents approved honoraria

"The only way it (the section in the constitution concerning referendum) could be read is to see in it a substantive right of the students to hold a referendum if 200 names are procured as required," states Bill Bartlett, Chief Justice of the AMS court. "As a result we have advised council not to take any action which would render the topic of the referendum academic until such time that the interested parties are given another chance to present their petition before council."

This ruling by the AMS court effectively puts an injunction on the payment of any honoraria approved after Sept. 1. The court action was initiated by Bill Horricks, who wanted a decision on whether the AMS council could rule their motion for referendum out of order on the grounds that it did. Speaker Mary Bloss ruled the motion out of order because the names on it had not been authenticated. The function of Outer Council in the view of the court is to make sure that there is nothing defective on the face of the document, which in this case was the petition of names, but as Bartlett explains, "We do not construe this to mean that it must be proven all signatures belong to Queen's students."

Bartlett said the court did not feel it was within its power to bypass council and place the honoraria question on the Nov. 13 referendum so Horricks and company must wait until the spring before they can again approach council with their motion.

Congratulations

The Alma Mater Society extends congratulations and best wishes to Dr. R. Watts on this the date of his installation as the fourteenth Principal and Vice-Chancellor of Queen's University. The student community offers Dr. Watts full support in his desire to serve the university. Alma Mater Society

wat's hapnin'?

Friday, November 8

- 11:30 a.m. - No classes will be held after this time because of the installation of Dr. Ronald Watts as principal.
- 2:30 p.m. - CFRC presents the Installation of Dr. Watts as principal.
- 4:30 p.m. - CFRC presents a Musical Interlude.
- 8:00 p.m. - G.S.S. Film Club presents The Seventh Seal directed by Ingmar Bergman. In Ellis Auditorium and tickets will be on sale at the door $1.00.
- 8:00 p.m. - Excellent documentary film sponsored by the Ukrainian Club at the Ukrainian Hall, 472 Bagot Street. For further information call 549-0797.
- 8:00 p.m. - Bitter Grounds and the Good Times Emporium presents Greg "Little Sun" Forbes and Tom Handy. Tickets are available in the John Orr Room from 10:30-4:30 and the price is $1.50. Also Saturday night.
- 8:30 p.m. - Queen's Music Department presents The Vaghy String Quartet with quirets by Haydn, Karol Szymanowski, and Maurice Ravel. Presented in conjunction with the Division of Concerts to mark the occasion of the official opening of Harrison-LeCaine Hall.
- 8:30 p.m. - Queen's Department of Drama presents Night of the Iguana by Tennessee Williams in Convocation Hall. Tickets and information are available at the drama desk 547-6291. Also showing November 9, 14-15.

Saturday, November 9

- 10:00 a.m. - 7aside Rugby Tournament with ten universities present.
- 12:30 p.m. - 2nd XV Rugby Championship - Queen's vs. McMaster.
- 2:00 p.m. - 1st XV Rugby Championship - Queen's vs. Guelph at West Campus.
- 7:00 p.m. - CFRC presents The Music Department: Dr. F.R.C. Clarke takes a look at works by lesser known composers.
- 7:00 p.m. - Diplomacy Club Meeting in the McLaughlin Room in the student union (1st floor behind the coat-room). New members welcome. Please bring pencil and paper.
- 8:30 p.m. - Queen's Music Department presents the Queen's Chamber Orchestra with director David Keane and the Queen's Chamber Singers with director R. Schmitzler.
- 8:00 p.m. - Queen's Indian Club at Kingston will be having their annual fall dance in Leonard Cafeteria. As in previous years all Queen's students are invited to come and have a great time.
- 10:00 p.m. - Nocturne by CFRC with special feature Fleetwood Mac at 1:00 a.m.

Sunday, November 10

- 10:30 a.m. - Morning Worship at Chalmers Church.
- 10:30 a.m. - Folk Mass at Dunning Hall, followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House, 164 University Ave.
- 12:00 noon - CFRC presents Classics by Request: To have your request played, please telephone CFRC at 547-6677 before 11:45 a.m.
- 1:00-5:00 p.m. - Agnes Etherington Arts Building is the place to see the last day of Prints: Techniques and Western Odyssey.
- 1:00-4:00 p.m. - SVB Open House in the SVB Office. Come and talk to the executive about complaints, criticisms or curiosities.
- 2:00 p.m. - Agnes Etherington Art Centre presents a picture of the month discussion and a tour of the Art Centre by a Gallery Guide.
- 7:00 p.m. - Queen's Musical and Cast Meeting for the people with roles in the production "Gypsy" in the dance studio at the Phys. Ed. Centre. Orchestra auditions will be held next Tuesday for the production. Those wishing to try out please meet in the lobby of the music building.

8:00 p.m. - CFRC presents Music and Memories: "Hits from the Blitz"... songs which were hits during WWI and WWII.

9:30 p.m. - Galerie Victoria presents Rick Le Sueur and Jamie Bastedo playing blues, jazz and folk guitar, in the common room of Victoria Hall.

Pubs and Theatres

Frontenac-Finnegan's - Liam McGuire

Frontenac-Muldoon's - Moonshiners

Townhouse - Beckett

401 Inn - She

Commodore - Shanty

Hyland - The Odessa File

Odeon - Airport '75

Capitol 1 - Death Wish

Capitol 2 - Uptown Saturday Night

Donino Theatre - 6 Rms Riv Vu - Playing November 8 and 9. Curtains rise at 8:30 p.m. Tickets $2.50 adult, available at Mahood's Drug Store or at the theatre on playing nights.

Upcoming Events

Slide Competition open to anyone affiliated with the university is being sponsored by Queen's Camera Club. Deadline for entries is Thursday, November 14. Entry fee is 10c per slide with a limit of 10 slides per person. Slides should be placed in an envelope along with the fee, name of entrant and phone number and put in the box provided in the A.M.S. office.

Tuesday, November 12 - Queen's NDP meeting at 7 p.m. in the Senior Students Common Room no. C115 McArthur College. Screening of the feature film "The Inheritance" - the history of the North American Labour Movement in story and song.

Tuesday, November 12 - Queen's University Amateur Radio Club meeting in Room 454 Goodwin Hall at 7:30.

Tuesday, November 12 - Queen's Debating Union presents one of the Cambridge Union films of the debate "Resolved that the American Dream is at the expense of the Negro". Stirling D at 8:00 p.m. All welcome. Free admission.

Wednesday, November 13 - Queen's Nursing Society is sponsoring a symposium on "The Nurse Clinician and Nurse Practitioner" to be held in Chown Hall Common Room. Guest speaker - nurse practitioner from Newboro Clinic. Coffee and donuts. All welcome.

November 13, 14, 15 - The Multi-Media Artists will be holding their exhibition and sale in the McArthur main foyer from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Wednesday, November 13 - The Liberal and Progressive Conservative Campus Clubs are jointly sponsoring a Pub Nite in Clark Hall from 8:00 p.m. to 1:00 Free admission. All welcome.

Wednesday, November 13 - The third lecture in the Mediaeval Studies Group Fall lecture Series will be given by Dr. R.B. Dobson of the University of York under the title "The Cathedral and the City: the Case of Mediaeval York" John Watson Hall, 8 p.m.

November 15, 16 - Medical Variety Night '74. Clap. 8:00 p.m. in Grant Hall. Tickets $2.00, students $1.50 available in the John Orr room 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Saturday, November 16 - 12 noon - Donald Gow Memorial Lecture. Speaker: Dr. Andre Raynould, Chairman of the Economic Council of Canada. Topic: Social Indicators. Panel: Dr. J.J. Deutsch, Gail Stewart, Scott Campbell. Luncheon tickets available from the Alumni Office at the price of $8.00 per person.

Sunday, November 17 - Bruce Cockburn in Grant Hall. 7 and 10 p.m. Tickets $3 with student card available in the John Orr Room from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

In Concert
to mark the occasion
of the opening
of Harrison-LeCaine Hall
VAGHY STRING QUARTET
Friday 8 November
Dunning Hall 8:30 p.m.

Admission is free
A Division of Concerts
and Department
of Music event

SVB Open House

Sunday, November 10

1 - 4 p.m.

SVB Office

Come an and talk to the executive about complaints, criticisms or curiosities

QUEEN'S MUSICAL THEATRE
CAST MEETING
for people with roles in the production
"Gypsy"

Sunday, November 10
7:00 P.M. in the Dance Studio
in the Phys. Ed. Centre

Queen's University

Music
Department

A WEEKEND OF MUSIC

TO MARK THE OCCASION OF
THE OFFICIAL OPENING OF HARRISON-LECAINE HALL

IN DUNNING AUDITORIUM
FRIDAY, 8 NOV. AT 8:30 pm

CONCERT: THE VAGHY STRING QUARTET

IN GRANT HALL
SATURDAY, 9 NOV. AT 8:30 pm

CONCERT: QUEEN'S CHAMBER SINGERS
AND
QUEEN'S CHAMBER ORCHESTRA
Director: David Keane

ADMISSION TO BOTH EVENTS FREE

Issues:

liquor licencing, housing, allowance

Continued from Page 1

doing it. In response to this the O.F.S. has hired a lawyer to examine the legality of the government's position and MacI says a test case can be expected soon.

The last major issue deals with student housing. The situation is that student housing is in short supply and this can be related to a number of factors. First of all enrolment in most universities has gone up. This compounded with the fact that community colleges are not allowed to build residences means that the market for low-cost housing has increased significantly. Secondly the government's Land Speculation Tax has taken much potential student housing off the market. Thirdly, the government has frozen those funds which would be used to build new university residences. Fourthly, the Central Mortgage and Housing commission will now consider students as low income persons. Thus, they are denied accommodation in C.M.H.C. projects.

The O.F.S. objectives are threefold; to have C.M.H.C. reconsider the status of students as low income persons, to allow the community colleges to build residences, and to get the government to approve new residence construction where serious need for it has been shown.

OFS history: short, spicy

by Ian Jarvis

The historical purpose of the O.F.S. has been to provide students with an efficient organization through which they could express their collective interests to the provincial government.

Since its inception in 1972, the O.F.S. has struggled through several phases of development. To quote Outer Council's O.F.S. report, "Born in an era of financial cutbacks in the realm of education, O.F.S. quickly became involved in combat against tuition increase, its action culminated here in the fee strike in 1972-73 protesting the governments action." As the O.F.S. executive confesses, in its early days it was solely oriented towards a single issue - the fee strike. Once this issue died, with it went much of the organization's sense of direction and purpose. Because it's communications system was so poor the O.F.S. was often misconstrued as being a wildly radical organization and was criticized for speaking on issues about which it wasn't well enough informed. Realizing it had to re-establish its credibility, the O.F.S. has since tried to found its support on a broad base of issues, about which it can claim a thorough understanding.

The Achilles tendon of the O.F.S. has always been it's lack of manpower. It is the voice of some 100,000 students yet it has fewer full time employees than most of the students councils it must advise about the governments policy. In its first year the co-ordination of the whole organization fell upon the shoulders of it's only full time worker Craig Herron. Since then its staff has expanded to six which includes several fieldworkers.

Through its fieldwork, the O.F.S. has been responsible for starting course unions at several universities and as an aid to this purpose has published a course unionizing handbook. It is also in the process of producing a legal handbook dealing with such things as student rights under the Landlord-Tenant act.

To date the request to increase student contribution has been approved by seven member universities (Toronto, Western, Lakehead, St. Pats, Glendon, Ryerson and Guelph).

"Why $1.50?"

The increase in student contribution from $40 to $1.50 is defended by O.F.S. organizers on several counts. The O.F.S., they claim, is an organization representing over 100,000 students right across the province. In order for it to say that it is a truly representative body it must be able to maintain an efficient communications network between itself and its member campuses and this will involve hiring more fieldworkers.

At the moment, the O.F.S. is also putting together a comprehensive file on a broad range of subjects which are of concern to students. Having a central filing system such as this allows its members to draw upon the experience of each other in areas such as forming course unions. The collection and filing of information takes a lot of time and in order to do the job well the O.F.S. wants to hire someone to look after this.

"In order to influence government policy", MacI adds, "the O.F.S. must have well researched and well written reports. This requires time and so researchers must be hired".

MacI also points out that "to ensure that someone is reading the reports, a lobbyist is required. Right now he is also a researcher and both areas suffer from his over-extension."

Employees of the O.F.S. receive $135 a week plus some expenses. By asking for a large sum now the O.F.S. hopes to avoid having to come back each year to ask councils for increases.

Asus Society Referendum - November 13

1a. Do you agree with the policy of awarding a class of degree with the Three-Year B.A. Degree? YES ☐ NO ☐

1b. Would you favour the opportunity of being able to personally choose, at the beginning of your graduating year, whether or not you desire a class of degree? YES ☐ NO ☐

1c. Would you agree to have a distinction for only those with 80 percent & above? YES ☐ NO ☐

POLLS:

Union ..... 10:30 - 2:30pm
Physical Education Complex ..... 9:30 - 4:15pm
Douglas Library ..... 10:30 - 3:30pm
Supper Meal lines ..... 4:30 - 5:30pm

Alma Mater Society Referenda Nov. 13, 1974

- Shall the Ontario Union of Students fee of .25c per student be increased to $1.50 per student and be allocated to the Ontario Federation of Students? + YES NO
- Have you ever smoked marijuana? YES NO
- Do you feel that the consumption of marijuana should be legalized in Canada? YES NO
- Do you feel that the legalization should be restricted (eg. as drugs and alcohol are now treated)? YES NO

POLLING STATIONS AND HOURS

Physical Education Centre	9:30 am - 4:30 pm
Students Union	9:30 am - 4:30 pm
Douglas Library	9:30 am - 4:30 pm
Residence Meal Lines	4:30 pm - 6:30 pm
MacDonald Hall	9:30 am - 1:15 pm
Kingston Hall	1:30 pm - 4:15 pm
Ellis Hall	9:30 am - 11:15 am
Mackintosh-Corby	11:30 am - 4:15 pm
Stirling Hall	9:30 am - 1:15 pm
McLaughlin Hall	1:30 pm - 4:15 pm
Goodwin	9:30 am - 11:15 am
Humphrey	11:30 am - 2:15 pm
Miller	2:30 pm - 4:30 pm
McArthur, West Campus	10:30 am - 4:30 pm

+ed. note: In order to clarify the statement, it should read: "Shall the Ontario Federation of Students fee of .25c per student be increased to $1.50 per student?"

QUEEN'S DEPT OF DRAMA

THE NIGHT OF THE IGUANA

November 8 - 9
CONVOCATION HALL
8:30 PM
TICKETS AT DRAMA DESK 547-6291

unclassifieds

More on Page 11

LOST at Chikook. Girls pearl ring, set in white gold, banded in yellow gold. If found please call Allison 545-8915. Reward.

TOP HAT STILL MISSING. Lost at Science Formal. Any clues to where I could locate it - would be helpful. Reward for return. Call Wolf 542-3887.

RIDING CLUB: Come riding this Saturday! Everybody welcome no experience necessary. Meet the bus at the Union at 9:30 am. Cost $2.50 per hour.

SR 50's are in and selling for $165. Phone Duncan at 549-4623.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 Ltd. offers quality film processing both in black and white and Ektachrome. Colour transparencies with competitive prices and 24 hour service. Call us at 546-7770 or drop by our studio at 33 Brock St.

ATTENTION GEL GROUP 80 (74) and last years Gael Group 23 (73). Reunion Friday 8:30 at Paul's. 80 - you know where you can go. 30 - Skidoo. Byob.

IE LADIES OF THE NIGHT: We're emptying a double room and putting in wall to wall mattresses. Prescreening to fill positions 1 all 69 will take place Nov. 9 at the Zoo. Love your brothers.

NICKOLAS PETRUZZELLA, C.C. weese, Simon Little, Hori, Jettery, Lloyd-Smith, Brent Weermick, Marcus Roper, Lloyd Peterson, Ian Thompson, David Retzel, Mike McCrodon, Ronald Matheson, Gord Eamer, Richard Kird, Graeme Durkin, Michael Bull, wish to invite all of their friends to the best - not pliser of the year. Tonight Nov. 8 Craig House. 140 Stuart St. Bospies and beer are here.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 Ltd. offers quality film processing both in black and white and Ektachrome. Colour transparencies with competitive prices and 24 hour service. For more information call us at 546-7770 or drop by our studio at 33 Brock St.

WHO'S WHERE CHANGES: To be printed in Golden Words Nov. 20. Anyone who wants a correction give your name to Info Bank.

CAMP OUTLOOK get together this Saturday night will happen in the lower Leonard Common Room at 8pm. Bring your own. All new and old still are welcome.

MUSICIANS NEEDED TO PERFORM AT THE ARTS FESTIVAL January 28-February 1. Please contact Pat (544-7872) David (549-4787) Kathy (544-4500).

R. JAMES to his questionable Arts friends! One can only speculate at your motives for stamping clean living poster bashers out of existence. Dingo, and the name is Wombal.

AVE. MITCHEL AND MARY JANE invite all friends including Frez group 11, 15 and Gael Group 84 to a good time TONIGHT (same place as the Monday Frosh week) For info see below or just come.

ANT A CHANGE OF VIEW? We've got a room to rent in a house with 5 upper year girls, that is available immediately. It's only 5 minutes from campus. so if you're tired of where you are, give us a call at 544-4359.

OR A $25 TRIP CREDIT and a free case of Brador, your Queen's Ski Club Crest entry has to be in by Nov. 9 (that's tomorrow) in the special box in the John Orr Room. The winner will be announced in November at the Ski Club Smoker.

LANGUAGE BARRIER can cause embarrassing misunderstandings. Creative Language Communications can help you communicate effectively in 38 languages. Translations, interpretations, tutorials, preparations of copy and typing. For information call 540-3700.

SIMCOE APARTMENTS: Somewhere in this building there is an extremely attractive and pleasant girl whom I met in a cab coming from the bus station Sun. Nov. 3 at approximately 11pm. I would really like to see her again, and if this feeling is mutual would she please call Mike at the Strevatore Hotel 544-0721.

MAANYA C-32 H.S. 135mm lens, and pentaprism for sale. Also 120 film. Best offer. Phone 546-4516 after 4pm.

LOST a pair of wire rimmed glasses last Thursday night, and a pair of black rimmed glasses on Monday.

More on Page 11

If you know where they are call Maris at 549-0551.

SCIENCE '44 Co-op involves more than easy living. It's living in a co-operative manner, pulling your weight and maybe more; sharing a unique living experience with other people. Phone 542-1009.

TAN LEATHER WORKGLOVE found Friday night on Clergy St. W. Phone 546-5115.

FOUND: Tuesday in front of Watson Hall, a set of lecture-research notes. Could be Art History. If they're yours, call 549-4100.

SKIS ROSSKOPF METALLIC in good condition 205cm original cost over $400 with Gete bindings $130, without $85 also VOLKL leather buckle ski boots size 10 1/2. $45.

lace double boot $15. call 544-7227. FILM CONTEST: Arts Festival 1975. $50, $25, $10 prizes. Make a movie (30 minutes maximum) and we will show it during Festival. Beth (549-1033), Mike (544-7098).

13 INCHES FOR SALE: Rims in good condition. Only $10 for the set 389-8949; Phone after 5:30pm.

ATTENTION: Bud and Bob are here for the weekend. Anyone who wants to see them come to the party tonight 249 Sydenham.

LOST: Student card and Bank of Commerce bank book containing I.O. Lost in Phys. Ed. Centre, Fri. Nov. 1. I need it desperately. Reward offered. Phone Jane O'Hill - 542-5515.

BETTER LIVING FOR LESS - Science '44 Co-op. For relevant info call Al Evans 542-1009.

TO SHARE: large totally furnished room close to campus. Fridge, stove, stereo, fireplace. Call 542-5960.

KRIS: Happy 21 from the other three bears.

HELEN: Thursday is KRIS'S BIRTHDAY. What is your present? FREE - playlet female kitten, house trained, 8 weeks old, grey and white spots, phone 544-4759 any evening.

THE ROOM AT THE TOP - (the top of 227 Regent St. that is) is proud to announce its first gigantic bash on Friday Nov. 15. Deviates will be normalized. BYOB - brew available. G49 attendance compulsory. Watch for more gruesome details. MH, JP, DW.

KATIE-HAPPY BIRTHDAY! Your first person classified and your first (legal) drink. Have a great day. Love Chris and Allan.

SKIS ROSSKOPF METALLIC in good condition 205cm, original 1 cost over $400 - with Gete bindings $130 without bindings $85. - also Volkl leather buckle ski boots size 10 1/2. $45. lace double boot $15 call 544-7227.

FILM CONTEST: Arts Festival 1975. $50, $25, $10 prizes. Make a movie (30 minutes maximum) and we will show it during Festival. Beth (549-1033) Mike (544-7098).

ARTS FESTIVAL '75 - invites your participation in the fields of art, music, photography, film and drama. Five days of the arts Jan-Feb 28 - February 1.

MUSICIANS NEEDED TO PERFORM at the Arts Festival January 28 - February 1. Please contact Pat 544-7872, David 549-4789 or Kathy - 544-4500.

HAPPY 20 BIRTHDAY STRIP, don't pull any New York 'tricks', Les Jardin is still waiting. Love Pich, Spear-chucker and Jewel, with two rocks.

STOP 199 KING ST. EAST is pleased to announce the arrival of a new dead bear, namely 'The Lance' Mitchell, to the den of obliquity. Tomorrow night 15at) is when fellow animals can crawl over and sample the grog. Special to all Ex-Woodroffe Alumnus, Viva Murdoch's Excel. BYOB.

ARE YOU LEAVING QUEEN'S THIS YEAR? If so we want your 3 bedroom house. $30 reward if we decide to take your house. Phone Harold 544-7105; Chris 544-7090.

P.M. You finally made it, you SCHNOOB - its champagne all the way now. Happy Birthday Love CLARKIE.

Would you run a press, or sell advertising, or work as a reporter at a wage of $1 a day?

The Co. of the Cross, an Anglican order, is recruiting men and women of faith, imagination, and courage for the staff of its excitingly successful Edmonton news magazine. The hours are long, the pay little more than living essentials, the satisfaction and experience extraordinary. For interview in your city write the Co. of the Cross, 11224 - 142 Street, Edmonton, T5M 1T9, Phone (403) 552-0442.

Historic Roselawn becomes new Donald Gordon Centre

KINGSTON, Ontario (November 4, 1974) - Historic Roselawn, at Union and College Streets, will be officially opened as Queen's University's Donald Gordon Centre and commemorated with the unveiling of a National Historic plaque and a memorial to Donald Gordon in a special ceremony on Sunday, November 10 at 11 a.m.

The Centre, designed to provide year round facilities for study sessions and seminars was designated as a National Historic Site in 1969 because of its architectural significance. Roselawn, with its handsome proportions, roof pediments and arched openings reflecting the Classic Revival style of the 1840's, has been the home of several historically prominent Canadians in its 133 year history.

Built by architect William Cloverdale in 1841, Roselawn stands as a reminder of the days when prominent Kingstonians chose to build magnificent country homes outside the hustle and bustle of the city. The original owner, David John Smith, a prominent lawyer and Speaker of the Assembly, and the Federal Government, which used the building as the official residence of the Commandant of the National Defence College.

In June, 1969, the property, including the elegant limestone house, was bought back by Queen's University as the historic core of a living memorial to Donald Gordon.

In spite of many renovations and additions made necessary to transform the historic site into a centre for lifelong learning, Queen's has been careful to preserve the external elements of Roselawn's gracious style. The Centre is well-adapted to serve groups of varying sizes. One large seminar room has a seating capacity of 90, though it can be rearranged into smaller sections. Another tiered room will comfortably seat 50. Seven smaller rooms have capacities of 12 to 22, and tables which may be set up as desired. A full range of audio equipment is available for all rooms.

The Centre is well-adapted to serve groups of varying sizes. One large seminar room has a seating capacity of 90, though it can be rearranged into smaller sections. Another tiered room will comfortably seat 50. Seven smaller rooms have capacities of 12 to 22, and tables which may be set up as desired. A full range of audio equipment is available for all rooms.

The Centre can accommodate 80, its residence being divided into 2 bedroom study suites, each complete with bath and shower. The dining room has a seating capacity for this number, and waitresses serve food prepared in the Centre's own kitchen. A fully licensed bar-lounge and games room is also to be found, and refreshment areas are conveniently located throughout.

Included among the dignitaries expected to attend will be the Right Honourable Roland Michener, Chancellor; the Honourable Mitchell Sharp, President of the Privy Council; Dr. R.L. Watts, Principal and Vice-Chancellor; J.D. Gibson, Chairman of the Board of Trustees; Mrs. Donald Gordon; Flora MacDonald, M.P. for Kingston and the Islands; C.J.S. Apps, M.P.P. Kingston and the Islands and Dr. Maurice Careless, Historic Sites and Monuments Board.

Music hall opening

The official opening ceremonies for Harrison-Le Caine Hall at 2:30 p.m., Saturday, November 9, will reflect the musical focus of one of the university's newest buildings.

Constructed as an adjunct to the recently opened Mackintosh-Corry Hall, the music building, a separate entity, houses a wide variety of facilities for students of music.

Some three dozen pianos are used throughout the building, in instrumental and choral rehearsal rooms, in 18 practice studios and elsewhere.

Acoustical and climatic control are two important features of Harrison-Le Caine Hall. The ground floor houses offices, two classrooms and an electronic piano laboratory. On the mezzanine is the main music library, where books, scores, recordings and tapes are available as well as a number of turntables and tape decks for listening purposes.

The third floor has three more classrooms, faculty offices (which double as teaching studios) and accommodation for the Vaghy String Quartet. Queen's artists-in-residence.

Lower floor facilities include the individual practice studios, which include studios for organ and harpsichord practice, a four-room electronic music studio, an ensemble music library, two large rehearsal halls, student lockers and instrument storage.

Both Dr. Frank Harrison and Dr. Hugh Le Caine (who are to receive honorary LL.D. degrees at the Fall Convocation on the same day) will be present at the opening ceremonies. Their respective areas of expertise span the musical world from the Renaissance to electronics, and both have been at Queen's University at different points in their careers.

Each will speak at the ceremony, following which Mrs. Le Caine and Mrs. Harrison will unveil the dedication plaque.

The Queen's Collegium Musicum, Queen's Wind Ensemble and the men of the Queen's Choral Ensemble will perform as part of the opening ceremony.

Following the ceremony, there will be a musical open house, which will include presentations by the Choral Ensemble, Contemporary Music Ensemble, Brass Quintet, the Collegium Musicum in Renaissance costume, and other soloists.

The Electronic Music Studios, the Wilhelm Practice Organ, electronic piano laboratory and music library will be open to visitors as well.

Enrolment at 10,457

The Queen's enrolment statistics for 1974-75 were officially released at the last Senate meeting by the Registrar's office. Queen's University now has a total of 10,457 full and part-time students enrolled this year, a 6.0 per cent increase over 9,865 from last year.

In Arts and Science, those registered in an Honours B.A. programme have risen from 1699 last year to 1932 this year. Women outnumber men - 1143 women to 789 men. The Honours B.Sc. programme has increased by 125 students over last year with 597 women, over 497 last year, and 905 men over 897 last year. The three year B.A. experienced a decline of well over 100, as students decided to opt for academic programmes leading to graduate positions.

The School of Business had an overall increase in students, 722 from 710. It experienced a lower first year enrolment, 176 from 189, and lost 41 from the second year class. In third and fourth years the registration total increased with approximately 25 students each year. Increases are primarily the result of transfers and those returning from "time off".

Women compose over a third of the Commerce students. There were 542 male and 168 female students in last year and 517 male and 205 female students this year.

The faculty of Applied Science also experienced the familiar enrolment increase, from 1274 in '73-74, to 1350 this year. The total number of women are 68 with none in the final year, according to the registrar's office, and 1282 men. The increase in women is over 50 per cent.

Graduate faculties of Medicine and Law have remained in a relatively steady state with restrictions of growth imposed by the faculty board. Enrolment in education, amazingly, has increased from 799 to 751, in view of press reports of school boards' financial cutbacks and ability to hire new staff. Interestingly enough, the majority of students here are women - 438 to 313 men.

Full time graduate studies have slightly increased 25 per cent of the MBA and MPL are women, but over half of MPA students are women - a drastic change from last year, (possibly reflecting business and government attitudes?).

M.Sc. and M.A. positions have increased substantially while Ph.D. positions have noticeably decreased.

Hanson Boots

custom fitted only at

SEPP'S SKI SHOP

MEDICAL VARIETY NIGHT '74

CLAP!

AN EVENING OF INFECTIOUS FUN!

FRIDAY and SATURDAY
NOVEMBER 15 and 16
8:00 pm GRANT HALL

Tickets: $2.00 and $1.50 in John Orr Room

10:30 am - 1:30 pm

Here comes sweven

by Jim Smith
sweven editor

The first issue of sweven will appear before end of term, barring printer's delays. A major reason for the delay in its appearance is the baffling lack of submissions on the part of the students. Perhaps there is no one presently attending Queen's who is interested in or capable of writing creatively (likewise for the visual arts). I'd like to think there is some other, less negative, reason, and am open to suggestions.

The second issue deadline is Sunday, December 15, 1974. At present I have a total of two very short submissions from which to choose for the next issue. As always, I would like to encourage submissions of all kinds: prose, poetry, photography, artwork, essays, commentaries. This second issue should appear around the beginning of Arts Festival '75.

I'm still determined to bring out three quality issues this year, but the present conditions of non-interest and non-participation make it much more difficult than it should be.

A reminder, then - Second issue deadline is December 15, 1974.

Final issue deadline is January 31, 1975.

Send your submissions to Jim Smith, editor sweven c/o Journal Office, Student's Memorial Union P.O. Box 1355 Kingston phone 544-4976

Canadian Hoechst Limited

4045 Côte Verre

Montréal 383 Québec

40 Lesmill Road

Don Mills, Ontario

Helping Build Canada

Products and ideas from Hoechst have touched and improved the quality of people's lives in every area around the world, in a hundred countries on six continents. As an affiliate of the worldwide Hoechst organizations Canadian Hoechst Limited has a full century of research and achievement to draw upon. In Canada Hoechst is an autonomous company employing Canadians to serve Canadian needs.

Hoechst in Canada concerns itself with supplying both the present and future needs of Canadians. The range of products and services covers the spectrum through industrial chemicals, dyestuffs, plastics, printing plates, human and veterinary medicines, pharmaceuticals, and textile fibres. Hoechst products and services, Hoechst techniques and know-how in these fields, combined with a large international fund of experience have given the company a reputation for expertise which takes constant striving to live up to. Hoechst thinks ahead.

HOECHST

Ideas: The spark we run on

Hoechst develops a constant stream of new ideas to keep its research pointed in the right directions. Ideas about what is needed, ideas about what is wanted. Ideas about what is possible, ideas about what is probable, ideas about what is constantly changing, even increasing body of basic knowledge.

Imagination steers the ship

Imagination is a prime source of the new ideas Hoechst uses constantly in order to keep developing better products - more effective medicines, better chemical and industrial materials. Imagination is only half the battle, but when good ideas are properly teamed with the discipline of applied research, they constitute a formidable force in the search for improved products in every area of modern life.

WE'VE GOT THE BEST
TASTING PIZZA
IN KINGSTON. LOAD IT UP WITH

YOUR FAVORITES...

★ PEPPERONI ★ MUSHROOMS ★ CHEESE ★
★ ANCHOVIES ★ GREEN PEPPERS ★ ETC. ★

Pizza Chalet
544-1227

QUEEN'S MUSICAL
THEATRE

Orchestra auditions

for the Production

"Gypsy"

Tuesday, Nov. 12 7:00 P.M.

Please meet in the lobby of the Music Building.

Queen's Ski Club

Crest Contest

1st prize $25 credit on any ski trip
and 1 case of Brador

entries to special box in

John Orr Room by Nov. 9

Winner will be announced at Ski Club
Smoker in November in Clark Hall
(Tri colour maximum on crest)

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess
St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur
College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT
in our Lounge

THIS WEEK: Shanti

Amateur Night every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

letters to the editor

Remembrance Day Service

Dear Editor:

The University suspends classes and laboratories for one hour on Monday, November 11, to honour the sacrifice of those who went to war and did not return, especially 302 Queensmen in two World Wars. This will allow students and faculty to engage in a service which is both remembrance of sacrifice, and resolution for peace in our time. The twofold nature of the service is indicated by quotation from Stephen Spender standing alone on the front page of the service folder: "They travelled a short while towards the sun and left the vivid air signed with their honour." and the quotation from Omar Bradley on the back page: "It is easy for us who are living to honour the sacrifice of those who are dead. For it helps to assuage the guilt we should feel in their presence. Wars can be prevented just as surely as they are provoked and, therefore, those who fail to prevent them must share in the guilt of the dead."

Principal R. L. Watts, Tony Wolman, President of the AMS, Padre Lavery will be associated in the brief service to be held in Grant Hall at 10:53 AM.
Sincerely,
Rev. A. M. Lavery

Clarification of OFS ballot

Dear Editor:

On Wednesday Queen's students will be asked to decide whether or not to increase their contribution to the Ontario Federation of Students from 40 which they are now presently paying, to $1.50.
Hopefully posters and pamphlets and press coverage will provide a certain amount of information which will allow students to make their decision intelligently.

There is however, one point which must be clarified and that is the wording of the ballot. The question on the ballot will be the following:

"Shall the Ontario Union of Students fee of .25 be increased to $1.50 and allocated to the Ontario
Federation of Students?"

Now then, to start off with there is no Ontario
Union of Students. There has not been an Ontario Union of Students since 1971. The Ontario Union of Students died in 1971. It ceased to exist. There is no such organization. When the organization died however, Queen's neglected to fix up its constitution so that constitutionally we belong to an organization which has been buried for three years.

Next, each student now pays .40 to the OFS. The reason it says .25 on the ballot is because there has not been a referendum on OFS fee, so that this referendum is the first to be held. In other words the reason the ballot is so damned clumsy is because it serves as a housecleaning ballot as well.

Queen's has been a member of OFS since 1972 and was in fact a founding force. The reason I'm writing this is just so that every student knows that the ballot doesn't concern leaving the Ontario Union of Students and joining the Ontario Federation of Students. The Ontario Union of Students is demised so don't vote "NO" on the referendum with the idea that we can stay in the Ontario Union of Students.
The Ontario Federation of Students replaced O.U.S.
The referendum concerns only the Ontario
Federation of Students.

Terry Macle
Queen's OFS delegate

Our interests served by OFS

Dear Editor:

A primary function of the OFS is to represent the common interests of students in areas of public policy and we need such an organization. Government policy affects such vital concerns of students as tuition fees, student awards, teaching quality, housing (costs, availability, and standards), and employment (summer and post graduate). We must have the means of keeping the government aware of our needs and desires. We must collectively express our reactions to policy, both when we approve and when we disapprove. Only with this kind of input could even the most sympathetic and responsive of governments be expected to produce informed, satisfactory decisions. But in the light of the consistently unresponsive approach taken by the Davis government in its dealings with students it is even more essential that students' requirements and grievances should be actively and powerfully presented.

The record shows that the OFS has accomplished a great deal with the limited resources at its disposal towards the establishment of a united student organization. Briefs have been presented to the government dealing with the financing of universities, student housing, tenure, and the history of the Ontario student movement. A handbook explaining to students their legal rights regarding student awards housing, and alcohol and drug searches have been prepared. Liaison has been established with the Ministry of Colleges and Universities. Communication between student governments in areas of common concern has been facilitated through the OFS council.

In order to survive and expand, the OFS needs money. At present, it employs one researcher who also performs the function of a lobbyist. One use of new revenue would be to expand this staff to include a full-time lobbyist and more researchers. It is also important that briefs and position statements be reproduced in sufficient quantity to allow distribution to opposition members and the press;
this, of course, requires money.

The OFS would like to be able to distribute its newsletter, The Ontario Student, more widely and more frequently; again, this would require in-

Queens
Journal

Vol. 102, No. 10
Fri., Nov. 8, 1974
Queen's University
Editor-in-Chief: Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager: Terry Collins
Managing Editor: Dan Teag
McClelland

Comment: Expose of the week...was that really S.S. seen in the company of D.M. recently in the bowels of the lower Union? And was D.M. really saying "cut my hair, not my boobs!", as S.Y. lurked in the background with a pair of scissors? And what voluptuous red-head was named honorary phlog by K.B., J.B., and E.S.? (And loved it?) And where the hell is the unilustrious arts dept. when you want to go home and are scared to go by yourself?

Founded in 1872 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor, and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (416) 547-7406. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

News Editor: Sarah Yarnell
Features Editors: Wendy Wiggle
Reynolds, Laurie Gibson
Arts Editors: Kerry White, Peter
Haworth
Photography Editor: John
Cameron
Backpage: Val Cotton
Walt's Happin': Rosemary
Knight, Jennifer Hastings
Classifieds: Leslie Gaukrodger,
Trish Brooks

Phologs: Kelih Bourns, John
Bottomley, Jon Wilmer, Ernie
Sparks, Marv Bloos
Business Staff: Anne Q. Robertson, Meg X. Bottomley, Jim U.
Merrithew, Terry Z. Wood
Contributors: Terry Hall, Donna
Walterud, Ian Jarvis, Nancy
Flood, Dave Selander, Dave
Colburn, Mike Creagen, Paul
Sheep, Peter Walcott, J.
Lemercier, Hugh Agnew, Julie Hopkins, & Kelly

editorial

Honoraria: need for public debate

by Sarah Yarnell

Controversy over honoraria has not only awakened the punch in this campus' two student newspapers, it has pulled into focus the high debatability of this issue.

Arguments in favor of giving honoraria to students are strong. Just as potent, however, are the arguments against the idea.

People with an eagerness for extra-curricular involvement in the AMS should not be stopped from participation should they be in poor financial positions, according to those who support honoraria increases.

Several individuals do not acknowledge any problem of inaccessibility, however. If they do, they believe that students should cover their own expenses and receive little or no compensation for lost benefits. People who take this stand-point are the non-supporters of increases in honoraria.

This is obviously an issue which cries for lengthy discussion and detailed debate, because arguments on both sides are valid. It is vital, however, that the debate be carried on elsewhere than on the front and editorial pages of Golden Words and the Journal, in order to keep emotional involvement and personal feelings from coloring the issue as presented to readers of the two publications.

If resolving this issue is to be left to the students via a referendum, then before voting, students must be informed of both sides of the question.

Therefore, between now and referendum time in February, this paper will endeavor to ensure that panel discussions, debates, forums and other encounters are arranged at which students are given the opportunity to question and criticize the two viewpoints.

Outer Council members, as representatives of the students, are those who must be responsible for seeing that such arrangements are carried off properly. For this they will require the support of the AMS Commissioners and Executive.

When honoraria comes to referendum in the spring, each student will be responsible for deciding whether the increases should be implemented. An aware student will therefore attend the debates and forums in order to intelligently make up his or her mind on this issue.

This affair started with somewhat poor and nasty journalistic behavior on the parts of both Golden Words and the Journal. Now that the problem has been noticed, it must be solved clearly.
All but fair reflections of this issue should be kept off the pages of these papers. Also, it is vital that this question is given room for public argument and public debate.

Only this way will students be able to realize both sides of the issue and thus be given the chance to make responsible decisions when they vote in the referendum.

more mail for the ed

Increased expenditures. Other possible uses of financial resources include OFS conventions and advertising campaigns to gain public support.

Last year students at U of T, Western, Lakehead, St. Pat's, Glendon, and Ryerson voted to increase their OFS contribution to $1.50. Just last week, the students of Guelph U. did the same.
Queen's students should act in their own interests and vote in favour of increasing the allocation of funds to OFS. Queen's cannot have its own lobbyist at Queen's Park to ensure that our interests are looked after. We need a responsible group to represent all students, and the OFS is that group. It has achieved a great deal in the past and with our support it can achieve even more in the future.

Yours sincerely,
Joe Cornacchia
President, Law Student Society
Jamie Avis
President, Law 77

Grad students being ripped-off?

Dear Editor:

As you probably know, graduate students who have been on campus for a considerable time have the option of not paying Student Interest Fees. This means, among other things, we do not pay the $0.75 for Who's Where.

Thus, when I went to get a copy of Who's Where,
I fully expected to have to pay six bits for it. I was calmly informed that I would have to pay $1.25.

Why should the price to me, a student, be 167 percent of the price to you, another student? That's what I call a rip-off.

Yours truly
Fraser Dunford

OUTING CLUB SPORTS LOTTERY

Win	100.00	Cash Voucher
2nd prize	25.00	Cash Voucher
3rd prize	10.00	Cash Voucher

good at Hugh Finlay Sports Store
tickets - 25¢ or 5/$1.00

available from Outing Club members - draw to be held on November 28 in Leonard Cafeteria

MEMBERS - remember - you can win a $10.00 voucher for selling the most tickets. For more tickets phone: Rob Macintosh 544-7006 Rob Stevens 544-7069

Special offer

BOOKS, BOOKS -

LAROUSSE ILLUSTRATED INTERNATIONAL EN-Cyclopaedia and Dictionary

One volume reference book for the family. The perfect gift for every occasion: graduations, both college and high school - confirmations, birthdays, weddings and for Christmas giving.
Illustrated throughout in full-color with over 3,000 photographs, informative cut-away diagrams and detailed maps. It is divided into two parts. Part I, encyclopedia, Part 2 - dictionary, to make it easy to use for the student who is interested in encyclopedic topics or for the individual who wants to look up the meaning of a particular word. The two sections are separated by a list of all Nobel Prize Award winners in this century. 8 1/2" x 11" - 1,564 pages. Suggested retail price $19.95
Our price $13.00.

THE LONDON TIMES HISTORY OF OUR TIMES. Editor
Marcus Cunliffe.

Over 1,000 illustrations supplement this definitive work on the first twenty five years since the Axis surrender in 1945. 22 essays take a look at the 1945-70 period covering the insoluble problem of the have not world, the origin and nature of racial conflicts, problems that have accompanied the rapid rise of prosperity, the decline of old established religious beliefs and the emergence of new cults and ideologies, the history of the major powers and political blocks in the last twenty five years.
Large format 9" x 12" - 416 pages. Indexed. Publisher's price $20.00. Our price $13.00, two copies $21.00, three copies $27.00.

A SHORT HISTORY OF WESTERN CIVILIZATION by John B.
Harrison and Richard E. Sullivan. 2nd ed. 729 pages, index.
Original price $11.50, our price $5.00. Limited quantity!

Save $28.00!

THE HISTORY OF WORLD SCULPTURE by Germaine Biazin.
This excellent reference work combines the best of authorship with some of the best of book production available today. Over 1,000 full colour illustrations, 9 1/2" x 12 1/2" - $57.50. Our price $29.50.

ANTIQUE ARMS AND ARMOR by Frederick Wilkinson. $9.95
Our price $5.00.

COMPLETE GUIDE TO HUNTING ACROSS NORTH AMERICA by Bryon Oairymple. Discussions of weather and hunting techniques are included. $10.00. Our price $6.00.

THE FIREARMS DICTIONARY by R.A. Steindler. More than 1,800 English and foreign terms having to do with firearms, ammunition, accessories, and repair techniques. $9.50. Our price $4.00.

Save 50 percent!

COMPLETE BOOK OF RIFLES AND SHOTGUNS by Jack O'Connor. $8.00. Our price $4.00.

ETC., ETC., WRITE FOR OUR FULL LIST.

Order this titles also for your relatives and friends. We will ship directly to them. FOR PREPAID ORDERS WE WILL ASSUME ALL HANDLING AND POSTAGE
CHARGES. FOR A GIFT WE CAN ENCLOSE A PERSONALIZED CARD IF YOU WILL SEND IT TO US ALREADY INSCRIBED.

ACADEMIC BOOK CLUB
P. O. Box 1507, KINGSTON, Ontario K7L 5C7.

The Powers of the Mind

by Donna Watterud

Since the beginning of recorded history, man has been awed by and attracted to the weird, the spectacular, the unexplained. For man possesses an innate curiosity which compels him to search for answers to the unsolved, baffling phenomena he encounters. To date, an incredible number of mysteries of nature have been "unriddled" via methods involving considerable research, experimentation and deep thought. One recent scientific discovery has been an explanation as to how protons are held together in such close range in a nucleus, when according to the principle of electrostatics, they should repel each other. A new force! A nuclear force, now all nicely understood and well accepted in scientific circles, but which was a complete mystery not long ago. Postulates were made, but people were always skeptical, dubious, unwilling to let former learning give way and bend a little to accommodate new and unusual ideas. Perhaps some of the most fascinating and attention-grasping phenomena are those of the mind and its fantastic powers. There are few people indeed who have never encountered such experiences as "deja-vu" and recurring dreams of a bizarre nature.

Superstitions, stories of divination, clairvoyance, levitations, apparitions, possessions - all have been traced back to the most ancient times. Tales of unusual talent always shrouded in mystery related in whispers have long been popular and widespread. What then are these phenomena, what are their effects and how might they be explained?

First of all, we shall give "these phenomena" a name. They fall under the auspicious heading of "parapsychic phenomena" (formerly metaphysics) and the study thereof is parapsychology. This is gradually becoming accepted as one of the natural sciences, but it is distinguished from the other established sciences in its objects. For lack of a more precise definition, one might say that parapsychology encompasses the study of natural phenomena which cannot be explained using our present day knowledge of energy, as yet unknown to physics. But remember that nuclear force!

ESP and levitation

It is true that phenomena contradict the common sense approach taken by scientists but one must remember too that common sense changes with time. Objections arise out of seeming contradictions to natural laws. Hence in reading an article or book on parapsychology, it is important to keep an open mind - certainly not to accept the occurrence of the strange phenomena without batting an eyelash but to ponder the problems and contradictions raised and realize that somewhere there could (and should) be an explanation.

First of all, there are two basic aspects to this field. One must study the obtaining of information via extrasensory perception or ESP (the normal sensory routes are not used). The various forms of ESP are no doubt well known to most - clairvoyance (paragnosia), which involves extrasensory reception of information concerning objective correlatives of one's outer world; telepathy or mind-reading, which as the name suggests, involves the extrasensory reception of information about mental processes and subjective experiences of others (imagine the possibilities...!); and finally precognition or pre-cognition in which state it is supposedly possible to hurdle the time barrier to obtain information about future events. The second aspect of parapsychology has to do with causing effects in the outside world using other than the known and "established" forces and forms of energy. Such phenomena as levitation, materialization, production of sound and numerous others may be evoked through intense mental concentration. A diverse and challenging field of study indeed!

The single most important event in the history of parapsychology occurred in 18th century Europe. The Mesmerism movement was initiated by F.A. Mesmer (1733 - 1815) after he wrote a book dealing with what he termed "animal magnetism". Much to the disdain of many, his purposes lay more in developing a new healing practice - a theatrical and gaudy display of his powers. Those requiring healing were gathered in a dark room about a container of iron filings and magnets. Then holding each others' hands, they were bathed in magnetized tubs, while Mesmer in violet cloak, ceremoniously "magnetized" them by using stroking motions with magnets on their bare hands. Meanwhile, darkness and weird music combined to produce a peculiar and highly emotional atmosphere in which patients often became hysterical probably due to a primitive form of hypnosis.

Mesmer's magnetism

As a doctor, Mesmer considered he had found a great remedy, capable of curing all diseases. He maintained that there must be an animal magnetism, distinct from physical magnetism (a popular thought of the time was that there existed a magnetic fluid possibly possessing curative properties). Mesmer theorized that there is a "mutual influence between the celestial bodies, the earth and animate bodies". This influence supposedly acts via a universal fluid which filters into the nerve substance giving the body properties similar to those of a magnet. All that was required to invoke a cure, Mesmer insisted, was to direct this fluid in a specific manner along the nerves.

The interesting point however, is that this "magnetic sleep" (hypnotic state) has been proven to be an effective stimulant of parapsychic faculties. In this state of clairvoyance, a patient could often perceive the past and future very clearly. Mesmer paid little attention to such "side effects", so it was left up to M. de Puységur to discover ESP in magnetic sleep. He and other magnetists found that many patients fall into a sleep-like state (sommnambulism) in which condition they stopped reacting to their environment. In this state, they were able to describe their illnesses, along with those of others, and even recommend cures! They were also able to read the magnetizer's thoughts, find hidden objects and predict the future. One patient, it is reported, actually heard sounds with his stomach and saw objects with his fingertips.

Medical science eventually took an interest in magnetism but only with the goal of researching the state itself. The hypnotic state was recognized, but it was established that a "magnetic fluid" is unnecessary for the creation of the state. Thus it was that certain aspects of parapsychic phenomena were accepted into the scientific and psychology framework, and some of the occult trappings were shed, except by laymen in the circle of magnetism.

However, as is often the case, hypnosis and its studies fell out of the scientific world again only to be picked up again by charlatans and frauds out to make an easy living at fairs, thus indicating to many the fraudulence of the hypnotic phenomenon. It was revived in medical circles for a short while until around 1885. But the disdain for and reaction against the magnetizers was such that doctors had to eliminate any suspicion of the miraculous, and simply for the sake of their practices, did not wish to admit the existence of any paranormal features whatsoever of the hypnotic state.

The trance of a spiritualist medium may be considered as a particular form of the hypnotic state - one which is quite favourable for the occurrence of automatic reactions that are carried out in a state of depersonification (a state in which unconscious motor reactions take place) that is imposed by the power of suggestion. Thus the medium, in a trance, plays the suggested role of an incarnated spirit, and positively acts as the spirit. There have even been instances in which pictures were drawn or pieces of literature were written by the medium which were of definite artistry and were presented as works of the spirit. On coming out of the trance, the medium recalls nothing of the role just played.

True organized research into parapsychical phenomena and ESP in particular did not begin until 1882, the founding date of the Society for Psychical Research (S.P.R.) in London. There existed numerous assertions that some people had strange, spontaneous experiences (e.g. premonitions, deja-vu, dreams) which couldn't be accounted for but which seemed to illuminate, for these people, some aspect of the past or future, thus affording them information that would normally have been inaccessible to them. To date, the only (absurd) explanation offered had been the assumption of the spiritualists that they were called forth by spirits of the dead. The aims of the SPR may best be said in words of Henry Sedgewick, first president: "We must accumulate facts upon facts, add experiment to experiment, not argue with skeptics about the truth of such or such an isolated fact, but repose our conviction upon the proof which seems to result from the whole. We must place the incredulous in the following dilemma: either to admit that the phenomena are inexplicable, at least by them, or to accuse the investigators of lying, dishonesty, blindness or faulty memory, that is to say of intellectual and moral defects which are only compatible with complete imbecility."

The SPR began about collecting reports of apparent parapsychical phenomena which seemed to indicate positive existence of such phenomena. Stories were along the lines of this example. A Mr. K. felt obligated one day, for some unknown reason, to visit a cemetery at Greenwood, near New York. Neither he nor any member of this family had ever been there. The trip was long and hard, but he still felt he had to continue on. When Mr. K. arrived at the cemetery, there was his father, present at the funeral of a family member. The father had sent a letter to Mr. K. asking the latter to attend the funeral, but the letter never arrived - and yet Mr. K. arrived at the cemetery at precisely the specified hour!

Such reports were quite enlightening and many revealed a fair amount about psychic phenomena, but as Sedgewick had stated earlier, they had to be careful as to the origin of the reports (were they first-hand stories?), the amount of detail (were they too vague?), possibility of mere coincidence, reliability of the observer, and so on. A difficult, time-consuming and painstaking task to be sure. Nonetheless, the SPR made a great contribution to parapsychology. Many experiments were conducted which further convinced scientists of the existence of parapsychic phenomena.

From these it seemed reasonable, and simpler, to assume that a new perceptive ability existed which provided a new way of obtaining information otherwise inaccessible via normal sensory channels. It is safe also to assume that such an ability has as its source special forces within the medium's psyche. Knowledge of facts concerning inanimate objects may be gained telepathically, via the knowledge of some other person (in a seance, the medium may read the minds of those present). Reading of the mind was, at the time, considered as analogous to the transfer of news by radiotelegraphy. This theory has gained further support by the discovery via electroencephalography, of electrical processes in the brain's cortex.

Clairvoyant charlatan

The spiritualistic theory of psychic phenomena was more or less shattered by the coming forth of a number of people not related to spiritualism in any way and yet still displayed powers of ESP, in most cases, discovered spontaneously. Such people claimed fame as "clairvoyants", "fortune tellers" or were hypnotized before experiments were conducted. Of course, difficulties still remained as there existed the danger of professional clairvoyants trying to shun their ESP ability in the interest of their clients or merely for entertainment purposes. I'm sure we can all think of the odd case in point from television shows of the past couple of years.

Parapsychology is a relatively new branch of science and much of the territory is as yet virgin to scientific research. It is self-contained, with its own research methods, but with many points of contact with even some of the most remote branches of science. Actually, more research in this field is being performed by physicists, chemists, biologists and mathematicians, than by psychologists.

It is the hope and conviction of today's parapsychologists that their work will help solve not only those problems connected with psychic processes, but also problems to do with human personality, the meaning of human existence, and other similar questions. If indeed a fifth force is discovered or its existence somehow proven, work with parapsychic phenomena could conceivably help answer questions of a cosmological nature and even stretch into the realm of physics and assist in the resolution of some issues of modern physics. Ed. Note: This introductory article explaining the background and history of parapsychic phenomena will be followed up by a second article examining recent developments in research and experimentation in the field.

Christmas Shopping?
why not give you're favorite people a bit of yourself in a colour portrait from us?
Call Today.

18 market street, kingston, ontario, k7l1w8

THE MARKET STUDIO

bill milliken
photographer

telephone 542.5790 area code 613

we can deliver by Christmas any sitting taken before November 15

KELLY'S

STEREO MART

110 PRINCESS ST. KINGSTON 544-4014

MAMMOTH $250,000 STOCK REDUCTION SALE CONTINUES

We are over-stocked! Everything goes at ridiculous Prices! Everything in the store on sale:

MAIN FLOOR
Classical Sale
20% OFF
All Regular Stock

SECOND FLOOR
Climax Blues Band
Sugarloaf
Love Unlimited
Billy Preston
Waylon Jennings
Jerry Reed
.93¢ to 1.99

8 TRACK
CASSETTES
Regular 4.98 & up
$2 Off List

Tape Clearance
REEL-TO-REEL
1200 ft.
White Box 3.88

MEMOREX
Cassette & 8-track tapes
1/3 to 1/2 OFF
GREAT BUY
Sansui Headphones
24.88

WEA
JETHRO TULL - War Child - Reg. 7.29 - SALE 3.97
ROLLING STONES - It's Only Rock'n'Roll - Reg. 7.29 - SALE 3.97
NEIL DIAMOND - Serenade - Reg. 7.29 - SALE 3.97
CAROL KING - Wrap Around Joy - Reg. 7.29 - SALE 3.97
CAP
HAWKWIND - Hall Of The Mountain Wind - Regular 7.29 - SALE 3.97

COL
HERBIE HANCOCK - Thrust - Reg. 7.29 - SALE 3.97
THE WHO - ODOOS & SOOS - Reg. 7.29 - SALE 3.97
DOWNCHILD BLUES BAND - Reg. 7.29 - SALE 3.97

DEMONSTRATOR SALE

ONE ONLY!	Reg.	Sale
SHARP - 12" B & W Television	179.95	149.00
SHARP - 20" Color Television	649.95	539.00
SHARP - 20" Color Television	499.95	319.00
SONY - 17" Color Television	669.95	549.00

SPECIAL SALE

AKAI SPEAKERS - Demo's - 20% OFF

SANSUI AM/FM RECEIVERS

1000X - Regular 489.95 - SALE $369
2000X - Regular 559.95 - SALE $439
SEVEN - Regular 729.95 - SALE $599
SIX - Regular 639.95 - SALE $499

AKAI AA 910
AM/FM Receiver
Garrard 6-92 Turntable
Sentry 35 Speakers
List 1,133.90
Save 284.90 $849

ELECTRA
AM/FM Receiver
BSR Turntable
EDS 80 Speaker
List 294.85
Save 95.85 $199

AKAI AAS500 AMPLIFIER
AKAI AT550 AM-FM TUNER
Dual 1214 TURNTABLE
Ultimate 303 Speakers
List 1,629.75 - SALE....

$699

SANSUI 210 RECEIVER

Sure CARTRIDGE
Garrard Turntable
Ultimate 101 Speakers
List - 414.80
Save 81.80 $333

GCX 40 - CASSETTE

With built-in amplifier, 2 LSP101
Speakers.
List 499.95
Save 200.95 $299

unclassifieds

More on Page 4

TELL LAURA I LOVE HER Tell Laura I need her (and handsome tourmate and friends) tonight at the Big E. Anybody in Frec group II or 15 or Gael Group 86 and anyone else who doesn't understand this ad is advised to mediate on it for two weeks, then integrate it sideways. If it still isn't clear, Rip It Up. (You missed it by two weeks) or go see Kane, Sit-down or Mary Jane by tonight (or tonight at the highest place around.???)

EVERY PARTY HAS A POOPER — That's why we invited her, Paula Pooper! Paula Pooper! Gord the Turd, Mag the Bag, and Harriet say hard on you WALLFLOWER. Hard on you!

MUSICIANS NEEDED TO PERFORM AT THE ARTS FESTIVAL January 28 to February 1. Contact Pat (544-7872) David (549-6749) or Kathy (544-4540).

ATTENTION PHOTOGRAPHERS. SLIDE COMPETITION. Sponsored by Queen's Camera Club. Last date of entry Nov. 14. Slides to be judged by a panel of competent judges. Top 3 slides to be enlarged to 8 by 10 prints by cichrome (non-fading) process. Entry fee of $1.00 with a limit of 10 slides per person. Put slides with name and phone number on each slide in envelope along with entry fee and place in AMS office (special box) before Nov. 14, open to anyone connected with university.

SPORT STORE, worth $100, (first), $25 (second) and $10 (third) Tickets available from Duffing Club members for only 25c or 5 for $1.00. Draw will be on Nov. 28th. ARTS FESTIVALS INVITES YOUR PARTICIPATION in the fields of Art, Music, Photography, Film and Drama. Five days of the Arts: January 28th to Feb. 1st. FILM CONTEST: ARTS FESTIVAL 1974, $50, $25, $10 prizes. Make a movie (30 minutes maximum) and we will show it during Festival. Beth, 549-1033, Mike 544-7018. WOULD ALL THOSE INTERESTED IN EXAMING POLITICAL THOUGHT as manifested in modern literature and or the role of the artist in society, please give me a call at 544-0401. We were thinking about taking an international approach (examining 3rd World writers as well as Anglo-Saxon) and meeting once a weekend.

SUPER SOCIOLOGY SMOKER — Thursday, Nov. 7th, 7-12 pm. Lower Lounge International Centre. We encourage everyone (all years) to attend. The D.S.C. needs your support. Cheap (er) beer, music, talk, great times! HAPPY 20th BIRTHDAY ANNE! Now that you are officially over the hill, it's time to clean up your act. no more New York Cherries, scandalous trips to the States or "nude" or "real" men! LOVE from all of your friends, and us too: NELLIE, PEARL, SHIMMO, NAUGHTY DOTTIE AND JUDE. LOST AT CHILKOOT: One Sterling silver link bracelet. Call 542-5790 between 9:00 am and 5:00 pm and ask for Diana or 542-1164 after 5:30 pm. Reward offered. Great sentimental value.

ARTS FESTIVAL INVITES YOUR PARTICIPATION in the fields of Art, Music, Photography, Film and Drama. Five days of the Arts: January 28th to Feb. 1st.

OUTING CLUB SPORTS LOTTERY. Win cash vouchers for Findlay's Sport Store, worth $100 (first), $25 (second) and $10 (third). Tickets available from Duffing Club members for only 25 cents or 5 for $1.00. Draw will be on Nov. 28th.

HELP! I lost my PURSE between Fleming and Macintosh-Corry. It has all my I.D. (no money) and is brown suede. If found, please call at 546-4437. PLEASE.

LOST: A brand new black schaeffer fountain pen. It has a very broad nib and is filled with black ink. Please phone Kate at 544-2110 and name your reward, if you have found this treasured item.

2nd ENVELOPE LOST. Other Valuable Entities sought. Surely Happy Enclosed in Kingston South. Thanks for the passionate night Paul, Martin, Toots. We'll never forget your tenderness or mullins. Joe and M.

THANKS to those volunteers (John) who came to inform the Vic. girls about the Referendum. We appreciate your time and concern.

KATIE: HAPPY BIRTHDAY! Your first (legal) drink. Have a great day! Love, Chris and Allan.

FOR SALE. 10 K gold man's Queen's University ring. Ruby stone. Never worn. Please phone 544-6598 (new number).

NEW BRUNSWICK GIRL: Sandra? Sheila? Tim (who you met at the train station) forgot your name. Phone Scott Frederick at 544-7632. URGENT!!

EVERY PARTY HAS A POOPER — That's why we invited her, Paula Pooper! Paula Pooper! Gord the Turd, Mag the Bag, and Harriet say hard on you WALLFLOWER. Hard on you!

PARTY Everybody come...to the OTTAWA HOUSE tonight at 8 o'clock for DILLOO'S BIRTHDAY PARTY. Join the cream of the crop for the premiere social event of the year on the Queen's Campus. The Doctor will be in attendance for the reunion of GAELE GROUPS 1 to 100. You are to cancel all other engagements for the evening. Dial 542-2319 for information.

FREE KITTENS. 3 fluffy tri-coloured kittens; 7 weeks old and well trained. Call after 6 pm 544-0873. FOOTBALL GAELS. T-shirts are now in pick them up from Ed Deans in the Phys. Ed. Centre admin office-weekdays during office hours.

MANY THANKS TO OUR BROTHERS AND GUS for their innovative addition to the Humble Hallway of Trotter Two. It saved on T.P. this week. In due appreciation of the Horrendous deed done, we cordially invite all brothers to an evening of elbow bending with T.M. at the Manor Saturday, Nov. 9.

THIS IS IT! Sunday Nov. 10 the U.S. Government will confirm the existence of the U.F.O.'s and NBC will broadcast a special that night about U.F.O.'s.

COME TO THE LIBERAL—P.C. PUB. Place: Clark Hall, Time: 8:00 to 1:00 am. Oale: Wednesday Nov. 13. Refreshments: beer 45c or 5 for $2.00, pizza 35c. Free admission. See you there! (all political persuasions welcome).

QUESTION FOR WANTED: Will the wisdom of a geographer, a passionate, green-eyed, Italian male, succumb to various S.R. Type relationships desired by a budding psychologist? R.B. to O.A.F.

IN CONCERT: The Electric Hockeysticks featuring Tom, Mike, Dave, and Ian. Friday Nov. 15 in the penthouse of 227 Regent St. All friends, past and present, are invited to attend THE Bash of 1974.

THE CRAIG HOUSE BASH IS ON!!!. LOST: A Sears Osmatic Electronic Calculator, in Ellis Hall or on University Ave. Phone Brian at 549-4130.

COMMERCE GIRLS: I have three blazers left from last year's order. There are 2 size 14 and 1 size 16 remaining. Cost is $25 (including crest) if interested, call 544-4216 soon since they are going fast.

COMMERCE '77 SMOKER: All Commerce invited Nov. 12 to Clark Hall from 8 to 1 Beer $1 for $2.00. ONE GIRL NEEDED: to share apartment (three bedrooms) with two other girls. $42 per month on Alfred St. Students only. Phone 542-5515.

REWARD OFFERED FOR THE RETURN for information leading to the return of a full length, cream coloured, winter, leather coat with fur trimmed collar. Phone Duncan at 549-4623.

"I don't believe in no blood and veins theory. No sir! People are solid inside, like a potato." Dr. Whiplash

FOR SALE: Electro-voice Royal 1A's 6 in. woofer, 2 in. tweeter; Criterion 2A's 8 in. woofer, 2 in. tweeter. Both sets at half price! Perfect condition. Phone 544-4197.

COME TO THE OPENING OF THE KIMOSABI COFFEE HOUSE Featuring talk-singer CHRIS GEORGE and comedy team. Steve and the Impolents Thur. 5:30 Nov. 14 in Morris Hall (Lower South common room). Everyone welcome. Admission 75c. TO M.K. I think your "clap" is great. The rest of you isn't bad either. P.C.M. TO B.B.: Trust and try J.W.

We know it took a lot to get where you are today.
With us, you'll get the opportunity to get where you want tomorrow.

We're Northern Electric and we'd like to talk to engineering, finance and accounting graduates.

You may already know something about us—we're a large Canadian-owned telecommunications manufacturer. But as a prospective employer, we know you need to know a lot more about us. How big are we? What's our growth story? How do we treat people? How about salaries?

Soon we'll have Northern Electric people on campus who'll be able to answer all your questions in detail. But to help you decide if such a get-together would be advantageous, we will tell you this: we're big, over 27,000 employees in five countries; we're growing fast (in fact, we're one of the largest and fastest growing telecommunications manufacturers in the world!). Last year we opened or began work on nine new plants. We've just chalked up a half-year record sales and record profits. But, as booming as we are, we know we've just touched the surface. There's a whole world waiting for better means of communication.

So we need ambitious engineers who can be as creative with telecommunications technology as our sales people are with market development—and finance and accounting people whose expertise with money can match our scientists' talent for discovery.

Of course, our standards are high. But then, so are the financial rewards and career security for graduates who can help us achieve our goals. If what we can offer appears to match what you want, talk to your Campus Placement Officer—he'll arrange that we get together.

Northern Electric
COMPANY, LIMITED

Division of Concerts

Unity of old and new

by Hugh Agnew
Franzpete Goebels, West German Music Academy, demonstrated to a Grant Hall audience Tuesday evening not only his superior artistry at the keyboard, but also his equally great abilities as a teacher. Through his music and his impromptu introductions Goebels continually drove home his central point: the essential unity of all forms of music.

It is too often the case, Goebels believes, that we look at the history of music as an ascending progression, with each successive development inherently superior to the preceding one. This attitude is especially inadequate with the increasing interest in older music developing in the last century. How, then, can we reconcile the valid interest in past musical experience with the continuing development of the art? A proper perspective can be obtained, according to Goebels, by viewing music not as an ascending progression but as a horizontal continuity. The different forms which music takes in different eras represent the ways in which artists express and grapple with basic ideas common to us all. This attitude was well represented by Professor Goebels's programme, which began with Scarlatti, ended with Mozart and between consisted of works by 20th-century composers.

As well as the Scarlatti, the first half contained Goebels's homage to two of the great influences on him personally, Ferruccio Busoni and Arnold Schoenberg. Busoni represents a transition from the ideas of the previous century and a searching for a new and more effective way of expression in music. In this respect, Arnold Schoenberg succeeded Busoni both as a teacher of composition and as an innovative composer in his own right. The performance of these four works was excellent, although the audience was required to make an effort to listen due to the difficulty of the music. Especially good was the extremely demanding Schoenberg Suite op. 25, a serial composition which is given form only by Schoenberg's strict adherence to the traditional suite structure. At the beginning of the second half of the concert, the piano was "prepared" for a selection of Sonatas by John Cage. This was accomplished by the insertion of screws, bolts, and wedges of rubber between the strings inside the piano. The resulting different and surprising sound, at times very reminiscent of a Caribbean steel band, was well suited to the nature of the four little pieces by Cage, which were performed with as much grace and good humour as the composer intended. After these lighter works came two pieces by the French composer Olivier Messiaen. Here Goebels was able to communicate something of the intensity and power of which modern romanticism is capable, particularly in the flamboyant Le feu.

Classics

Music for free

A weekend of music, free of charge, is to be presented by the Music Department on Friday November 8, and Saturday November 9th. The two events are: a concert by the Vaghy String Quartet in Dunning Auditorium at 8:30 p.m. on the 8th, and a concert by Queen's Chamber Orchestra, (Director David Keane) and Queen's Chamber Singers (Director Rudolph Schnitzler) on the 9th at 8:30 in Grant Hall. Both concerts mark the occasion of the official opening of the new Music Building, Harrison-Le Caine Hall, which takes place on Saturday afternoon.

The Vaghy String Quartet will perform a program consisting of three Quartets: Haydn Quartet op. 77-no. 1; Quartet No. 2 by Karel Szymanowski; and String Quartet by Maurice Ravel. The first half of the joint program by the 27 member Queen's chamber Singers and 34 member Chamber Orchestra will consist of the Chamber Orchestra's performance of J.S. Bach's Orchestral Suite No. 3 in D major, Eric Satie's Gymnopédies Nos. 1 and 3 and Grieg's Suite: Aus Høllbergs Zeit, Op. 40. After intermission, Queen's Chamber Singers will sing Mozart's Vesperae solennes de

Professor Goebels's belief in the unity of music was probably shown best in the three short improvisations based on sections of familiar classics with which he ended the programme. Here his deep love of music, his great good humour, and his ability to poke gentle fun at even the new music he is dedicated to were especially apparent. Through his superior mastery of his instrument, his love of his subject, and his ability as a teacher, Professor Goebels was able to communicate twentieth-century music to an audience which past experience has shown to be less-than-congenial to it. That in itself is quite an achievement.

Kingston's most exciting gift shop and kitchen shop
68 Brock Street
Between King and Wellington

Come in and see the new line of
Pedigree and White Stag ski clothing.
Cross country packages from $70.00

★ 10% off to Queen's Students ★

cotton's
Sporthouse

399 PRINCESS STREET,
KINGSTON K7L 1B9
TELEPHONE 544-1066

Unwanted hair removed from any part of the body

All work done by skilled and well-trained graduate electrologists. Done with guaranteed artistic perfection.

Graduate Electrolysis Salon
183 Princess St.
544-6905

The Handmaids
Princess Street, Kingston, Ontario

Exclusively handmade
gifts, clothing, accessories

349 Princess Street
542-8021

the MARKET
BARBER SHOP
& hairstyling salon

Peter Smits invites you
to his new hair care shop
549-2110

43 BROCK ST., KINGSTON ONT.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT
SUNDAY 10 AM TO 8 PM

BONUCCHI
PIZZERIA

SPECIAL OFFER
Order 5 identical pizzas save the coupons and pick up your 6th pizza

FREE!!

Offer expires November 30

The reality of the unexpected

by Kerry White
Truffaut's Shoot the Pianist is one of the most entertaining films I have seen by this director. Perhaps entertaining is too trivial a term, for while the film contains a great deal of "entertainment" in the conventional sense, in the form of farce and slap-stick comedy, it is the unexpected juxtaposition of this humour with more tragic elements that gives the film its impact.

This strong sense of the unexpected is due mainly to the diversity of characters in the film, and Truffaut's attempt to create in us a sympathy for each of them. The film is both a gangster story and a love story, and yet its meaning goes much deeper than either of these; its impact is due to the combination of the two. The plot is simple: there are four brothers; Chico, who is being hunted by petty gangsters, comes for help to Charlie, who is a piano player in a fourth-rate bar in Paris. Eventually both brothers are forced to flee to their parents' home in the country, where they meet a third brother. The gangster plot is never resolved; the movie ends in a comic shoot-out and chase.

This plot is only the frame for our introduction to Charlie, the main character, and yet each minor character contained in it is fully humanized. A classic scene is the one in which two childish gangsters try to impress a child they have kidnapped: one lists his unlikely possessions; ("air-conditioned Cairo Shoes") the other tries to convince the boy that his silk scarf is made, not of silk, but of "metal...soft Japanese metal". When the boy refuses to believe him he swears "May my mother drop dead if I lie", and we catch a glimpse of a fiftyish woman in a long dress, army boots, clutching her breast and keeling over in a true Vaudeville style. All minor characters are portrayed in equal depth, this giving the film its humanity and the unexpectedness which must be a part of any realistic vision of humanity.

Charlie is the tragic figure who embodies the main themes of the film: loss and loneliness. Charlie, although he is implicated in the gangster plot, is not emotionally involved in it. He is alienated from all that goes on around him. He is hiding; hiding from a past which includes a wife who committed suicide because she thought she was not good enough to be the wife of such an artist; hiding from a present which includes an attractive young woman very much in love with him. He is gentle, but ineffectual, as most of Truffaut's male figures; his lack of reassurance causes his wife's suicide, and his lack of encouragement almost drives Leda away from him. The love of these women almost succeeds in pulling him out of himself, but the film ends with his tragic loss of Leda, and another retreat into self - a return to his place of hiding; the bar.

The film is about loss and loneliness, and yet it is not depressing. The moments of comedy, and the moving depictions of the transient joys of first loving combine with a strong feeling of tragedy to produce a warm and totally believable image of Charlie, and of this world.

Show Her The Way You Feel

with a Petite Diamond Ring
from

Brock Jewellers

Love diamond ring
Set in 10k yellow
gold

$42.00

BROCK
JEWELLERS
161 Princess St.

book review

The Honourary Consul
Graham Greene
Penguin Books

by Leslie Hopkins
The latest novel of Graham Greene The Honourary Consul is the sort of book one likes to read undisturbed, curled up in a comfortable armchair. Greene has always been very readable and this tale of a bungled political kidnapping in South America is no exception. The easily rambling narrative of the opening chapters becomes taut and tense as Greene examines the emotional and political repercussions of the mistaken abduction of the British Honourary Consul to a small province in Argentina: repercussions on his wife Clara, on his acquaintances, particularly Dr. Eduardo Plarr, Clara's lover, on the callous Home Office and on the would-be revolutionaries who have kidnapped him.

The characters, in the small dingy city in Northern Argentina where the novel is set, are drawn with humour and sympathy. Dr. Eduardo Plarr, the hero of the novel feels, "the sense of something lost and nearly forgotten" when he walks the side of the river that curves down to Buenos Aires. Yet he never finds or even remembers to ask himself what he really wants in his colourless existence of visiting patients, having affairs with the occasional one, and taking out his once beautiful mother for cream cakes and tea. The Honourary Consul, Charley Fortnum, sixty-one years old, living on a steady diet of whiskey, who shows pictures of his tractor "Fortnum's Pride" because he has none of his family, is a picture of bathos and pathos. His wife Clara, an ex-prostitute from the house of the jovial Senora Sanchez, has been taught to show only emotions that men desire of her and she is inscrutable with or without the large gaudy sunglasses she buys at Gruber's Camera store.

The "sense of something lost and nearly forgotten" that Doctor Plarr feels, represents in a sense the major theme of the novel as well as Greene's quest in his other works. What has been lost and nearly forgotten is the significance of the human act, and even the question of the significance of the human act - the meaning and nature of man within the world but especially his relationship with God. In a time when we choose religious beliefs the way we shop for snack foods, taking the one we fancy at a particular time if the price is right, it is refreshing to read someone who has formulated over a number of years a thoughtful position which he can succinctly and clearly describe. We can certainly forgive Greene for slowing down the novel's denouement and slightly stretching his character's credibility to listen to what he has to say through them.

Many thanks to Smith-Hill bookstore, 193 Princess St., for their generous donation of this book for review.

BOOKS

Mario's Pizzorio and Spaghetti House
Pizza · Spaghetti · Lasagna · Ravioli
637 Princess Free delivery 549-4222

Bite the one you love
STEAK & STUFF
LICENCED DINING ROOM 1399 Princess (near the station)
AUNT LUCY'S RESTAURANTS

Leopold's sporting goods
40 Princess Street
Kingston, Ontario
K7L 1A4
Tel: 613-584-2392

Woods Down Insulated
Hiking or Skiing Boots - $53.96
Vasque Hiking Boots - $39.95
Mini Rucksacks - $3.95
With Student Card

Queen's Pub

November 12
8:00 to closing

official christening of
the new stereo

Come to the only pub
on campus with a built-in stereo

first 300 people in receive a liquor voucher for one tequila

SR
Famous Brand
Names at Discount Prices

Howick GWG
North Star Baby Jane
Landlubber Apple Bee

and many more

Foot of Princess at Ontario

It was the hard work and enthusiasm of the players as pictured here that landed them in the finals to be held on Saturday at West Campus.

Rugby team in OUAA finals

This weekend the Queen's rugby club hosts the OUAA finals at Richardson Stadium.

The senior team emerged from their league season with a near perfect record of eight wins and one loss which placed them top of the interlocking East-West division. This means the Rugby Gaels host the playoff final between the top two teams.

The opposition comes in the form of the Guelph University Gryphons whom the Gaels beat 30-3 in regular season play. A closer game could be on the cards this time however, since at the last meeting of the two teams Guelph had played a hard, physical game the previous day and at least two of their better players were missing due to injury.

Despite these considerations coach Gavin Reid and team captain Alan Frizell remain confident. Reid explains, "we are by far the fittest and most skillful team in the league and if we can play the fast and open game which has been our hallmark throughout the season we should come out on top".

For several key players, such as Ross Stuart, Mike Dyer, Jim Barnett and Peter Kohh, this could be their last chance to clinch an OUAA title so they, like the other members of the team, will be eager and ready for the championship clash.

Though the experience of Campbell and Thomas, who are injured, will be sorely missed, the Gaels welcome back, after a period of injury, Ritch Evensen and Peter Kohh to the first team lineup. Although on past form the Queen's team must be firm favourites everything depends on this final game.

A bonus to the Rugby club's season is provided by the fact that the second XV have advanced to the final of the second team championship. Under the inspiration of their captain Ron Eastale they have also achieved an almost perfect league record with only one loss. In their final they meet McMaster University second XV whom they beat by 21-0 in regular league play. It is, therefore, quite possible that Queen's could pull off a rugby championship double.

The rugby bonanza on Saturday will kick off with an intercollegiate seven-a-side tournament, in which Queen's will enter a team, starting at 10 am. The second team final will commence in Richardson Stadium at 12:30 with the OUAA championship final taking place at 2 pm. Admission to all games is free.

Bews News

Volleyball

The first two teams in each division qualify for the quarter-finals. However in Group III and IV a playoff must be played to determine who will qualify in their respective divisions. Playoff schedules will be posted in Locker Room and playoff results will be printed in the next issue.

	Won	Lost	Defaults	Points
Group I
P.H.E.	6	0	0	12
Comm '78	4	4	0	8
Law '77	3	4	0	6
Meds	1	6	0	2
Group II
Arts '77	6	0	0	12
Mechanical	4	2	0	6
Comm '75	2	2	1	4
Law '76	0	6	0	0
Group III
Winning	6	2	0	12
Bus Grads	5	4	0	10
Comm '77	5	4	0	10
Law '75	2	6	0	4
Group IV
Comm '76	6	3	0	12
Arts '76	4	5	0	8
Chemical	4	5	0	8
Civil-Math	4	5	0	8

Flag Football

Season has come to an end and playoffs have been calculated. In one-quarter final play (sudden death) Arts 77 defeated Law 77, 9-0; Arts 76 downed Chemical 12-7; Comm 75 bombed Mechanical 25-0 and Arts 75 beat Bus Grads 13-7 in a game where a protest was lodged by the Bus Grads but was denied by the Protest Committee.

All these games were played in wet, muddy conditions, where one mistake cost you the game, example of this was evident in poor passing conditions, wet balls and numerous fumbles. Congratulations go to the officials who did an excellent job in keeping tempers down and the games under control. Semi-final games were postponed Tuesday night and rescheduled for Wednesday night. At press time results were not available. All results with final standing to be reported in next weeks issue.

Softball

In Bews Softball Arts '76 downed Comm 77 4-2, Meds outbatted Law 77; Meds walloped Comm 75 9-4 Wed. Oct. 30. On Monday night, Comm 75 was able to rebound from last weeks loss to beat Meds 2-1; PHE went by Comm 75 4-1 and Mechanical outlasted Bus Grads 4-3. Tuesday, Chemical blasted Law 77 for 12 runs beating them 12-1 and Arts continued on its winning streak by defeating Law 76 8-3.

WIC - ly News

by Barbara McDermott

CO - ED Skating Dance will be held Wed. Nov. 13 between 7 and 8:20 pm. There will be music to skate by - lots of Beach Boys and early Beatles. Refreshments will be on sale in the lobby. So bring a guy and come to the skating party.

The Swim Night to be held on Thurs. Nov. 14, 6 to 7:30 will feature a Synchro Clinic. The Synchro team will be there to demonstrate and teach.

Correction to the WIC Calendar: Co-ed Bowling will be held from 3 to 5:45 on Sunday Nov. 17. If you need transportation to the Brock Bowl meet at the Phys Ed Center at 2:45. Shoes will be supplied. Co-ed Volleyball is on Thursday nights from 7 to 9:15 pm. Check bulletin boards in the PEC for team listings and schedules. All WIC Athletic Stick positions have now been filled. Rep for Meds is Barb Werry 548-8646. Do your body a favour - participate with WIC!

Nominations for the Position of RECTOR are Now Open

Nominations should be submitted to the A.M.S. Office by 5:00 p.m., Thursday November 14, and must be signed by 200 members of the A.M.S.

Applications
Will Now be Taken for

A.M.S. Internal Affairs Commissioner

until 5:00 p.m.,
Friday, November 8

PLEASE SUBMIT ALL APPLICATIONS TO THE A.M.S. OFFICE IN THE BASEMENT OF THE STUDENTS' UNION.

Hockey Gaels: new look and attitude

by Peter Watts

The only sure thing about the Queen's hockey Gaels at this point is that you will need a program to discover who some of the bodies are. That became evident with the tricolour's opening game of the exhibition schedule last weekend against Bishop's University Gaitors. The Gaels won it by 6-3 and followed it up the next night with a 5-5 tie against Napanee Comets of the OHA senior A league.

While a good number of the faces on this year's squad are new to Queen's they are not new to intercollegiate hockey. Clyde Harris is back after sitting out for a season and this will give the Gaels some steady goaltending. Steve Kidd, who spent most of last year as backup to Dave Dungey, will act in the same role as the durable Harris this year. Dungey did not return to school this fall.

Perhaps the biggest changes have occurred on defense. Steve Gross, Chris Clark, Peter Berkeley and Rick Leroy will be familiar names to tricolour supporters, although Leroy at this moment has a bad knee and probably will not be available until after Christmas. New faces include Ron Swan from Loyola and Dave McDowall, from the University of Toronto. McDowall is being looked to, to provide some of the team leadership that was lacking on the 73-74 edition of the Gaels.

Up front there are some new faces as well. Frank Coffey, who played most of last year on defense, will see action at left wing this year. Queen's has derived some benefit from the collapse of the Carleton hockey program; these benefits being reflected in the persons of Dave Smith and Ted Grant, both right wingers. Since this position caused some problems last year, the addition of two big wingers with an ability to score has to be one of the pluses this year. Other newcomers include John McDonald, Earl Moulton, and Doug McKay who will likely see some action on defense. The returning forwards are led by Ron Shepherd, Bill White and John Cerre and these three will have to have productive seasons if the Gaels are to challenge traditionally strong Toronto and York squads for top honours in the east division of the OUAA.

Speaking of the OUAA, the league will open (at least for the Gaels) next Saturday, Nov. 16th when the Tricolour will host Brock at the Harty Arena. The last time we were blessed with a visit by the Badgers the Gaels won the game 13-0. That was two years ago though so let's not rack up two points just yet. It is likely that Brock will not be too strong. They are one of 4 teams from the west division that the Gaels will meet this year. The others are Western, Windsor and Guelph. The Guelph game is a road trip; the others are all home games. In addition the Gaels will meet each of the other five teams twice: once at home and once away. That adds up to a fourteen game schedule, not including exhibitions and tournaments.

Two more exhibition games are scheduled for this weekend. Tonight, the Gaels are in Lennoxville for a return encounter with Bishops. Tomorrow afternoon they'll meet a strong team from Loyola in a 2 p.m. game in Montreal. The Warriors are traditionally one of the stronger teams from the Quebec encounter; they have already beaten Toronto by 5-1 in an earlier encounter this year.

Later this season the Gaels will be involved in a tournament in Ottawa which will include Loyola, Ottawa and Sir George Williams Universities. The tournament will be held in Ottawa on January 3rd and 4th. Keep it in mind, particularly if you are from the Ottawa area and will still be home that weekend.

Queen's Radio, CFRC will be carrying some of the hockey Gaels games this year. The first one will be the Brock-Queen's encounter on Nov. 16th. We hope that a good number of supporters will be out to cheer on the team this year. But if you can't, you can follow the action on CFRC

Field hockey teams winless

Last Sunday afternoon the Queen's men's field hockey team took on the Outaouais FHC, this year's champions of the Eastern Ontario - Quebec league.

Queen's firsts opened the scoring early in the game on a goal by Tom Naugler, that was a result of some hard work in front of the Outaouais net. Until half time, it was all Queen's game with the forward passing the ball around the defense very well, only to be frustrated on a number of occasions by the opposing goalie. A second goal by Peter Boxall of a short corner gave Queen's a 2-0 lead, which was reduced to 2-1 by half-time. In the final half the Outaouais club came on strong, many times running right through the Queen's defense. Unfortunately, with 30 seconds left in the game, Outaouais was awarded a short corner from which they tallied, robbing Queen's of a victory, leaving the score to 2-2. The game saw strong stickhandling on the part of Singh Assar, who also led the forward line in their effective passing game. On defence, Rob Reynolds and Bruce Armstrong played steady games.

The second Queen's team, composed mainly of newcomers to the game, also had the opportunity of playing the Outaouais team. Although they lost 4-0, they showed a lot of determination and skill. Of particular mention were the performances of Chris Scilley in goal, who saved what seemed to be definite goals, and of Peter Keyser at center forward.

Last weekend the Waterpolo Gaels travelled to Hamilton to participate in the annual University Challenge Cup hosted by McMaster. This high caliber competition, which lasted from Friday evening to Sunday evening, included Canadian schools from as far away as Simon Fraser. The Gaels strong team performance finished a somewhat disappointing fourth spot, losing out to SFU 6-5 in a very close and exciting game. The tournament was won, as expected, by the powerful McMaster squad (an indication of Mac's power is that six of the seven first string players are members of the national team).

For Queen's the overall top scorers were Mike Fox, with 10 goals, Chris Whately and Paul Nolan with 8 each, along with strong netminding by Dave Kay. Queen's was a team to be reckoned with by all opponents. An exceptionally strong performance was turned in by rookie Craig Render.

Coach Somon Bieler was satisfied with the Gaels performance saying "the guys learn a lot from exhibition play like this, it is the best possible practise".

The Gaels are currently in second place in the first five games. This weekend they are off to the Ottawa for an OUAA tournament hosted by U of O.

STEVE AMEY'S

Lakeview Manor

PLAYING THIS WEEK IN THE CENTENNIAL ROOM

Hourglass

28 Yonge St., Kingston

- GREB-KODIAK BOOTS -

Waterproof, Insulated, Plain or Steel Toe.

Sizes 4 to 13

Always Your Size in Stock at the Best Price

LARRY'S

Men's Wear at
354 King St., East

Just 3 Doors from Princess St.

Second in a continuing series of
A.M.S. OPEN FORUMS

Open Forum on the

OFS REFERENDUM

Do you know what you're voting for on Wednesday?

Come and find out the pros and cons for staying in OFS.

Tuesday, Nov. 12 7:30 P.M.
Lower Vic Common Room

Anyone particularly interested in speaking against OFS, Please leave name in Education Commissioner's mailbox

TWOALLBEEFPATT
IESSPECIALSAUCE
LETTUCECHEESES
ESAMESEEOBUN.

277 Bath Rd.
Kingston

Canada pledges to help foodless nations

ROME - External Affairs Minister MacEachen announced at the World Food Conference that Canada will double current food grain aid to one million tons a year, over the next three years. Canada has also pledged $45 million a year for other foods such as dried milk and $50 million to assist agricultural production within the starving countries. Canada's commitment is the first specific pledge to help cure world food problems at the world conference. The one million tons of Canadian grain to be supplied yearly is only 10 per cent of the 10 million tons that the organizers of the UN sponsored conference have recommended be given as food grain aid.

MacEachen stated that the 10 million tons "is a minimum target and we are facing a situation of extraordinary gravity." MacEachen feels that all rich countries and traditional food donors have an obligation to maintain and expand food aid while emergency conditions exist. Kissinger's proposals, given in the opening speech of the conference, called for the establishment of international groups to strengthen agricultural efforts and investments and to coordinate efforts by food exporters to raise production. Kissinger stated that the oil-producing nations have a special responsibility in regard to his proposals. "Many of them have incomes far in excess of their needs for economic development. They should increase both their support for food aid and for agricultural development in the third world."

Kissinger's approach and proposals were received with mixed reactions from various corners. The most frequent criticism reported was that his "five-point plan" involved too much in the way of bureaucratic structures and not enough concrete programmes. His plan proposes the development of three new international agencies.

Sugar up, sweetness down

TORONTO - Sugar prices increase almost daily in Toronto and Montreal due to the world shortage of sugar. The prices began to soar on Monday following an order placed by the Soviet Union for 500,000 tons of sugar to bolster its own production. This tightened an already bad situation which has been caused by poor sugar beet crops. In Toronto a five pound bag of sugar is selling for $3.23. Less than a month ago the same quantity sold for $2.67 and last year it was only $1.76.

The sugar industry in Ontario ran into problems in 1968 due to a surplus of world sugar. Neither the provincial or federal government would give the industry financial support at the time. The industry thus died when the British owners of Canada and Dominion Sugar closed their refinery. Most of the 700 sugar beet growers turned to other crops as a consequence.

William Stewart, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, has suggested that a sugar industry be re-established but not until the federal government develops a national policy backing the sugar industry. Stewart is concerned that although current sugar prices are high if they fell the same farmers would be left in a similar situation to 1968. They would lose the money invested in equipment and manufacturing plants.

briefly..

TORONTO - Statistics Canada has prepared figures on the number of foreign controlled firms in Toronto for the year 1970. As of yet these figures are not published. Of 5,684 manufacturing plants in Toronto 914 are controlled by foreigners - 752 of these are U.S. owned plants. The 914 plants captured 60.6 per cent of all manufacturing dollars in Metro Toronto. The 4,770 Canadian owned firms collected only 39.4 of the revenue.

The Toronto City Council, in view of the new statistics, has instructed the City Planning Board to study the issue of foreign ownership further. The aim of the study - to develop a nationalist industrial policy for the municipality.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - A Jordanian sky marshal and other unidentified gunmen hijacked a Jordanian airliner on Wednesday and diverted it to Libya. The sky marshal is usually responsible for averting such airline seizures. The men landed the plane in Benghazi and parked it on an isolated section of the runway. Aboard were eight passengers; six Jordanians and two Italians. The Iraqi news agency reported that the hijackers are seeking asylum in Libya.

TAIPEI (UPI) - Nationalist Chinese Intelligence officials have reported that Chairman Mao Tse-Tung, 81 has spent two months in seclusion plotting to install his wife, Chiang Ching-ku, as his successor. Mao plans they stated, to purge the government of a number of key officials in order to make way for his wife. The officials said their report was substantiated by the patterns of Mao's past purges. Mao's purges seem to have a habit of being preceded by long absences from Peking, where his rivals are entrenched. The intelligence sources did not know when such purges would occur.

SYDNEY, Australia - A team of New South Wales cabinet ministers and senior public servants has flown to Toronto to learn how the government of Ontario deals with the federal government in Ottawa. Their aim is to learn ways to fight what they see as the centralist policies of the Australian government in Canberra.

TEL AVIV - The Arab alignment with the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO)

BORDEAUX - The French government has demanded 90 million francs ($19 million) from 18 wine leaders accused of mixing cheap wine with quality Bordeaux reds. The money is for the feared damage done to the French wine industry. The defendants supposedly doctored or mislabelled almost 900,000 gallons of wine to boost profits.

The state's demand followed similar request by various sectors of the wine industry for more than $850,000 in damages. They were claiming the culprits may have caused a loss of prestige all over the world.

BELFAST (AP) - Twenty Irish Republican Army men tunneled their way out of the Maze prison. The first feat of its kind at the Maze. The camp is built on a wartime air force base. Much of the area is covered with thick concrete and tar and has sound detectors sunk into, making tunnel escapes rather risky and prone to detection.

One escapee was shot, 16 captured when they were making their get-away, and three are still at large. When the British troops moved into the prison to capture the tunnel escapees another riot broke out on the compound. A mob of Catholic detainees started rioting and attempted to rush the main gate.

PRICELESS... WITHIN REASON

Precious diamonds do not have to cost a fortune. We can help you to select a fine diamond that you can afford. Regardless of your financial status, we can offer a superb diamond that will thrill you... and never leave you flat.

KINNEAR d'ESTERRE

JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

back page

Second Annual Brockington Week Mothematics Competition

Papers available from any Warden on Leonard Field or at the Dean at Women's Office

Papers due on Thursday
November 14 at 12 pm.

VANDERMEERS MEAT MARKET

Custom Cut Meats
Freezer Orders
Groceries
171
WELLINGTON ST.
542-1134

OFS referendum tomorrow - pages 5, 6, 7,

Queen's

Journal

Volume 102, Number 19

Tuesday, November 12, 1974

As trumpets blast

Watts installed as 15th principal

by Nancy Flood

With a flourish of trumpets giving way to thundering applause and a standing ovation, Ronald Lammman Watts was declared "duly installed as principal and vice-chancellor of Queen's University" at the installation ceremonies on Friday, November 8.

An atmosphere of respect for the traditions of academia and of formality pervaded Grant Hall throughout the ceremony. Initiated by appropriate music played on the new casavantes organ prior to the ceremony, it prevailed as a piper heralded the arrival of the long but colorful academic procession. Robed members of Queen's faculty, staff and student body, representatives of sister universities as well as the Chancellor and other officials, Principal elect Watts and the recipients of honorary degrees entered and filled half the hall.

The atmosphere relaxed somewhat due to Chancellor Michener's skillful and congenial handling of the proceedings. Thus, an unscheduled Oil Thigh, slightly restrained by the presence of so many robes, Ph.D.'s and assorted important persons but still an Oil Thigh, saluted Principal Watts after his investiture.

Following his reception of the robes of office from Dr. W.F. Connell, senior member of faculty and Tony Wolman, President of the A.M.S., Watts delivered a somewhat lengthy but cogent Installation Address. In it he outlined the difficulties faced by a Principal, the reasons why he had accepted the position and his own feelings on the nature and purpose of university.

"Universities should not expect to be or be expected to be all things to all people. There is a particular role Universities must be seen simply for what they are: places devoted to the preservation and advancement of knowledge. It follows that higher education geared solely to technical, or utilitarian goals and designed to shuttle students through rigid systems intended to process masses of students, will fail. Higher education is not credit courses, a streamlined curriculum, prescribed textbooks, examinations, and a series of grades. Higher education will achieve its purpose only if it inspires the imagination and stimulates the creative and critical intelligence, and to do this it must be highly personal."

The Principal then proceeded to elucidate his feelings on the role of the university in society. Directing several comments to the Honourable James Auld, Ontario Minister of Colleges and Universities, who was present, he spoke about the relationship between universities and governments. "In the end, if such devices merely keep at an arm's length universities, oblivious to their responsibilities to society, and governments hostile to the spirit of free learning, they will fail in their task. Above all, what is required is a genuine partnership of spirit between governments and universities. We must work together in a spirit of cooperation in which each will respect the integrity of the other..." I believe it is time for we in the universities to speak out and to warn society that its declining support is now seriously threatening our ability to provide the sort of education I have spoken of."

Following official greetings from Mr. Auld, the presentation of honorary Doctor of Laws degrees ensued. Retiring Principal John J. Deutsch was greeted with a standing ovation as he stepped forward to receive his degree.

John R. Evans, "distinguished physician, teacher and medical scientist... builder and innovator of the newest medical school and health science center in Ontario (at McMaster) and... ninth president of the University of Toronto" received the next honorary degree. He was followed by Alfred B. Hodgetts, "teacher, sportsman, writer and

See WATTS, Page 3

Ontario council suggests 16.8% increase in BIU

TORONTO (CUP) - The Council of Ontario Universities (COU) has called for a 16.8 per cent increase in the value of the Basic Income Unit (BIU).

In a statement the council which is a policy and regulatory body of all Ontario universities, called for an increase in the value of the BIU to $2,283 from $1,955.

The BIU is a figure by which the Ontario government subsidizes every student enrolled at university in the province. Thus, a substantial increase in the value of the BIU would mean a substantial increase in funding for academic programs.

The statement cites inflation as the major cause of the need for an increase, and also argues that "universities are losing ground. Their portion of provincial budgetary expenditure has been decreasing for the last two years."

The brief also supports demands for salary increases for university faculty, arguing they are unable to compete with similar posts in the civil service and that salary levels have not kept pace with inflation.

COU calls for lift of freeze on financing

TORONTO (CUP) - The provincial government freeze on capital financing must be lifted, according to the Council of Ontario Universities.

In a brief this month to the Ontario Council on University Affairs, the new liaison body between government and universities, the COU argues there is an immediate need to renew capital funds "so that the institutions can meet their most urgent priorities, whether these be adaption, renewal or addition of facilities."

The freeze - which curbs universities from undergoing physical expansion - was instituted in November, 1972 by colleges and universities minister Jack McNeil to call a halt to mushrooming university grants.

The present minister James

Auld, has given no indication that the freeze will be lifted.

The brief acknowledges that "funds have been made available for committed projects, emergency or extremely urgent alteration or renovating projects and recently for some new projects," but insists that "these funds have been less than adequate to meet the need and become available by a process which makes it very difficult to plan ahead in a rational way."

The brief also warns that "the implications of continuing the current freeze on capital are clearly a system which cannot correct for even current imbalances and a system in which some elements are in danger of deterioration because individual institutions lack the funds to pay for major renovations or replacements."

wat's hapnin'?

Tuesday, November 12

7 pm - Queen's NDP will meet in the Senior Students Common Room No. C115 McArthur College. There will be a screening of the feature film The Inheritance—the history of the North American Labour Movement in story and song.

7:30 pm - Queen's Musical Orchestra auditions for the production Gypsy. Please meet in the lobby of the music building.

7:30 pm - Queen's University Amateur Radio Club meeting in room 454 Goodwin Hall. All members and interested persons please attend.

7:30 pm - Queen's Bridge Club meeting in the McLaughlin Room of the Student Union. Everyone welcome, regardless of ability. Phone Pieter at 544-7509 for information.

8:00 pm - Queen's Debating Union presents the Cambridge Union Film "Resolved that the American Dream is at the Expense of the Negro"—a debate between author James Baldwin and a British MP. All welcome and admission is free. In Strling D.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies presents Love Affair, or the Cave of the Missing Switchboard Operator directed by Dusan Makavejev and starring Eva Ras and Ruzica Sokic. In Ellis Auditorium and admission is $1.00.

Wednesday, November 13

Sutherland. In Dunning Hall and admission is $1.00.

8:00 pm - Camera Club lecture meeting is to be held in the International Centre Lower Lounge. Subject is mounting and touching of prints. Lecture will be given by our own Doug Bates. You may bring your own prints to be mounted. See you there.

8:00 pm - The Future of Inflation will be topic of a lecture given by George Waskett, economist. This public meeting is sponsored by the Kingston Waffle and will be held in room D207 Macintosh-Corry. For further information call P. McGrath at 546-5223 after 5 pm.

8:00 pm - Opening of the KIMOSABI Coffee House featuring Chris George and Jim Gillis plus Jay Kassirer and Comedy team Steve and the Impotents at Morris Hall south common room - lower. Admission is 75 cents. All welcome.

8:30 pm - Queen's Department of Drama presents Night of the Iguana by Tennessee Williams in Convocation Hall. Tickets and information are available at the drama desk 547-4291. The play will also be held on Friday and Saturday nights.

9:00 pm - CPRC presents Music Around the World: Folk songs and ethnic music from many lands. Slide Competition - open to anyone affiliated with the university is being sponsored by the Queen's Camera Club. Deadline for entries is Thursday. $1.00 per slide with a limit of 10 slides. Slides should be placed in an envelope the fee and put in the box provided in offices (downstairs in the Union). Each slide indicate name of entrant and phone ides will be judged on the Thursday panel of three competent judges. The slides will be enlarged to 8x10 color cibachrome (non-fading) process.

nd Theatres

'Innegan's - Liam McGuire
Tuldoon's - Moonshiners
- Nobody Special
he - Shanty Two

ie Odessa File
port 75
Disney Double Feature - World's Athlete; Snowball Express
Jptown Saturday Night

Ed. Centre

ming pool at Queen's will be closed her university requirements on 6:10 to 12 pm and 4:30 to 6:00 pm.
a at Queen's will be closed on 6:30 to 5:20 pm and November 16
pm

ing Events

ember 15 - Department of Political siting speaker is Professor Donald Schniversity of Toronto. "Soviet Adve Theory". Room 517 Watson Hall.
November 16 - 12 noon - Donald Gow
Lecture in Wallace Hall. Speaker: Dr.
mauld, Chairman Economic Council of opic: Social Indicators. Panel: Dr. J. J. tail Stewart, Scott Campbell. Luncheon ilable from the Alumni office at price r person.

ember 16 Classics Department party
Vic Games Room at 8:30 pm.

ember 17 - Bruce Cockburn in Grant
d 10 pm. Tickets available in the John 10:30 am to 4:30 pm - $3.00 with student

Bite the one you love

STEAK & STUFF

LICENCED DINING ROOM 1399 Princess (near the station)

AUNT LUCY'S RESTAURANTS

AMEY'S
TAXI
546-1111

History D.S.C. Lecture Series:

Senator Eugene Forsey

distinguished constitutional and labour historian, will speak on Quebec's "Bill 22," the controversial language legislation.

Friday, November 15
Lower Lounge, Victoria Hall

2:30 pm Admission free

VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S

VAN'S GIFTS and BOOKS LTD.
282 Princess St.
KINGSTON 542-6676

GENUINE CHRISTMAS SPECIALS

A.M. Solid State A.C. Digital Clock and Radio
Regular $39.95 at Van's $13.95 while quantities last 18" Blacklight Tube, Casing and Cord Heavy Duty assembled set Regular $20.00 at Van's $13.95 with this purchase - a $2.50 blacklight poster FREE!

STORE HOURS OPEN	Mon.-Fri. Saturday Sunday	9:30 am - 10 pm 9:30 am - 9 pm 12:00 noon - 9 pm
------------------------	---------------------------------	--

VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S

Queen's Pub
November 12
8:00 to closing
CELEBRATE
OFFICIAL CHRISTENING OF
THE NEW STEREO
WITH A TEQUILA

Come to the only pub
on campus with a built-in stereo

first 300 people in receive a free gift for your patronage

Watts: We must warn society that its declining support is a threat

WATTS from Page 1

doer (who has) repeatedly achieved the seemingly paradoxical and nearly impossible: the writing of an exciting textbook. Finally, Pauline M. McGibbon, "the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Officer of the Order of Canada and (a person of) wide interests in the arts and community service" was presented with the documents and hood of Doctor of Laws, honouris causa. In his response, Dr. Deutsch first thanked the university for the honour of the degree and for the "generous cooperation" he had been afforded during this years as principal. He then proceeded to speak to many of the same issues as had Watts. Commenting on the present financial straits in which universities are suffering, he remarked that "there is the danger now that the university may become just another regulated public utility. In the present - inflationary - circumstances, when the university resources are being severely squeezed, there is the danger also that it will be reduced to a mere knowledge and training factory and that its members will be tempted to resort to direct confrontation with the government in order to get fair treatment. Like Watts, he stressed the necessity for the universities to maintain their freedom and to survive intact: "in this highly complex age no society can continue to be viable nor can it foster a great culture without a strong intellectual and scholarly base."

Following the introduction of representatives of sister universities, the Benediction and O Canada, the Academic Procession filed out again to the accompaniment of the organ played by Dr. F.R.C. Clarke of

Honoraria: two sides agree hikes are vital

by Ian Jarvis

The open forum to discuss the question of honoraria, held in Vic Hall, attended, incidentally by two students, proved to be something of a misnomer. The discussion revolved not around the principle of honoraria, since both sides seemed to agree that increases were in order, but debated how the figures were arrived at, and questioned the value of a referendum in deciding honoraria increases.

This forum, organized by the Education Commission, came about as a result of accusations that there had not been enough open discussion of the issue. It began with an explanation, by committee members Ian Nordheimer and Sue Harper, of the steps they took before assigning figures to the report. They said that a lengthy questionnaire was sent out to and returned by 19 universities, asking what amounts they attached to particular positions in their own student governments. With this knowledge the committee had then looked at our own figures, evaluating at the same time the relative value of each position already receiving honoraria as well as those positions they felt should be considered for it.

Bill Horricks, leading opponent of the honoraria report, conceded that an increase was needed but criticized the report on two grounds. He protested that the report had been "rushed through" when no one knew what was going on and there wasn't enough explanation of how the figures were arrived at. He stated that he couldn't see what relevance there was in comparing our honoraria to that which is fixed at other universities. Dissatisfaction with the explanation of figures was also echoed by Dave Gordon and Kevin Van Koughnett, the latter commenting that we shouldn't just accept the "arbitrary judgement of the people on the report committee". Both wanted to know what scale was used to determine the relative value of each position and the honoraria that should be attached to it. Gordon also felt the committee was taking a very defensive attitude about being questioned on their judgements.

Quick to challenge these statements were Marv Bloos and AMS President Tony Wolman. Bloos pointed out that in doing a study of this nature, comparisons with other universities, providing the positions concerned correspond in terms of time spent and responsibility, were important in that they give us an idea of how our own figures match. If they are way out of line perhaps they should be changed. In his view the honoraria figures are arbitrary, only in that they are made "in the best judgements of the committee members." To say, as Horricks did, that increasing honoraria is really Outer Council giving themselves a raise doesn't make sense in Bloos' opinion, since the increases affect only 7 of 39 Council members. This is compounded by the fact that most changes are not effective until next year.

Queens
Journal
Vol. 102, No. 19
Tues. Nov. 12, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Artis Editors: Peter Haworth and Kerry White
Artis Business Manager: Terry Collins
Artis Managing Editor: Dan McClelland

Contributors: Sandy Naiman, Tom Cromwell, Nancy Spies, John Palmer, Norman James, Mike Craegon, Suzanne Jackson, Lyn Alwood, Evan Thompson, Peter Watts, Nancy Flood, Ian Jarvis, Doug Bonnell, Peter Khignesse, A. Page, Rosemary Knight, Michael Barclay, Gregg Wilson, Brenda Annis.
News Editor: Sarah Yarnell
Photography Editor: John Cameron
Watt's Happin': Rosemary Knight and Jennifer Haslings
Classifieds: Leslie Gaukrodger and Trish Brooks
Photos: Keith Bourns, John Bottomley, John Willmer, Lyn Alwood
Business Staff: Anne Robertson and Meg Bottomley
Features: Editors: Wendy Reynolds and Laurie Gibson
Sports: Lyn Alwood and Suzanne Jackson
Choreography: Rudolph Nuryev
Comment: Guess who got his hands on the masthead!
P.S.S. it's only because I'm reading this at 3:00 a.m. that I feel compelled to tell you guys Wednesday, we go 16 pages of art!

Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (613) 547-2656. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

MEDICAL VARIETY NIGHT '74

CLAP!

AN EVENING OF INFECTIOUS FUN!

FRIDAY and SATURDAY
NOVEMBER 15 and 16
8:00 pm GRANT HALL

Tickets: $2.00 and $1.50 in John Orr Room
10:30 am - 1:30 pm

Murphy's Sea Food Restaurant

Lobster Shrimp Oysters
Clam Chowder Fish and Chips

70 Brock St.
548-7753

Ski lift
You planned this snow weekend with your friends ages ago. And nothing could make you change your plans. To bad your period couldn't have happened some other weekend. But you're not worried. You brought along Tampax tampons. You won't have to give up one precious moment in that deep powder. You feel confident protected by Tampax tampons. They're softly compressed for the best possible absorbency. Worn internally, so Tampax tampons are comfortable and discreet. They give you protection you can depend on, whether on skis or toboggan. Friends are waiting for you on the slopes. You won't have to disappoint them when you have Tampax tampons tucked discreetly into the pocket of your parka.

The internal protection more women trust

unclassifieds

More on Page 10

ARE YOU LEAVING QUEEN'S THIS YEAR? If so we want your house. $30 reward if we decide to take your house. Phone Simon 544-7603, Harold 544-7105, Chris 544-7050.

ARTWORK NEEDED for use in Tricolor '75. Anyone interested in submitting works please contact Jennifer Hunter 544-8058.

WANTED. Male student to share apartment with 2 other students starting Jan. 1. Call 544-7015.

BALLROOM DANCE CLUB - commences Sat Nov. 16, 8:30pm at Dance Studio. $2.00 membership available at the door. Limited to those who have completed beginner instructions. Inquiries 542-3995 evenings.

TRACT GAELS: The party is on for sure! 8pm Nov. 16. Check track black board or with Sue on how to get there. Krames.

THE EASTERN TOWNSHIPS OF: PER SIX different ski areas to ski at during Christmas. The Queen's Ski Club is offering the townships from Dec. 29 - Jan. 4, stay tuned for details.

EVERYONE HAS THE POTENTIAL to think co-operatively. One merely needs to show the initiative. Science '84 is a co-operative. You should become a part of it.

WANTED TO LEASE: 3 or 4 bedroom apt. starting January. Call 544-7015.

RENAISSANCE MUSIC: Brass and woodwind sale - 20 per cent off Selmer, Buffet, Crampton, Armstrong, Olds, Leblanc, Artley, Orlford, Boosey and Hawkes, Lalleur, Besson, Academy, Huttli, Getzen, and Conn. - Renaissance Music, 326 Princess St., 542-5258.

ROOM in six bedroom house available Dec. 1st, Brock and University Phone 542-8725.

FOUR BEDROOM HOUSE wanted by four 3rd-year-to-be (or not to be) female students for next year. One Arts, one Commerce one Rehab. One Science a cause for any fourth year faculty member to aid. If you can help phone 544-8351 or (2) or (3) or (4). Willing to accept May or September occupancy.

TO THE BOYS of 20 Colbourne: Kevin, Beater, Casey and Humper. Thanks for the Sunday Meal. Sorry, but no hiccups! It was the first time that we've been to a party where "Byob" means "bring your own bowls". We'll get you back Suzy Q week. Two strangers in the night PS: we were impressed by the home made soup and pie!

LARGE SOLID WOOD desk and chair for sale - excellent buy - call 548-4281.

WHEN EVERYTHING is said and done we're the group that's had the fun. We're Gael group 21. Skating party in the arena this Friday at 9:30pm. See you there. Cindy, Jill, Roy and Captain Marvel.

REWARD OFFERED FOR THE RETURN (or information leading to the return) of a full length, cream-colored, winter, leather coat with fur trimmed collar. Phone Duncan at 549-4623.

SR '50's for sale ($165) as well as other models of quality calculators from Texas Instruments. Phone Duncan at 549-4623 between 5pm and 7pm.

WOMEN - ANNOUNCING THE ARRIVAL OF A NEWCOMER TO McNeill House Rm. 403. This sexual athlete is interested in a transient relationship with a physically and mentally mature woman. Call O.J. 544-7103.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTO. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color. Transparencies with competitive prices and 24 hour service. For more information call us at 546-7776 or drop by our studio at 33 Brock Street.

VACANCY

Artsci 78 Executive needs
Publicity Conveners

Nominations to be submitted by Monday,
18 November in ASUS box in AMS office.
Must have nominee's signature

QUEEN'S DEPT OF DRAMA

THE NIGHT OF THE IGUANA

NOV 14-16 1974
CONVOCATION HALL
8:30 PM
TICKETS AT DRAMA DESK 547-6291

Asus Society Referendum - November 13

1a. Do you agree with the policy of awarding a class of degree with the Three-Year B.A. Degree?

YES ☐ NO ☐

1b. Would you favour the opportunity of being able to personally choose, at the beginning of your graduating year, whether or not you desire a class of degree?

YES ☐ NO ☐

1c. Would you agree to have a distinction for only those with 80 percent & above?

YES ☐ NO ☐

POLLS:

Union ..... 10:30 - 2:30pm
Physical Education Complex ..... 9:30 - 4:15pm
Douglas Library ..... 10:30 - 3:30pm
Supper Meal lines ..... 4:30 - 5:30pm

STUDENT HEALTH SERVICE

MEDICAL CLINIC - 547-6106 - 24 hours daily
(Answering service contacts a duty physician when the Health Service is closed.)

CLINIC HOURS - 9:00 am - 11:30 am
1:00 pm - 4:00 pm
Monday to Friday inclusive

PSYCHIATRY & COUNSELLING - By appointment
9:00 am - 5:00 pm phone 547-2889 or come to Health Service to make an appointment.

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT
in our Lounge

THIS WEEK : Shanti

Amateur Night every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

See All The New
Programs This Year
With 11 Channels to Choose From On ...

cable tv
544-6311

Are you or your group
doing something you
would like others to
know about?

Tell Us....

USE OUR BULLETIN
BOARD

Cable Cast TV 13

Campus Comment

How are you going to vote in the OFS referendum? Why?

Interviews: Brenda Annis

Photos: John Bottomley

Ruth
Holmes
Arts '78

"I don't know what it is."

Bill
Young
Science '77

"I'm voting yes. I think it's a reasonable cost."

Kelly
Edmison
Law '76

"I'm going to vote against the increase. I've never really thought the OFS is representative of student opinion."

Gordon
Chow
Arts '77

"I really haven't made up my mind. I think I'm going to vote yes. I really can't specify why, but I think the organization is pretty good."

Ann
Besley
Rehab '75

"I'm going to vote no. It's a long pay hike and from what I've read the OFS isn't taken very well and I haven't been impressed."

Ace
Journal
reporter

Me? I only interviewed these people!

Come in and see the new line of Pedigree and White Stag ski clothing.
Cross country packages from $70.00

★ 10% off to Queen's Students ★

cotton's
sportshouse

399 PRINCESS STREET,
KINGSTON K7L 1B9
TELEPHONE 544-1066

TEACHERS, OUTDOOR LEADERS

The Company of the Cross (Anglican) is recruiting new members, married or single, to train as teachers and outdoor leaders in its Western Canadian Boy's Schools. Applicants should have at least 2 years post secondary education, be prepared to participate in rugged canoe, snow shoe and dog sled programs, and work for a token salary and living essentials.

For interview, write:

Minister, Company of the Cross
3 Linden Avenue
Toronto, Ontario

Campus Movies
Presents

MARX BROTHERS

DUCK SOUP

plus
a Charlie Chaplin Short

Thursday 7 and 9:30
Dunning Hall $1.00

Note: Act of the Heart cancelled

NAVAL RESERVE Officer Training Plan

Looking for a challenge?

If you are interested,
contact HMCS CATARAQUI
at 545-5872 (daytime)
549-0487 (night)

or come down to the Kingston armoury,
Montreal St., on Tuesday nights, or call 549-0487

Think Naval Reserve
for a satisfying part-time career.

INTERNATIONAL PUB AND
DANCE

ADMISSION - $5.00 (for students only)
- $8.00 (for others)

EUROPEAN BEER,
IMPORTED LIQUOR,
FOREIGN FOODS, AND GREAT PEOPLE!

399 PRINCESS STREET,
KINGSTON K7L 1B9
TELEPHONE 544-1066

O.F.S.

Voting Yes

by Terry Mocli

The OFS referendum is tomorrow. If you don't know what the referendum is all about, well, it's about raising the amount of money which you pay to the OFS from .25 to $1.50. That's what it's about and I hope you'll vote yes. The reason is simple. If you vote no, then Queen's will effectively lose the representation of OFS. The reason that the representation is important is because students need a voice at the provincial level. Why? Because unless things are changed, there are going to be 1500 St. Lawrence College students coming with Queen's students for housing, and that is going to be really inconvenient and expensive. Because unless the LLBO changes its regulations, there probably won't be a Queen's pub next term. Because unless there are changes in Student Assistance, a lot of people who have the marks and the drive won't be going to university because they don't have the bucks. In a society as wealthy as ours, that's a crime.

These are all important issues which can only be dealt with by an organization which has the resources to compete with the Government of Ontario. Believe me, you can't compete with the government on $25. OFS needs more money to hire more researchers to write the kind of detailed report that the government reads. OFS needs more communication among its member campuses so that Trent knows how Queen's DSC's are organized, and so that Queen's may learn something about orientation from Carleton. More than that, this referendum is an expression of support in that it means that you consider at least one issue mentioned above as important.

Look at it this way. Alone, Queen's hasn't got an ice cube's chance in hell of influencing the provincial government. Everyone in the AMS is a student. Students can't spend weeks in conference with MPP's in Toronto. Students can only form a Federation which will effectively represent them.

In the past OFS has made progress in many areas. (1) This past September, as a result of OFS action during the housing shortage, the Minister of Revenue, Arthur Meen, announced that a government tax against rental income would be waived in the situation where a student was being rented a room in the landlord's own house. This action opened up the housing market and it was a response to the OFS tent cities. (2) OFS has influenced the government in lowering the Age of Independence from 25 to 24 and has secured an agreement whereby the government will not raise tuition fees without first consulting students. At the present time the OFS is attempting to have the government reverse its regulations concerning student pubs. Unless these regulations are reversed, don't expect to see the Queen's pub open in January.

The OFS is a very young organization (2 years). No one is suggesting that it is perfect; no one is suggesting that you have to agree with everything that OFS has done. But if you vote no on this ballot you'll really be hurting yourselves because you'll be joining an organization which has earned the respect of the government. The membership of Queen's in the organization has a lot to do with that respect. OFS can and will grow and improve. The $1.50 is being spent to hire more researchers so that OFS can keep up with the government. Don't cop out of OFS because in the end you'll just be copping it on yourselves. Vote Yes.

Voting No

by Doug Bonnell

There are a lot of reasons for opposing Wednesday's referendum proposal to raise an individual student's contribution from 25 cents to $1.50. All I can do is tell you why I will vote no and hope your own fears will be reflected in my reasoning.

Personally, I like the idea of a union of students. I disagree with many of the educational policies of the provincial government and I'd like a responsible union of students that would voice these doubts. I wish I could say that the Ontario Federation of Students has fulfilled that role.

First, and foremost, the OFS has not given adequate reasons for the four hundred percent increase in dues. That's only three beer says Queen's OFS delegate Terry Macli. But given a student population of 9,000 that's an increase of $81,250. And that is 22,500 beer! The OFS argues it needs the money for more field workers. Why? How many? The OFS argues it needs the money to increase communication. I would agree that the present situation is intolerably inadequate. But there are no proposals. There is no projected budget. There just aren't enough reasons for such an enormous increase. And if there are, the Queen's OFS Committee hasn't made the individual student aware of them.

Second, the OFS has made a series of proposals on education, including the indexing of OSAP to an inflation factor. Fine. But the OFS has backed these proposals with a series of principles, including free tuition, a living stipend, and the concept of education as a social right, concepts which are totally irresponsible. Such principles alienate those students not committed to such an educational ideology, are irresponsible during an inflation crisis, and are based on educational priorities prevalent in the mid-sixties.

I want a union which advocates responsible and academic educational alternatives through consultation with the student body. Surely that's not too much to ask. Instead the OFS has indulged in partisan power politics, attacking the Conservative party, endorsing the programmes of organized labour, and referring to Premier William Davis as an "arrogant, semi-literate man". And that folks is coming from your academic elite.

Finally, bear these facts in mind. Macli has raised the pub issue. It's an emotional red herring. If you're worried about the pub ask someone who knows. Ask Peter Durxerman. And don't have beer withdrawal symptoms. There will be a pub next term.

Second, a "no" vote doesn't destroy the OFS. And it doesn't mean the end of a relationship between Queen's and a student union. Odds are that OFS will come back again, this time with more facts, and a more moderating tone, exactly what they did at Carleton.

I say the students have a right to know. I say we're being used. And I urge you to turn the OFS down.

Debating Union

Tuesday Nov. 12 - Stirling D - 8:00 p.m.
The Queen's Debating Union presents the Cambridge Union film "Resolved that the American Dream is at the Expense of the Negro" - A debate between author James Baldwin and a British M.P. All welcome - Free Admission

Festival of the Arts...

Festival of the Arts meeting tonight, Tuesday for all involved and all interested. 6:30 p.m., 3rd Floor Common Room, Students' Union.

A.M.S. PAGE

Alma Mater Society Referenda

Nov. 13, 1974

1. Shall the Ontario Union of Students fee of .25c per student be increased to $1.50 per student and be allocated to the Ontario Federation of Students? + YES NO
- 2a. Have you ever smoked marijuana? YES NO
- 2b. Do you feel that the consumption of marijuana should be legalized in Canada? YES NO
- 2c. Do you feel that the legalization should be restricted (eg. as drugs and alcohol are now treated)? YES NO

POLLING STATIONS AND HOURS

Physical Education Centre	9:30 am - 4:30 pm
Students Union	9:30 am - 4:30 pm
Douglas Library	9:30 am - 4:30 pm
Residence Meal Lines	4:30 pm - 6:30 pm
MacDonald Hall	9:30 am - 1:15 pm
Kingston Hall	1:30 pm - 4:15 pm
Ellis Hall	9:30 am - 11:15 am
Mackintosh-Corry	11:30 am - 4:15 pm
Stirling Hall	9:30 am - 1:15 pm
McLaughlin Hall	1:30 pm - 4:15 pm
Goodwin	9:30 am - 11:15 am
Humphrey	11:30 am - 2:15 pm
Miller	2:30 pm - 4:30 pm
McArthur, West Campus	10:30 am - 4:30 pm

+ed. note: In order to clarify the statement, it should read: "Shall the Ontario Federation of Students fee of .25c per student be increased to $1.50 per student?"

Applications for the positions of

Assistants Ticket Sellers

for the A.M.S. Bus Service

will be received at the

A.M.S. Office until

5:00 p.m.

Friday, Nov. 15.

(These are paid positions)

Festival Of The Arts

January 28 - February 1, 1975

FILM CONTEST
Make a movie (up to 30 mins.) and we'll show it at Festival. You may even win $50., $25., or $10. Contest is open to everyone in the Queen's Community. New films only.

$50. FIRST PRIZE

CONTACT:
Beth Brown 549-1053
Mike MacMillan 544-7098

FILM

editorial

OFS as we see it

In order for students to become a viable force and promote their interests on a provincial level, OFS, an Ontario Union for students, has been a necessary development. It is interested in organizing the student interests across the province and vocalizing these interests to the provincial government. Without this organized voice, students simply would not have the means through which to promote their interests; increased housing, raising the living stipends and fee tuition, to name only a few.

Queen's students are now being asked if they too want to be part of this centralized voice, that of the OFS, and a sum of $1.50 is requested for this membership.

The question posing is whether or not this union warrants nearly a 400 per cent increase in fee. This increase has been justified by the OFS committee in their expressed desire to hire full-time field workers and a lobbyist at $1.35 per hour ($7000.00 per year). In this way, they claim, more communication between the universities and a more sophisticated approach in appealing to the government can be attained. However, the OFS has not specified exactly how all this money is to be utilized. A jump from $25,000.00 to $125,000.00 (given approximately 100,000 OFS students) certainly needs more justification than simply an increase in staff.

If Queen's does support OFS, we will maintain a voice in promoting student interests to the provincial government; a voice that will allow us individual representation in the union. If Queen's opts out, OFS will still carry on and any change they might succeed in accomplishing will still affect Queen's students as part of the Ontario student program.

Considering OFS membership is a consideration of the increase in the fee they request. We are being asked to first pay out the funds then wait for the benefits to ensue. They are a young organization, one which has concerns directed to benefitting the entire post-secondary education system in Ontario.

If we castrate them before they begin, we are perhaps eliminating our chance to promote our own interests as a minority group. However, allocating money without being assured of the possible benefits is certainly not among the basic principals of economics.

In consideration of the future possibilities of OFS and their strong attempts in promoting student interests we suggest that Queen's students continue membership in OFS. One more voice will undoubtedly strengthen their viability.

Letters

Referendum...what referendum?

GSS yes to OFS

Dear Editor,

For your information, on 7, Nov. the Council of the Graduate Student Society unanimously endorsed a resolution supporting the OFS fee increase.

Thanks sincerely,
Kathy Binden
President GSS

issue some thought and vote on a rational basis. It should be noted, however, that the referendum is not binding and will be used only to gauge the consensus on this issue.

Stewart Beck

More from ASUS

Dear Editor,

Last Wednesday, the ASUS executive gave unanimous endorsement of the increase of the Ontario Federation of Students' fee to $1.50 per student. Although the excellent letter, by Mr. Cornacchia and Mr. Avis of the Law Society, in last Friday's Journal, expressed many of the important ideas about our (Queen's) need for OFS, we would like to add a few points on what we see as the potential OFS role on the Queen's campus.

Both of us have seen the value of OFS by attending various conferences on topics such as Orientation, Instructional Development, and DSC's Course Unions. Our executive and members of various ASUS related committees and councils have seen or made use of various pamphlets and manuals researched and published by the OFS staff, including a Course Union Organizers' Manual, Orientation Papers, Law Handbook, and the brief submitted by OFS to the Committee on University Affairs.

Further, OFS fieldworkers have acted as resource people for our workshops on DSC's and Course Evaluation, and are available to help us work on almost any area of concern to students. Recently students have become more aware of the need for, and role of OFS with respect to housing, OSAP and student pub issues.

Our firm conviction is that both as individual students and as members of the student government, we need OFS.

AMS Outer Council also voiced such a conviction in its strong support (unanimous except for one abstention) of the referendum at its meeting of October 31. We have been distressed that the Journal has not reported this strong support of OFS by the AMS.

Any student who would like to discuss this stand is free to discuss it with us, with members of the AMS, with Terry Mach (Queen's OFS delegate) or to read the OFS materials available in the AMS Office.

On behalf of the executive of the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society
Susan E. Harper
John Ronson

Degree of BA degree

Dear Editor,

On November 13, there will be an ASUS Referendum concerning the attachment of class distinction to the General B.A. degree. Presently, there are four distinctions which can be attached to your degree: First Class (80 per cent average or better), Upper Second Class (75 per cent - 80 per cent), Second Class (65 per cent - 75 per cent), and Third Class (60 per cent - 65 per cent).

The referendum is intended to ascertain whether Arts and Science students believe this class distinction still had validity. It will also ask students whether they believe this class of degree should be made optional.

I feel that the class distinction system is too arbitrary. Is there really any difference between a person who obtains a 64 per cent average and one who obtains 66 per cent? Yet the former would receive a Third Class degree and the latter a Second Class degree. As well, by dropping this system, future employers would be directed to look at a student's average and not his class distinction.

I ask that people in Arts and Science give this

BOOKS

WITH 10 - 35% DISCOUNT

from the retail price your own selection from the titles available in North America, Europe or Soviet Union. No shipping or any other charges. Send order or write for details to

ACADEMIC BOOK CLUB,

P. O. Box 1507, Kingston, Ontario, K7L 5C7.

ECKANKAR

The Path of Total Awareness

Eckankar is not a religion but the original path to enlightenment through Soul Travel. Learn about the true nature of reality, travel in Other planes, the nature of Good and Evil, Karma and Reincarnation.

Introductory Discussion -
McLaughlin Room, Students' Union
Sunday, 17 November, 2 pm
Everyone Welcome.

Science '75 Presents

THE BEACH BOYS

Clark Hall

Thursday Night

8:00 - 1:00

Admission $ .25

Beer 5/$2.00

for more details see G.W. on Wednesday

PRICELESS... WITHIN REASON

Precious diamonds do not have to cost a fortune. We can help you to select a fine diamond that you can afford. Regardless of your financial status, we can offer a superb diamond that will thrill you... and never leave you flat.

KINNEAR d'ESTERRE

JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

Knowledge is structured in consciousness

Transcendental Meditation

what it's all about

Transcendental Meditation is a simple mental technique that anyone can learn quickly and easily. It is not a philosophy or religion and requires no control or effort, no concentration or contemplation. It is an effortless process of the mind that produces cumulative benefits from the first day of practice.

"If our windows of perception were cleaned, we would see infinity stretching in every direction".

In this passage, William Blake displays an intuition of ultimate reality shared by philosophers and poets since the time of Plato. Their frustrating inability to perceive clearly this universal meaning hovering just beyond their grasp, in fact, might be considered as a basic theme underlying much of the world's great literature. This clear vision of the Absolute, however, can now be attained by all men. So proclaims Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, the Indian philosopher and teacher, who has travelled worldwide in the past twenty years, spreading Transcendental Meditation.

If one were to consider such teaching as exotic or "Swami stuff" and thus not worthy of serious consideration, he would not be alone. Such skepticism, though, does not trouble Maharishi. This technique, he asserts, is natural and requires no irrational belief or "cultism". Meditation is for everyday people with normal disappointments, frustrations, joys and ambitions.

Students from all walks of life, young and old, "straight" and "hip" have discovered a new existence with Transcendental Meditation. In addition, athletes, scientists, philosophers, educationists and businessmen throughout the world are expressing keen interest in this technique inherited from ancient Vedic Tradition. Careful physiological studies have also been conducted, with results tending to confirm that the meditator achieves a "transcendental", fourth major state of consciousness, differing markedly from waking, dreaming, deep sleep or hypnotic trance.

Most westerners regard meditation as an exotic, eastern religious practice. It is true that for centuries Zen Buddhist monks in Japan, and Hindu yogis in India, have been engaging in and refining sophisticated meditational techniques. In recent years, however, there has been an enlivening of western interest in meditation. Many of our present ills are a loss of confidence in ourselves. The older view of humans seemed to afford man a place in the total scheme of things. This place has come to seem less and less secure with each successive intellectual revolution, until humans, far from thinking of themselves as fashioned in the image of God, now regard themselves as an accidental by-product of an impersonal universe.

Transcendental Meditation springs from rich Himalayan traditions, but it is a common sense approach to many problems besetting twentieth century mankind. It might be described as a "no fuss" technique for modern living. It requires no change in life style or diet, no strange postures or esoteric jargon. It is fundamentally different from any other form of meditation or system of mental or physical development, and involves no concentration, contemplation, discipline or extensive training.

Transcendental Meditation involves the progressive refinement of the nervous system through the regular alternation of deep rest and activity. In other words, just as sleep and dreaming are required to relieve certain stresses and fatigue, so Transcendental Meditation is essential for dissolving deep-rooted stresses in the nervous system. It relaxes and rejuvenates both body and mind.

This energizing effect of meditation is explicable in light of Maharishi's view of the universe in which he sees all things striving for fulfillment. One aspect of this general principle is the natural tendency of the mind, or the attention, to move in the direction of greater satisfaction. It is towards a reservoir of energy and bliss at the core of the Self - the source of all thought - that the mind will progress. Maharishi's insight depends on a basic postulate that the experience of the Self is, in its own nature blissful. If that is true, Maharishi argues the movement toward it must be natural. It is reached not by control, but by letting go; not by concentrating the mind, but by letting it expand. As one approaches this state one moves from a region of relative turmoil (the waking state) to one of supreme peace, and this movement is naturally experienced as bliss.

During this time, although the mind is fully conscious the nervous system undergoes a profound relaxation. Meditators report that following meditation, they feel completely rested and brimming over with renewed mental and physical energy. With regular practice, this "transcending" process becomes more profound until eventually the subject may draw at will upon the inexhaustible energy reservoir.

Maharishi considers that the field of pure consciousness constitutes the quintessence of all physical reality. It follows, in his view, that with regular contact, one's life grows more meaningful and that finally one may reach a point of omniscient perspective in which the unity of all things is clearly perceived. Whether or not one follows such reasoning, it would appear that the practical benefits of Transcendental Meditation are manifold. In indeed such deep rest is possible, life could become more enjoyable. A man deprived of sleep leads a lonely, frustrating life. Maharishi states that men also have been deprived of the deep essential relaxation of the nervous system, which may be experienced naturally through regular practice of Transcendental Meditation.

Viewed in such a common sense perspective, Maharishi's goal of world peace does not appear to be overambitious. If each individual can achieve a clearer, more satisfying life, then, says the meditator, surely the day of international amity is possible.

how it works

Physiologists indicate a major state of consciousness, the transcendental experience is unique to each individual. It is difficult, therefore, to describe in readily understandable to the non-meditator. The state, however, should not constitute an obstacle for rejection of the phenomenon as it is, for the equally subjective dream state has been discussed for centuries in terms of "hard", objective verification. Only have scientists observed such unique physiological characteristics as Rapid Eye Movement stable to the dream activity. Similarly, EEGs conducted during the past five years have clearly defined physiological changes occurring during the period of deep meditation.

It is true the subjective experience of "pure consciousness" cannot be communicated or verified about. Controlled experiments, however, have substantiated before, during and after meditation to substantiate at least the existence of a physiological state.

Stated simply, the technique works by providing the meditator the opportunity to temporarily quieten activity characteristic of the waking state, thus spontaneously cultivating a high degree of calmness and alertness. In this calm quietness is allowed to carry out with exceptional efficiency and adjustments which are not occurring during activity, yet which also are not occurring during the duller form of rest obtaining sleep. The ensuing physiological and thus normalization of the body and nervous system generates a corresponding increase in activity, and the alert mind gently re-enters refreshed, relaxed and revitalized.

Dr. Herbert Benson and R.K. Wallace of the Harvard Medical School, in a current Scientific American article, state that the quality of rest in twenty minutes of meditation is much more profound than in a full eight hours of sleep. This state is characterized by a dramatically reduced metabolic rate (Oxygen Consumption), by reduced breath rate, and by reduced workload on the heart. Skin resistance rises sharply during meditation, and blood lactate concentration decreases; both electrical change and biochemical change indicate relaxation and reduced anxiety.

Electroencephalographic (brain wave) measurements during meditation are especially interesting. They indicate that, while the body is experiencing a condition of deep relaxation, the mind remains awake and alert. The brain waves become highly ordered and synchronized. The chaotic shifting frequency distribution characteristic of waking consciousness is replaced by a more orderly and simplified pattern of waves that expand from localized areas of the brain to cover the whole cortex. The left and right cerebral hemispheres become synchronized in frequency and phase. The orderliness and synchrony of the brain waves imply a profound harmonizing effect within the deep inner brain (the thalamus) and the conscious thinking area (the cortex) and their mutual interaction. This suggests an integration of synthetic and analytical thinking, which leaves the meditator free from confusion in the presence of disorderly influences. It is orderly thinking that provides a productive and useful direction for imagination. Creativity takes a straight line from its source in the pure liveliness of the mind to its goal in achievement through practical activity. The degree of a man's creativity has thus far proved to be inaccessible to meaningful objective measurement, but it is clear that creativity must depend on the ability of the nervous system to provide a wide range of idea-association with a speed and facility of mental response, both of which are strongly implied by the EEG synchrony observed in meditators.

Those who meditate find their minds simultaneously more creative, more clear, and more lucid, and channels of progress in any field become smoother and more direct.

who founded it

Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, whose familiar picture can be seen around any campus in North America, is the major proponent of Transcendental Meditation and the founder of the "Science of Creative Intelligence". After graduating from Allahabad University in his native India as a physics major, he studied for many years with Swami Brahmananda Saraswati, or simply Guru Dev for short.

Maharishi gives credit to Guru Dev for the present TM movement. This humility is characteristic of him, but the fact is that Maharishi has given the movement its present impetus. In 1955 he began teaching the principles and practices of Transcendental Meditation throughout India. In 1958 he instigated a world movement to bring TM to everyone.

Maharishi spends a great deal of time in training teachers of the Science of Creative Intelligence and Transcendental Meditation on several continents. He looks forward to a time when a sufficient number of teachers are trained so that he can devote full time to his writing and commenting on Indian Philosophy. Beyond this, Maharishi's methods of working for the age of world peace he foresees, are difficult to describe. Somehow he exerts an unseen influence on most TM literature and thought.

who does it

What is the appeal of Transcendental Meditation to students? From Yale University for example, a quote from a student who has been meditating for six months. "Meditation has provided a verification and direction of my studies and has increased my creativity, which is especially important to me. I'm a musician. I play piano, jazz. It also provides a context into which I can fit all my different studies. I can take a Philosophy course and see that Heidegger was probably aware of consciousness expansion, or I have the direct experience of what is mentioned in a poetry class about Blake which is really amazing. It never used to happen."

Transcendental Meditation is a process of allowing the awareness to go "subtler" (deeper) levels of thought. At such levels, such thought is more "universal"; it represents the trunk of the Tree of Knowledge of this type proves the sense of familiarity, that ability to appreciate the underlying concepts of a new subject. The effectiveness of Transcendental Meditation is greater than that of any course of study; for whereas a teacher is compelled to take a student's ability more or less as he finds it, meditation "expands" the awareness by modifying the very mechanism of perception and understanding.

Joe Namath and UCLA basketball star, Bill Walton are meditating. Fifteen members of the Canadian Olympic Ski Team and the Philadelphia Phillies are meditating. The reason? Transcendental Meditation can benefit an athlete both physiologically and psychologically. The physiological benefits include greater stamina and faster reaction time.

Paul Owen, General Manager of the Phillies reports. "TM has given me a new perspective, not only about myself, but for the things around me in my daily work as a baseball executive; it has enabled me to work harder and more effectively, and I feel I have more clarity of mind. I believe TM can help athletes, and persons from all walks of life to get more out of their God given potential."

Reading defenses and throwing passes may be Joe Namath's specialties, but even he admits to their limited application in dealing with life's problems. Joe gets jittery just like everyone else, and as an antidote, Joe likes to meditate. "I'm into TM. It's good for the mind and body, for everyone. I would suggest that you look into it. If you do, you will get into it too."

Introductory Lecture - Wednesday Evening 8:00 P.M. Stirling Hall Room 412. Special Colour Videotape of Maharishi Mahesh Yogi.

unclassifieds

More on Page 4

CAN YOU HELP? Six girls are looking for a house, close to campus for next year. Call Anne at 544-4482 or Charlotte at 544-8475. VOTE to re-elect KEITH NORTON in Sydenham ward.

ATTENTION GAELE GROUPS 5 and 14 (allies 110). At long last, just what you've been waiting for... a Reunion in the PUB. Wednesday (tomorrow) night, anytime after 8 see 'ya there.

What would happen to Rita if she became a washer-woman on her Birthday? She would have a Taylor-made Birthday. Louise: On Trouve les grenouilles partout. Bon Fete.

1st, 2nd, and 4th EAST CHCWN. Thanks too (belatedly) to all who for a great Halloween Party. For Chris's sake, Crazy Dave; just because Colleen lives in 3rd does not mean you just thank them.

TO DINGO OR WALLABY You might begin by slapping out some abo's, if yer fair dinkum. Shout me a Follers, mate, and I'm in. Signed the King's Cross Kid.

TIME FOR REUNION: Gaele group 39 (that's you guys) gloriously announces its resurrection and rebirth in the pub on Friday 15th at 8:00. How about it, gang? Phone Pete at 542-1009.

GGSS REUNION Friday November 15 at the Union. Give one of us a call for details. Give us a call anyway. Rena, Richard, Bronck.

SPOONER I like your wart.

UNO Portable radio in metal case. Phone 547-6440. Mr. Tucker.

Attention Camera Club Members - that lecture on dry mounting and touching is being held this Thurs. Nov 14 in the International Centre Lower Lounge at 8:00pm. You may bring your own prints to be mounted and touched. Lecture to be given by Doug Bates.

Found: Calculator. Contact Dave 544-5479.

LARGE FURNISHED room available in house. Has fridge, stove, also bed, table and chairs, chest of drawers. Private bathroom and shower. If interested, call 544-4305.

Friday please return it or phone Dave at 549-5440 to collect your reward. I need it.

INTERESTED in moving into a male house at WEST CAMPUS? If so phone 549-1459 anytime. Available by Nov 15.

1-BEDROOM AVAILABLE IMMEDIATELY in house with a third year male student, near University and William. $75. plus utilities. 548-5861.

GET YOUR TICKETS NOW for the OUTING CLUB SPORTS LOTTERY. Win $100 cash voucher, $25 cash voucher and $10 cash voucher. Cash vouchers are good at Hugh Finlay's Sport Store. Tickets are available from outing club members for $2.25 or live for $1. Draw will be held on Nov. 28.

TIRED OF THOSE THURSDAY NIGHT LINE UPS AT THE PUB?

Come to the chemistry smoker, this Thursday, November 14, at the grad house, 157 King St. E. (King and lower Union) starting at 6 p.m. no cover charge, beer, 45c liquor, $5c, dancing too. All proceeds go towards furnishing the under grad lounge. Everybody welcome. Come and bring a prol too!

WIN A CHEMISTRY T-SHIRT: design a crest for the chemistry smoker this Thursday. Give them to your d.s.c. rep. or leave them under the door at 1.9. 417. Winner receives a t-shirt.

ATTENTION ALL GRADUATES: If your graduation portrait is to appear in Tricolor '75 it must be taken by Nov 15 '74. Please make a definite appointment for a portrait sitting with Wallace Berry (542-2809) NOW!

FOR SALE: 1 ladies raccoon coat, size 10 or 12, will discuss price. Phone 544-4592 around 4pm.

LOST AT CHILKOOT: One sterling silver link bracelet. Call 542-5750 between 9 and 5 and ask for Diana or 542-1164 after 5:30. Reward offered. Great sentimental value. WHO'S WHERE CHANGES: to be printed in Golden Words Nov 20. Anyone who wants a correction give your name to Info Bank.

ATTENTION PHOTOGRAPHERS! Slide competition sponsored by Queen's Camera Club last date of entry Nov 14. Slides to be judged by a panel of competent judges. Top 3 slides to be enlarged to 8 by 10 prints cibachrome (non-fading) process. Entry fee of $1.00 (with name and phone no. on each slide) in envelope along with entry fee and place in special box in AMS office before Nov 14. Open to anyone connected with Queen's.

Friday please return it or phone Dave at 549-5440 to collect your reward. I need it.

INTERESTED in moving into a male house at WEST CAMPUS? If so phone 549-1459 anytime. Available by Nov 15.

1-BEDROOM AVAILABLE IMMEDIATELY in house with a third year male student, near University and William. $75. plus utilities. 548-5861.

GET YOUR TICKETS NOW for the OUTING CLUB SPORTS LOTTERY. Win $100 cash voucher, $25 cash voucher and $10 cash voucher. Cash vouchers are good at Hugh Finlay's Sport Store. Tickets are available from outing club members for $2.25 or live for $1. Draw will be held on Nov. 28.

TIRED OF THOSE THURSDAY NIGHT LINE UPS AT THE PUB?

Come to the chemistry smoker, this Thursday, November 14, at the grad house, 157 King St. E. (King and lower Union) starting at 6 p.m. no cover charge, beer, 45c liquor, $5c, dancing too. All proceeds go towards furnishing the under grad lounge. Everybody welcome. Come and bring a prol too!

WIN A CHEMISTRY T-SHIRT: design a crest for the chemistry smoker this Thursday. Give them to your d.s.c. rep. or leave them under the door at 1.9. 417. Winner receives a t-shirt.

ATTENTION ALL GRADUATES: If your graduation portrait is to appear in Tricolor '75 it must be taken by Nov 15 '74. Please make a definite appointment for a portrait sitting with Wallace Berry (542-2809) NOW!

FOR SALE: 1 ladies raccoon coat, size 10 or 12, will discuss price. Phone 544-4592 around 4pm.

LOST AT CHILKOOT: One sterling silver link bracelet. Call 542-5750 between 9 and 5 and ask for Diana or 542-1164 after 5:30. Reward offered. Great sentimental value. WHO'S WHERE CHANGES: to be printed in Golden Words Nov 20. Anyone who wants a correction give your name to Info Bank.

ATTENTION PHOTOGRAPHERS! Slide competition sponsored by Queen's Camera Club last date of entry Nov 14. Slides to be judged by a panel of competent judges. Top 3 slides to be enlarged to 8 by 10 prints cibachrome (non-fading) process. Entry fee of $1.00 (with name and phone no. on each slide) in envelope along with entry fee and place in special box in AMS office before Nov 14. Open to anyone connected with Queen's.

FINLAY'S SPORT SHOP

MOST EXCITING SALE IN YEARS! COMING UP SOON!

PLEEEZE PRAY FOR SNOW!

BRUCE COCKBURN
Grant Hall
NOV. 17
7 and 10 p.m.

$3.00 WITH STUDENT CARD TODAY ONLY Starting Monday - For Everybody

Highs and lows of a chamber concert

by Tom Cromwell

A day of festivities marking the opening of Harrison-Le Caine Hall (the music building) culminated in a concert in Grant Hall Friday evening by the Queen's Chamber Orchestra and Choir. The orchestra, directed by David Keane opened the program with Bach's D Major Orchestral Suite, Satie's Gymnopedies 1 and 3 (orchestrated by Debussy) and Grieg's Suite: Aus Holbergs Zeit. After the intermission, the Choir, under the direction of Rudolf Schnitzler, joined the orchestra to present Mozart's Vesperae Solennes de confessorio and Haydn's Major Te Deum. A list of the program has been included in order to indicate how demanding a program it was especially for performers who have been together only since mid-September and who have many other pressures on their time.

The second half of the concert was superb, the performance by orchestra, choir and soloists alike exhibiting precision, vitality, enthusiasm and most important, a real sense of delight in the making of music. The Mozart work is a setting of 5 Psalms and the Magnificat, and is great work of the mature master. The entire performance was good, but I must mention the excellent work turned in by the quartet of soloists (Jean Callum, Gail Hohner, Hugh Agnew and Norman Nurni) and the lovely interpretation given by Susan Goodwin and Kevin Bailey, assisted by sensitive orchestral accompaniment, to the 5th Psalm - Laudate Dominum (Psalm 117). Less than successful was the performance of the 4th Psalm, Laudate Pueri, which is set in a slow fugal style. I am not sure what was wrong, but it seemed to me not to work as presented. It could have been a lack of attention to balance of the contrapuntal lines, but that is just a guess. There was also some funny business going on at the beginning of the Magnificat in the intonation department, but things soon righted themselves.

None should be had of the fine accompaniments supplied for these works by the Chamber Orchestra. Playing for choirs is not usually a favorite task for orchestras, partly I suspect because in performance, the choir gets most of the attention and most of the acclaim if all goes well. Successful performance of both these works depends on good orchestral playing and this was supplied. I might mention especially the work of the brass in the Haydn. The orchestra ought to be proud of this work and the choir and conductor grateful.

I have exhausted my supply of superlatives in my discussion of the second half of the program.

but there will be no resulting shortage, as I am afraid few are needed in discussion of the first half. There was a great deal of good playing going on in all the works undertaken, but there were just too many bad attacks and cut-offs, too many notes not in place or not in tune, and a much too frequently sensed lack of assurance, excitement or enjoyment. In the Bach the intonation between brass, winds and strings was poor, several movements had trouble getting started and the trumpet playing in several places was ex-cruciating. It was hard to believe that the players that performed so well later could get off to such a weak start.

There are many things to be said in defence of the orchestra. The program was extremely demanding, there was little time for its preparation and some sections of the orchestra are staffed by inexperienced (but this of course does not mean unskilled) players. It was my feeling that too much was undertaken, but unfortunately, all the mitigating circumstances in the world don't make imprecise and unconfident playing sound any better at the concert. I think it was unfair to the players to expose them in this way, particularly in view of their obvious potential and collective skill as musicians. The orchestra has made great strides and it is to its credit that it acquitted itself of the very ambitious program as well as it did.

To prevent ending on such a solemn note, there are several positive remarks to be made. The second of the Gymnopedies came off rather well, and the entire Grieg Suite had much to commend it. The Pralude was quite good except for some arpeggio problems and the Sarabande, although it got off to a shaky start, built to a very satisfying finish. The Gavotte and Musette were played with vitality, and the Rigaudon featured some excellent solo work by concert master Michael Bodzasi and violinist Tory Trotter.

I hope I have made it clear that none of my remarks should be interpreted as a counsel of despair but rather as a counsel of prudence. I hope that we will be able to see the orchestra presented in its best light in the near future, and I have no doubt that their playing will be very fine indeed.

Final Year Students

Today, the Chartered Accountant plays one of the most exciting roles in business management - tackling complex and fascinating problems. For the professionally trained, the scope is limitless.

Discuss career opportunities with Clarkson Gordon representatives, on campus

Nov. 18, 19

Appointments should be made through the Student Placement Office

Clarkson, Gordon & Co.

1000 University Avenue, Suite 1000, Toronto, Ontario M5G 1A1
Tel: (416) 593-1111
Telex: 5200-11-1111
Cable: 5200-11-1111

Politically Oriented?

Who Cares

Come to the

LIBERAL - P.C. PUB

Clark Hall	beer 45'
Wed. November 13th	5/$2.00
8:00 pm - 1:00 am	pizza 35'

Second in a continuing Series of AMS Open Forums

O.F.S.

Do you know what you're voting on tomorrow? If you have questions that you want answered or arguments that you want aired - come to the

O.F.S. OPEN FORUM

Tuesday, November 12, 7:30 pm.
Lower Vic Common Room

Vaghy String Quartet

A subtle communication

by John Palmer

The moment the Vaghy String Quartet made its appearance on the stage at Dunning Hall last Friday, the professionalism of the group was obvious. Confidence was certainly not lacking in their truly impressive performances of works by Haydn (1732-1809), K. Szymanowski (1882-1932) and Maurice Ravel (1875-1937). Immediately evident in the Vaghy's presentation of Haydn's Opus 77, No. 1, was one of the Quartet's strongest assets, that is, their ability to communicate. The technical requirements demanded coordination and cooperation among all four members in order to attain the clarity needed to begin and sustain the musical flow. This was accomplished with an obviously severe concentration on technique, and a complete understanding of the subtleties involved in the interpretation of such a work.

With Karol Szymanowski's Opus 56, No. 2, in three movements, the flexibility of the quartet became apparent. The first movement of this piece required that all four instruments be muted, with the result that a generally mysterious atmosphere was portrayed. In the second movement, the use of various effects gave a new life to the performance, which at times was almost humorous in its presentation. The third movement, a slow fugue, gave each performer a chance to show his skill. Again, the audience could not be disappointed, as with each subsequent entry, the individuals became the group once more.

Ravel's F major Quartet was surely the high-point of the evening. In the first of four movements, a duet between the first violin and viola was interpreted very well, and the eye contact which aided in producing the uniform and balanced sound, was again noticeable. The second movement incorporated effects similar to those used by Szymanowski, but the overall effect was different. Instead of being mysterious, the piece gave the audience the feeling of a subtle by music sounding from a source indistinguishable and far off. Ravel's ability to re-use and re-work a simple melody and yet save us from monotony could only be paralleled only by the Vaghy's musicianship and style.

The presentation was not flawless, but none of the individual errors really hampered one's enjoyment of the concert. If any complaints could be made, they would be to criticize the foot-tapping which was overly done in the fourth movement of the Ravel, and the overworking of a few forte passages in the Haydn. However, the Vaghy Quartet's performance was certainly a fitting one to mark the opening of the new Music Building.

by Mike Creagen

Groucho, Chico, Harpo, and Zeppo are on Campus this Thursday along with Charlie Chaplin to comprise a double bill of comedy from Cineguild.

Duck Soup is the Marx Brothers best film, due to the expertise direction of Leo McCarey. What McCarey did was to give them a cinematic structure and unity in which to display their lunacy. The pace is kept steady throughout, never bogged down by the out-of-place music sequences and love scenes that marred many of the Brothers' films. The visual gags are among the best the Marx Brothers have ever performed, including the famous mirror sequence which alone is worth the admission. They are supported by a good cast, including their favourite lady, Margaret Dumont, and Louis Calhern.

A Chaplin short, The Immigrant, rounds out the double bill. Almost 60 years old, it still holds up as a comedy classic, with its heartwarming Chaplin romance and hilarious comedy routines. The opening scenes on the immigrants' boat are the film's best.

Don't miss them this Thursday at 7 and 9:30 pm. at Dunning Hall

Night of the Iguana

An ambitious attempt

by Norman James

The first major Drama Department production made a noble leap by ambitiously tackling Tennessee Williams' Night of the Iguana, and for the most part, despite faltering moments, did justice to a most difficult play. Director Rod Robertson has not given us a great show, but has managed to communicate much of what is important in the play. Perhaps it is because of the difficulties that the good moments shine brighter.

Night of the Iguana is a play about an ex-minister, called Shannon (John Frizzell), whose every action, including his nervous breakdown, is connected to his urgent need to come to terms with his God, a God of thunder storms. His torment in seeking his God is translated into his choice of two women. He is naturally drawn towards Hannah (Nancy Palk), who in some way has found her God, and yet retains the most human of virtues and failings. But Shannon must inevitably return to Maxine (Judith Thompson), with whom he can satisfy his sexual passions, and perhaps find some peace with himself.

Handling the play with care and respect, Robertson composed a symphony of counterpoints. He emphasized the opposite forces that push, pull, and envelope Shannon. The characters of the cool Hannah and the hot boisterous Maxine coupled with the loud frantic action and peaceful lulls evoked from the audience the mad sense of conflict that Shannon goes through. The loud moments were often awkward, but the peaceful times with Hannah and her aged father carried the play, and succeeded in bringing the production to a powerful conclusion.

The set, designed by Gavin Semple, also explored the polarities in the play. Semple juxtaposed the picturesque realism of the hotel with the symbolic representation of the jungle. But although both were intricate and beautiful to admire, they stood on each other's toes. The size of Convocation Hall denied the set any transition from one extreme to the other, and so Semple could not escape from the confines of the stage.

The acting, as a whole was strong, and among the minor characters, David Dietrich gave an excellent performance as Nonno the dying poet. Among the three major characters, what problems arose came mainly from misunderstanding or lack of any understanding. Frizzell as Shannon picked his way through the text, but lacked any comprehension of what Shannon was experiencing in small matters he found his way, but when Shannon's serious hang-ups emerged, as in the scene when Shannon recognizes God in the storm, Frizzell deserved to be struck by lightning. Judith Thompson, as Maxine, gave a sympathetic interpretation, but her misunderstanding resulted from not appreciating to what extent she could portray Maxine. Frequently she exceeded her talents trying unnecessarily to draw a character she could not handle.

The most consistent performance came from Nancy Palk as Hannah; she captured the cool serenity of Hannah, stealing many of her scenes. Her competence was best revealed beside Frizzell who with Palk played his role more comfortably than elsewhere. Palk had a good appreciation of the peaceful demeanor of Hannah without underplaying Hannah's own conflict and foibles. She tickled the audience when she vainly tried to help Shannon escape from the school teacher and his latest 'girl' friend, and later showed great poise beside the erratic fits of Shannon.

Robertson took a considerable risk in choosing Night of the Iguana, and yet despite minor problems of acoustics and major problems of character and set design, came through with a production meritable in its success in driving Williams home to the audience. Had the play been as powerful as the last scene when Nonno recites his final poem and then quietly dies with his daughter Hannah beside him, the production would have been a great success.

Judith Thompson

John Bottomley

Frizzell and Thompson

John Bottomley

Nancy Palk and John Frizzell

John Bottomley

Brilliant design & acting

by Sandy Naiman

Night of the Iguana, Tennessee Williams' haunting psychological drama, is one of the most exciting, most brilliantly acted and designed productions to come out of the Drama Department in years.

Its one of those productions where everything seemed to click. Gavin Semple's set, the first thing we see when we enter Convocation Hall, is, for lack of a better word, incredible. Con Hall is completely transformed into a lush rainforest, with leaves projecting right out into the audience. A ramshackle hotel, built with stunning realism counterbalances the impressionistic jungle. Semple's setting is beautifully designed for the players as well. An ingenious hammock is hitched to two of the supports of the veranda. And the Spanish design is emphasized with a curved archway which leads off to another portion of the hotel.

Coupled with this set is a cast of actors who, each in their own manner have captured their characters both physically and emotionally. John Frizzell, as the Reverend Shannon, has captured the raging and frightened torment of this man surprisingly well. This is one of the first dramatic roles I've seen Frizzell play and compared to the affected comic roles he usually portrays, here he demonstrates what a truly fine actor he has become. He never alienates us, as Shannon surely could. Instead Frizzell's Shannon is strangely pathetic and multi-faceted. It's an exceedingly difficult role for a young actor and a role I believed in completely.

Judith Thompson plays Maxine Faulk, the coarse and grotesque proprietress of the hotel. Again, another terribly difficult role because of Maxine's crusty hardness under which is a genuine warmth and understanding. Miss Thompson has all Maxine's toughness, all her harshness and her intense drive to survive and make the most of her existence. As well, Miss Thompson is able to communicate the subtleties of Maxine's softer side, her understanding of Shannon's "spook" and her ability to cope with his feverish fight with his own conscience.

One of the most beautiful performances in the play is Nancy Palk's Hannah Jelkes, the upright and seemingly cold spinster from Nantucket. Miss Palk brings with her a breath of freshness into the humidity of the rainforest. Her clear delivery and her sense of commitment and sincerity are completely inspiring as she talks about her travels around the world and the way she and her grandfather Nonno have financed their wanderings. She has Hannah's crispness as well as a deep and somewhat stifled sexuality and her forays with Shannon have all the electricity of the storm which finishes the second act.

David Dietrich as the 97 year old poet is again inspiring. He looks as if he will fragment at any moment, even his voice crackles with age. Except at the very last, when he recites his last poem, then he becomes more youthful, his body gains a last burst of strength and his voice speaks out in a clear and almost prophetic analogy of the action that has just preceded. He is dressed in white and even his white hair symbolizes a sense of beauty and cleanliness which he seems to have brought to the hotel.

Wes Lack and Philip Tarrant as Mrs. Faulk's Mexican employees are hilarious in their pantomimed hijinks. Even though neither of them ever utter a word of English they are able to communicate with us through their varied facial and physical expressions. And their comic timing is perfect. Dietrich, Tarrant and Lack never lose their concentration, the sense of the character they are playing, even when the spotlight is not on them.

Debby Poole and Alison Galt as two of Shannon's clients on the Mexican tour are energetically played as well. Miss Poole as a butchy Texan school teacher protecting the interests of her ward - Charlotte, is almost comical in her ravings at Shannon for seducing the innocent child. Miss Galt is equally amusing in trying to persuade Shannon to marry her after seducing her.

This production of a very complex and difficult play is beautiful and totally intriguing. Aside from an excellent cast, director Rod Robertson's overview of the play, his ability to mix comedy with the intrinsic human tragedy of Shannon and Maxine and even Hannah makes the production much more pleasurable and entertaining. And it is entertaining, not just in its burlesque, for there is that, but in what Robertson has been able to meet out of Tennessee Williams script, as well as the tight and careful lighting, the superb technical effects, the glorious setting.

Night of the Iguana is a play you mustn't miss. It's one of Williams most beautiful plays and one of Queen's most beautiful productions.

John Frizzell and Deborah Poole

John Bottomley

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT
SUNDAY 10 AM TO 6 PM

the MARKET
BARBER SHOP
& hairstyling salon

Peter Smits invites you
to his new hair care shop
549-2110
43 BROCK ST. KINGSTON, ONT.

Donald Gow Memorial Lecture

Saturday November 16

12 Noon

Wallace Hall

luncheon

lecture

Speaker — Dr. Andre - Raynauld
- chairman Economic Council of Canada

Topic — Social Indicators

Panel — Dr. J.J. Deutsch
Ms. Gail Stewart
Mr. Scott Campbell

Luncheon tickets available
from the Alumni office at
Price of $8.00 per person

PIZZAPIZZAPIZZAPIZZA

BROADWAY
PIZZA

37 Brock St.

548-4216

PIZZAPIZZAPIZZAPIZZA

Insight into Nazi guilt

by Evan Thompson
During the war, the man who is now the head of a huge German electrical company (Maximilian Schell) was an SS officer at a concentration camp. He, and thousands of his compatriots are still at large, but many have found their way to the pages of the Odessa File.

Jon Voight, assigned to track down this "Who's Where" of Nazi war criminals in Hamburg, Vienna and Heidelberg, Ronald Neane, the director, maintains a constant level of tension, especially evident when Voight is infiltrating the Odessa organization, posing as a criminal.

The movie dwells at length on the camp, Rega, that Schell commanded, but Neane mercifully spares us any detailed examination, visually, at least, of his atrocities. There is a suitable number of violent flashbacks, effectively presented in black and white, these serve to remind us of how terrible the commandant, Herr Rochmann was. Peter Miller (Voight) is a journalist in Hamburg who, after obtaining the diary of an inmate of Rega, decides to try and track down Rochmann.

Neane has masterfully utilized the German atmosphere. The subway, with its cold, foggy corridors, lends itself perfectly to a chase scene. A reunion of German officers, now wealthy businessmen, is all "oom pah pah", rousing speeches and clinking of voluminous, overflowing mugs of German beer; and the streets of Hamburg at Christmas-time are beautifully photographed.

The Odessa File never runs away with itself. Neither does it plod; it moves swiftly and believably, using low key scenes as contrast to high-powered, chaotic ones. An especially frightening scene occurs in a dark printer's shop, behind the roaring and slamming of presses and ominous-looking paper shredders. It ends with a would-be assassin falling off a roof to a grisly death on a spike protruding from one of the machines some twenty feet below.

Ronald Neane, besides giving us an exciting spy yarn, has presented us with an aspect of Germany many of us are not aware of: the perpetration of its governmental machinery by Nazi war criminals.

The book by Frederick

Forsythe, upon which the film is based, is true, and this is easy to believe.

Jon Voight becomes obsessed with tracking down Schell, and the final confrontation at his chateau takes the form of a heated debate. Voight speaks for young Germany, ashamed of the brutality of its ancestors, and Schell for the Nazi element, attributing Germany's present success to the strict Nazi regime present in her industrial management. His argument is lengthy and eloquent, but futile.

Voight's narration is not over-bearing, and is offered at the most opportune times, particularly after the climax at the conclusion of the film.

This is Jon Voight's best effort so far, and Maximilian Schell is suitable chilling and aloof as the war criminal. What results is not a psychoactive horror show, but a sense of insight into the mind of a war criminal, constantly contorted with hate and guilt.

Application for Commerce Orientation Committee:

- Chairman (From 77)
- Communications
- Academic
- Social
- Secretary - Treasurer

Available in 120 Dunning.
Deadline for submission
Friday Nov. 15. 5 P.M.

Campus Pub Night

College Bowl Festival '74

Queen's Pub

live band - CHATEAUX

November 15 and 16

1 pair of tickets to the 1974 College Bowl
will be given away as
a door prize

This is your entry to the College Bowl Ticket Lottery!
Bring to Queen's Pub on November 15

NAME: _____

ADDRESS: _____

You must be at the Pub to claim your tickets
Draw will be around midnight on November 15

Mr. Terry French announced today his candidacy for alderman in Sydenham Ward

Mr. Terry French announced today his candidacy for alderman in Sydenham ward.

The municipal election will take place on Monday 2nd December. Mr. French stated that a major issue which he says affects Queen's students is inadequate lighting in Kingston, particularly between the east and west campus and in streets of Sydenham ward, particularly the city park and areas adjacent to the park.

He also stated that he is concerned with student housing accommodation and knows that students not only prefer adequate rooming houses but also more apartment dwelling accommodation. If students request further information on this matter they can call him at 546-3411 and offer him suggestions in this and any other items that might be of help to the welfare of the students.

Mr. French has been actively involved in several municipal areas notably a member of the Board of Education from 1964 to 1969 during which he was chairman of the Board in 1967-68. When the Board amalgamated in the Frontenac County Board of Education in 1969, he became the first chairman of the Board in 1969 and again in 1971.

He has worked for Queen's in several areas: In 1970 he was co chairman for the City of Kingston in the Queen's University Capital Appeal Program. In 1972 was a member of the Kingston General Hospital School of Nursing Committee.

He is also a member of the Board of Trustees, Queen's University as well as being a member of the Queen's University Building Committee, the Queen's University Campus Planning Committee and the Queen's University Executive Committee.

Mr. French is President and Managing Director of Radio Station CKLC AM & FM.

Spier's sculpture: "participation art"

by Nancy Spies
A recent Brown Bag Lunch at Agnes Etherington Art Centre marked the opening of a sculpture exhibit by Ray Spier, and provided an excellent opportunity to meet informally with the artist. Spier has been very successful in the past ten years as a sculptor and has exhibited in numerous shows across Ontario. His commissioned works include the outdoor sculpture at McArthur Hall which is typical of his modular style.

At first glance, Spier's work is almost too simplistic, reminiscent of magnified "Soma" blocks placed in various arrangements. Nevertheless, while the prominent ideas of his pieces are simple and pure in their initial structure, they can be combined in a great many variations to form complex sculptures. It is this principle of manipulating shapes, that forms the main thrust of Spier's work.

The central goal of this exhibit is to promote uninhibited participation in art. While teaching at Glendon College at York University, Spier noticed a resistance and nervousness among students to work in front of others. He sees the same fear in the public reaction to his sculptures, for unlike traditional sculpture which is unchanging and can only be admired from a distance, Spier's work allows for versatility and variety, and demands participation from the observer. Rather than risk getting so accustomed to a piece that one doesn't see it anymore, Spier's sculptures are changeable and thus he encourages people to manipulate the arrangements to their own preferences.

The exhibit consists of free standing sculptures and adjustable wallpieces. The former are fairly large, and although they are made of interlocking simple geometric forms, their size restricts their versatility somewhat. None, however, are dominating with respect to height, for Spier doesn't want people to feel inferior by the massiveness of the module, and stresses instead that the piece can be changed about. This changeability is most apparent in Spier's wallpieces which are constructed from pieces that easily slide or move.

Spier works primarily in aluminum and also has some very interesting pieces constructed from fibreglass. Aluminum allows for lots of versatility, for it can be polished to a high mirror-like finish, or at the opposite extreme it can be ground to a rough, but interesting surface. Spier prefers the rough finishes for his larger works for here they don't detract from the shape itself, and uses a smoother, brushed surface for his smaller modules.

Spier's concept of interlocking shapes resulted from his experiences of joining wood by means of tenon and lap corners. His idea of changeability arose when he cut up a box sculpture he had constructed and realized it could be moved about and re-assembled in many interesting forms.

Ray Spier's exhibit continues at Agnes until December 4, 1974 and is certainly exemplary of a growing movement in "participation art".

Rugby final

Gaels yield to Gryphons

by A. Page
The OUA A Rugby Championships were decided here at Queen's this past Saturday on the West Campus fields in what can only be termed as a very successful athletic event.

Before the final championship games however a seven-a-side tournament took place in which McMaster won and a Second XV league final took place in which Queen's defeated McMaster 18-3.

At 2:00 the spectators shifted to George Richardson Stadium to watch the Queen's First XV play Guelph. Expectations ran high that the strong Queen's side would continue its almost traditional domination over Guelph, the surprise entry from the western division after York had been ruled out as the result of technicalities. This was not the case.

The game was tough, hard, Canadian Rugby. Queen's aimed to dominate possession of the ball with its well-disciplined forwards, and pass the ball to the backs who have been quite effective this year. Guelph, to defeat this plan of play, challenged the Queen's pack, and sent its backs up quickly to smother running attacks before they could properly begin. Slowly but steadily Guelph accumulated small advantages and eventually a Queen's defensive lapse gave Guelph a try after a loose ruck on the Queen's five yard line. Determined Queen's play narrowed the margin at one point to 10-6 (for Guelph), but the Gryphons surged back and proved just strong enough to score once more late in the second half to finalize it at 14-6. The margin of victory was clear; Guelph played championship ball and Queen's did not have a good day.

The results of this championship showed that the league is getting stronger. There were several strong teams in the league this year. All of comparable skill level.

The Seconds League produced good teams this year - a welcome occurrence because the Seconds in ideal circumstance should act as farm teams to the First teams.

Trophies for this final were presented by OUA President Dr. D. DeF. MacIntosh of Queen's and the post game festivities were enjoyed by everyone.

Rugger action in the Final OUA A Tournament at Queen's against Guelph. Gryphons defeated Gaels 14-6.

Hockey Gaels lose two

by Peter Watts
If defense is supposed to be the strong point of the hockey Gaels this year, then this past weekend's play does not speak well for the rest of the season. The Gaels managed to allow no less than 16 goals in dropping a pair of exhibition games in "la belle province". On Friday night they dropped a 3-4 decision to Bishop's Gaitors in Lennoxville P.Q. Less than 24 hours later, the Gaels were soundly trounced 11-5 by Loyola Warriors.

In Friday night's return match against the Gaitors, the Gaels controlled the play for almost half of the game. The trouble was that the home team managed to put four pucks behind netminder Clyde Harris before the second period was half over. At that point, Steve Kidd went into the nets and went the rest of the way, allowing the winning goal at 14:51 of the third period. Jim Moyses scored two goals including the winner for Bishops with singles going to Phil Hermite and Shawn Ashton. John Cerre paced the Gaels attack with two goals, both coming late in the second period. The Gaels actually tied the score in the third period on goals by Bill White and Dave Smith. The score remained 4-4 until Moyses popped in the winner with just over 5 minutes to play.

Saturday's game got off to a bad start as well with Loyola opening the scoring after just 17 seconds of play. Mike Cuddeon was the Warriors' marksman. Despite this, the Gaels trailed by just 3-2 after the opening twenty minutes. The Warriors broke the game open in the middle period however outscoring the Gaels 5-1. They added 1 more in the final period to win the game. Steve Herriot and Randy Mohr led the Warriors attack with 3 goals apiece, singles went to Andy Kane, John Harris, Dave Wilson, Mike Harramus, and Cuddeon. Cerre scored twice for the Gaels with Craig Shannon, Earl Moulton and defenseman Steve Cross adding single markers. Loyola dominated play throughout the game, outshooting the Gaels 51-33, including shots in the final period against Steve Kidd who replaced Harris after the second period.

It would seem that the Gaels went east without worrying too much about winning or losing. One has to hope that that attitude will be somewhat different when the league action gets underway this weekend. The Gaels will open their schedule on Saturday night when they host Brock at 8 p.m. at the Harty Arena.

V-ball comes close

by Peter Xhignesse
Last weekend the V-ball Gaels finished their exhibition season at the McMaster invitational tournament.

The first match Saturday morning saw the Gaels defeated 15-6 as a result of "first game stiffness", but they came back victorious in the second game 15-10. An impressive record of 11 wins and 1 loss saw the Queen's team into the finals.

Strong playing ability was demonstrated by Frank Massong and Al Scott who were praised by coach Vaelav Smola as having played their best volleyball ever. Queen's dominated Laurentian in the semi-finals with two victories, aided by the strong serving power of Ted Scharf and Peter Xhignesse as well as the outstanding blocking at the net by Stan Grainger.

Despite this fine showing,

Squash

The squash girls opened their season this weekend with a decisive victory at the McMaster Invitational Tournament, winning ten out of the twelve scheduled games. Playing for the team were: Sylvia Moravetz, Porlia Leggat, Jane Roundthwaite, Lea Hansen, Willa Henry, Melanie McWilliams and Sheila Patterson. Making their first appearance on the team, Lea Hansen and Sheila Patterson contributed to the victory by winning all their games.

The quality of the playing has improved since the past year, and it promises to offer good competition for the upcoming Queen's Invitational Tournament to be held on the 23rd of November.

More exciting action in Rugger Final on Saturday.

Pat Patterson of Queen's blocks out Frostburg player.

Basketball Gaels go undefeated

by Alps Bonivell

Now granted the season is young, indeed, it has yet to start but the mere fact that the basketball Gaels have gone undefeated, winning four straight games is reason enough to stop, look up from your 'Contemporary View Of Elementary Physics' (fifth edition) and with a measurable amount of shock on your face ask 'what the H is going on?'. Rest easy, because in this short resume the Gaels will be revealed! exposed! and unmasked! for the exciting team they really are.

When the Basketball Gaels returned from their two day road trip to Montreal this past weekend they had accomplished what no other Queen's B-Ball team had done for four years. They had won four in a row, beating McGill 92-76 and Bishops 78-71 this weekend as well as Sheridan and Bishops last weekend.

Although not always winning in the most impressive of styles they showed steady improvement throughout the weekend. Hopefully in the weeks to come the players will also be able to speak enthusiastically of their great fans without suffering pangs of guilt complexes.

Although there are many highly skilled individuals on the team individuals don't win championships—teams do—and this is perhaps this is the biggest change in this years squad from last years.

When it was announced that

John Keck had popped 30 points in both games mild surprise was expressed—even though typically it would have been no surprise. Both games were team efforts, with everybody seeing court and an evident lack of prima donnas.

The epitome of team play, as expressed by rookie coach Barry O'Connor is defense which is characterized by toughness, tightness and aggressiveness. In accordance with the number one emphasis being on defense coaches O'Connor and Frank Tindall have initiated a 'most valuable defensive player' for each game. The first such honour goes to Wes Garrod (formerly of Guelph U.) who scored 14 points against Bishops. In the Saturday game against McGill the MVPD went to Lyn Cord (formerly of Laurier) who played admirably at both guard and forward.

Although priority is defense they have managed an average of 80 points in each of the last four games, due to fast breaking efforts.

Another key factor with this year's team is the out and out conditioning. Last year one of the most heard criticisms of the team was its propensity to collapse in the second half or fourth quarter. This year if the Gaels collapse it will be because everyone has fouled out. If Queen's Men's Basketball keeps on this trend some of the great enthusiasm exhibited by the team can't help but show in the win column and the stands.

Gals downed by National players

by Lyn Atwood

Queen's should consider itself well represented this year as far as women's basketball is concerned. On the road at 8:00 AM and on the court at 2:30 PM these girls met their first challenge with a 64-21 victory over Wilfred Laurier University (formerly Waterloo-Lutheran) at the Guelph Invitational Basketball Tournament this past weekend. They lost to Hamilton Bartlett Brakettes (formerly the Hamilton Athenas) in the second game and were knocked down to the consolation round which our Golden Gals eventually won after defeating U. of Windsor and Frostburg State College in two very exciting and fast-paced games on Saturday.

In the opening game against Wilfred Laurier (whose team incidentally is now being coached by Warren Sutton-former coach of Ottawa U.) Queen's had to fight hard to avoid playing down to their opposition. As it was the game was generally scrappy and the skill level not high. The score is indicative of the no contest. All players on the Queen's Golden Gals saw a piece of the scoring action with the exception of Mary Brunton who is recovering from a leg injury.

Pat Smith, a prize package from Laurentian (who is attending MacArthur this year) succeeded in being the high scorer in all four games except Windsor where Laney Marshall bettered her score by a single point. Pat is the tallest player (at 5'11") on the Queen's team and will definitely be an asset to Queen's, especially in our contention for the O.W.I.A.A. championship against Laurentian Voyageurs who are coached by Norm Vickery (asst. coach of the National Team) and who now have four National players playing with them. Pat Smith was also Queen's top rebounder and should help Queen's retain control of the boards in the league games.

Friday afternoon found Queen's pitted against the famous Hamilton City League team which boasts an average height of 5'10". A win for Hamilton was inevitable with fast-paced and at the half Queen's found themselves down by 4 points. The second half belonged to Queen's and Frostburg obviously suffered a psychological defeat with 10 minutes remaining when their top scorer Sandy Lough failed to hit the basket at all in 10 minutes of play and eight attempts. Kathy Keely and Pat Smith shared top scoring position with 12 points apiece and rebound stats show Queen's in control of the boards most of the game.

The Queen's team is also appreciative of the deceptive strategy of Karen Carson and powers of observation of Jean Crichton in the unique scoring play on Saturday. Good eyes Jean.

Up and coming games include those against U. of T. and York U. this coming weekend. Both games will be played in Bartlett gym, the Toronto one at 6:00 on Friday and the York game at 1:30 on Saturday. Come out and support this team—it's championship bound—and see some exciting basketball action as well.

and Mary-Anne-Drinkwater.

In the final game of the tournament Queen's defeated Frostburg State College of Maryland U.S.A. by a score of 58-45. This game was particularly fast-paced and at the half Queen's found themselves down by 4 points. The second half belonged to Queen's and Frostburg obviously suffered a psychological defeat with 10 minutes remaining when their top scorer Sandy Lough failed to hit the basket at all in 10 minutes of play and eight attempts. Kathy Keely and Pat Smith shared top scoring position with 12 points apiece and rebound stats show Queen's in control of the boards most of the game.

The Queen's team is also appreciative of the deceptive strategy of Karen Carson and powers of observation of Jean Crichton in the unique scoring play on Saturday. Good eyes Jean.

Up and coming games include those against U. of T. and York U. this coming weekend. Both games will be played in Bartlett gym, the Toronto one at 6:00 on Friday and the York game at 1:30 on Saturday. Come out and support this team—it's championship bound—and see some exciting basketball action as well.

Queen's Fencers qualify

by Rosemary Knight

Last weekend in Ottawa, fencers from Queen's men's and women's teams competed to gain a position on the regional team being sent to the Ontario Winter Games. This region consists of Ottawa, Kingston, Peterborough and all surrounding areas. Anyone under the age of 26 was to compete, excluding those people who are on the Olympic talent squad.

Fencers from Queen's were Denise Cassidy-Aagust, Debbie Christian and Rosemary Knight in Women's foil; Bruce Peterkin, Mike Walker and Orla Aagust in men's foil; Ron Fitzgerald in men's sabre. Rosemary Knight, Bruce Peterkin and Ron Fitzgerald each made it to the final pool in their weapon thereby qualifying to participate in the Ontario Winter Games.

Please.

Donations may be sent to

Mrs. Wanda Kay
Secretary - Treasurer
Queen's University Division United Way
Department of University Services
Room 332, Rideau Building
207 Stuart Street.

The United Way

LLBO could close Pub

by Paul Steep

On Dec. 31 of this year the Liquor Licensing Board of Ontario will stop issuing special occasion licenses to university pubs. These are the licenses under which most university pubs operate. On this date the LLBO will require that these pubs apply for a permanent license in order to keep operating. They also want the University Administration to take over the operation of the pubs from the various student governments which now run them.

These new regulations will affect the Queen's Pub and the campus in general in a number of ways. Queen's is not operating a legal pub as far as the LLBO is concerned. According to our O.F.S. delegate, Terry MacI, this is going to make it very difficult to obtain a permanent license. Queen's pub is deficient as it has insufficient fire exits, insufficient floor space for the numbers it is serving, too few washrooms and serving beer in paper cups. LLBO regulations require that, in order to qualify for a permanent license, beer must be served in glasses and that we use a specified dishwasher. The costs of meeting these requirements are overwhelming. According to O.F.S. delegate Marilyn Barnett, Carleton is spending $75,000 to meet these government standards.

John Gray Vice President (University Affairs) is not as pessimistic as O.F.S. seems to be. He feels that the O.F.S. newspaper has blown the whole thing out of proportion. Last Thursday, LLBO inspectors reviewed the status of the Queen's pub. Gray said that the LLBO will not grant Queen's a permanent license but that they will not close it down when the special occasion licenses are no longer available. The new university centre will provide the extra space that is needed for a license and Gray says that the LLBO has agreed to allow them to run a pub until such time as the extension is completed. Both Mach and Burnett stressed that even if such permission has been granted it is very different from being issued a permanent license.

The termination of special occasion licenses will also affect pubs that are held in areas other than the Queen's pub. Permanent licenses will be required for areas like Grant Hall even though they would only be used oc-

(Continued on Page 3)

Volume 102, No. 20
Friday, November 15, 1974

Faulkner: student assistance should be better distributed

OTTAWA (CUP)...Student assistance should perhaps be more closely geared to their financial needs. Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner said in his address to the Nov. 6 annual meeting of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada. While the government concerned itself with the financing of university education because of its post war growth and the need to push scholarship and research, its main concern now is with the advancement of knowledge, equality of opportunity and cultural development.

On the question of equality of opportunity however, Faulkner indicated government concern about general subsidies at the university level of education, when learning difficulties for many students develop in primary and secondary schools.

"While I do not want to dispute the fact that post-secondary education provides benefits to society at large, nevertheless I wonder whether these benefits alone are sufficient to justify the present distribution of federal support," he said.

"We should perhaps begin to examine the financial needs of students in the light of what is being done for other groups in terms of income maintenance, and treat this question apart from any scheme of merit awards—as a genuine social security pre-employment issue."

But currently, Faulkner added, Ottawa's financial commitment in education is primarily at the post-secondary level, and students who have reached this level are, or will be, "among the most advantaged groups in the nation. To the extent that federal support enables institutions to hold tuition fees down, many relatively well-off students might be unjustifiably subsidized," he said.

He also noted that education is becoming a life-long activity for many people and the provinces are studying the feasibility and desirability of some form of aid to part-time students.

Alma Mater Society Referenda

1. Shall the Ontario Union of Students fee of .25 per student be increased to $1.50 per student and allocated to the Ontario Federation of Students

Yes: 54.9 percent No: 45.1 percent

27 percent of eligible students voted.

2a. Have you ever smoked marijuana?

Yes: 62.7 percent No: 37.3 percent

26.4 percent of eligible students voted

2b. Do you feel that the consumption of marijuana should be legalized in Canada?

Yes: 58.1 percent No: 41.9 percent

25.8 percent of eligible students voted

2c. Do you feel that the legalization should be restricted (eg: as drugs and alcohol are now treated)?

Yes: 77.1 percent No: 22.9 percent

24.3 percent of eligible students voted

ASUS Referendum

Do you agree with the policy of awarding a class of degree with the Three-year BA Degree

Yes: 216 No: 257

Would you favour the opportunity of being able to personally choose, at the beginning of your graduating year, whether or not you desire a class of degree?

Yes: 353 No: 114

Would you agree to have a distinction for only those with 80 percent and above?

Yes: 254 No: 256

T. Collins
THE QUEEN'S JOURNAL

What with fears of the Pub's closing, this scene of depravity could become commonplace at Queen's. Hmmm, come to think of it, we already know a few who look like this.

Friday, November 15

- 3:30 p.m. - Department of Political Studies visiting speaker is Professor Donald Schartz University of Toronto. "Soviet Administrative Theory". Room 517 Watson Hall.
- 4:00 p.m. - CFRC - The Goo Show: "Emperor of the Universe".
- 8:30 p.m. - Queen's Department of Drama presents Night of the Iguana by Tennessee Williams in Convocation Hall. Tickets and info at drama desk. 547-6291.
- 8:30 p.m. - CFRC - Pops Concert. A festival of light classics.
- 8:00 p.m. - Medical Variety Night '74 - Clap-Grant Hall. Tickets available in the John Orr Room 10:30-1:30: $2.00, students $1.50.

Saturday, November 16

- 12 noon - Donald Gow Memorial Lecture in Wallace Hall. Speaker: Dr. Andre Raymond, Chairman of the Economic Council of Canada. Topic: Social Indicators. Panel: Dr. J.J. Deutsch, Gail Stewart, Scott Campbell. Luncheon tickets available from the Alumni Office at the price of $8.00 per person.
- 8:00 p.m. - Intercollegiate Hockey - Brock at Queen's. Broadcast on CFRC.
- 8:00 p.m. - Bitter Grounds Coffee House and Good Times Emporium presents Fred Wertham with sidemen Frank Santny and Jim Stedman. Tickets available in the John Orr Room Wed., Thurs., Fri. 10:30 - 4:30.
- 9:00 p.m. - Meds Variety Night in Grant Hall.
- 9:00 p.m. - International Pub and Dance in Wallace Hall. European beer, imported liquor, foreign foods, great people 25¢ for members with cards, 50¢ for non-members.
- 8:30 p.m. - Classics Department Party in Lower Vic Games Room.
- 8:30 p.m. - Queen's Department of Drama presents Night of the Iguana in Convocation Hall.
- 8:30 p.m. - Ballroom Dance Club holds its first dance in the Dance Studio (upstairs in the Phys. Ed. Centre). Ballroom dancing and live. $1.00 with membership, $2.00 without. Must have had some beginner instruction. 542-3995.
- 9:00 p.m. - CFRC - Folk Process: The evolution of folk music from its inception to the 60's.

Sunday, November 17

- 10:30 a.m. - Morning Worship at Chalmers United Church.
- 10:30 a.m. - Folk Mass in Dunning Hall, followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House, 164 University Avenue.
- 2:00 p.m. - Picture of the Month discussion and a tour of the Agnes Etherington Art Centre by a Gallery Guide.
- 3:00 p.m. - Recital: Contemporary Canadian Music - Diana McIntosh, piano in the main gallery at Agnes Etherington. Admission is free.
- 4:00 p.m. - CFRC - Perchance to Dream: A look at the less serious side of literature, incorporating poetry and prose for both children and adults in a magazine format.
- 5:00 p.m. - CFRC - Music in Kingston: Recordings made especially for broadcast by CFRC of concerts on the Kingston music scene.

- 7 and 10 p.m. - Bruce Cockburn in Grant Hall. Tickets in the John Orr Room, 10:30-4:30. $3.00 with student card.
- 9:30 p.m. - Galerie Victoria presents Wayne Moug and Peter Richards playing bagpipes in the common room of Victoria Hall.

Pubs and Theatres

- Manor - The Orientals
- Frontenac - Finnegan's - Liam McGuire
- Frontenac - Muldoon's - Moonshiners
- 101 Inn - She
- Fowhouse - Nobody Special
- Commodore - Ocean

- Odeon - Airport 75
- Capitol 1 - Police Woman
- Capitol 2 - Uptown Saturday Night
- Hyland - The Odessa File
- Physed. centre

Phys. Ed. Centre

- The swimming pool at Queen's will be closed due to other university requirements on November 16, 10 to 12 p.m. and 4:30 to 6:00 p.m.
- The arena at Queen's will be closed on November 16, 3:30 to 5:20 p.m.

Coffee Shop

- The new hours are as follows:
- Monday - Thursday: 7:30 - 11:30 p.m.
- Friday and Saturday: 7:30 - 10:00 p.m.
- Sunday: 8:00 - 10:00 p.m.

Upcoming Events

- Tuesday, November 19 - 7:00 p.m. - Department of Film Studies presents Documentary Night. Four short films will be screened: Toute la Memoire du Monde, Nuit et Brouillard, Hotel des Invalides, and Sang des Betes. In Jeffery Hall and no admission. The films have French dialogue without subtitles. Notes and translations will be provided at the screening.
- Tuesday, November 19 - 8:00 p.m. - Buddha in Egypt: The Desert Fathers and the Way to Inner Peace - a lecture by Father Edward G. Holtam, S.S.J.E. in the Andrews Room, 2nd floor Theological Hall.
- Wednesday, November 20 - Ban Rich Fireside at 6:00 p.m. with Julia du Prey, vocalist - French and German late Romantic music. Coffee and dessert will be served at 5:45 p.m. In the Ban Rich Common Room.
- Wednesday, November 20 - 7:30 p.m. - Tout Va Bien a film starring Jane Fonda and Yves Montand, will be shown in Ellis Auditorium with an admission charge of $1.00. Producer Jean-Pierre Gorin will be present and will discuss his work and answer questions from the audience. The evening will conclude with a screening of Letter to Jane a film made after Tout Va Bien and in response to a newspaper photograph of Jane Fonda in Vietnam.
- Wednesday, November 20 - 8:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m. - Psychology Smoker - will be held in Clark Hall. Admission is $2.50 and Beer is $2.00.
- Thursday, November 21 - 8:00 p.m. - Seminar on Career Possibilities in Classics in Watson Hall 542.

- GREB-KODIAK BOOTS-

Waterproof, Insulated, Plain or Steel Toe.
Sizes 4 to 13
Always Your Size in Stock at the Best Price

LARRY'S Men's Wear at
354 King St., East
Just 3 Doors from Princess St.

CAREERS IN LAW

A discussion of the traditional opportunities available in the legal profession as well as the expanding opportunities for women.

Tuesday, Nov. 19, 7:00 p.m.
Second floor Common Room
Students' Memorial Union

Guests: Mr. Lyman Robinson &
Prof. Beverley Wilson of the Queen's Faculty of Law

ALL INVITED
- BRING YOUR QUESTIONS

Reporters needed
to stir up some Mud;
typists needed to process it.

Work for the Journal

One man's politics

by Doug Bonnell

Take one safe government riding with a huge popular majority. Let's say four thousand votes. Ask the retiring member to leave a year early. Catch the opposition off guard and call an immediate by-election. Bring in a new, dynamic candidate, let's say a mayor from a major Canadian city who won his last municipal election with over ninety-per cent of the vote. Faultless. Pure genius. Sure victory, right? Sorry, you lose. And so did the mayor.

Pierre Benoit, the mayor of Ottawa, finished third in last week's provincial by-election in Carleton East. Benoit, touted as a future cabinet minister, and possibly the next leader of the federal Conservative party, appeared unbeatable two months ago. But that was before the results in Stormont when another safe Tory seat went to the opposition. It was before the relatively close result in Stormont started a barrage of press coverage on the "decline of Davis popularity" theory. It was before Benoit abandoned the provincial party and tried to run on his own name. When the votes were counted November 7, Benoit was in third, twenty-five hundred votes behind the NDP's Evelyn Gignies, and the lacklustre Liberal winner, Paul Taylor. "There is no joy in Mudville, mighty Casey has struck out."

The defeat for Benoit is much more than a loss from Ontario politics of an intelligent and ambitious man, a man who would have heightened the quality of the provincial legislature. It is a warning to William Davis and his government, that after thirty years in power, Ontario Toryism may be wearing a bit thin, that it may be in danger. Maybe.

The Davis Government has been primarily a good one. In the areas of finance and urban development, the Tories have been progressive innovators. The Ontario environmental and transportation policies are considered two of the foremost in North America. And few deny that Davis himself is an honest man, incapable of the political accusations hurled at him by an ineffective Liberal opposition. But perhaps after thirty years, good isn't good enough. It's not enough for provincial Tories to argue that in an Ontario election the people will return to Davis for lack of a better alternative. There may not be an alternative but, governments are not elected, they are thrown out.

In the fields of education and health care the province has been too slow and reactionary. Perhaps even more important, there has been a breakdown in communication with the people, a lack of grass-roots politicking.

There is a gut feeling in Ontario against the Tories, an antagonistic emotional outlook among the common man. It has developed from poor press coverage, a sense of remoteness from the government and the premier, certain breakdowns in government policy coupled with the disintegration of the provincial left wing (an event heralded by the departure of Bert Lawrence). It's a gut feeling and one that will be difficult to overcome. But it is a problem which must be handled expertly by the Tories or 1975 may bring a new premier to power, like Nixon or Lewis. Than won't we have fun

LLBO could close Pub

Continued from Page 1

casionally The A.M.S. has applied for permanent licenses in Grant Hall, Leonard Cafeteria and Clarke Hall. Significantly Jack Hartley Arena will not get a license. As John Gray put it, "Without special occasion licenses we will be very restricted in what functions we can hold." Omm-Pa-Pa cannot be held on as large a scale in any of the areas proposed for licensing.

The other change that the LLBO has proposed is that the University Administration take over the pub administration from the A.M.S. Apparently the Ontario government does not feel that the A.M.S. can be held responsible for any accidents which might occur in the pub. They also think that the University administration will provide better control and maintain safety standards. Considering the dubious legal status of our pub John Gray said he was in no position to argue with anyone. However he added that the A.M.S. is a legal corporation and he wondered why the Ontario government feels that it cannot hold them liable when they can be in all the contracts that they enter. Gray supposed that accepting these government regulations depended on whether you consider a pub on campus a right or a privilege. If it were a right then they would be in a position to challenge the LLBO on some of these points, however the A.M.S. is more inclined to regard it as a privilege.

Marilyn Barnett reported that O.F.S.'s lawyer advised them not to bother challenging these regulations in court. They wouldn't win. However Western has hired a lawyer and is apparently going to ignore this advice.

Barnett said that O.F.S. has set up appointments with the opposition parties in Queen's Park so that the matter will be brought up in the legislature. Besides lobbying in the house, O.F.S. is planning a meeting of all pub managers so that collective action can be taken.

ARTSCI '78
A NIGHT CLUB
IN CLARK HALL
THURSDAY NOV. 21st
BEER 3/$1.00
M.C. JOHN McQUAIG

SKI SADDLEBACK MOUNTAIN MAINE

Ski from January 1-5, with unlimited use of lifts. Accommodations and transportation included for $86.00

Call Jim Downey (544-7703) or Steve Gareau (549-0797), 6 - 9 p.m., for more info., or drop up to 405 Brockington.

A Snowball Ski Club Presentation.

A light white wine in a classic black bottle.
Imported from Germany.
Quite affordable.
Quite unforgettable.

unclassifieds

BALLROOM DANCE CLUB commences Sat. Nov. 16, 8:30 pm - 10:00 pm. $10.00 memberships available at the door. All welcome from Astaires to Donald Ducks provided have had basic instruction. 544-3995.

RUSSIA IS AUSTRALIA BOUND - All friends meet at the Pub Friday, Nov. 15 at 8 pm for a good bye rant.

FOR SALE - i pr. Margesson's Figure Skates, good condition, size 4 1/2 ladies. Also, older White Stag stretch ski jumpsuit, navy with gold racing stripes, like new. $46.75.

ROOM AVAILABLE for female in a two-person house in Elfrond College House, contains two bedrooms, a full kitchen and bathroom. Friendly neighbours. Rent: $115/month. Only a 10 minute walk from campus. Phone Linda 544-5068.

WHEN EVERYTHING IS SAID AND DONE, WE'RE THE GROUP THAT HAD THE FUN - We're Gael Groups 21, 45, 11. Fun has a killing party this Friday at 9:30. Warm-up in the pub at 7:30. Bring friends, gaiety and champagne (Alain). Be there. Cindy, Grey and Maddy. Hal required for admission.

HE EDUCATION COMMISSION has received a bulletin concerning student Maline performances at discount rates at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa. Everyone wanting to see the list of performances is asked to visit the AMS office.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF THE DUTING CLUB on Monday Nov. 18 at 7:30 in Jubilee 101 for all members. Bring tickets and money. More tickets are available. Be there. It's you that makes the club.

TRACK GAELS - The party is on for sure. 8 pm Nov. 16. Check track blackboard or with Sue on how to get there. Krames.

KI THE EASTERN TOWNSHIPS with the Queen's Ski Club. Dec. 29 to Jan. 4 at Mt. Sutton. 6 nights, 2 meals per day and 5 days skiing are included in the low total cost of $15. For those interested come to Lower Vic on Monday Nov. 18 at 7:00. $40 deposit is required on Thursday Nov. 21.

R 10 CALCULATOR for sale, excellent condition, case and charger, included scientific notation, square root, squares and inverses. Priced to sell. Phone Steve at 544-5375.

TATLER-BOL All the invited want to thank Chris and Hugh for the fantastic evening (and morning). When can we sign up for next years cleanup crew?

WOULD THE PERSON who stole my CCA 10 speed Jamba from Dupuis last Friday please return it. If phone Dave at 549-5640 to collect your reward. I need it badly.

INTERESTED IN MOVING - a male house at West Campus? It so phone 549-1459 anytime. Available by Nov. 15.

FOR SALE - 1 ladies raccoon coat, size 10 or 12, will discuss price. Phone 544-4592 around 6 pm.

15 BLUE JEANS are about to give up the ghost. A bottle of bubbly to the good woman who will patch them. Call Andy 544-7903.

GEORGE EILEEN DAVID Thank you very much for your time and the good food. The Boys from Fourth Gordon.

Many thanks to the person who turned in the wallet last Sunday in the periodicals room.

APARTMENT WANTED - If you have now, or will have soon, a small, comfortable apartment for rent in the City Park - lower Earl St. area, please call immediately 544-9133 between 4-7 pm.

WE CAN HELP Birth Control, VD and Abortion. Call 547-2806, 11 am - 5 pm.

SC 17 JACKET LOST: Fri. Nov. 8 at Ottawa House. It is sadly missed by Tuna. If found please phone 544-7931 and ask for Charlie.

BALLROOM DANCE CLUB commences Sat. Nov. 16 at 8:30 pm at Dance Studio. $10.00 memberships available at door. Limited to those who have completed beginner level instruction. 542-3995.

LOOKING FOR A PLACE AFTER CHRISTMAS - We have a room for 2 girls in a modern partially furnished duplex 5 minutes from campus. Rent $48.75/month. Call 544-5375 after 5.

LOOKING FOR A PLACE AFTER

CHRISTMAS - We have room for 2 girls in a modern partially furnished duplex 5 minutes from campus. Rent $48.75/month. Call 544-5375 after 5 pm.

WANTED - 1 girl to share 3 bedroom apartment with 2 other girls. $62/month. Heat utilities included. On Alford St. Student's only, phone 542-5515.

GG32 - Tonight is the night. Finally - our reunion is at the pub. Be there at 8 or soon thereafter. Rena, Richard, Bronck.

STAMPS FOR COLLECTORS - The Queen's Stamp Club will hold its fifth meeting on Mon. Nov. 18 at 8:00 in the Red Room in Kingston Hall. All collectors welcome.

FOR MEN ONLY - You are needed to help with a swim programme for physically handicapped kids at St. Mary's on the Lake. Can you spare the hour 1:30-2:30 Thursday afternoon. Please come to the SVB Office and sign up.

THERE ONCE WAS a girl, name of Jo.

On her birthday she felt kinda low, Then the Duv hit the kindle. Pol a smile on her face And new Jo ain't so low anymore. HAPPY BIRTHDAY, Little Joey, Lolsa love, Sammy, Little Julie,

Little Pete, Hammy, Hawk and The Duke.

PSYCHOLOGY SMOKER NOV. 20. Come out and jag with the crowd at Clark Hall 8pm-1am. There is lots of beer and fun for all. Beer $2.00. Admission 5.25. Let us entertain you.

PROFUSE AND SINCERE APOLOGIES TO THE GIRLS OF 3rd Chown East for the mixup in ads. Thanks for the great party (especially to P.R.). Signed dh Léonard.

ALL CUTE AND CUDDLY creatures rejoice in announcing Grand Opening of City Zoo (228 Earl). All friends and related species cordially invited. Tonight, 8pm. Refreshments served of BYOB etc.

ORIENTATION '75 - Gael applications. Gael applications. Monday November 18.

HAPPY BRUTEDAY DEAR - Have another super year. Remember I love you true.

And I know we'll see it through. Now tell me - What is plus 2? BECOME WORLDLY WISE Come to the Chinese and International Pub and Dance, 8pm Saturday, Nov. 16, at Wallace Hall.

STEVE AMEY'S Lakeview Manor

PLAYING THIS WEEK IN

THE CENTENNIAL ROOM

Taste of the Orient

28 Yonge St., Kingston

We know it took a lot to get where you are today. With us, you'll get the opportunity to get where you want tomorrow.

We're Northern Electric and we'd like to talk to engineering, finance and accounting graduates.

You may already know something about us - we're a large Canadian-owned telecommunications manufacturer. But as a prospective employer, we know you need to know a lot more about us. How big are we? What's our growth story? How do we treat people? How about salaries?

Soon we'll have Northern Electric people on campus who'll be able to answer all your questions in detail. But to help you decide if such a get-together would be advantageous, we will tell you this: we're big, over 27,000 employees in five countries; we're growing fast (in fact, we're one of the largest and fastest growing telecommunications manufacturers in the world!). Last year we opened or began work on nine new plants. We've just chalked up a half-year record sales and record profits. But, as booming as we are, we know we've just touched the surface. There's a whole world waiting for better means of communication.

So we need ambitious

engineers who can be as creative with telecommunications technology as our sales people are with market development - and finance and accounting people whose expertise with money can match our scientists' talent for discovery.

Of course, our standards are high. But then, so are the financial rewards and career securities for graduates who can help us achieve our goals. If what we can offer appears to match what you want, talk to your Campus Placement Officer - he'll arrange that we get together.

We're hiring talent

Northern Electric
COMPANY, LIMITED

unclassifieds

PSYCHOLOGY SMOKER NOV. 20. Come out and jag with the crowd at Clark Hall 8pm-1am. There is lots of beer and fun for all. Beer $2.00. Admission 5.25. Let us entertain you.

THE MINISTERS OF DECAOENCE and RUDENESS, D and MCG and PB say: The Federal Cabinet prohibits Tuesday night tutorials on unconstitutional grounds.

KEITH NORTON, 24, is a Kingston lawyer, a graduate of Queen's, a member of Queen's Legal Aid and the AMS Kingston Council Liaison Committee. Vote to re-elect a Queensman Alderman in Sydenham Ward.

GAEI APPLICATIONS: Available Mon. Nov. 18 in the ASUS Box in the AMS Office, Lower Student's Union.

THREE TICKETS FOR BRUCE COCKBURN'S 7pm show Sunday night at Grant Hall are available at $3 each. Call Doug 544-0472.

LDST - Small, female, German Shepherd, answers to the name of CHOU (pronounced chew). Help put a lamellar lace back on campus. Anyone seeing or knowing her whereabouts phone 544-0447.

ECONOMIC SMOKER TODAY 1:30pm-4pm ASUS Red Room, Kingston Hall. Come on down for a quiet pint. Bring your profits.

THE SEARCH CONTINUES FOR GLEN (ALCOLKID) RDANE, missing from his home in Sue Williamson's washroom since Oct. 19. Glen is 5'11", weighs 112 lbs and is 18 years old. As of today, Keith, T.F., 24 Sue, and Gord say Happy Birthday 2U.

LDST - one pair of gold wire rimmed glasses about 2 weeks ago in the vicinity of the Douglas Library. If found please phone Sandra: 544-3317.

FOR SALE - SONY TC 160 stereo cassette deck in excellent condition plus many tapes and accessories. I'm asking $200 for the lot but I'd rather eat than listen this winter so feel free to make another offer. Ask for Dave at 544-3996.

CHILKOOT SOUVENIR BOOKLETS are still available in the Eng. Soc. Office above the bookstore for those who attended the formal.

RIDE NEEDED to and/or from Toronto on a regular basis. Leave Kingston Sunday mornings, return Sunday evenings. If you can help call 544-1978.

ODES TEDIULA AND SAKI MIX? Find out all the Chinese and International Pub Dances, 8pm Sat. Nov. 16 at Wallace Hall.

TO M.G.M. - PLEASE ACCEPT the following dubious effort as an approximation to a conventional birthday greeting. Let me tell you a tale. Of a would-be nurse named Gail. Her B-day's today. So what can I say? Gail don't get thrown in jail. Love from the only person sick enough to have this printed.

FEEL LIKE SKIING? over the Christmas holidays? Start the season off right by joining the Queen's Ski Club! Trip to Mt. Sutton, Dec. 29 to Jan. 4. Includes: 5 days skiing, 4 nights and 2 meals per day; all for only $95. Info night is Monday, Nov. 18, 7:00 pm in lower Vic.

GET YOUR TICKETS NOW - for the Duting Club sports lottery, win $100 cash voucher, $25 cash voucher (2nd) and $10 cash voucher (3rd). Cash vouchers are good at Finlay's Sport Store. Tickets are only 25c each and $1.00 and are available from Duting Club members. Draw will be held on Nov. 28.

WE CAN HELP! BIRTH CONTROL, V.D., ABORTION REFERRAL: INFO SERVICE 51 QUEEN'S CRES. CALL 547-2806 11am - 5pm.

HOUSE WANTED (2 or 4 bedroom) for May 1, 1975. Phone 544-3963 and rid yourself of four months of summer rent.

GAEI APPLICATIONS - Available Monday November 18 in the ASUS box in the AMS office in the lower Student's Union.

ID AND CANDACE ARE PLEASED to announce that our resident nui, Debra Bennett will be with us for a little while longer. Hugs and vel kisses to Mr. O. for talking sense into her.

"LOUISIANA" DAVE (AKA Cap'n Depravo) wishes to announce that he has taken the pledge, as it took him three days to recover from the last debacle. Abstaining until the weekend of the visitation, 'I will then be time to retire to Boone's Farm. Perhaps someone could tell him why that young girl tastes so good.

SAVE $250, 1973 Kawasaki 90 motorcycle plus two helmets and carrier rack. Only 1100 miles, excellent condition $400 firm. Call 544-9094.

CANOLE SALE: Circle K is selling candies to raise money for the United Way, and other concerns. All members are requested to come to the meeting Monday night (Nov. 18) at 7:00 pm in Stirling. Thank people, Pleaser.

WHY WAIT FOR SPRING? OO IT NOW! Apartment in West Campus Tower available to sublet in May with option to rent for next school year. Unfurnished, one bedroom, overlooking the lake. Phone 542-4407.

WELL TROOPS THE REFERENDUM is over thanks to Tim, Al, Gord, Anne, Beth, Max, Sue, Lynwood, Al, Susan, Mab, Puss, Sherry, Linda, Bob, Ducks, The Journal, G.W., Gary, Brina, and others whose names escape me. Was a good buzz - Terry Macle.

CHILKOOT SOUVENIR BOOKLETS are still available in the Eng. Soc. Office above the bookstore for those who attended the formal.

DRAMATISTS: Participate during the upcoming Arts Festival - January 28th - February 1st. Present a playlet or contribute to our drama workshop. Contact Margi Muir at 544-7043. Budding young poet? Read during the Arts Festival '75 - January 28th - February 1st. Please contact Sharon and Jim Smith 544-4976.

MUSICIANS invited to play during the upcoming Arts Festival '75 January 28th - February 1st. If you wish to participate, contact Pat 544-7872, Kathy 544-4566, Don 544-7227.

PLEASE! If you find or know the whereabouts of a brown suitcase lost on Monday night at Basil and Earl please, please call 542-9559. There is a reward and the contents are probably valuable to no one but me. I need the contents badly.

TO ALL those Manic Depressed students of 3rd and 4th Chown, 3rd McNeil and Gordon, 385 Earl and 400 Earl, EEBEE, and 404 Albert MIDTERM MADNESS should soon pass. Let's all celebrate at Cockburn or else Maricia will burn down Jeffrey, the commies will sprinkle Dunning with EEBEE's.

FESTIVAL OF THE ARTS

ART EXHIBITION - PAINTINGS, DRAWINGS, CRAFTS, GRAPHICS, ART WORKSHOPS.

DEMONSTRATORS NEEDED IN ANY CRAFT

CONTACT INEZ VERHOVEN 546-5370

January 28 - February 1 1975

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT in our Lounge

THIS WEEK: Ocean

Amateur Night every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome In Our Lounge

popcorn, while the Ghost will roam about the halls of third McNeil, silently in his Bananas. Mean-while, Marge, in abject frustration, will catch the first boat to Australia. The Green Phantom will escape 404, full moon or not. Harry Wendi and Brenda will find that it's harder than they thought, and Alexandra will fly over the nearest Nudist Colony in a red cape. Turner might just turn into a truncated spout, during memorial service for Fred in Miller (11) the long-pending passage made any sense to you, then you are smarter than you think!

Amber glass decanter and 6 glasses $3.50.

Saturday special at Domus 68 Brock - Just above King.

It's not how long you wear it. It's how you wear it long.

Barbering & Hair Styling Services 82 Brock Street 549-1666

BONUCCHI PIZZERIA

SPECIAL OFFER

Order 5 identical pizzas save the coupons and pick up your 6th pizza

FREE!!

Offer expires November 30

Graduating Students - All Faculties

What are you going to do next year?

Why not consider a career in management or administration?

The Queen's School of Business will host a informal meeting to provide information about its MASTER OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION program. Your questions will be answered by current MBA students, MBA alumni, and faculty.

Come out, have a coffee, and find out about: academic requirements; the program philosophy; the program structure; the program content; and, CAREER OPPORTUNITIES upon graduation.

The meeting is THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21 at 7:00 p.m. in ROOM 11 of DUNNING HALL

unclassifieds

DIVISION ST. Geological Observatory 77.

SEISMIC DATA indicating several volcanic explosions has been recently recorded registering between 7.5 and 8.0 on the open ended Richter-First Brook E. Richter scale. The epicentre's estimated location has been determined to be in the area of main campus and its environs. A more detailed analysis is now underway to accurately pinpoint the individual source of these frequent and age old disturbances.

PSYCHOLOGY Smoker Nov. 20th. Come out and join with the crowd at Clark Hall 8:00-11 a.m. There is lots of fun and beer for all. Beer 5 for $3.00. Let us entertain you. Admission .25c.

TO S.K.R. The wind blows gently.

But you'll not feel it. The moon glows softly.

But you'll not see it. The ice is fine.

The world moves by. A heart beats lonely.

Cause you'll not see him. G.S. WE CAN HELP! Birth Control, V.O., Abortion Referral and Info Service

St. Queen's Cres. Call 547-2886.

DUKE'S HOMPHILL: We have over 50 members, all ages, all

Dpts. Your affiliation with the group is kept strictly confidential with no chance of exposure. Come and meet us at the next private meeting or party. Call 547-2836

Tues-Thurs. 8-9 or write Student Affairs Centre c/o Terry Watson.

THE DEPT. OF ART HISTORY and Agnes Etherington Art Gallery co-sponsor a guest lecture by CHARLES HILL, "CANADIAN PAINTING IN THE 1930's"

Friday Nov. 22, 1974, 8 P.M., Dupuis Hall.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers quality film processing both in black and white and color.

MUSIC RECITALS SUNDAY AFTERNOON NOV. 17 3 p.m.

Diana McIntosh, piano
Contemporary Canadian Music
Admission is free.
Agnes Etherington Art Centre

FRIED CHICKEN ★ ★ ★ BURGERS

Monday to Friday 10 a.m. - 10 p.m. Saturday, 10 a.m. - 8 p.m.
Delivery anywhere within City limits 65 extra - and -
Delivery outside City limits slightly extra.

SMOKER—DANCE for the whole university. See that great band Crazylegs and drink ice cold beer at 5 for $2.00 (My God! That's even cheaper than the pub!) Admission is the paltry sum of $1.25 with any year card. This extravaganza takes place Sat. Nov. 23, 8:30 pm in the spacious Grant Hall. And everyone had better be there or we might think that you were studying or something.

GETTING MARRIED!! But must give up room in Coed Morris. If you're an interested girl, call

Suzanne (544-7239) or Marilyn (544-6862). You can even come to the wedding!!

SCIENCE '84 Coop is not another residence! It is a community.

come and see us: OPEN HOUSE,

Sat., Nov. 23, 10am-4pm, 314

William St. For info call Al Evans

542-1009.

APARTMENT WANTED: If you have now, or will have soon, a small comfortable apartment for rent in the City Park Lower East St. area, please call immediately 546-9133

between 6-7 pm.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

black and white and color.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTD. offers

quality film processing both in

Tenure cont'd

Most criticisms of the way tenure is awarded, however, have alleged that it is unreasonably hard on the candidate. A person being considered for tenure is in a very vulnerable position, for a bad recommendation from a colleague or the department head can jeopardize his whole academic future. (Probationary appointments can only be renewed once; after that a decision between awarding tenure and dismissal must be made.) It has been suggested that people whose approaches to academic existence are eccentric or unusual - those who might well become thorny social critics and need tenure later on - incur the displeasure of the academic community, are given poor recommendations and are denied tenure. Thus, it is argued, tenure can operate to exclude those who need it most. This has been a major source of controversy at several universities.

Dr Travill insists that this kind of discrimination does not occur at Queen's, explaining that the university specifically guarantees the right to academic freedom of all faculty members, whether they are full or part time, tenured or nontenured. He dismissed the allegation that some faculty try to influence the recommendations they receive with the comment that "the good junior professor is too busy with his work to worry about tenure, and this ensures that he'll get it when he's eligible."

One writer on the subject of tenure described the situation neatly by commenting that he felt "somehow like the philosopher who once wrote 'It has all been said before, but nobody ever listens, and therefore it must all be said again' ". This statement is partly true because many of the criticisms and defenses of tenure have remained valid over the years - over the centuries, to be precise. But part of the ongoing tenure debate arises from the fact that the rationale for tenure must frequently be re-evaluated as conditions in the university community change. In these circumstances, what is involved is not merely a rehash of the same old arguments, but an appraisal of the problems and implications of tenure in a new environment.

The 1960's were a decade of unprecedented growth in Ontario post-secondary institutions. Enrolment at Queen's tripled. Instructors were needed to teach the swelling student populations, so every university in the province hired significant numbers of new faculty members.

In keeping with previous practice, most of the new professors at Queen's were given probationary appointments, were considered for tenure when they became eligible, and were granted permanent posts. Few people quarrelled with this progression at the time because it was normal university policy. As a result of these practices, however, Queen's now has a very high proportion of tenured staff with a low median age. This situation has created a number of problems.

The fundamental difficulty is that Queen's, like other universities in the province faces the prospect of having all of its staff grow old together. At the moment, about half of the professors in Ontario are under 40 years of age, with the biggest chunk of this group in the 31-35 age range. Most of these professors are tenured, and as a result can reasonably expect to remain employed by their universities until they reach retirement age at 65. By 1983, the "60's intake" will have pushed the median faculty age up into the high forties, and will tend to distort the age distribution of academic staff toward the older end of the scale. This fact in itself would be of comparatively little importance if there were a compensating inflow of new young faculty members, but university growth for the next decade is forecast to be much slower than before, with a possible decline in total enrolments across the province in the mid-80's because of lower birth rates. As a result, few new professors will be needed and there will be a substantial decrease in the proportion of young staff.

Of course, having a high concentration of older professors isn't necessarily bad, because they can draw on their experience to offer new insights into the problems they are investigating. Even so, however, it is generally agreed that this situation will make it more difficult for universities to obtain the infusion of new ideas by people coming from other institutions which is fostered by a steady turnover of staff.

Aging Die-hards

Another concern which has been voiced is that academic standards could be threatened since aging is frequently accompanied by increasing conservatism and in extreme cases, by die-hard reaction. The Development Sub-Committee on Development of the Faculty of Arts and Science 1972-77 recognized this as a potential problem in 1971. It reported a need "to examine ways in which a Faculty of relatively steady size composed of a large proportion of tenured academic staff with a rising median age can be encouraged to remain physically and mentally active, intellectually flexible, receptive to new ideas and in touch with current trends outside the university."

One immediate result of the current situation is that there are very few vacancies available for would-be professors. Because of this, job prospects for many graduate students are rather bleak and show little indication that they will improve materially for some time. The question "what should be done with the graduate students?" seems appropriate here. The lack of vacancies may persuade many bright people who might otherwise consider careers as academics to pursue other occupations where their chances of obtaining positions are better, a switch which could be detrimental to the academic community in the long run by depriving it of potential excellent professors.

The lack of academic vacancies has other implications, too. It reinforces the effect tenure has in protecting universities from changing or intolerant social attitudes, a feature which is usually taken to be a Good Thing because it preserves academic freedom, which is being criticized fiercely at the moment for preserving archaic social policies. Ontario universities have lambasted recently for having too many and too many non-Canadian (especially Americans) on their staffs. They have not been in a position to make significant alterations in the age or sexual distribution of faculty. The lack of vacancies for professors thwarted the efforts of would-be younger professors to improve the staff balance. Tenure has done the same thing. Universities do not believe that the fact that a tenured professor is old and/or American is sufficient for dismissal - few people could claim convincingly that it is. But the fact that so many professors are tenured has made it difficult for universities to implement policies, even if they want to.

Another major difficulty caused by the skewed age distribution of faculty members in Ontario universities is financial. It used to be argued to justify tenure on the grounds that professors were desperately underpaid, that the job security afforded by tenure was necessary to compensate them for their lives of poverty. This situation no longer exists; most universities as a part of policy undertake to pay comparables, and they tend to pay their more as they gain experience. What rises is that as the median age of professors rises, the universities will have to pay ever-increasing salary bills. This will only serve to intensify the problems with which they are already beset. As it is, most Ontario universities have been unable to restrict their pay to match the money they receive, and are going to get worse as salary costs force expenses up.

It is unlikely that they will be able to ease the circumstances by replacing older (and costly) professors with younger (and expensive) ones because there are few staff vacancies. With poor opportunities for academics and the fact that the situation will improve only in the near future, rates of retirement, resignation and other departures of faculty ranks will probably be lower than normal, and there will be more to put new professors.

The most disturbing of this problem is that if official strain becomes too severe, as at some colleges and universities in the U.S., some staff members will have to leave for the simple reason that they cannot pay them with. Some Canadian universities have been forced to take similar actions. How much worse then?

The critical question of kind of situation is how to deal with it. It would be tempting to eliminate professors from departments such as classics where enrolment is small and declining, but as we have seen, important arise. The university's important role as society's "custodian of values," and thus, it can't just arbitrarily jettison people who are unable to carry their weight. Care also has to be taken to eliminate areas which are expected to be only temporary. All Queen's faculties have to come to grips with these problems.

In many ways, the difficulties associated with tenure are amplified at Queen's. Most of these are side effects of a decision made in 1968 to adopt a policy of no growth followed by no attrition. The attempt to preserve the distinctiveness of the close faculty-student relationship which characterizes Queen's has led to a level which will probably be reached in the next two years. The placement on the growth of the student body have effectively restricted the number of new professors required by the university - if student numbers are to remain every year, there is no need to create additional faculty positions. This vacancy problem is compounded by tenure.

When the constant student enrolment policy was adopted, Queen's already had one of the highest proportions of tenured staff in the province. Since then, many more professors have been granted tenure, and if customary tenure procedures are continued, the proportion of tenured faculty members could rise to over 90 per cent by the end of the decade. Such a situation would leave almost no room for new appointments and would intensify the financial and academic difficulties associated with having a staff of rising median age and unbalanced age distribution. The university recognized these potential difficulties some time ago and studies of the problems have been conducted at the faculty level and for the whole university.

Tenure Reviewed

One group was commissioned to actually deal with the problems arising from tenure in the steady state. The Senate Committee on Appointment, Promotion, Tenure and Leave was asked in 1969 to review the university's tenure practices and propose appropriate changes if necessary. SCAPTIL is still working on the project.

The committee decided that a 90 per cent level of tenured faculty could seriously threaten the university's intellectual vitality, and most of its efforts have been to find an acceptable way to bring the proportion of tenured staff down to a more reasonable level. (The Arts and Science Faculty Board selected 75 per cent as a desirable figure.) To temporarily halt the growth of tenure, the university placed a moratorium on probationary appointments, and all new appointments since 1972-73 have been for fixed terms, usually less than five years.

Why not put all staff on term appointments? Such a policy would preserve the academic freedom of faculty members since the university guarantees to protect them whether or not they have tenure. It would also dramatically improve the flexibility of Queen's with respect to staffing. It would be possible to guarantee a certain amount of staff turnover simply through the process of attrition as terms ended, and the university would be able to trim finances or get rid of redundant staff simply by not renewing the appointments of some faculty members.

SCAPTIL examined term appointments as an alternative to tenure but decided that their advantages in flexibility were greatly outweighed by the undesirable effects they would have on faculty morale and the university in the long run. The first difficulty is that a policy of term appointments only at Queen's might cause promising young academics to take positions at other universities offering greater job security, thus depriving Queen's of the contributions they could make to the university. Term appointments for all can only be effective in a desirable manner if all universities employ the system, otherwise the institutions which don't offer tenure lose out.

The second drawback to term appointments is that professors on fixed-period contracts are less likely than tenured staff to view their association with the university as a life-long affair. As the Senate Committee on Academic Development explained in its September 1972 report, "the staff member on a term appointment will naturally be concerned with the opportunities available to him when he leaves Queen's and with the development with (sic) his career elsewhere. It would be anticipated that he would be unwilling to spend more than the minimum amount of time on matters of long-range concern to Queen's or to his department." If all faculty members were on term appointments and all shared this attitude, the long-run effects on the university could be disastrous. The SCAD report emphasized that "the interim policy of making term appointments only cannot be continued for long without serious consequences to the intellectual climate and academic environment of the university."

The most critical problem with term appointments is the question of how the policy can be implemented fairly. If the university grants no term appointments, the proportion of tenured staff rises to the point where Queen's risks academic stagnation. If, at the other extreme, all outstanding contracts and tenure agreements are revoked in favour of term appointments, some justification must be found for depriving tenured staff of the job security they had been assured would last to retirement age. Is it fair to take tenure away from faculty members who have already earned it? How willing will a professor be to undertake a research project that may last seven years, for example, if he has no guarantee that his appointment will be renewed five years hence?

A compromise between tenure and term appointments makes a no less contentious solution. If those who have tenure are allowed to retain it and all new staff are restricted to term appointments, how fair is it to let some people have tenure while denying it to others?

Judicious Decisions

Is it fair to refuse a professor tenure for the simple reason that he obtained his academic qualifications after the university boom of the 1960's even though he may be a better professor than some of his tenured colleagues? Is a system of first- and second-class faculty members desirable? It seems virtually impossible to resolve these difficulties, at least while retaining the goal of developing a mechanism which will treat everyone fairly, so other alternatives to tenure must be considered.

One proposal which has been put forward is a suggestion that the university should have, in effect, tenured positions instead of tenured people. A certain number of places in each department could be classified as tenured, and, by extension, the person in each such job would also be tenured for as long as he held that position. All other positions in the department would be filled by term appointees. If a vacancy occurred in a tenured position, other faculty members in that department would be given highest priority in filling the opening.

Dr Travill explained that term appointments would be concentrated in the junior ranks of each department, and justified this by claiming that younger (junior) staff could find employment outside the university when their term appointments are up more easily than their older colleagues. "Mobility at a younger age is and has always been part of the educational and maturation process in the academic way of life. It should not be inhibited by the offering of early tenure", he commented.

Even the proposal of "tenured positions" is not perfect, however, because as a sort of hybrid between term appointments and tenure, it contains some of the flaws of each practice. So what should be done? SCAPTIL has not been able to decide, and Dr Travill has invited all members of the university to make suggestions.

NAVAL RESERVE Officer Training Plan

Looking for a challenge?

If you are interested, contact HMCS CATARAQUI at 545-5872 (daytime) 549-0487 (night) or come down to the Kingston armoury, Montreal St., on Tuesday nights, or call 549-0487

Think Naval Reserve for a satisfying part-time career.

TEQUILA SAUZA

Margarita SAUZA
1 1/2 oz. TEQUILA SAUZA
1/2 oz. Triple Sec
1 oz. lime or lemon juice
Shake with cracked ice
Moisten rim of champagne glass with lemon rind, then dip moistened rim
in salt.
Stir
cocktail over salted edge.

PIZZA PIZZA PIZZA PIZZA

BROADWAY

PIZZA

548-4216

DID YOU KNOW

Queen's students get

10% discount

on regular priced merchandise at

ABRAMSKY'S
Men's Wear

259 Princess St.

THE CANADIAN MINERAL INDUSTRY EDUCATION FOUNDATION

offers

POSTGRADUATE SCHOLARSHIPS

in

MINING ENGINEERING to GRADUATES in any branch of ENGINEERING or APPLIED SCIENCE

$6,300 - 9 months

PLUS Planned Summer Employment

For information contact:

The Secretary,
Canadian Mineral Industry Education Foundation,
P.O. Box 45, Commerce Court West, Toronto, Ont.

CLOSING DATE MARCH 3rd, 1975

TRUE NORTH RECORDS
and
COLUMBIA RECORDS OF CANADA
present

BRUCE COCKBURN

All Bruce Cockburn L.P.'s $3.97.

This week only at
HOUSE OF SOUNDS

letters to the editor

Macintosh-Corry

Beefs about food machines

Dear Editor,

As a typical plebian who likes to do his work in the Macintosh-Corry reading room I'm getting a little bunned off at the machines in the lobby. The newest building on campus is housing some of the most delinquent coffee and chocolate bar machines in the country.

After about four hours in the books you normally have a severe craving for a coffee, or if you are really demerol, for a micro-wave hot dog. The machines are almost always empty. They are inevitably out of snack bars when you need one the most. The next sixteen selections are also out of stock and you are left with an option as to whether to risk the chance of pressing the coin return to get your money back (with a record of very low rate of return) or to leave your quarter in and get the alka-seltzer.

If this is not enough the bill changing machine is completely erratic. First, it won't take any bill that was not minted in 1953 (between the months of April and May), second, it takes a 13 per cent profit on every bill.

Simply having the machines there is barbaric and inhumane. But, understandably, it is the only way to make food available in Macintosh-Corry. But if Mother Beaver or whoever is running the machines would take the following precautions it would greatly be appreciated: 1) Keep the damn machines well stocked. (not forgetting) the number of people who work the night shift in the Mac-Corry reading room. 2) keep the machines in good repair. If you put a quarter in then when you press the coin return button you should get a quarter back, not a nickel, slug or centennial medalion. 3) Repair the bill changing machine so that they are not operating at an 'unreasonable profit'. 4) Devise a system by which the light (which signals that the bill changing machine is out of change) goes on before and not after your bill is sucked into the jaws of the machine.

To people who are burning the oil in the hours of the diminishing returns these rules are equivalent to the ten commandments. I've seen a grown man so hungry at 2 a.m. that he is willing to put a five in the bill changing machine in order to buy the same hotdogs that they serve regularly out of the Ban Righ troughs.

Log McQuaig

Maharaja Ji's M.O.

In the past week I have noticed, appearing around campus, posters advertising the upcoming appearance of the guru Maharaja Ji as a result of comparing the promises of salvation in his ad with the fact that in order to be saved by him one must give up to him as God all of one's material possessions. I have come to view him as a modern manifestation of Chaucer's pardoner. Compare the pardoner's method of first quoting "avarice is the root of all evil, then demonstrating in his sermon how the desire and love money leads inevitably to destruction, to the Maharaja Ji method of suggesting the same subliminally in his ads by saying if one overcomes greed he may be saved, thus in the same way that Chaucer's Pardoner used a truth in order to influence people to scare them, in fact) into giving him their jewelry, money, and other goods yet seemed to think that he could stand outside the system of which he spoke, he in fact became a symbol for a worse kind of avarice, which sets itself above ordinary pleasure seeking and persuades others less clever than himself to give all their worldly possessions to him so that he may indulge himself in the very sin which he claims he is purifying them of.

I believe that Chaucer, in his canterbury tales, was presenting to man an outline of a number of archetypes and their modus operandi in an attempt to help people see through the kinds of games they played in order not to be caught in the webs they weave to catch and devour the unwary of course not all the characters he represents are of this bent, but nevertheless, the ones who are, are very aptly revealed.

-isadora lodge

Literary Guidance

Dear Editor:

This letter should also be directed to Doug Bonnell with regards to his "rewarding and pertinent" evaluation of the Canadian political scene. While I hold the same opinion of Bonnell's writing ability, my remarks are directed to D. Hill, who recently provided me with the opportunity to use the above quotation.

Hill is asked to turn to page eleven of the Tuesday November 5th edition of the Journal. If I remember correctly, Hill has expressed the desire that in upcoming editions of the paper, there will be writing of the same calibre as shown by Bonnell. Surely the editor of the Journal (a student of the English department) is not serious when she provides Hill with her wishes as exemplified by writing the calibre of which is exhibited by Sandra Bernstein! If this is the case, then you have done Hill a great disservice! You have not fulfilled her well-founded dreams: you have instead granted her Death Wish.

Does anyone know if Doug Bonnell tutors in his spare time? Inserted by the "Save the English Language Committee"

The T.M. rip-off

Dear Editor,

Somebody in the Journal office must be getting a cut from the business outfit called "Students International Meditation Society". How else does one explain the propagandist articles that appear in the Journal from time to time without any warning to the readers like "This is an advertisement"?

Last Tuesday's centrefold advertisement, like all ads was biased to the extreme for the following reasons: 1) It conveniently omits the fact that it costs over sixty dollars to learn this technique and easily. 2) It enumerates the celebrities who have nice things to say about transcendental meditation but fails to mention those who were not so charmed by the Maharishi John Lennon for instance. 3) "The quality of rest in twenty minutes of meditation is much more profound than that gained in a full eight hours sleep". What rubbish! One has to be very gullible and a poor sleeper to boot to believe such a fable.

The only undisputable statement in the ad was that the Maharishi's face was familiar to all of us and that is because of a slick and well-organized campaign which the Journal helps with regular donations of space. Maybe one of those in touch with Eastern mystics can tell me why all these gurus seem to love Switzerland and places like that. Perhaps the answer is simple. Sixty dollars per head can go a long way. Meditate on that.

Frank Okoh

Chilkoot vs. Lictor

Why no good words?

Dear editor:

The other day while breezing through the Lictor, during my Arts option (for a lack of something better to do), I came across a statement on the back page. It was entitled, "Ass Painers of Our Time: Assholes at a Science Formal who get so pissed they can't stand up, reducing the event to a brawl."

We the undersigned take great exception to the above statement. Doug Christensen, the editor of the Lictor, explained that the statement referred to a couple of drunk "assholes" who persisted in raising havoc with a photographer's equipment, to the point that tempers on both sides began to flare and an AMS constable had to step in. This incident in comparison to the rest of the evening was insignificant.

However, these two people, who were incidentally not members of Science '75, and also who had not bothered to comply with the dress requirements of the evening (ie tails versus sport coat), certainly did not "reduce the event to a brawl."

This type of statement is, however, indicative of the attitude exemplified by student's on campus. When was the last time you read a letter entitled: congratulations on a job well done? How many successful dances, concerts and "formals" are run on campus by various organizers? You never hear about them, just people bitching about the way something was run.

Well we're not saying we're perfect, but instead of bitching, get off your "fat asses" and get involved. There are never enough volunteers for anything from concert committee, homecoming or Science Formal, just 8,000 apathetic bitches.

By the way, Bob Allen, a writer for "The Canadian Magazine" thought enough of Chilkoot to do a story on it. Watch for his article in about 8 weeks.

Glenn Lyle
Mike Norris
Bob Bowen

Lictor unfair?

To the editor:

In the back page of this past Tuesday's Lictor there appeared in bold typeface a short message: "Ass Painers of Our Time - Assholes at a Science Formal who get so pissed they can't stand up, reducing the event to a brawl."

Inferring that the Science Formal degenerated into a brawl is grossly inaccurate. The "brawl" which the Lictor's editor was referring to was in fact nothing more than a minor altercation between two drunken non-engineers and a photographer, Bill Milliken. An AMS constable intervened, and the incident was over. Only a very few people were involved, and in no way was the tremendous overall success of the Formal affected.

The Lictor has not been fair to the people who organized and ran the Science Formal. Is it no wonder that it is difficult to find volunteers to organize events on this campus if all they can expect for their efforts is unfair and unnecessary complaints and criticism? It would be a great pleasure to see or hear someone publicly extend congratulations to people who work their butts off to bring Queen's successful Science Formals, Homecomings, Suzie-Q Weeks, speakers programs, Orientation Weeks, concerts, drama productions, pubs and so on. Let's hear it for them.

Sincerely,
Craig Miller

A tear for Beaver

Dear Sir,

Have you ever tried to cook peas for a hundred people, keep them hot for half an hour or so, and still have them perfectly cooked? Or try to cook steak under the same conditions and not have it undercooked or dry? Tough ch?? Or how about having people complaining to you all day long - when it's not your fault and it's almost impossible to do better anyway? Especially when you've been in a hot, humid kitchen all day and have a splitting headache - would you be in your friendliest mood? I doubt it - and therefore please have consideration for those people who work in Ban Righ and Leonard cafeterias (they are only human and can make mistakes too you know). The food may sometimes not be the greatest but they've got a very tough job to do so please, try to be pleasant to them, or if this is impossible for you, at least think before you complain.

Thank you
A Sympathizer
P.S. Perhaps the Journal could ask the kitchen staff to write a letter or an article about this - enough people complain about the food - how about presenting the other side?

Queens
JournalVol. 102, No. 20
Fri., Nov. 15, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Business Staff: T. Collins, Meg Bottomley, and crammie Anne Robertson

Thanks Should Also Go To:
Suzanne Sherkin for editing
Oan McClelland for managing the editor
Sarah Yarnell for newsing
John Cameron, Keith Bourns, John Wimer, Lyn Alwood, and Johnny (we hardly knew thee) Bottomley for picking Wendy and Laurie for spreading
Val Colton, Paul Sleep, Barb

Nyland, Oan Fruhling, Paul Luke, David Card, Tim Runge, Jennifer Hastings and Rosemary Knight (for Walt's Happening)
Sue Wishart, Lizabeth Haworth, "Louisiana" Oave and Kelly, Nancy Flood and Ooug (twinkle fingers) Bonnell for contributing Oh, And the Arts Department for Dropping in

Comment: having been called everything from the Mouly cheese to the Arts Business Manager and tired of this, "what else can you say at three a.m. except 'oh to the Aslor'?" I thought it was my turn on the masthead. In short, we're going broke. We'll have to start recycling paperclips. Why didn't we sell this space to Tremblay's?

Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor, and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (613) 547-7406. Printed by gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT
SUNDAY 10 AM TO 8 PM

the MARKET
BARBER SHOP
& hairstyling salon

Peter Smits invites you
to his new hair core shop
549-2110

43 BROCK ST., KINGSTON, ONT.

STUDENT HEALTH SERVICE

MEDICAL CLINIC — 547-6106 • 24 hours daily
(Answering service contacts a duty physician when the Health Service is closed.)

CLINIC HOURS — 9:00 am - 11:30 am
1:00 pm - 4:00 pm
Monday to Friday inclusive

PSYCHIATRY & COUNSELLING — By appointment
9:00 am - 5:00 pm phone 547-2889 or come to Health Service to make an appointment.

BEST ACTRESS
LIZA MINNELLI

McARTHUR
THEATRE
SUNDAY
NOV. 17th
7 and 9.30 pm

$1 per person

SALES: ADVANCE OR
AT THE DOOR

CABARET

International

PUB and

DANCE

Wallace Hall

Saturday Nov. 16

8 pm - 1 am

.25c members with card
.50c non members

EUROPEAN BEER

IMPORTED LIQUOR

An International Experience co-sponsored by the Chinese and International Clubs

Bruce Cockburn in concert at Queen's

Cockburn's refined style

Sun, Salt and Time
Bruce Cockburn Album
by Paul Luke

The Straight and narrow path of Bruce Cockburn continues to amaze. In the course of five albums he has avoided floundering in the quicksands of self-indulgence, has very rarely stumbled into the snares of the cheap insight and the easy rhyme, and has yet to lose his way in the noisy market-place of commercial sell-outs, where hang the spoiled carcasses of many of his fellow artists who have gutted their integrity for the sake of a gold record. Cockburn early in his recording career defined his own novel approach: a fusion of instrumental expertise with a unique lyrical inclination. The continuing polishing and refinement of this form are the substance of the new album Sun, Salt and Time.

The record's words are a distillation of a few of Cockburn's common preoccupations. He builds unlikely image clusters, pitting objects like blind fingers, shoes and sedan wheels against each other, unifying them with a child-like vocal delivery and delicately wrought melodies. Through his lyrics Cockburn exhibits the same tendency to resist any confinement, the same ability to draw wonder from the sun in all its aspects and can still grace his natural descriptions with a keen eye for the fleeting moment. At the same time Cockburn has pared much of the obscure mystical posturing which in the past has marred such songs as "Change Your Mind" from the first album. Sun, Salt and Time has none of the pessimism which beset the Night-Vision album although there is a bittersweet quality present resulting from the sense of the transience of things behind such songs as "Stained Glass".

The album has a greater body of instrumentals than any before reflecting Cockburn's increasing confidence in his guitar work. In the album's three instrumentals Cockburn and Eugene Martynec, one of the co-producers, intertwine their guitars in constructions which are only occasionally embellished by production touches such as the soft, bell-like moans behind "Seed on the Wind" and the perky clarinet in "Rouler la Brosse". There is none of Cockburn's piano on this record, although I've always felt that he can't elicit the same exquisiteness from that instrument and it consequently puts a strain on a music which is already very fragile.

Sun, Salt and Time demonstrates yet again that Cockburn's original talents survive unimpaired. The scenes that Cockburn describes so vividly disappear in an instant, but the hushed wonder of records like this one lingers with one for a long time.

Canadian music

A free concert of contemporary Canadian music will take place at 3:00 p.m. Sunday, November 17th, in the large gallery of the Agnes Etherington Art Centre. The performer for this concert will be Diana McIntosh, a Canadian pianist. Ms. McIntosh has studied at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto, the Banff School of Fine Arts, and the University of Manitoba. She has given solo recitals and lecture recitals throughout Western Canada, and has given many C.B.C. broadcasts both in solo recital and with the Winnipeg C.B.C. A recent C.B.C. broadcast was a recital on "Music Alive" of piano works by eight Canadian composers including herself. In the recital this weekend she will perform works by Robert Turner, Boyd McDonald and other Canadian composers.

KELLY'S

STEREO MART

110 PRINCESS ST. KINGSTON 544-4014

ROLLING STONES
It's Only Rock & Roll
List 7.29 SALE 3.97

ELTON JOHN
Greatest Hits
List 7.29 SALE 3.97

NEIL DIAMOND
Serenade
List 7.29 SALE 3.97

LOU REID
Sally Lant Dance
List 7.29 SALE 3.97

GIRLS
(and Boys?) 47¢

WITH EVERY PURCHASE
ONE PER PERSON

PLUS MANY, MANY, MANY MORE ALBUMS - SALE SPECIAL - $3.97

SECOND FLOOR NOW OPEN

PRICES FROM 93¢ to $1.99

20,000 ALBUMS

DEMONSTRATOR CLEAROUT SPECIALS

AKAI ST400 SPEAKERS	SUG. LIST $299.95 ea.	SALE $200	SAVE 99.95
AKAI SW156 SPEAKERS	SUG. LIST $249.95 ea.	SALE $200	SAVE 49.95
AKAI SW176 SPEAKERS	SUG. LIST $379.95 ea.	SALE $300	SAVE 79.95

SANSUI 1000X RECEIVER	SUG. LIST $489.95 ea.	SALE $369.95	SAVE 120.00
SANSUI 2000X RECEIVER	SUG. LIST $559.95 ea.	SALE $439.95	SAVE 120.00
SANSUI SEVEN RECEIVER	SUG. LIST $729.95 ea.	SALE $559.95	SAVE 170.00
SANSUI SIX RECEIVER	SUG. LIST $639.95 ea.	SALE $499.95	SAVE 140.00

AKAI CS330 CASS W DULBY	LIST $259.95 ea.	SALE $219.95	SAVE 40.00
AKAI GX1731L Reel-to-Reel	LIST $579.95 ea.	SALE $399.95	SAVE 180.00
AKA GX19000 CASS & REEL	LIST $679.95 ea.	SALE $679.95	SAVE 180.00

Cassettes & 8-Tracks

15%-20% Off All

Record, 8 - Track
and

Cassette Carrying Cases

WE WILL NOT BE KNOWINGLY UNDERSOLD

Records

Headed for oblivion

Straight Ahead

Brian Auger's Oblivion Express

by David Card & Tim Runge

Some may remember Brian Auger from the mid-sixties when he played keyboard for a group known as the Trinity. Needless to say, the group never achieved international recognition, and faded into the background during the musical revolution of the later sixties. Auger is an excellent pianist with a jazz background, and has been around for many years without attracting much attention. With his newly formed group, Oblivion Express, and the release of this album recently, it seemed that he might gain some sort of universal recognition. However, if Straight Ahead is a representative sample of the musical talent of the Oblivion Express, then this recognition seems unlikely.

Clearly, Straight Ahead lacks the kind of drive that is necessary for the success of any artistic expression. Its strongest point is the opening number, which features Auger's smooth vocals and his manipulations of the electric piano and string machine. But even "Beginning Again", as it is titled, is only slightly better than mediocre, and demonstrates in no uncertain terms that without Auger Oblivion Express is headed nowhere.

The personnel of the group includes bass guitarist, a lead guitarist, and three percussionists along with Auger on piano, organ, and synthesizer, so that one might suspect a sound reminiscent of Santana by instrumental analysis. True, something of Santana's sound is carried through the album, but Hancock writes with affection, even cheerfully telling stories against herself.

Much of the book is about their summer expeditions to do research, and interjected into these stories are brief descriptions of the animals' habits and habitats. With what those of us who love the comforts of a warm, dry home can only call courage and unflinching devotion, the author dismisses such nuisances as camping in feet of guano and dwells instead on the splendid rugged scenery.

Ms Hancock's style of writing is rather terse and forced in the first couple of chapters, but, just as she became accustomed to her unusual life-style, so her writing becomes more relaxed. Unfortunately, there are a number of typographical errors which could surely have been eliminated in the proof reading; this seems to be a fairly common failing of Canadian paperbacks.

For both children and adults, A Seal will be enjoyable reading, and hopefully it will help give a better understanding of the delicate balances of nature and the need for strict conservation. Only when the general public is acquainted with the fact of man's dependence on the rest of the living world will the wanton destruction of many fascinating creatures cease.

Many thanks to Smith-Hill bookstore, 193 Princess St., for their generous donation of this book for review.

There's a Seal in My Sleeping Bag
by Lyn Hancock
Pan Books

by Lizbeth Haworth
There's a Seal in My Sleeping Bag, by Lyn Hancock, is a delightful book for naturalists, conservationists, and animal- and adventure-lovers alike. It combines in a most palatable amusing form, the Hancock's personal experiences as field biologists and factual information about the wild life they encounter. While the main 'raison d'être' of the book is to educate the reader about our diminishing bird and animal species, this never slows the writing or makes it dull.

The Hancock's have achieved considerable recognition in Canada in their appearances in the television series "Klahanie". In making films for this series and for the public, and also to glean information for David's research, the couple has travelled up and down the West Coast, often camping on tiny undisturbed islands. Their main interests have been the eagles and sea bird species which have long been endangered by general ignorance and apathy.

A Seal should change the mind of anyone who ever thought that all biologists spend their time in labs dissecting preserved specimens. With her wry Australian wit, Ms. Hancock describes her experiences counting eagles from a small plane in the tree tops, scaling cliffs while wearing 40 pound packs to study bird colonies, and force feeding motherless baby seals. She also recalls with undiminished disgust her almost daily tasks of cleaning hundreds of pounds of fresh cod and mincing chickens in order to feed the small zoo with which they live. (In case you have never seen a Murre or an elephant seal, there are several excellent photographs.) Not everyone would share her home with a boisterous sea lion, but Ms

Crystal Restaurant
TASTY FOODS
COURTEOUS SERVICE
"THE PLACE WHERE ALL GOOD PEOPLE MEET & EAT"
STEAKS - CHOPS - CHICKEN - SEAFOOD
PASTA - SALADS - SHISH KEBAB SWEETS - STROGANOFF
OPEN 7 DAYS
Try our Delicious Shish Kebab
TAKE OUT SERVICE
Free Delivery Over $3.00
210 PRINCESS KGTN 542-8515

NO WAITRESS.
NO WAIT.

277 Bath Rd.
Kingston

QUEEN'S DEPT OF DRAMA
THE NIGHT OF THE IGUANA
November 15 - 16
CONVOCATION HALL
8 30 PM
TICKETS AT DRAMA DESK 547-6291

AN ENGAGEMENT INVESTMENT IN BRILLIANCE
Popping that all important question leads to her all important diamond. Our staff of experts is ready to help you find the right diamond at the right price. Wisely you'll choose the finest engagement diamond... a dazzling investment that brings huge dividends "happiness" for all her tomorrows.
KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

Nibers on win streak in Loyalist Grads hockey

by Claude Scilley and Alex D. Bluze

The importance of defence was pointed out in two regular season games of the Queen's Loyalist Grads Hockey League, played this past week at Jock Hartly Arena. Serious defence lapses by the Tombstones have enabled the Nibers to rally for a flurry of goals and score impressive victories.

The first period of last Friday's game seemed to indicate an evenly played match as it ended with a 3-3 tie. But then the Tombstones' defence crumbled and the Nibers took a lead which they never lost. Paced by four goals by Bob Russell, the Nibers held an 8-3 lead by mid-game. A late comeback attempt was rallied by the Tombstones with goals by Terry McLaughlin and Richard Healy. However two goals by Peter Shirokoff ended the match 10-7 in favour of the Nibers. The Tombstones were initially more impressive in Saturday night's game, jumping into a 5-1 lead which they held for two periods. Herb McColl potted three of these goals along with a pair from Richard Healy. In the third period, however, the Nibers burst forth with two and three man break-a-ways to score five straight goals from the sticks of Bob Russell and Pete Shirokoff.

The Nibers then managed to hang on in the final minutes to gain a 7-6 victory.

The wins maintain the Nibers unbeaten string in the League and places them solidly in first place. It also establishes them as the powerhouse team of the league and the team to beat on the road towards the finals. So let's see more fans out for their next thrilling game!

Hockey Gals start season

Open swim meet held

McMaster U at Hamilton was the site of this year's first OWIAA women's invitational swim meet. Teams from Waterloo, Western, Windsor, U of T, York, Guelph and Queen's took part in a meet which had no restrictions as to how many swimmers could enter each event. This made it possible for all swimmers, not just the ones with the best times, to gain a considerable amount of experience. In this type of meet, whose sole purpose was to provide experience all swimmers, the overall winner was not determined. It was a good way for new swimmers to start off the season as it allowed them to ease into serious competition. Each swimmer was limited to four events, a rule which is in keeping with standard swim meet regulations.

Sheila McKirdy returns this year as coach of the women's team. She is assisted by Cathy Bruce, a graduate student, who was a standout with the team last year.

The next meet is at Queen's on Saturday, November 16, where a number of Ontario swim clubs will be hosted. This competition is an annual event, the purpose of which is to attract new swimmers to Queen's. Both men and women will be competing and it should be an excellent meet. It is a chance for you to see some of our best athletes in action.

Hockey underway

Queen's Golden Gals will kick off their 1974-75 schedule tomorrow afternoon with a 4pm encounter against the Brock Badgers. Please note the change in time: It's 4pm and not 8pm as shown in the schedules.

Waterpolo team 2nd only to T.O.

After playing two games in Ottawa last weekend, the men's waterpolo team was left in second place behind the University of Toronto Blues.

Their first game provided little trouble as they downed RMC 9-3. The Gals then went against the tough U of T squad. The score at the end of the half was 6-3 in favour of Queen's, but Toronto made a strong comeback to finish the game in an 8-8 tie. Queen's goalie Dave Kaye put in a fine performance against the hard-faring Toronto players. Top scorers for Queen's were Mike

Fox and Chris Whately with five goals apiece while newcomer Paul Nolan drove four shots past opposition goalies.

Queen's now has a win-loss tie record of 5-1-1 as compared to U of T's 6-0-1 record. The Gals have met Toronto on three occasions now. Along with this weekend's tie, their first game ended in a 15-7 loss, and the second encounter (exhibition) was a 9-6 loss. Assuming this improvement trend to continue, the Gals hope to beat Toronto at the next round robin tournament at York U this weekend.

WIC - ly News

Don't forget girls, bring yourself and your guy to CO-ED BOWLING this Sunday, November 17 from 3pm to 5:45pm. In trying our luck at 5-pin at Brock Bowl, on Brock St. just west of Montreal St. If you need a ride, be at the Phys Ed centre by 2:45 pm. Remember, we pay for lane fees and shoe rental! If there are any Questions phone Deb at 544-8321. See you there!

The women's Intramural SKATATHON even showed a 90 percent improvement over last years turn-out. There were 106 participants over the three nights, with 41 coming out more than once. Because of this increased interest, the skatathon will definitely be continued next year.

The winner of the event was Marilyn Snell of Arts '78 with 381 laps. The runner-ups were Dinah Stocker of Re-hab '76 with 270 laps and Laurie Gallagher of P.H.E. '78 with 241 laps.

Queen's P.H.E. CREST CONTEST Winner $25

the school of physical and health education requires a crest

questions and entries to:
Danny Pearl
Room 335
McNeill House
544-7030

entries in by Friday November 29

■ A CONTEMPORARY DRAMATIC FILM
■ THE RETURN OF JESUS CHRIST
■ TICKETS $1 AT THE DOOR

NOVEMBER 20TH 7.30 P.M.
STIRLING HALL "C"

A SNEAK PREVIEW OF OUR PROGRAM

What is our program? It's our Sales & Marketing Management Program and it gives you inside information on what it takes to become a successful insurance sales manager. It covers subjects such as selling techniques, law and taxation in relation to insurance and estate planning, to name a few.

The "why" of our program is simple; we need young graduates with management potential. Your own reasons may have to do with ambition and high income potential.

Why not fill in the coupon below and we'll let you look at the whole program.

The Canada Life Assurance Company

The Canada Life Assurance Company
330 University Avenue, Toronto, Ontario M5G 1R8

Send me more information about your Sales & Marketing Management Program.

NAME

ADDRESS

COURSE

(Enc. with reply to this ad)

Bews News

Soccer

In Quarter-Final play Science '78 defeated Arts '76 4-2. Scoring for the Science team were Allen, Bada, Bello and Bryan. Arts '76 goals went to Handling and Creeber.

Meds downed Law '75 2-1. Dizio with the lone point for Law and Laidlaw scoring both goals for the winners.

Civil Math was able to outlast Independants 1-0, Szczucinski netted the winner for the Engineers.

McIntyre, Johnston and Baldwin paced Arts '77 with a goal apiece to defeat Commerce '76 3-1. Stewart answered for the Business Boys.

Two Semi-Final games were played. Meds got by Science '78 1-0 with the loan goal going to Laidlaw. In both quarter and semi-final play Laidlaw has counted on all points posted by the Medical team.

In the other game, Arts '77 squeezed by Civil 3-2. Meds and Arts '77 advanced to finals, and in the final game Arts '77 blanked Meds 3-0, with Fenwick and Johnston scoring early in the game for the winners. Congratulations Arts '77.

Hockey

Arts '75	15	Electrical	0
Comm '76	6	Mining	1
Mechanical	4	Law '77	4
Comm '75	1	Meds	0
Arts '76	4	Arts '78	2
Mining	3	Meds	0
P.H.E.	11	Arts/Grads	2
Bus. Grads	3	Law '76	5
Chemical	5	Arts '75	4
Arts '78	9	Chem Grads	1
Comm '76	2	Comm. '75	1
Comm '77	9	Electrical	0
Education	14	Chem. Grads	1
Meds	4	Bus. Grads	3
Law '77	4	Comm. '76	3

Broomball

Comm. '76	0	Electrical	0
Comm. '77	0	Mechanical	0
Bus. Grads	2	Chemical	0
Law '77	0	wins by default over Arts '75	0
Arts '77	0	Civil Math	0
Mechanical	0	Comm. '78	0
Comm. '75	3	Meds	0

Rugby

Commerce '76 won the Bews rugby championship for 74-75 over P.H.E., two games to one. The round-up for the three games were as follows:

October 31	Commerce '76	26	P.H.E.	0
November 7	Commerce '76	3	P.H.E.	6
November 11	Commerce '76	8	P.H.E.	6

HOUSING CRISIS?

A survey dealing with Campus Housing problems will be distributed by mail to Queen's Students this week. Your help in compiling this survey data by completing and returning this questionnaire is greatly needed. Hopefully this random sample will help us establish and evaluate the priorities of student housing in Kingston. Please take the time to reply to this valuable survey.

Thank you,

Jahn Gray

(Student Affairs)

Commerce '76 defeated Phys Ed 8-6 in a super fast (?) game of rugby.

Bruce Cockburn

November 17

7 and 10 pm

Grant Hall

All tickets are $4.00

We apologize for the misunderstanding
re. Tuesday's Journal

Blue Grass Boogie

featuring

The Good Brothers OpenRoad

and other surprise acts

Friday November 22
Grant and Kingston Halls
doors open at 7:30

$2.50 in advance with valid student card
$3.00 at door

LOTS OF BEER AND BYOD

The world at large

WASHINGTON (AP) - The economic statistics for November will likely indicate that the United States is entering a recession. The figures will show a continued erosion of the U.S. economy. In concluding that there was a recession the White House took such economic statistics as these into account: Unemployment up from 4.6 per cent to six per cent in October expected to rise to 7 per cent in 1975, industrial production down one per cent from a year earlier in September, the Gross National Product has declined for three consecutive quarters, and the retail sales were down for the second straight month in October.

NEW YORK - Arafat, leader of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, arrived safely in New York after his life was threatened by an officer of the Jewish Defense League. Arafat was taken from Kennedy Airport to the United Nations building in New York by helicopter. The building was guarded by 1,000 police and armed UN guards. Russell Kellner, an officer of the Jewish Defense League was arrested by the FBI for threatening the life of PLO leader. Russell stated publicly that his group intends to assassinate Arafat. Arafat was in New York to present his case for independence of the Palestinians before the general assembly of the United Nations.

QUITO, Ecuador - The Organization of American States (OAS) voted against lifting the 10 year old trade sanctions against Cuba. The proposers of the motion to lift the 1964 boycott - Colombia, Costa Rica, and Venezuela - were unable to get a two-thirds majority vote. They tell two short of the necessary 14 votes to pass the motion. The 12 countries who did support the motion are already re-establishing links with Cuba or have indicated that they will do so in the near future. Such actions by these members of OAS have virtually crippled any future decisions or usefulness of the organization. The organization can not be expected to hold together if its members do not consider that it holds any moral ties over them.

MOSCOW (Reuter) - Eleven young Armenians have been sentenced to terms ranging from two to seven years for organizing a non-Communist political party in Armenia. The aim of the party had been the separation of Armenia from the Soviet and its reunification with former Armenian areas in eastern Turkey and Soviet Azerbaijan. Nine others have been arrested in connection to the case in the last month.

PARIS (UPI) - Union leaders have called for a one day general strike on Nov. 19. The strike would be for higher pay demands. Key national services are already suffering from wild cat walkouts. Two unions have urged members of the national sector to strike. Such a general strike will cause demands for higher pay to mushroom in the private sector as well. CAIRO - The newspaper Al-Ahram has reported that King Faisal of Saudi Arabia has warned President Ford that the Arabs may impose an embargo on oil going to the United States if a satisfactory solution to the Palestine problem is not reached. Faisal has suggested such a measure because of the United States' policy of "unlimited American aid to Israel." Al-Ahram stated that the Egyptian message conveyed to Ford declared that "We do not expect American bias in favour of the Arabs but a balanced attitude, taking into consideration American interests in the area."

Canada

Bill 22 opposed

MONTREAL - A campaign has begun in Quebec to wage a court battle against Bill 22. The bill declares that the French language will be the only official language in Quebec. A small private foundation, the Pan-Canada Foundation will initiate a $500,000 national fund raising drive to finance the court costs. The funds raised would allow the Quebec Protestant School Board to take its case all the way to the Supreme Court of Canada. The Protestant Boards will attempt to have Bill 22 thrown out as unconstitutional. The bill can be viewed as a violation of minority rights.

OSHAWA - Ontario is likely to be the scene of major teacher strikes in the next few years. Kenneth Munroe, the director of the Durham Board of Education attributes the probable strikes to the concern expressed by teachers' over contract demands. He feels the teachers are more ambitious for their profession than any previous group of teachers.

Both the Boards of Education

Queen's Pub

Campus Pub Night

College Bowl
Festival '74

live band - CHATEAUX

November 15 and 16

1 pair of tickets to the
1974 College Bowl
will be given away as
a door prize

George Baby
sporting goods
40 Prince Street K7L 1A4
Kingston, Ontario
Tel. 613-542-3390

Woods Down Insulated
Hiking or Skiing Jackets - $53.96
Vasque Hiking Boots - $39.95
Mini Rucksacks - $3.95
With Student Card

Queen's Ski Club

Mt. Sutton Trip

December 29 to January 4

Includes:

- 6 nights lodging,
- 2 meals per day
- 5 days skiing with choice of 6 major areas

Maximum of 40 people

Information night for those interested: Monday Nov. 18, 7:00 pm Lower Vic. $40 deposit required on Thursday
Nov. 21 in John Orr Room.

AVAILABLE
NOW
at
DIVISION OF CONCERTS
BOX OFFICE
in
AGNES ETHERINGTON
ART CENTRE
547-6194

Tickets for:

- Nov. 19 Beaux Arts Trio - Dunning Hall
- Nov. 25 Igor Oistrakh, violin - Grant Hall
- Nov. 27 Toronto Workshop Productions' "Ten Lost Years" - Grand Theatre
- Nov. 29 King's Singers - St. George's Cathedral

This is your entry to the College Bowl Ticket Lottery!
Bring to Queen's Pub on November 15

NAME:

ADDRESS:

You must be at the Pub to claim your tickets.
Draw will be around midnight on November 15

Show Her The Way You Feel

with a Petite Diamond Ring
from

Brock Jewellers

Love diamond ring
Set in 10k yellow
gold

$42.00

THE DIAMOND + PEARL
BROCK
JEWELLERS
161 Princess St.

You've been very studious, cultured, concerned Queen's kids this fall. But what about presents? OFS wants more than $32 from OSAP, senior staff here has pleaded for more support... But what are you asking for?

Project Green sprouts madly

by Chris Szpak

Nature is about to make a comeback on the Queen's campus but it will need your support. Starting today there will be people selling buttons and posters to gather the needed money to finance the landscaping activities at Queen's. This is being done under the auspices of the Project Green Club, a new organization that was formed about seven weeks ago.

Although the club is fairly recent the idea for it stretches back into last year. Since the dutch elm disease began striking down Queen's majestic elms several years ago, and with the increase of construction, a number of people felt the need to do something about saving the greenery of the campus. Last year Arts '75 initiated a campaign to improve the landscaping by purchasing new trees. Their optimistic slogan "QUEEN'S FOREVER GREEN", provided the inspiration for the present "PROJECT GREEN."

Recently the organizer, David Gordon, a member of the Campus Planning Committee, realized that a concentrated effort was needed to finish off projects such as the landscaping job around the MacKintosh-Corry Building. The landscape architect Emil Van der Meulen, who planned the above project also has been asked to do other parts of the campus. Gordon decided that the greening of Queen's could be an on-going process where a group could co-ordinate the various projects and raise the necessary funds, not only from the student body but also from outside organizations such as the Alumni Association.

In an effort to generate enthusiasm among the students, Project Green Organizers have approached various student groups such as the D.S.C. and Class Years to sponsor their own projects such as donating new trees. At the same time Project Green has embarked on a publicity campaign to acquaint the students of its purpose.

D Wing of Victoria Hall has given $100 to the drive

Students must tell public we need money- Watts

by S.E. Yarnell

Students and staff of this university could be or already are striving in at least three different ways to rescue Queen's from the menace to high educational standards posed by inadequate government funding. Principal Ronald Watts told the Journal on Wednesday.

A brief which describes the urgent need for the increased financing and which describes the "special character of Queen's" is being prepared by the principal for the recently formed (Ontario Council on University Affairs) (OCUA).

OCUA is a body of nineteen individuals of various careers and positions in Ontario. The Council was established to act as a buffer between universities and the provincial government, and to advise the government of the needs of Ontario universities.

At Queen's, a Senate committee on "financial constraint" is being set up to consider future action which the government might take and to evaluate the university's alternatives, according to Watts.

The Principal also stressed that the Faculty and student body must ensure that the public is made aware of Queen's need for more money.

These financial problems stretch back to 1972 when Ontario universities were first faced with low budget increases. For 1973-74, the hike in the Basic Income Unit (BIU) was only 2 per cent. The rise for the year following was 3.4 per cent, and for 1973-74, it was 7.1 per cent. Meanwhile, Watts pointed out, universities' costs had almost doubled, primarily due to inflation.

This year, library costs have gone up 18 per cent, and paper costs have risen 30 per cent. Increases in amounts paid for fuel and utilities have also been substantial.

"So far, we have managed to maintain quality in spite of the hardships," said Watts. He stressed, however, that "any further cuts would have serious effects."

Watts mentioned three areas where cutbacks have already been made. The university has not been able to hire people to replace departing staff, which has resulted in slightly higher student-staff ratios, especially in the rapidly growing schools and faculties such as Business, and Arts and Science. Laboratory equipment has not been updated and replaced as frequently as would be ideal to ensure continuation of a high standard of education. The same curb has been placed on library acquisitions.

Queen's "special character" as depicted in the brief to OCUA is a product of her moderate size, large variety of programs, high proportions of non-local students and over all emphasis on quality, explained the principal. Because of the university's "steady state" growth policy, when enrolment reaches 10,000 (which it almost has), there will be no annual increases in enrolment to warrant more money from the government. Therefore, a considerable hike in the BIU is necessary in order to balance with costs.

See FURTHER, Page 3

Forsey speaks against Bill 22

by Doug Bonnell

A crowd of three hundred people turned out last Friday to hear Senator Eugene Forsey. Canada's foremost expert on the constitution, speak out against the Quebec Provincial Government's Bill 22, a bill which has since become law.

Forsey, who describes himself as "a Sir John A. Macdonald Conservative and a Pierre Elliot Trudeau Liberal" has his fears primarily on the direction the bill takes with regards to a national bilingualism policy. "It is disheartening," he said, "for those people who have been working towards a bilingual Canada for so long, people like McGill's Frank Scott and I, to see Quebec move in the opposite direction."

Bill 22 has restricted the use of English as a working language in Quebec, but not as an official one. Most official business carried on in the educational and industrial sectors of the province must be carried on in French. The most controversial part of the bill is that section which demands that any immigrant who speaks neither official language fluently, must send his or her children through a French educational system. The problem as Forsey sees it is that the BNA Act guarantees education by religion. Thus a Chinese Presbyterian can legally demand an education in a Protestant, and in all likelihood English, educational system.

Senator Eugene Forsey

He criticized the Bill for infringing on the future potential of the French-Canadian non-élite whose children cannot afford an education in both languages and whose future on a predominantly English-speaking continent will be insecure.

Forsey, whose talk was interspersed with past reminiscences, remarkable imitations of Canadian politicians, and a great deal of Nova Scotia humour, sees hope for those in opposition to the legislation through the quiet diplomacy of the federal government, and an optimistic and understanding attitude on the part of all Canadians.

Queen's
Journal
Volume 102, No. 21
Tuesday, November 19, 1974

wat's hapnin'?

Upcoming Events

Friday, November 22 - Diplomacy Club in the McLaughlin room of the Student's Union (1st floor behind the coat room). New members welcome. Please bring pencil and paper.

Friday, November 22 - Canadian Painting in the 1930's: Free Public Illustrated Lecture by Charles C. Hill, Assistant Curator of Post-Confederation Art, the National Gallery of Canada. Sponsored jointly by the Agnes Etherington Art Centre and the department of Art. Dupuis Hall at 8:00 p.m. Reception following at the Art Centre.

Friday, November 22 - G.S.S. Film Club Friday film series presents Take the Money and Run with Woody Allen. Ellis Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. Series ticket or $1.00 at the door.

Saturday, November 23 - Ballroom Dance Club continues its weekly dances at 8:30 p.m. Dance Studio memberships available at the door. ($1.00) New members (no matter how few lessons) are welcome and encouraged to join.

Saturday, November 23 - A Smoker Dance, featuring Crazy Legs at Grant Hall from 8:30-1:00. Sponsored by the Meds and Commerce Societies.

Monday, November 25 - Department of History presents a public lecture by Professor Olwen Hufton on Women and marriage in the 20th Century France. At 8:00 p.m. in room 217, Watson Hall.

Tuesday, November 26 - Thursday, November 28 - The Dunning Trust Lectures present Canada's Involvement in Latin America: The Roles of Business, Church and State, at 8:00 p.m. in Dunning Hall. Admission is free.

Tuesday, November 26 to November 29 - The Department of Drama presents Chronicles XXV...The Police by Arrabel, in the Studio Theatre, Room 102. There is no admission charge and tickets are available at the Drama Desk (547-6291).

Wednesday, November 27 - Grand Theatre presents Ten Lost Years by the Toronto Workshop Productions. Tickets are $3.00, $4 and $5 and are available at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre.

Thursday, November 28 to November 30 - McArthur Dramatics present The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man in the Moon Marigolds, at McArthur Theatre, Sir John A. MacDonald Blvd. and Union Street. Time: 8:30 p.m. Tickets at Agnes Etherington Art Centre.

Pubs and Theatres

Townhouse - Nobody Special
101 Inn - Bond
Frontenac-Finnegan's - Liam McGuire
Frontenac - Muldoon's - Alan Rody
Manor - The Orientals
Cammodore - Lyle

Hyland - The Odessa File
Capitol 1 - Police Women
Capitol 2 - Uptown Saturday Night
Oleone - Airport 75

Phys. Ed. Centre

The swimming pool at Queen's will be closed due to other University requirements on November 23 between 4:30 and 6:00 p.m. The arena will be closed on November 23 between 4:30 and 5:20 p.m.

Tuesday, November 19

1:00 p.m. - J.M. Jutkewitz formerly Latin American Institute for Economic and Social Planning, Santiago, will speak on "Chile Since the Coup" in room 517 Watson Hall.

7:00 p.m. - Department of Film Studies presents Documentary Night. Four short films will be screened: Tout le Monde du Monde, Nuit et Brouillard, Hotel des Invalides, and Sang des Betes. In Jeffery Hall and no admission will be charged. The films have French dialogue without subtitles. Notes and translations will be provided at the screening.

7:30 p.m. - Queen's Bridge Club will meet in McLaughlin Room. Everyone is welcome regardless of experience. Phone Pieter at 544-7309 for more information.

8:00 p.m. - Buddha in Egypt: The Desert Fathers and The Way to Inner Peace - a lecture by Father Edward G. Holtam, S.S.J.E. in the Andrews Room, 2nd Floor Theological Hall.

8:30 p.m. - Beaux Arts Trio, part of the Dunning Hall series, will be presented. This trio includes a cello, violin, and piano and has been said to be "chamber music making at its best". For additional information call Agnes Etherington Art Centre, 547-6194.

9:00 p.m. - Department of Film Studies presents Love Affair. On the case of the Missing Switchboard Operator. In Ellis Auditorium and admission is $1.00 at the door.

Wednesday, November 20

6:00 p.m. - Ban Righ Fireside will present Julia du Prey a vocalist singing French and German late Romantic music. Coffee and dessert will be served at 5:45 p.m. in the Ban Righ common room.

7:30 p.m. - Queen's Debating Union will hold its weekly meeting in the Upper Lounge of the International Centre. Tonight's topic for debate: "Be it resolved that the automobile should be banned from the North American city."

7:30 p.m. - Tout Va Bien, a film starring Jane Fonda and Yves Montand, will be shown in Ellis Auditorium with an admission of $1.00. Producer Jean-Pierre Gorin will be present and will discuss his work and answer questions from the audience. The evening will conclude with a screening of Letter to Jane, a film made after Tout Va Bien and in response to a newspaper photograph of Jane in Viet Nam.

8:00 p.m. - Douglas Roche M.P., outspoken foreign policy critic on the developed nations aid, trade and consumption will speak in Dunning Hall. The topic will be "Wanted: A More Human World".

8:00 p.m. - Introductory lectures on Transcendental Meditation will be given every Wednesday evening in Stirling Hall room 412. Admission is free.

8:00 p.m. - Psychology Smoker in Clark Hall. Admission is $2.25 and beer is 5 for $2.00.

8:30 p.m. - Concert: Queen's Wind Ensemble, Director D.A. Bates, will present a program of 20th Century music by British, American and Canadian composers. In Grant Hall and admission is free.

Thursday, November 21

7:00 & 9:30 p.m. - Campus Movies presents Fellini Roma at the Dunning Hall Auditorium. Admission is $1.00.

8:00 p.m. - Seminar on Career Possibilities in Classics. In Watson 542 and everyone is welcome.

8:00 p.m. - Department of English Lecture Series Lecture 1: "On Comparing the Arts" will be given by Professor Joseph Burke of the University of Melbourne, presently Visiting Commonwealth Fellow in the Department of Art History at Queen's, in Kingston Hall room 200. All welcome.

Snow Removal

Queen's University, Kingston General Hospital Parking Regulations state in part as follows: "From December 1st to March 31st inclusive, vehicles parked on surface lots between midnight and 8:00 A.M. will be towed away if they impede snow removal operations."

Science '44 Co-op OpenHouse

Saturday, November 23

10 am to 4 pm

314 William St.

VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S

VAN'S GIFTS and BOOKS LTD.
282 Princess St.
KINGSTON 542-6676

Huge selection of Adult Pocket Books Magazines - cards - films - credit cards Boxed jokes and gifts for Broad-minded souls. You name the type of party, Van's supplies from "tea" party to a bash! Plus a lot of genuine Christmas specials.

STORE HOURS OPEN Mon.-Fri. 9:30 am - 10 pm Saturday 9:30 am - 9 pm Sunday 12:00 noon - 9 pm

VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S VAN'S

Campus movies

present

FELLINI ROMA

by Federico Fellini

Thursday 7 and 9:30
Dunning Hall $1.00

Concert Committee

needs volunteers to sell tickets this week in the John Orr Room for BLUEGRASS BOOGIE

a Bluegrass Bash held in Grant & Kingston Halls, Friday November 22

Ticket sale help is also needed for upcoming concerts - that is if you want more concerts at Queen's.

Call Betty 548-3285 or 546-7591 and leave your name & phone number or drop in to the Concerts Office basement of the Union.

"Further cuts would have serious effects"

FURTHER, from Page 1

Money is required to build accommodation, as 90 per cent of Queen's students come from areas outside Kingston. The Senate Committee on Campus Planning is presently carrying out investigations into alternative types of accommodation required for students. Watts emphasized that when (if) funds become available, accommodation will be built.

The wide variety of faculties and schools which Queen's boasts requires tremendous sums of money, because of professional programs such as Law, Engineering and Medicine. Watts pointed out that so many professional schools were unusual in a university the size of

Send in your housing surveys

Off campus housing is important. As many know through painful experience, the housing situation in Kingston became even tighter than usual this fall. Will it be even more difficult for students to find a place to live next fall? To get some information to help answer this question, the Committee on Campus Planning, through its Subcommittee on Student Residences, is carrying out its biennial Survey of Off Campus Housing this year instead of waiting until next year as usually would be done.

If you happen to be one of the lucky few who receives a survey in the mail, please show your concern by filling out and returning the survey of off campus housing form. Who knows, you may save someone the cost of a tent.

Queen's. "Quality", the word meaning excellent standards, has for years been the very foundation of this university's reputation. Queen's strong points - those areas which have contributed to her fame - are her social sciences departments, geology and the professional schools: Medicine, Law, and Applied Science. Watts cited the high proportion of Canadian content in most programs offered at the university as also contributing to Queen's renown.

Despite this list of honors, it appears that now, when virtually all sectors are asking for more government help, society does not consider universities important enough to finance them adequately. Gone are the days when a politician could promise to spend more on higher education and know he would receive more votes as a consequence of that vow. Watts believes that this change in public opinion is connected to the attitudes and actions of the 1950's and '60's, when tax dollars allocated to universities increased considerably, causing society to perhaps expect too much in return. The public became angry with post-secondary institutions during the student uprisings and Faculty problems of the 1960's. Unemployment of graduates also contributed to the public's questioning of universities' value to society.

This tendency to downgrade the worth of universities' contribution to society may disappear within three or four years, remarked Watts, but by that time it may be too late, the quality of education may already have been damaged.

SCM: alive and well in Union

SCM still breathes in the Union Basement. The oldest student-run organization in Canada - as the propaganda goes - fluctuates in activity and direction as students pass on into the land of the consumer. The Movement which emerged in response to the harsh social problems of the 30's has always struggled with the progressive and radical students' misconceptions about the Christian in the S.C.M.'s name. Of course it's understandable that many left-wing students think that Marxist thought is incompatible with Christianity nevertheless some seek for a synthesis. Perhaps the most negative aspects of both organized ideologies provide some common ground: Siberia and the Inquisition. S.C.M. is open to all students and the social, political, theological or whatever areas it wishes to examine will depend on the people in it. Some of the things in the pipe line for the end of the month are (1) Author and M.P. Doug Roche, long time foreign policy critic of Canada's Aid: Trade & Consumption will speak on "Wanted: A More Human World" 8:00 p.m. Wed 20th Nov. in Dunning Hall (2) China Missionary and Political Activist James ENDICOTT, early proponent of Communist China's right to recognition, recipient of the Lenin Peace Prize etc. speaks 8:00 p.m. Fri. 22 Nov in Dunning.

(3) "BETHUNE" the film autobiography of this great Canadian figure in revolutionary

Spain and China. Though the university system penalizes those who don't wish to become successful specialists, please drop by the Basement Bookroom and read some stuff about the world outside. Every Weekday afternoon, current magazines and books on liberation, third world, Indian rights, christian-marxism etc....

Night class.

Black & White.
Enjoyed in over 168 countries

Rector Candidate Night

Alex Faseruk
David Gordon
Jim Henderson

Doug Hutchinson
Stephen Ross
Bruce Trotter

Thurs, Nov. 21. 8:00 pm, Lower Vic

the MARKET
BARBER SHOP
& hairstyling salon

Peter Smits invites you
to his new hair care shop
549-2110
43 BROCK ST. KINGSTON ONT

Queens
University

Music
Department

Twentieth Century Music From England, Canada and the U.S.

QUEEN'S WIND ENSEMBLE

Director: Ouane Bales

GRANT HALL
8:30

WEONESOAY
NOVEMBER 20

ADMISSION FREE

SKI

SADDEBACK MOUNTAIN
MAINE

Vertical Drop 2000 feet
and 30 miles of trails

Ski from January 1-5, with unlimited use of lifts. 5 nights accommodations and transportation included for $86.00. Reduction possible if enough people can provide their own transportation. Call Jim Downey (544-7703) or Steve Gareau (549-0797) 6-9 pm. for more info, or drop up to 405 Brockington. A $24 deposit is required before December 2.

A Snowball Ski Club Presentation.

unclassifieds

FOR SALE: 1 Marantz 1000 stereo amplifier, 1 SA-1000 Pioneer stereo amplifier, 1 Heathkit AR 1302 stereo receiver. Phone 544-4197.

FOR SALE: One man's Queen's ring, size 8 1/2, sterling silver.

WANTED: — Girl to share two bedroom apartment (after Christmas). One mile from campus, phone Sandy: 542-6535 after 7 pm.

BALLROOM DANCE club Dance every Sat 8:30 Dance studio, membership $1.50 available at door, only qualification necessary: at least some beginners instruction. 542-3995.

OUTING CLUB SPORTS lottery: this is your last week to buy tickets for the draw on Nov. 29th. Tickets are only 25 cents each and you can win a $100 cash voucher (first) good at Hugh Findlay's Sport Shop.

BALLROOM DANCE club Dance every Sat 8:30 Dance studio, membership $1.50 available at door, only qualifications necessary: at least some beginners instruction. 542-3995.

BINA — a belated happy birthday. Love and kisses, H.C.

INTERESTED IN THE MUSIC OF THE '30's and '40's in the big band sound for your dance? It's so cool! Call Babe (542-1920) or O.G. Hallam (542-9740) for bookings. Also more modern stylings, Latin, etc. available.

BEEROM AVAILABLE: immediately in house with 3, 2nd year male students, near University and William Streets, $75 plus utilities. 544-5861.

NON-SMOKERS — come and get your bill of rights! Nov. 19th 7-9 Red Room Kingston Hall or phone Peter Mannes 548-7873.

FOR SALE: 1 pr. Lange standards, $1,000, one pr. Lange press phone 542-6991.

FOUND: 1 pr. girl's leather gloves behind Vic on parking lot Thurs. Nov. 10 phone 542-4291.

THE DEPT. OF ART history and Agnes Elphinstone Art Gallery co-sponsor a guest lecture by Charles Hill, "Canadian Painting in the 1930's", Friday, November 22, 1974 8 pm. Dumps Hall.

QUEEN'S HOMOPHILE: We have over 50 members, all ages, all Opts. Your affiliation with the group is kept strictly confidential with no chance of exposure. Come and meet us at the next private meeting or party. Call 542-2834 Tues. Thursday, 8-9 or write Student Affairs Centre c/o Terry Watson.

MESSRS BONNELL AND COLLINS wish to announce the formation of the B.U.V.C.S. Details to follow.

KEITH NORTON (Queen's Law 1991), a member of Queen's legal aid and the Queen's Kingston Liaison committee is seeking re-election in the predominantly student ward of Sydneyham. He needs your support. Vote to reelect Keith Norton alderman in Sydneyham ward.

G.O. 101. THIS IS IT: The big reunion. It's at Shorley's place (Oave) 314 William on Friday 22 Nov. Our fair maiden Shawn is a coming and so is Ian. So you be there or Julie and Aime will be mad. Can you afford to miss it?

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTO: offers quality film processing both in black and white and color. Transparencies with competitive prices and 24 hour service. For more information call us at 544-7770 or drop by our studio at 33 Brock Street.

LAST CHANCE: THIS IS IT your last chance to get it on with the Journal staff. We need people to write and type for us. Fulfill your wildest dreams, work for the Journal.

HEY CAROLYN! It's your birthday! You're a big girl now, no more tornados in your room, running into guy's rooms at 1 am or jogging at 3 am. Happy Birthday.

IAN, PLUS GO 94 and 24, are to attend Liquid assets available on demand Oevious Normalized Also Cethyl palpitale. 549-3907, 544-3015 for directions.

PLEASE!! If you find or know the whereabouts of a brown suitcase lost Monday night at Bagel and Earl, please call 542-9559. There is a reward and the contents are probably valuable to no one but me. I need the contents badly.

IF YOU ARE STILL LOOKING for quiet private accommodation in home at West end of city. Mature male, car would be an asset. Good benefits, parking $12.50 per week. Phone 542-9802.

COME SKI WITH US: Saddleback Mountain January 1-5. See page 3 for more.

THINK... do you want your house next year? We'd like a 6 man house available May '75. Phone 544-8846, 544-8810, 544-8511, 544-8506.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTO: offers quality film processing both in black and white and color. Transparencies with competitive prices and 24 hour service. For more information call us at 544-7770 or drop by our studio at 33 Brock Street.

TO TOM, MARK AND MARK: We are looking forward to a re-match. We stand undefeated, Jeanne, Pat and Pat.

HEY BABE! You want to get lucky and meet a woman. If you've got a 6 man house your odds are even better, cause we're interested for May '75. Love 544-8511, 544-8506, 544-8846, 544-8810.

TO BEV: you know what kind of woman are you? You set me up, then stand me up. And you think that's funny, don't you? Peter.

HOUSE OR APARTMENT: NEEDED: 4 bedrooms and relatively close to campus for the '75-'76 season. Please call Sue 544-8077, Barb 544-9281 or Shawn 544-8067. Thanks.

WANT TO SKI THIS CHRISTMAS? January 1-5 at Saddleback Mountain. More on Page 3.

FREE PRESS COVERAGE: come and work for the Queen's Journal and the editor guarantees that you will get your name in the masthead absolutely free. The chance of a lifetime — come to type or write on Wed and Sun nites

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTO: offers quality film processing both in black and white and color. Transparencies with competitive prices and 24 hour service. For more information call us at 544-7770 or drop by our studio at 33 Brock Street.

PSYCHOLOGY SMOKER NOV. 20: Come out and tag with the crowd at Clark Hall 8pm - 1am. There is lots of beer and lun for all. Beer 5 for $2. Let us entertain you. Admission: 25 cents.

LOST: a pair of brown glasses in brown case, in area from Brock St. and Clergy Street to University. If found call 544-4671.

WHOEVER YOU ARE that stole my bone coloured leather jacket from 308 Kingston Hall, Nov. 12, you were seen. The issue will not be pursued if you return the jacket to Vic Hall immediately.

HELP! I CAN'T SEE: I've lost a pr. of glasses in a blue case. If found please phone 549-3945.

PLAN AHEAD! Have you got a one bedroom place close to campus to get rid of by May 1977? Call Jim, 549-5755, I'd like to see it.

UNLIMITED OPPORTUNITIES: to meet attractive single people of the opposite sex, at the Queen's Journal Dating Club. Come out and see for yourself, any Wed. or Sun. night and meet people who share your interests: writing and typing; or, you could see Sarah E. Yarnell.

TURNING 20 wasn't too traumatic because of Valerie, Glenn, Sue and Ken. Nancy and especially the Perry-Palmer team and the world's best future character.

THANKS AND LOVE FROM RITA.

AVOID HEADACHES! I need a one bedroom apartment or house close to campus starting May '75. (not to be subtle). Take one worry off your mind. Call Jim, 549-5755, between 6 and 9pm.

THORNS TURNABLE with Shure M710E cartridge, excellent condition, $125. Call 544-5117.

TO GIVE AWAY: One beautiful kitten, male, about 3 months old, very playful and affectionate. Also some food and Kitty Litter to go with him, 549-5124.

5 OR MORE BEDROOM HOUSE

WANTED — willing to take over lease either May or September '75. If you have one that will be available then, please call Oick (544-7860) or Louise (544-7865).

WE ALL KNOW THAT YOU need the Queen's Journal, but now the tables are turned. The Queen's Journal needs you to type, write, drink beer and shoot pool (Wed. only). Be able to boast to your friends that you work for the Journal, which is something like talking to God. So, basement of the Union, any time.

TAK GENERAL MEETING Wed 6 pm Second floor common room. All members please attend.

HI HUM, OAO, ROB, ANN AND WINKERS — how's the swinging T.O. life? It's probably like here... but at least you're not lost somewhere in a textbook that keeps cracking! Oh, I can hardly wait till the 22nd. Woody and Dan say hello.

FOUND AT THE Bruce Cockburn concert one furry cat which is little, black and furry, i.e. a kitten, if not claimed, the Bonanza's will eat it for dinner. Hope you claim it! For dinner. Phone 544-5158.

Cap'n Oepravo (AKA "Louisiana Oave") says sorry to the lad for drinking all the whiskey. Conversation of the week "Oave, when do we eat?" See ya at the launching pad.

THINGS JUST GET worse and worse. The cat stew was really poor. I think it was because of all the anchovies and onions. Who is the phantom unclassified writer, anyhow?

We'll soon eat Oave for 1:00 a.m. Snack 'cos he's the funniest dumb writer we have. — Yes Dave!

BOOKS

We are offering to supply any book printed in English, French, German and all Slavic languages since Gutenberg Bible, with 10-35 per cent discount for books in print. It does not matter if the book was published in Toronto or Moscow. If you supply us with author, title and year when published (if possible) we will supply.

Delivery time for books in print from Canada and U.S.A. 2-16 weeks, from western Europe 8-24 weeks, from Czechoslovakia or Russia 6-18 months. Send order or write for more detailed information.

ACADEMIC BOOK CLUB,
P.O. BOX 1507,
KINGSTON, ONTARIO K7L 5C7.

unclassifieds

LAST BIKE HIKE of the season (1974). Join the Outing Club in a one day trip from 10 am to 4 pm on Sat. Nov. 23. Meet in front of the student Union and bring a lunch. For more information phone Rob at 544-7669.

Happy Birthday to the "woman" who knows all the positions. Horny B. Gimmy.

HELP SIX GIRLS... we're looking for a house close to campus for next year. If you can help, please phone Mary Jo at 544-8505 or Fiona at 544-6993.

FURNISHED ROOM FOR RENT - 5 minutes from campus. Kitchen privileges. Graduate or upper year female student preferred. Call 544-5294.

FOR SALE: Lange standard SKI BOOTS, Men's size 9 1/2. Excellent condition - 2 seasons old. Phone 542-7751.

LOST BROWN PURSE containing wallet with all I.D. cards (Orver's licence, S.I. No. Birth Cert., OHIP etc.) and keys at Engineer's Pub, Thurs. Nov. 14, 1974. Please call Shirley at 549-2539.

THE INTERNATIONAL CENTRE has UNICEF Christmas Cards for sale. We're open from 9-5.

ENGLISH STUDENTS AND PROPS! Come to YOUR smoker tonight in Clark Hall from 9-11. Give up the books tonight and come join us.

GUEL APPLICATIONS can be picked up from the ASUS Box in the AMS office lower students' Union.

FEEL LIKE SKIING over the Christmas holidays? Start the season off right by joining the Queen's Ski Club trip to Mount Sutton, Quebec, Oct. 29 to Jan. 4th included in the package are: 4 nights, 2 meals per day, and a 5 day low pass good at 6 major areas; all for the low cost of $195. A $40 deposit is needed on Thursday, Nov. 21 in the John Orr Room.

CAMERA CLUB SLIOE COMPETITION will be judged tonight (19 Nov.) in Stirling A at 8:00 pm. Public welcome to attend. Entrants should watch Friday's Journal for information about return of slides.

PHOTOGRAPHY EXHIBITION FOR ARTS FESTIVAL '75. Black and white and colour prints will be accepted from Jan. 13 to Jan. 24, at Terry Tin Can Graphics office. Contact COLIN - 549-4038.

MUSICALLY INCLUDE? Participate in Arts Festival '75. Jan. 28 to February 1st. Talent needed. Contact Pat 544-7872 or Oave 549-4709 or Kathy 544-6540.

GUEL APPLICATIONS CAN BE PICKED UP FROM THE ASUS BOX in the AMS Office, lower Students' Union.

LET'S MAKE A DEAL: To the fellow who phoned me Wednesday night about my stolen leather coat, I'd like to talk further with you. Phone me again (549-4423) this Wednesday at the same time.

WANTED: Your two-bedroom apartment starting May 1st, 1975. Call 544-5873 or 542-7446. Please leave address and phone number. Let us pay your summer rent.

SKIERS! You could have the use of a ski chalet in the Laurentians for the entire winter season for only $90. For more info call Graham Millington at 544-0949 or 547-5748.

FOR SALE: Quality calculators from Texas Instruments - all models. SR-50's selling for $165. Phone Duncan at 549-4423 between 5 and 7 pm.

WANTED: $15 Reward for bachelor or single bedroom apartment for next term. Call Brent at 542-3282 between 5:00 and 6:30 pm weekdays or anytime weekends.

TONIGHT the world's greatest SMOKER is being sponsored by the English Dept. Bring along your prof and join us in Clark Hall from 9-11. You'll never regret it!

ARTS FESTIVAL IS BRINGING John Lennon, John Glen, Pope Paul, Jerry Lewis, Tricia Nixon, Eddie Shack, The Oave Clark Five, Marshall Tito, and the Shah of Iran. Participate! Contact Ann at 549-5084.

OUGG: THIS YEAR IT'S my turn to remember. I hope you had a happy 20th yesterday. From another of Mrs. Sorensen's grade 6 students.

SKI THE EASTERN TOWNSHIPS with the Queen's Ski Club Oct. 29th to Jan. 4th. For $95 you get 4 nights lodging, 2 meals per day, and 5 day low pass privileges for any of 4 areas. $40 deposit is required on Thursday Nov. 21 in the John Orr Room.

CHEAP - Items for sale: 1. Men's snow shoes (boots) beige leather with seal skin, size ten, smart, like new. Pd. $28, sell $8. 2. Man's beige 1/2 camel coat, warm sheep lining size 42-44, $8. 3. Three men's large white shirts - new, extra short sleeves, permanent press 75 cents each. 4. Three men's white long sleeved shirts used XL, 35 cents each. 5. Camera Flash - in pouch $1.6. Camera tripod, can take your own picture as well, portable $4.7. Studio couch, like new - less than a year old Pd. $90, sell for $35.

SMART 8. Square small table can study on. Oak, small shelf bottom. $8. 9. Two high-back chairs for study. $4 for oak and leather. $1 for painted wood one. 10. Pretty set of yellow curtains for kitchen window $2.50. Phone 544-6479.

ENGLISH SMOKER IS TONIGHT in Clark Hall from 9-11. Bring along your profs and join in the fun.

SALE OF CLOTHING: New and used: Beth Israel Synagogue, corner of Union and Centre. Thursday Nov. 21 from 9am to 4pm and from 7pm to 9pm. "Fill a bag for fifty cents"

NEW YORK THEATRE TOUR: one reservation for sale: $59.00, phone Ed Kulka at 549-8219.

MAKE SCIENCE 44 YOUR CASTLE: We have a vacant double for males and/or females. This vacant empire is at 115 Sydneyham. Call Al Evans at 542-1009.

PHOTO IMAGE 33 LTO: offers quality film processing both in black and white and color. Transparencies with competitive prices and 24 hour service. For more information call us at 544-7770 or drop by our studio at 33 Brock Street.

APARTMENT WANTED: if you have now, or will have soon, a small, comfortable apartment for rent in the City Park lower Earl St. area, please call immediately 546-9132 between 6 and 7 pm.

AS THE COOLE RISES we find 195 still a federal disaster area. The tongue (formerly bear) not saying about his Saturday night date, the news kid becoming hairy again (Saturday night), and coke announcing the 1st annual 195 parade party. For info, call between 4-8:00 clock-a-doodle-do.

SNEAKY PETE thanks all at 195 for the onslaught. Love to sexy, bacardi, and hard's wife. Hope all liked my sunrises. Labatt's blue and molson export also deserve credit. Again thanks to all. Love Sneaky Pete.

TERrible STENCH in 303 following his Jamaican holiday. Maybe he'll get blue again and feel some good old Southern comfort. Keep on howlin' and I'll see you at Boone's Farm. Ah hope ya like it.

LIBERATE YOURSELF AND YOUR BOOZY: work for the Queen's Journal. We need writers and people who like to layout. It would also be advantageous if they could do a few other things, but this is a family newspaper.

$100.00 REWARD for your 5 bedroom house close to campus. Lease in May or Sept. Call anytime 542-4639.

SCIENCE 44 CO-OP is not another "residence". It is a community: come and see us: OPEN HOUSE: Sat. Nov. 23, 10am to 4pm, 314 William St. For info call Al Evans 542-1009.

NOVEMBER BLAHS? A perennial problem. Well, we understand. You've finished midterms, but Xmas exams seem too far away to start studying for. And it looks like it's going to rain (what a surprise) NEVER FEAR! Because the Association (i.e. Meds) and Commerce (i.e. Commercial Societies) are jointly sponsoring a SMOKE RANCE for the QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY. See that great

THE ALMOST EVERYTHING STORE

Famous Brand Names at Discount Prices

THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL

Men's Blue Suede NORTH STAR JOGGERS

Sizes 7 to 12
16.95 Value 8.88

ORIENTATION '75 GAELS

Applications now available in the ASUS Box in the AMS Office, Lower Students' Union. Deadline for submissions of applications is WED. DEC. 4, 5:00 PM. In the ASUS Box. For further information call:

546-0903 or 546-1070

Blue Grass Boogie

featuring

The Good Brothers Open Road

and other surprise acts

Friday November 22

Grant and Kingston Halls

doors open at 7:30

$2.50 in advance with valid student card

$3.00 at door

LOTS OF BEER AND BYOD

A.M.S. PAGE

A.M.S. SPEAKERS COMMITTEE MEETING

Wednesday, Nov. 20

18:30 (6:30 p.m.)

MEDITATION ROOM,
2nd FLOOR, STUDENTS' UNION

- Discussion of Speakers for 2nd Term

PHILOSOPHY DEPARTMENT INVESTIGATES TRANSCENDENTAL MEDITATION

Mr. Charles Donahue - past Harvard lecturer on T.M. and Western philosophy
Dr. Bond and Dr. Fox - Queen's Philosophy Dept.
Dr. Kraciar - Queen's Physiology Dept.

Tuesday, Nov. 26

8:00 p.m. - Dupuis Auditorium

POSTERS • FLYERS • LOGOS • CARDS •
DESIGN • GRAPHICS • TICKETS •
CALLIGRAPHY • PROGRAMMES •
TEDDY TIN CAN GRAPHICS
CAMPUS PRINTING SERVICE
HOURS: MONDAY 1130-230
TUESDAY 1000-100
WEDNESDAY 1130-230
THURSDAY 130-430
FRIDAY 1000-100
BASEMENT UNION ACROSS FROM COFFEE SHOP
LETTERHEADS • SIGN PAINTING • DOGS

XEROXEROXEROX Photocopying

5/copy
Bosement, Student's Union
Monday-Friday 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

AMS, TYPING SERVICE

50'/double spaced page (8½ x 11)
90'/single spaced page (8½ x 11)

SPECIALIZING IN THESIS WORK
A.M.S. Office - Bosement,
Students' Union

A.M.S. BUS SERVICE

NOW OPERATING TO TORONTO
OTTAWA

Tickets on Sale in The John Orr Room

WED. 11:30 - 2:30

THURS. 11:30 - 2:30

FRI. 11:00 - 4:30

BUSES LEAVE FRIDAY AT 4:30 p.m.
FROM THE STUDENTS' UNION
TORONTO - $10 RETURN
OTTAWA - $8 RETURN

JAMES ENDICOTT CHINA MISSIONARY - POLITICAL ACTIVIST

Early and unpopular supporter of Communist China's recognition - holder of Lenin Peace Prize - previously barred from campuses - speaks on his National Tour

8:00 pm, Friday, Nov. 22

Dunning Hall

Followed by the Chinese film "RED FLAG CANAL"
Sponsored by S.C.M. and A.M.S. Education Commission

FESTIVAL OF THE ARTS

ARTISTICALLY INCLINED?

ART WORKSHOP: Demonstrators needed for display:
pointings, sculpture,
botik, mocrame, etc.

ART EXHIBITION: Works ore needed for any craft -
mocrame, botik,
leathercraft, etc.

Contact:
INEZ VERHOVEN 546-5370

january 28-february 1 1975

letters to the editor

T.M. critics simply uninformed

Dear Editor:

I was pleased to see Mr. Okoh's letter in your paper on Friday Nov. 15th, concerning the technique of Transcendental Meditation. It clearly illustrates the reason why information about the technique must be made widely available to the public. Many people have misconceptions about T.M. and those of us who are now meditating are very thankful to the media for helping to clear them up in the past. We are further thankful to Mr. Okoh for showing that this need for clarification still deserves attention today.

Considering the state of disrepute that the word "meditation" has fallen into in the Western World, it is easy to understand why people have so many misconceptions and misunderstandings about Transcendental Meditation. However, the validity of Transcendental Meditation has been verified by the objective, impersonal approach of the scientific community in hundreds of studies and the twice daily subjective experience of over 750,000 meditators around the world.

The Students' International Meditation Society is a non-profit organization operating throughout Canada and 60 other countries in the world solely for the purpose of teaching T.M. The public courses offered by this organization through a systematic step by step course procedure requires that the organization charge a course fee to defray obvious operating costs such as rental of facilities, printing of materials to present T.M. properly, salaries where necessary, office supplies and miscellaneous expenses. Being a non-profit educational organization its books are audited under government supervision yearly.

The measurement of the profound rest gained during 20 minutes of Transcendental Meditation as compared to 7 hours of sleep is of a qualitative not a quantitative nature. It is foolish to consider that we could give up sleeping if we were practising T.M., and I submit that Mr. Okoh has misinterpreted the research. He could not say "what rubbish" if he were at all acquainted with the numerous scientific studies conducted on the technique and published in many well respected scientific journals including Journal of the American Medical Association, Journal of Counselling Psychology, Science, etc. Specifically, one study conducted by Drs. Wallace and Benson and appearing in Scientific American (226, No. 2 (Feb '72), 84-90) clearly indicates that the quality of rest gained in 20 minutes of Transcendental Meditation is greater at the deepest point of T.M. than at any point found in an average 7 hours of sleep. This deep rest does not eliminate the need for sleep, but frees the system from deep-rooted stress so that the normal functioning of sleep and waking states can be more profound in their physiological functioning.

As far as the Queen's Journal giving space to provide information about speakers, causes or movements whether they be political, social or environmental, they can all be construed as either positive or negative advertising, from Caesar Chavaz to the polluted great lakes. All of these areas need "advertising" and this is the purpose of the news media in its proper objective reporting.

Jay Kassirer

Referendum - apathy charged

Dear Editor:

Fortunately for all of us, the O.F.S. referendum last Wednesday passed.

The thing which really exasperated me was that, out of approximately 10,000 students at Queen's, only 2821 voted. I spoke to several people on voting day and found that they had not voted, did not know what the referendum was about, and/or knew nothing about the O.F.S. In addition most of them said they had seen articles on the O.F.S. in the Journal and G.W., but had not bothered to read them, even though information was made available during the three weeks prior to voting day. This lack of interest in vital issues completely appalls me.

Granted, most of us are here to get an education, but doesn't that involve an awareness of what is happening outside the limited scope of our academic pursuits? (particularly when "what is happening" affects us so closely.) Surely, in the course of three weeks an individual, no matter how busy, can find five minutes to read even one article. If you still don't know why the O.F.S. is important, you should dig out a Tuesday Journal and read it. If nothing else, you might be interested to learn that the Ontario Federation of Students-Federation des Etudiants de l'Ontario has the potential to save you a lot of money and hassles in terms of tuition fees, housing and student assistance (OSAP). Or if that's not important to you, maybe you'd like to know that through the O.F.S. it's possible that students may be able to regain control of their pubs, which, according to recent amendments to the Liquor Act, are to be administered by a full time, non-student member of the University staff.

Terry MacI (our O.F.S. rep.) and his co-workers put in a hell of a lot of work to make Queen's aware of the importance of membership in the O.F.S. Even so, the referendum passed by a rather small margin. I'm not saying that everyone at Queen's should be intensely "involved", but, apathy, as the word itself suggests, is pathetic.

Sincerely,
Karen Alison

Queen's
Journal
Vol 102, No. 21
Tues., Oct. 19, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario.

Editor-in-Chief: Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager: Terry Collins
Managing Editor: Dan McClelland
News Editor: Sarah Yarnell
Features Editors: Wendy Reynolds, Laurie Gibson
Arts Editors: Kerry White, Peter Haworth
Photography Editor: John Cameron

Backpage: Val Cotton
Wall's Happenings: Rosemary Knight, Jennifer Hastings
Classifieds: Leslie Gaukrøger, Trish Brooks
Contributors: Lyn Howard Susan ne Jackson, Doug Bonnell, Dave Selander, Mike Creagan, Janice Wager, Howard Wray and all those with bylines

Comment: We the over signed are getting pretty fed up with all this AMS tom toolery - either everyone's resigning or else planning embezzlement. Being AMS employees, we feel it is our turn now to state our positions. What with no money no writers and classified complaints, we are planning a mass walkout - it things continue in this precarious fashion. However we will await our annual Xmas Bash and then reconsider our situation. Praised be the holidays!

Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (413) 547-7806. Printed by Gnomes at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newsprint.

Bite the one you love

STEAK & STUFF
LICENCED DINING ROOM 1399 Princess (near the station)
AUNT LUCY'S RESTAURANTS

SMOKER - DANCE

featuring

CRAZY LEGS

Grant Hall

Saturday Nov. 23 8:30 - 1:00

Admission 1.25

Beer 5/$2.00

Sponsored jointly by the Aesculapion Society and the Commerce Society.

Dunning Hall Concert:

BEAUX ARTS TRIO

"chamber music making al it very best!" - Toronto Star

TUESDAY 19 NOVEMBER
8:30

Ticket information 547-6194

a Division of
Concerts event

Department of Film Studies

Announces

A visit by Jean-Pierre Gorin

Radical French Filmmaker
Co-director with Jean-Luc Godard

and screenings of

TOUT VA BIEN

(1972, Co-directed by Godard & Gorin)
With Jane Fonda, Yves Montand

&
LETTER TO JANE

(by Godard & Gorin)

Wednesday, November 20

7:30 p.m.

Ellis Auditorium

Admission $1.00

How did we get into this mess?

Uncertainty and gloom envelop us

This is indeed heady stuff. Where, then, are the economic dilemmas? Here we are less than one decade later, in the first half of the 1970's and we find ourselves in circumstances which have changed almost completely. We are enveloped by uncertainty and in some quarters by outright gloom.

Today man's predicament is that there are no generally credible solutions, there are no promising new doctrines, there are only difficult and unpleasant choices. The Keynesian map appears to be exhausted.

This state of affairs has given rise to a new pessimism and to an anxious search for a new order and for new values to guide mankind into the future. Perhaps the most notable work is that of the Club of Rome on The Predicament of Mankind. The first major study coming out of this project resulted in the famous publication, The Limits of Growth. The other outstanding case of pessimism is the

by Dr. John J. Deutsch

Ed. Note: The following is an address given by ex-principal Deutsch to the Dilemmas of Modern Man symposium. The article has been reprinted from the Nov. 16 edition of the Globe & Mail.

During the 1920's, Herbert Hoover foresaw the prospect of not merely "a chicken in every pot" but believed, "We shall soon with the help of God be within sight of the day when poverty will be banished from the nation."

John Maynard Keynes, in his essay on Economic Possibilities for our Grandchildren, written in 1930 after the advent of the Great Depression, predicted the arrival of universal plenty and the banishment of want before the end of the next century.

During the 1960's, the modern Western world, including not only Japan and Western Europe but also the United States and Canada, achieved a period of rapid economic growth that made possible a condition of material affluence never before attained. This led to a new optimism, and it appeared that the Keynesian vision was truly in the making.

This achievement was held to be the work of what a number of economists have come to call the New Economics. It was thought that by means of the doctrines of the New Economics it was feasible to maintain exponential economic growth, at a rapid rate, to abolish not only major depressions but also to smooth out business fluctuations and to sustain unbroken advance in material welfare and prosperity.

Walter Heller, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors during the Kennedy and Johnson years, stated that, "The distinguishing feature of the New Economics is not that it is new but that it has newly pressed into public service the lessons of modern economics - of Keynes and the Classics . . . and has meant . . . the swift and progressive weaving of modern economics into the fabric of national thinking and policy."

Mr. Heller pointed out that economics had finally come of age in the 1960's and that the dismal science had been transformed into a lively political art.

With all this it is natural that that hitherto dormant figure, the economist, himself acquired an entirely new importance both in public affairs and in business.

Business Week recognized the new phenomenon when it pointed out that the record of five years of "remarkable growth - and remarkable stability - in the U.S. economy . . . has raised the prestige of economists - especially those who espouse the so-called New Economics - to an all-time high."

Mr. Heller stated it this way: "The significance of the great expansion of the 1960's lies not only in its striking statistics of employment, income and growth, but in its glowing promise of things to come."

recent essay with these words: "There is a question in the air, a question so disturbing that I would hesitate to ask it aloud did I not believe it existed unvoiced in the minds of many: 'Is there hope for man?'"

He answers the question in this way: "Rationalize as we will, stretch the figures as favorably as honesty will permit we cannot reconcile the requirements for a lengthy continuation of the present rate of existing resources of the globe with the capacity of existing resources of the fragile biosphere to permit or to tolerate the effects of that industrialization . . . If then . . . we ask whether it is possible to meet the challenges of the future without the payment of a fearful price, the answer must be: 'there is no such hope.'"

Population will double by 2000

The prospect (is) that the population of the world will double during the short period of less than 35 years, regardless of any likely or feasible method of birth control. The really serious aspect of this outlook lies in the fact that the population of the poor countries of the world will be augmented by a figure which is five times as large as that for the rich countries.

The capital, technology and skills required to meet our present needs were accumulated over thousands of years. Now we must double our productive ability in the world as a whole and not simply in the rich countries, in the space of half a lifetime.

Food is the most basic and the most critical item. The signs of serious trouble are already upon us.

The most critical shortages arise out of the sharply rising demands for food grains. In the more affluent countries of North America, Europe, Japan and the Soviet Union, rising standards of living have resulted in higher and higher consumption of meat and dairy products which use up rapidly increasing amounts of food grains.

It takes eight pounds of food grains to produce a pound of beef, four pounds to make a pound of pork but only one pound to make a pound of bread. As a consequence, in North America today, 2,000 pounds of food grains are used up per capita. This is five times as large as the per capita consumption of food grains in India.

The world's surpluses of food grains have been used up very quickly and world grain reserves are at their lowest level since the end of the Second World War.

The underdeveloped countries have had high hopes in the Green Revolution, but the new varieties of grains are heavily dependent on ample supplies of water, fertilizers and pesticides. All these items are now more scarce than ever. The world energy crisis has caused sharp increases in the costs of fertilizers, especially to those countries which can least afford to pay them.

How do we relate the productive capabilities to the critical needs in a divided and nationalistic world?

A number of possibilities exist: large-scale and sustained gifts of food from the rich to the poor, a massive effort to transfer capital and technology to the underdeveloped world, or a combination of both.

Can any of these approaches succeed in time? Many have said that inflation is now the world's No. 1 problem. If it does not comprise quite the same tragic possibilities for human suffering as the population explosion and the shortage of food, its possible tragic consequences for Modern Man rank close behind.

Britain, where the Industrial Revolution began, is the oldest modern industrial country. Over the main sweep of the long period since the Industrial Revolution began more than 200 years ago, the British price level was remarkably stable.

On the eve of the First World War in 1914, the value of the pound was about the same as it had been in 1774. The value of the pound in purchasing power fell in half between 1914 and 1941 - a span of 27 years. It fell in half again by 1967, a span of 16 years, and fell in half once more by 1974, a span of seven years. At the present rate of inflation in Britain, the value of the pound would fall in half in less than five years.

When people lose confidence in the value of money, and when the reasons for that loss of confidence are confirmed over a protracted period, people change their decisions and their conduct. The orthodox law of supply and demand states that people buy less when prices rise and more when prices fall. However, when people anticipate that the value of money will continue to depreciate, they often buy more when prices are rising and not less.

The orthodox rule states that higher interest rates will encourage people to have and to buy more bonds. However, when interest rates are rising because the value of money is falling, people will buy fewer bonds, not more.

The orthodox theory proclaims that higher taxes on people's income has a deflationary effect, but when earners are suffering a loss of real income due to inflation, higher taxes are likely to cause a further step-up in wage demands and thus generate a further increase in cost-push inflation.

Under the Keynesian doctrines there were trade-offs and predictable relationships between inflation and unemployment, between aggregate demand and rates of economic growth, between interest rates and the supply of money, between home demand and the balance of payments.

It was thought that governments could, through monetary and fiscal policies, manipulate these variables in such a way as to achieve their economic goals of full employment, high rates of economic growth, reasonable price stability and a viable balance of payments. Now it appears that under conditions of high and accelerating inflation, governments through the use of these same policies find themselves confronted with the very real possibility of failure in all these goals simultaneously.

How did we get into this mess?

A striking feature of the postwar era in all modern states is the enormous increase in the role of government. In Canada total government expenditures have shown an average rate of increase of 11 per cent since 1947 compared with an average rate of increase of 8 per cent in the value of total national production.

The role of government, however, goes far beyond expenditures and taxes; it comprises also the large-scale and growing interventions in the private economy in the form of subsidies, tax and credit incentives, lending policies and the many controls and regulations of trade, industry and commerce.

Policies of government favour rich

In carrying out these pervasive and massive activities, governments are confronted with the conflicting pressures of every interest group in the society and by the urgent pleas of every worthy pursuit in the causes of social betterment. More and more, modern governments have sought to cope with this predicament by avoiding the hard decisions involved and by resorting to the inflation of the money system instead. By this method, the balance between the pressures and the available resources is achieved by taking away those resources from those who are too weak to protect themselves from the falling value of money and transferring them to those who are strong enough to do so.

There is another modern development which is pertinent to this situation. Rapidly growing industrial economies have shifted more and more from goods production to the production of services.

This newly emerging society has been named the "post-industrial society."

Daniel Bell in his book, The Post-Industrial Society, states that "post-industrial society will involve more politics than ever before."

As examples I need only cite the role of government today in health and education.

The problem of chronic high inflation is essentially a political problem, both in the national and international sense, and it is going to become more so. The root causes cannot be dealt with by experts or by abstract theories. The dilemma we face is that the methods which governments have chosen to resolve some of the tensions and conflicts in our economy, namely the method of the money illusion, are the very methods which are most likely to undermine the foundations of the free political system.

Adaptability is the key to survival

One can point to Modern Man's adaptability to change - his ability demonstrated many times, to rise out of the ashes of his own creation.

Yet the challenges from high prices, from shortages of vital supplies and from environmental degradations are truly formidable and have wide ramifications.

They intensify the problem of chronic inflation, they threaten the collapse of the world's trade and monetary system, they increase tensions in international relations, they bring further inequities into human society and they widen the disparities between the rich and the poor.

The United States and Canada, with 6 per cent of the world's population, consume about a third of the world's scarce supplies of energy and close to 30 per cent of its raw materials. The industrial giants of Western Europe and Japan are moving rapidly to similar levels of consumption. In an era of growing scarcities, can the rest of the world survive in the scramble for what is left?

The dilemma of Modern Man lies in the choice between the acceptance of human tragedy on a large scale, and the acceptance of the prolonged sacrifices involved not only in the distribution of wealth but also in the willingness to engage in international co-operation on the scale needed. The latter is perhaps the most vital requirement of all. Yet because of Modern Man's obsession with national sovereignty, he finds it difficult to understand or grasp this necessity.

There is no cause to succumb to the modern doomsday-sayers but there is a critical need to exercise our will including our political will, and to recognize our inescapable interdependence on this shrinking globe.

Related to the topic of Deutsch's address, is a lecture to be delivered tomorrow evening in Dunning Hall at 8:00 pm by MP Douglas Roche.

Bruce Cockburn at Queen's

Brilliant performance!

by Doug Hutchinson

As far as I have heard, Bruce Cockburn never puts on a bad show. Certainly the three concerts he has played at Queen's in the last three years have all been excellent. But last Sunday's concert was truly a treasure - the best concert I've been to at Queen's.

The show was divided into two halves, the first with Cockburn alone and the second with second guitarist, Gene Martenyc and Cockburn played a few old favourites especially in the second half, and his new songs of his recent album were given very strong performances.

In the first half some of the old songs became new again, notably 'Dialogue with the Devil'. Cockburn slowed it down and made the images step out and speak. On this song he showed yet more skill on his guitar - he was no more flashy but was more relaxed and more expressive than he had been in the last two concerts. Unfortunately I can't say the same for his piano, but he used it only once in the show and it was reasonably successful.

Even his political song 'Burn Baby Burn', was executed with humour and good taste without losing its bite, and his use of the calypso rhythm was a stroke of genius. Bruce Cockburn in concert creates absolutely compelling images with his guitar and his stage presence is always relaxed and relaxing.

The second half of the show was the first time I have seen Bruce Cockburn with an accompanist. Overall it was successful, although there were times when Martenyc was superfluous. Cockburn needs him not because he needs a skilled guitarist on stage - Cockburn is no mean guitarist himself as he showed on the improvisation 'Seeds on the Wind'. Rather, he uses the second guitar to add complexity and density to songs, and not all the songs in the second set needed this touch.

But when it worked it worked beautifully, especially in 'Never So Free' and 'Christmas Song', both from his new album 'Sun, Salt and Time'. In these songs, the instrumental breaks created moments of shimmering glory and I was almost sorry to hear the voice again. He played a song inspired by an Ethiopian tumb harp player which was a highlight of the show. His treatment incorporated Western and Ethiopian idioms and rhythms and rose above both styles, yet more evidence, if we needed it, of his incredible ingenuity and versatility.

The large audience was enthusiastic throughout and gave a standing ovation well merited by the performers. The evening was marred only by a persistent buzz at high volume in the horn speakers. A brilliant performance turns into a sparkling memory and I'm waiting for next winter's tour.

Bruce Cockburn: a personal look

p. c. cord

Bruce Cockburn in concert

paul e. contrast

Gene Martenyc

x. posure

Film

by Paul Luke

Journey Through the Past is a film by Neil Young which was given a special one-night showing last Friday at the Capitol. As a film it withers under a close technical scrutiny; as a personal, quirky documentary it has a charm and humour which come close to redeeming its many defects.

Journey Through the Past is crippled by inept editing, a lack of control over pace and the disappointingly inarticulate, home-movie mentality of its creator, Neil Young. The purpose of the film was evidently never clearly defined in Young's own mind and it trickles along uncertainly through a series of cinematic fragments that have less impact and unity than the random patches which adorn the jeans which Neil wears in it. The only continuity of the film is the group of fantasy-sequences which follow a be-gowned student who wanders through various landscapes and finally ends up by the sea where he graduates to sticking a needle in his arm. The fantasy-sequences do offer some kind of endlessly ponderable linearity but like some of Young's poorer lyrics, in a meager, oblique way that offers few rewards to the ponderer. Inspection carried to completely unfathomable extremes in this case only eluters the film up even more.

Having said all of this, Journey Through the Past is still a kind of nice little movie and has a certain engaging ineptitude about it. There is a warmth and intimacy in scenes like the one where Young, fat joint in hand talks about the first time he got stoned in Toronto, which films like Let it Be and Gimme Shelter never come close to achieving. Some of the footage dealing with the Buffalo Springfield and Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young in concert is fascinating. Certain individual scenes show more thought than others, for instance one which focuses on a business-type loudly defending the cost of tickets backstage at a C.S.N. and Y concert while off-camera the band is purring through the lyrics of "Find the Cost of Freedom." Young himself is a whimsical, thoroughly human presence throughout the picture.

One can only hope that the next time Neil Young makes a film (and he claims he's going to) he will have run out of material that relies on intrinsic interest alone and will pay more attention to cohesive form and arrangement. However, Neil's musical signature has always been one of honesty of feeling rather than technical accomplishment and in Journey Through the Past he has managed to infuse enough of that feeling so that it almost works in spite of itself. Some persons who can afford better, amazingly enough enjoy drinking rotgut wine and similarly some perverse souls who have wearied of the unrelenting sickness and artificiality of so much of contemporary film may find Jour-

Free concert

The Music Department of Queen's University will present an admission free concert by the Queen's Wind Ensemble, under the direction of Duane Bates, in Grant Hall, on Wednesday, November 20th at 8:30 pm.

The program, which features all twentieth century music, includes a premiere performance of Cortège 125, composed by Dr. F. R. C. Clarke. As well, there are: Fanfare for the Common Man, by Aaron Copland; Round Dance, by John Weinzweig; Mamin Veen (a collection of folk songs from the Isle of Man) by Haydn Wood; Overture to 'Candide' by Leonard Bernstein; Jupiter from Gustav Holst's The Planets; and Suite of Old American Dances by Robert Russell Bennett.

Journey Through the Past a work of endearing incompetence

Folksinger Fred Werthman at Bitter Grounds Saturday night.

GRADUATING STUDENTS

ALL FACULTIES

Do you remember this important meeting?

The QUEEN'S SCHOOL OF BUSINESS is hosting an informal meeting this THURSDAY at 7:00 pm in ROOM 11 of DUNNING HALL. Information will be provided about the MASTER OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION program at Queen's.

Have a coffee and ask questions! Current MBA students, MBA alumni, and faculty will be there to answer them. Ask about academic requirements; the program philosophy; the program content; and, CAREER OPPORTUNITIES upon graduation.

Thursday, November 21

7:00 pm

Room 11, Dunning Hall

Something to "cheers" about:

Now the glorious beer of Copenhagen is brewed right here in Canada. It comes to you fresh from the brewery. So it tastes even better than ever. And Carlsberg is sold at regular prices. So let's hear it, Carlsberg lovers. "One, two, three... Cheers!"

Beautiful production of Fiddler on the Roof

by Sandy Naiman
Fiddler on the Roof is a magnificent show. It has been widely acclaimed on Broadway, on the road and on the screen. Why the success? Aside from a more than memorable score by Sheldon Harnick and Jerry Bock, and an excellent adaptation of the stories of Sholem Aleichem by Joseph Stein, Fiddler on the Roof has guts. It's a musical with joy and with sadness, like life, and this realism is not glossed over or sugar-coated.

Lee Tommarello's production of Fiddler for the Kinsmen this year has all the guts this show demands and it comes out shining, virtually glowing in a strong, vibrant and exciting production.

I have rarely seen such a beautifully co-ordinated cast, all of whom sang beautifully and sincerely headed by David Kemp's sincere, comic contrabass Tenor. You could say Fiddler is a one-man show and that man is Tenor. In this case Tenor filled the bill to overflowing. Kemp brought soul to his role as the maligned, the downtrodden, the optimistic milkman who, like job, seems to witness the crumbling of his small empire.

And Kemp held his study of Tenor in perfect balance. This is a role which can all too easily become either too commercially comic or too depressingly tragic, but Kemp played with heart and not blubber. Not only this, he revealed an amazingly strong, resonant and hearty voice in his musical numbers.

Jean Callum, Pamela Robinson and Susan Gordon as his daughters Hodel, Chava and Tzeitel, sang beautifully in "Matchmaker Matchmaker" as well as their individual numbers. And their dramatic performances matched the level set by Kemp. They shared his trepidation at breaking with age-old and almost sacred traditions and with embarking on a totally foreign lifestyle.

Andy Orr, as Lazar Wolf the butcher, gave a perfectly tuned character performance, jubilant with Chaim - life in his scene in the Inn and in the end, dejected and lost when forced to leave Anatevka with all the others.

Norman Nurmi as Motel the tailor and Ted Simmonett as Perchik the student, the two men who instigate the break with tradition, played with honesty so sound that, like the entire which was painted before us, we found ourselves forgetting the present and emphasizing completely with their sentiments, with the universal generation gap they were building.

Reg Bronskill's sets were brilliant, designed ingeniously to mirror interior and exterior landscapes, recreated with tumbledown realism and meticulous detail. The backdrops were carefully painted and the screen used as a soft web-like curtain behind which memories are jogged.

Perhaps the weakest facet of the show was the choreography which lacked any ethnic base and which seemed more like adapted square-dances than the traditional and rather simple dances of the period. Not all the dance numbers were of this type. The bottle dance during the wedding scene was a show stopper, it's unfortunate though, that the choreography could not match the other levels of the show, the singing and acting and visual acuity.

What surprised me even more than any of this was the feeling that existed on stage and the feeling that was evoked in me. The entire cast worked as an ensemble and at the same time was able to get to the roots of the play, not only the tradition but the intense alienation from which is the essential plot of the story.

And it doesn't end in alienation. The circle is completed because in the final scene we see what true belief meant to these people, that traditions were not so much in the reminders we give ourselves, the covered heads and the prayer shawls, but the beliefs that are the basis of the reminders. In other words, it's what's in your head and heart and not what's over it.

There were a lot of damp cheeks leaving the Grand Theatre last night after the opening of Fiddler on the Roof, because the guts of the play, and the guts it took Lee Tommarello and his cast to put this play on the stage with all its honesty and sincerity really hit us hard, and we loved it.

Celebrated chamber trio

Tuesday evening in Dunning Hall the Division of Concerts presents The Beaux Arts Trio of New York. This chamber ensemble has appeared here and abroad under every major recital and festival auspice, and with many symphony orchestras. The have recorded all the Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Brahms, Mendelssohn, Ravel, Tchaikovsky, op. 50, Schubert and Dvorak Trios.

Praise for the Beaux Arts Trio has been echoed over and over, not only by audiences and critics, but by the strictest judges of musical excellence—their fellow musicians. "An inspiring experience," was the late Arrigo Tassinari's verdict after hearing the trio play, "fine chamber music with impeccable taste and musicianship".

Tuesday evening the trio will perform works by Haydn, Ravel and Schubert. Tickets are available at the Division of Concerts Box Office, Agnes Etherington Arts Centre.

NAVAL RESERVE Officer Training Plan

Looking for a challenge?

If you are interested,
contact HMCS CATARAQUI
at 545-5872 (daytime)
549-0487 (night)

or come down to the Kingston armoury,
Montreal St., on Tuesday nights, or call 549-0487

Think Naval Reserve
for a satisfying part-time career.

ALDERMAN SYDENHAM WARD

ALDERMAN

Chairman and Managing Director Radio Station CFTM (AM/FM)

EXPERIENCE

- Kingston Property Committee Board of Education (1972-1974)
- Kingston Board of Education (1967-68)
- Chairman Frontenac County Board of Education (1969-71)
- Member Kingston General Hospital School of Nursing Committee
- Member Board of Trustees Queen's University
- Past President Cataraqui Golf & Country Club
- Past Chairman Angara Children's Hospital Committee Kingston General Hospital
- Governor, Kingston General Hospital
- Co-chairman for Kingston in the Queen's University Capital Appeal Committee
- Fund Raising Chairman, Kingston's Home for The Handicapped, Inc.

ELECT FRENCH, Terry D. X

HE HAS DONE MUCH — HELP HIM DO MORE

For Information call
546-3411

Steve Fromstein, part of the success of Kimosabi coffee house.

Intercollegiate '74-75

Queen's triumphs in sports

Trophy winners return

Queen's Championship V-ball team with coach D. Gallagher.

B-ball split to TO

by Alpi Boniwell
Journal Sports Writer

It was well into the second half at Ryerson on Saturday when the Queen's Golden Gaels were slowly succeeding in a bid to be entered in the annals of Ripley's Believe It or Not, by shooting a meagre 23 per cent from the floor and making a present of a 17 point lead to the Ryerson Rams; a team they knew they could beat. Comparisons to a particular long-trunked mammal that "never forgets" seemed more appropriate by the minute.

However, appearances can be deceptive and while Queen's rooters must have been glumly nodding their heads thinking that nothing but a few faces had really changed, the prevalent attitude among the players was that they knew they could win. The formula was merely of a lot of hustle and hard work with a little poise on the court.

With this in mind and taking advantage of a mismatch, when Ryerson assigned a pygmy to cover John Keck, the Gaels surfaced with a 77-73 victory. At the game's conclusion, Keck (not to be cannibalistic about it) had burned his man alive, scoring 29 points. Norm Hagarty, just recently returning to the lineup after a broken arm, hit for another 14.

Unfortunately, the come-from-behind win wasn't without its moments that could have turned it into a chop from the top loss. Admittedly, it was not exactly a convincing win in the classic sense, but it was definitely a win that did a great deal to convince the Gaels of themselves, something that was obviously missing Friday night against the University of Toronto Blues.

Queen's received a rude awakening from the Blues to the not-so-pleasant tune of 95-55. While Hagarty and Wes Garrod each tallied for 11 points, two of the better performances were turned in by Lithuanian oscar-nominee, Ray Kalvaitas and the Gaels taken hippie, Steve McCready, both of whom must have had the Blues wondering why "non-contact sport" was ever a phrase applied to basketball.

This Wednesday the Gaels travel all the way across Kingston to unleash their artillery at RMC. A win could give the '74 B-ball Gaels as many victories in three games as they had in fourteen last year. To the imaginative, the possibilities are endless.

by Jane Petterson

Little has been said about the trials and tribulations of the women's senior volleyball team, so we'll take this opportunity to bring you up to date. This weekend saw them competing in their fourth tournament of a successful season to this point. Oct 26 was their first weekend challenge in the Ottawa Valley Volleyball Association (OVVA) Invitational held here at Queen's. As the winners of this tournament, the girls were chosen to represent the OVVA in the Quebec Open in Montreal on Nov 9.

In the intervening weekend (Nov 2) the girls continued their winning streak in the annual Queen's University Invitational. Although they met some stiff competition in the form of Waterloo and York, the girls lost only one game in four matches during that weekend. Last Saturday (Nov 9) at the Quebec Open they had some trouble getting their usually hard attacking game started. Many of their problems were caused by some system re-adjustments necessitated by the temporary loss of Allison Wood with a knee injury. Although that weekend was in many ways disastrous, it allowed the team to reorganize their system and get back under control for the important tournaments to come.

This past weekend was proof positive that the girls are indeed primed for the University tournaments in the near future. If you happened to be in the vicinity of the PEC at 5:30 a.m. on Saturday, you might have seen the women's team piling into their 15 seat van for the early morning drive to Ottawa and the Regional Cup tournament. (OVVA regional open) Two hours and 40 winks later they were dressed and ready to begin at Algonquin College. After a vigorous 1 1/2 hour warm-up, the girls appeared to have decided to take another nap and got off to a slow start against the Nationals of Ottawa. They came to life in time to pull back the first game and went on to win both games by scores of 15-12 and 15-4.

Their second challenge of the day was against Ottawa University. This bustling defensive team gave our girls some problems as they found it almost impossible to put a ball on the floor. Nevertheless, the girls came from behind in the first game to win it 16-14. A failure to hit hard and play their own game in the second of the two game series saw the Queen's girls defeated 9-15. Queen's has already beaten Ottawa twice this season and hopes to handle them better at their next meeting. Things never quite came together in the next match against Pierrefonds from Quebec. An inability to put any serves inside the shorter than regulation court area combined with an inconsistent attack against a mobile opponent, saw Queen's lose both games by scores of 14-16 and 3-15. (Although, these scores don't reflect Queen's play but rather their ineffective serving.)

The next series was against the Universite' de Sherbrooke, a team which had beaten them at the Quebec Open a week earlier. Our team had to win both games against Sherbrooke in order to get into the semi-finals, whereas Sherbrooke needed only to take one game off Queen's. After their typical slow start, the Queen's girls began to play their determined come-from-behind game. Many long hard rallies and a fast paced attacking game led to the eventual victory of the Queen's team (16-14). At the beginning of the second game, Queen's became unnerved in their unaccustomed 147 lead. Uncomfortable in the lead, they appeared unwilling to finish the game until Sherbrooke caught up and took control of the game. (15-14) Now that they were behind and in their usual position, they began the long hard fight to win.

Tension mounted as first one team and then the other moved into a one point lead, but neither could finish the game. Psychology played an important role as the coaches attempted to give their teams a breather after their time-outs had been used. Total team effort and steady substitutions from the bench contributed to a Queen's victory (19-17), although special mention should go to Jan Pearson who played an excellent game under great pressure.

This victory placed our girls in the semi-finals against the top team in the other section of the tournament, the Phoenix of Ottawa. Another well-played exciting match saw Queen's come out on top after dropping the first game in their opponents (13-15 15-12; 15-7). The long, tiring day drew to a close with the 8 p.m. final, where Queen's met the Jets (an OVVA team). For the first time all day, Queen's maintained control of the match from the outset and carried it along at their own last pace. Hard-hitting attacks, effective blocking and well placed tips led Queen's to a straight two game victory (15-5, 15-9).

Determined team effort and a never-say-die attitude accounted for the Regional Cup Championship this weekend. Individual trophies were well deserved as each and every team member contributed their best to the team victory. The system is beginning to flow smoothly and the team is looking forward to a successful end to the first half of their season in the University Challenge Cup and the East Sectional tournaments in the next two weekends. Congratulations to coaches, Donna Gallagher and Mary McLaughlin and many thanks to Liz Taylor for the post game celebrations.

Sports round-up

Home Action saw a very successful weekend for the Queen's teams, with a total of five victories and one second place tournament showing.

FRIDAY

Gals Ice Hockey - Queen's 3 Toronto 2
Gals Basketball - Queen's 69 Toronto 48

SATURDAY

Gals Ice Hockey - Queen's 7 York 2
Gals Basketball - Queen's 69 York 25
Gals Ice Hockey - Queen's 14 Brock 4
Men's Volleyball tournament - 2nd place Queen's Sports action away from home was also very impressive. Women's Volleyball - CHAMPIONS of Ottawa Valley Volleyball tournament
Women's Badminton - SECOND to Toronto out of five inter-collegiate teams.

Gals Basketball - Toronto 95 Queen's 55
Gals Basketball - Queen's 77 Ryerson 73
In addition, Queen's also hosted a swim club meet Saturday in which the Queen's team finished fourth.

Hogtowners smashed

Queen's Gals victorious

by Lyn Atwood
Journal Sports Writer

This weekend saw the Gals emerge successful from their first league games after severely trouncing U. of Toronto and York on their home court in Basketball Friday night and Saturday afternoon respectively.

U. of T. Blues gave them a good run for their money during the first quarter and then Queen's just ran away with the game from there. Both teams seemed to find trouble getting in gear and the score at the half was only 31-17. Board play was also sadly lacking. The second half was a different story. The game started to acquire some zing and to the cheers of a half capacity crowd the Gals dominated the play and ended the game at 69-48.

Point leaders in this game were Jean Crichton 12, Pat Smith 12, Laney Marshall 11, and Pat Patterson 10.

On Saturday afternoon the Gals met York for the second time this year (the first game being exhibition). Unfortunately Queen's seemed to lack flair in the first half - but also acquired the disadvantage of not being able to get the g.d. ball through the rim.

Again the first half was low scoring (27-13) with the last 20 seconds being the most exciting part of the half. The first 40 seconds of the next half reflected the true capabilities of the Basketball Gals. In that full minute of play (the last 20 seconds of the first half and the first 40 seconds of the second half) the Gals scored six baskets and sent York into a tizzy. The play from then on was fast paced and at times provided great spectator entertainment by a comedy of errors. It was not uncommon to have five turnovers in one play. However, the final score was 69-25.

Razzle-dazzle shooting and boardwork was provided by Pat Patterson who scored 13 points. Laney Marshall was high scorer with 19 points and chief instigator of turnovers for York (with her quick hands).

If the past two weekends are any indication, the Queen's system seems to involve a very slow first half, very fast second half, tight man-to-man defence throughout the game and boardwork which starts off virtually non-existent but increases as the game goes on.

Next weekend Queen's plays away at Ottawa on Friday night and Carleton on Saturday.

The last weekend of the month Queen's hosts an invitational tournament at which many minor officials and/or hostesses will be needed. If you wish to be of service and participate in a very exciting weekend notify Coach Mo Bouris at the Phys. Ed. Complex or leave a note behind the women's equipment cage for myself.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

The Queen's Badminton Gals lived up to the tradition being well established by the sports teams this year as they came "2nd only to T.O." during their first tournament held in Toronto last weekend.

Queen's won ten out of twelve doubles games and were victorious in sixteen of twenty-four singles games falling only five points behind the Toronto team with 26 points.

There were 5 intercollegiate teams involved.

John Capek of Queen's V-Ball Gals makes offensive spike.

AMEY'S TAXI

546-1111

POSITION VACANCY

Applications are invited for the position of Public Relations assistant in the department of Queen's University Women's and Men's Athletics. Duties are mainly the release to the news media of athletic event results and advance information for coming events. Salary is negotiable. Interviews are by appointment with either of the undersigned in the Physical Education Centre.

Prof. Anne Turnbull
Director, Women's Athletics
Prof. J. F. Edwards
Director, Men's Athletics

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT
in our Lounge

THIS WEEK : Ocean

Amateur Night every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

Come in and see the new line of Pedigree and White Stag ski clothing.
Cross country packages from $70.00

★ 10% off to Queen's Students ★

cotton's
sports house

399 PRINCESS STREET,
KINGSTON K7L 1B9
TELEPHONE 544-1066.

Queen's Gals ...

Twin Win

(by Christine Scott
Journal Sports Writer)

This past weekend, the women's hockey team proved that they are the team to beat this year. On Friday, the team met with a strong University of Toronto squad. A goal by U. of T. sparked the Queen's gals into scoring three hard-earned goals. Toronto came back with a second goal, but could not surpass the strong playing of Queen's. Goals were scored by Sue Wright, Sandy Statten and Leslie Ferrari. Wanda Gyde played an excellent game in goal.

On Saturday, Queen's completely dominated York University with a 7-2 victory. Star defenseman Sue Wright netted four goals, with the other three coming from Leslie Ferrari (2) and Rhonda Leeman. The team controlled the play right from the start, skating circles around a frustrated York squad.

On Friday, the team travels to Hamilton, where at 1:30 they will meet a powerful McMaster team, later moving on to London to play Western at 7:00.

...and Gaels dominate ice

Gaels walk over Brock

by Jim Le Mesurier
Journal Sports Writer

In a mismatch typical of OUA hockey action, the Golden Gaels coasted to a 12-4 decision over the hopeless Brock University Badgers. In the season opener Saturday, The Badgers who belong in a class of their own with the Ryerson Rams et al, were constantly disorganized and unable to sustain more than fleeting periods of competence.

The calibre of competition left the Gaels with a sure two points and neither inspired nor necessitated a serious effort for the remainder of the game.

It was individual performances rather than team play which highlighted this penalty ridden contest, as Ron Swan and Steve Gross showed their stick handling abilities while killing penalties, and a more aggressive Bill White and winger Earl Moulton played strong checking games.

Left winger Frank Coffey opened the scoring for the Gaels with his first of three goals on a power play dive from the point at 2:01, however Badger rear guard Peter Hickey evened the count seconds later with a similar blast from the Queen's blueline. Dave Smith and Ron Shepard then put the Gaels up 3-1 before Vic Istchenko's wrist shot cleanly beat Queen's netminder Clyde Harris for a 3-2 count. Smith's goal clearly exposed one of the lessons the defenders have yet to learn, positional hockey. The Gaels rookie was left uncovered in the slot with enough time to wait for a red light, and had no trouble beating goaltender John O'Loughlin at 5:53.

The Gaels added two more markers before Brock's lone reply brought the tally to 5-3 after 20 minutes. This time it was Bill Van Camp outracing goalie O'Loughlin to a lead pass at the Brock blueline and flipping it into the open net. Chris Clark then took advantage of Bill White's sliding tackle to lift a loose puck over the fallen O'Loughlin.

The middle stanza saw the Gaels put the game further out of reach, with 3 early goals, and then struggle with referee Pat Haggarty's indiscriminate penalty calling. Haggarty called 28 infractions over the 60 minutes which effectively slowed this period's action to a snail's pace.

Gross, Moulton and Dave McDowall ran the total to 8-3 and set the stage for a somewhat meaningless final period. Former hockey great Johnny London, picked Steve Kidd, who replaced Harris in the Gaels' goal, as the third period's outstanding performer, as he kicked out 17 of 18 Badger shots. The Gaels' forwards continued to flourish with four more goals as Coffey netted two and Doug Carly and John Corrie added singles.

The Gaels meet the Gee Gees in Ottawa Tuesday night in their first true test of ability. It will require a more concerted effort to get by Ottawa U and the game could give an indication of how the Gaels will stand in their pre-Christmas schedule.

Club meet - Queen's strong

Queen's Golden Gaels and Golden Gals Swim Teams put forth a good effort against some stiff competition on Saturday during the 3rd Annual Clubs Invitational. Between the two teams, Queen's secured 4th place overall with 54 points. A strong team from Ottawa; the Kingfish claimed 1st with 226 points with E.M.A.C. and Scarborough Aquatic capturing 2nd and 3rd place with 156 and 120 points respectively.

Queen's men travel to Laurier for the OUA Relays this Saturday, Nov. 23rd.

Roh Carson swimming the Men's 200 yd free style on Saturday.

chris woods

Enjoy the Homey Atmosphere of Mother's Pizza Parlour

Her dining room features the warm comfortable atmosphere of the roaring 20's with fast, courteous service.

Our fully dressed pizza includes no less than 8 items

DELIVERY TO CAMPUS

549-0006

455
PRINCESS

See All The New
Programs This Year
With 11 Channels to Choose From On ...

cable tv
544-6311

Are you or your group
doing something you
would like others to
know about?

Tell Us....

USE OUR BULLETIN
BOARD

Cable Cast TV 13

Pot: reduced penalties urged

WASHINGTON — Dr Robert DuPont, a U.S. government drug abuse official, has called for civil penalties to be used to deter the use of marijuana. DuPont has proclaimed that the underlying principle of the reform to the laws is that criminal sanctions should be maintained only for those who conduct is morally reprehensible and should be used in connection to acts which do not have serious social consequences. Du Pont feels that criminal penalties have failed to prevent widespread use of marijuana. A study done by his office has shown a 14 per cent increase in the number of 23-year-old males using grass daily.

It is expected that DuPont's recommendation to lessen penalties for smoking marijuana will initiate a similar controversy in Canada. Last year Gerald LeDain, a law professor at York University, headed a royal commission to investigate the non-medical use of drugs. The report recommended that simple possession of grass should not be considered a criminal offense. LeDain expressed the opinion that the law is not the proper instrument to discourage the use of drugs for non-medical reasons. TOKYO — Demonstrations were staged by 4,000 students in Tokyo, demanding the cancellation of President Ford's visit. Ford was scheduled to arrive in Tokyo Monday. The demonstrators were also calling for the abolition of U.S. Japan security treaty and the resignation of their Prime Minister Tanaka. Tanaka is experiencing his worst political crisis since his term began in 1972. He is charged with being responsible for the inflation that has boosted the cost of living 22 per cent in the last year. MONTREAL — A pact has been signed between the Quebec government and the James Bay Indians to settle the demands made by the Indians on the government to compensate for land lost to the James Bay Hydro Project. Quebec has agreed to contribute $150 million, over the next ten years, to the 10,000 Indians of the area. The Indians also procured a wide range of territorial concession, mainly dealing with the conservation and protection of their hunting and fishing grounds.

WASHINGTON — President

The Ten O'clock Gnus

by Alan Austin

The possibility of another serious shooting war in the Middle East has been greatly increased by two events of the past week. The Palestine Liberation Front's winning the right to speak at the United Nations Assembly, and the temporary expulsion of white supremacist South Africa from that same body. The significance of the combination of these events is not readily recognized.

The appearance of the P.L.O. at the U.N. is part of a general shift in foreign policy by the United States which was precipitated by last year's Yom Kippur war and the subsequent Arab oil embargo. The serious dislocation in both social and economic spheres caused by the energy crisis has caused American politicians to re-evaluate the costs of the continued support of Israel in its struggles with the Arabs.

To many observers, this shift has resulted in what may be best described as a sell-out of Israel. Dr Henry Kissinger's recent trips to Sudi Arabia have been linked, in rumours, to a large arms deal and have been directly linked to a reduction (by 14 per cent) in the price of Arabian oil. Almost coincident with these developments is the appearance of the P.L.O. at the United Nations. Summed up: the United States has changed its position of one of committed defence to the idea of a Jewish national homeland to one in which the fate of Israel and the Palestinian refugees will be decided in the public forum of the U.N., with the United States taking a much more neutral position.

The exit of South Africa from the U.N., however temporary, will also have a much more subtle effect on the political health of the Middle East. The expulsion of South Africa was achieved only over the negative votes of the United States, Canada, Great Britain and other previously prominent citizens of the international community. The expulsion represents the growing voice of "emerging" or "third world" nations and their willingness to use the vehicle of the U.N. to implement and enforce international political policy of their own making.

It is conceivable that Israel could suffer the same fate as South Africa for failing to deal with the P.L.O. and the Palestinian refugees in a manner satisfactory to the third world countries: a group which could reasonably be said to include Arab countries but not Israel.

The possibility of such an eventuality, while not overwhelming, is sufficiently large to force Israel's back to the political wall; in this case the walling wall in Jerusalem. It may become necessary for Israel, in its own opinion, to take pre-emptive military action similar to the action taken in 1967. In that situation Israel would be fighting without the tacit approval and assistance of the United States. Kissinger's efforts to negotiate a cease-fire, as he did a year ago, would be much less effective since any support which he could reasonably threaten would be withdrawn, has already been withdrawn.

The situation then, has the potential to be much more serious than any previous Arab-Israeli skirmish. For Israel it would effectively be a life or death situation. As such, we would reasonably expect that the war would be longer, more savagely conducted, than any previous. It therefore follows that the potential for intervention by other countries is larger, be it on one side or the other, or in a strictly neutral role. Given the present economic circumstances, it is not too far fetched to believe that one or other of the major powers could decide that the Middle East conflict provides an excellent opportunity for a war, to lead its citizens out of economic hardships.

backpage

Gerald Ford may put import controls on Canadian livestock and meat allowed into the United States in an attempt to assist cattlemen who are having difficulties. Canada imposed import quotas on livestock and meat coming into Canada from the U.S. three months ago when the U.S. government removed its ban on feeding the growth hormone - diethylstilbestrol - to cattle. Research has indicated that this hormone may be causing cancer in the animals. The aims of the proposed restrictions is to force Canada to remove these import quotas. The new import controls would be enforced on live cattle and hogs, and on beef and pork, and would be aimed at causing a trade loss for Canada equal to that claimed by the U.S. industry under the Canadian import quotas.

CANADA — The severe slump in the U.S. auto sales may prompt new layoffs in the Canadian auto plants. It has been the worst year for new car sales for more than a decade. Chrysler of Canada, with a four month supply of new cars, is considering closing most of its plants for the month of December throwing at least 80,000 workers off the job before Christmas. Ford Motor of Canada and General Motors have also announced plans for long-term layoffs of 500.

PARIS — An oil-sharing agency composed of fifteen of the leading non-Communist industrial nations, has been formed to handle future energy crisis. The group was formed within the 24-country Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development. France is boycotting the agency in the hopes of starting up an international agency bringing together both consumer and producer countries, as well as countries of the developing worlds.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY

SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT
SUNDAY 10 AM TO 8 PM

DIAMOND CHOP SUEY HOUSE

217 Division (between Queen and Colbourne)
Fine Chinese and Canadian Food
Open daily 11 a.m. - 2 a.m.
Sunday: noon - 12 p.m.
Take Out and Delivery 544-2927

LOVE IS A MANY FACETED THING

And a superbly cut diamond is the ultimate expression of your love. Give a timeless and traditional gift of diamond jewelry... from our dazzling collection. Love and diamonds... a tradition that transcends the ages.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

Delegates at a recent Keener's Convention

Part of Pub may close

by Paul Steep

The House of Lords will almost definitely be closed next term, greatly reducing the size of the Queen's Pub. This announcement comes from Pub manager Brian Sterling, who explained that because this part of the Pub (the rooms containing the stereo, dance floor and new bar) has insufficient fire exits, the LLBO will not grant it a permanent licence.

After January 1, 1975, all university pubs must have permanent licences, according to a recent ruling made by the Liquor Licensing Board of Ontario. At this time operations of campus pubs across the province previously handled by students, must be turned over to university administrations.

The pub currently earns about $10,000 per year for the A.M.S. This money will no longer go to the A.M.S. if it is run by the University, according to the new LLBO ruling. Peter Druxman, Vice President (Operations) expects that some form of compensation will be worked out between the students and the administration to make up for the lost revenue. However no formal agreement has been reached yet.

Druxman is still hopeful that such negotiations may not be necessary and that the LLBO may allow the pub to remain under the A.M.S. Most of the student governments in the province are trying to convince their respective university administrations to join with them in requesting that the pubs be left to the students. Meetings between O.S. and the LLBO have been going on this week with the same objective in mind.

See ADMINISTRATION, Page 5

Auld:

University will receive 16.9% increased support

"Total support to both the colleges and the universities for the 1975-76 academic year will be increased from $650 million to $768 million," announced James Auld, Minister of Colleges and Universities, Monday.

"In 1975-76 operating support to the colleges of applied arts and technology will be increased by approximately 15.49, from $173 million to $200 million.

"The university system will receive a total of $568 million in operating funds, an increase of 16.9 per cent over $486 million, the current level of support.

"With the proposed levels of operating support and no increase in student's tuition fees, the systems' income will increase by approximately 15 per cent. We believe this amount is sufficient to offset inflationary trends, to maintain or improve existing levels of service and to accommodate predicted enrolment increases.

"The matter of distribution will be determined on the advice of the Council of Regents for Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology, and the Ontario Council on University Affairs after consulting with the institutions.

"In the guidelines I have given to the two councils, I have indicated that there will be no increase in students' tuition fees, that our policy of accessibility should be maintained, that the global sums I have mentioned should not be exceeded. These global sums include an amount for special and committed expenditures and expenditures controlled by the Ministry on a line budget basis.

"I have suggested that the options considered by the Council of Regents and the Ontario

Council on University Affairs include the following:
1. A continuation of the present formula, to allocate the amounts I mentioned among the various institutions. This would permit a 7.4 per cent increase in the value of the BIU to $2,000 in the case of the universities and a 5.5 per cent increase to $2,063 for the colleges. See 1975-76, Page 5

Watts on increase

Grant still fails to cover inflation

Queen's University Principal R.L. Watts commented Tuesday on the announcement by the Honourable James Auld, Ontario Minister of Colleges and Universities, concerning the operating grant for 1975-76 for Ontario universities.

"The Minister's announcement that the financial support to universities will increase by only 7.4 per cent per student, well below current inflationary trends, represents a radical and major reduction in the proportionate level of government support for universities in the province.

"This will be the fourth year in a row in which the increase in government grants to universities has failed to cover inflation costs. For three years now we have had to cut back expenditures on equipment, supplies and building maintenance in order to meet legitimate salary and wage demands.

"The grant announced for 1975-76, therefore, presents us with enormous difficulties. It will impose severe penalties and stresses in terms of the quality of opportunities we shall be able to provide our students and the services we can provide to society in the future.

"The situation is all the more serious because the Minister, in response to a direct request from the universities in September for immediate further assistance to meet inflationary costs this year stated there will not be any additional money for universities during the current financial year 1974-75. The improvement of 7.4 per cent per student in funding for 1975-76 is less than half of the 16.8 per cent increase per student

See GRANT, Page 3

Queen's

Journal

Volume 102, No. 22

Friday, November 22, 1974

wat's hapnin'?

Douglas Library

In order to provide some extra study time for the exam period, Douglas Library hours will be extended for the Stacks, Circulation Desk, Main Reading and Central Information Services Rooms from November 25 - December 17 as follows:

Monday-Thursday: 8:00 a.m. - 1:00 a.m.
Friday: 8:00 a.m. - 11:00 p.m.
Saturday: 9:00 a.m. - 11:00 p.m.
Sunday: 12 noon - 1:00 a.m.

Phys. Ed. Centre

The swimming pool at Queen's will be closed due to other University requirements on November 23 from 4:30 - 6:00 p.m.

The Queen's arena will be closed on November 23 from 4:30 - 5:20 p.m.

The ice will be removed from the Jock Hartly Arena on Tuesday, December 3 for Christmas examinations and will not be available for use until Thursday, December 26. All ice activities, including family skating and recreation events will be cancelled during this period.

Friday, November 22

5:30 p.m. - 2:00 a.m. - CFRC broadcasts at 1490.

9:00 p.m. - Diplomacy Club in the McLaughlin Room of the Student Union (1st floor behind the coat room). New members welcome. Please bring pencil and paper.

9:00 p.m. - Canadian Painting in the 1930's: Free Public Illustrated Lecture by Charles C. Hill, Assistant Curator of Post-Confederation Art, the National Gallery of Canada and organizer of the forthcoming exhibition of that title. In Dupuis Hall with reception following at the Art Centre.

9:00 p.m. - Queen's Hockey Windsor vs. Queen's in Jock Hartly.

9:00 p.m. - G.S.S. Film Club Friday Film Series presents Take the Money and Run with Woody Allen. In Ellis Auditorium. Tickets are $1.00 at the door.

9:00 p.m. - James Endicott, China Missionary and political activist, will speak followed by the Chinese film "Red Flag Canal" in Dunning Hall.

9:00 p.m. - Bitter Grounds and Good Times Emporium presents Tom See. Tickets available in the John Orr Room and at the door for $1.50. In Clark Hall.

Saturday, November 23

2:00 noon - 5:00 a.m. - CFRC is on the air.

9:00 p.m. - 4:00 p.m. - Guitar and Banjo Workshop will be held in the Ground Centre Common Room of Morris Hall. Blues, Ragtime and Bluegrass will be featured. See article this issue.

9:30 p.m. - Renewal, a Catholic Viewpoint at Chalmers United Church. Coffee will be served in Macgillivray-Brown Hall, 218 Barrie Street. Panel discussion: The Place of Religion in Schools.

9:00 p.m. - Bitter Grounds Coffee House and Good Times Emporium presents Tom See. Tickets available in the John Orr Room and at the door for $1.50. In Clark Hall.

9:15 p.m. - Queen's Basketball vs Brock.

9:30 p.m. - Ballroom Dance Club will continue its weekly dances in the Dance Studio. Memberships are available at the door ($1.00). New members (no matter how few lessons) are welcome and encouraged to join.

9:30 p.m. - A Smoker. Dance featuring Crazy Legs in Grant Hall. Sponsored by the Meds and Commerce Societies.

Sunday, November 24

8:00 a.m. - 2:00 a.m. - CFRC presents music, sports and public affairs.

10:30 a.m. - Morning Worship at Chalmers Church.

10:30 a.m. - Folk Mass in Dunning Hall followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House, 164 University Ave.

11:00 a.m. - Service at Morgan Chapel, Queen's.

Theological Hall, held by Padre Lavery.

2:00 p.m. - Agnes Etherington Art Centre will hold a Picture of the Month discussion and a tour of the Art Centre by a Gallery Guide.

2:00 p.m. - Queen's Music Department will present an Organ Recital by organist Bernard Lagace, Professor of organ, Montreal Conservatory of Music.

1:00 p.m. - Recital: French and German Late Romantic Music (Schman to Schonberg): Julia du Prey - voice and Hans Colpa - piano in the main Gallery. Admission is free.

9:30 p.m. - Galerie Victoria presents Mervyn Whelan, a pianist playing Bach, Scarlatti, and Schubert in the common room at Victoria Hall.

Monday, November 25

8:00 p.m. - Department of History presents Professor Olwen Hutton speaking on Women and Marriage in 18th Century France. In room 217, Watson Hall.

8:00 p.m. - Last in this term's Third World Series - End of Dialogue and Who is Vasco Nurtara? Coffee and donuts after. Free Admission.

8:30 p.m. - Grant Hall Series presents Igor Oistrakh on the violin.

Upcoming Events

Tuesday, November 26 - Auditions will be held at 7:00 p.m. in Convocation Hall for the Department of Drama's second major production of this season, "Medea" by Euripedes. If prior commitments make attendance impossible see Prof. Burkom. Performances dates are Jan. 20-25. Rehearsals will run over part of the Christmas break, the exact dates to be worked out by mutual consent at our first meeting, which will be on Saturday, 30 November 1:00 pm. Some short roles will not require Christmas rehearsals. Cast requirements: 6 women, 5 men. Crew requirements: ASM, lighting, costume, props and construction personnel are needed. If you are interested see the stage manager, Dave Fanstone. Scripts will be available for your perusal at the drama desk in the basement of Convocation Hall from 5:00 p.m. on Wednesday, 20 November. Please be prepared to read a short (no more than 2 minutes) speech from the play. If you have a preference role, pick one of that character's speeches.

Tuesday, November 26 - 7:30 p.m. - The Department of Drama presents Chronicles XXV - The Police directed by Russ Waller in the Studio Theatre Room 102. Tickets are free and can be obtained at the drama desk. (547-6291) Other presentations: Wednesday at 7:30 p.m., Thursday at 7:30 p.m. and 9:00 p.m., Friday at 7:30 and 9:00 p.m. (November 27-29).

Tuesday, November 26 - 8:00 p.m. All Candidates Night at McNeil House Common Room. Come out and meet the alderman candidates for Sydenham ward.

Tuesday, November 26 - The Department of Philosophy has invited past Harvard lecturer, Charles Donahue to speak on Transcendental Meditation and Western Philosophy at 8:00 p.m. in Dunning Auditorium. Admission is free.

Tuesday, November 26, Wednesday and Thursday 8:00 p.m. Dunning Trust Lectures "Canada's Involvement in Latin America: The Roles of Business, Church and State." In Dunning Hall, admission is free.

Wednesday, November 27 - 8:30 p.m. in the Grand Theatre: Ten Lost Years: The Dirty 30's, the Depression in Canada, can now be re-experienced in a theatrical adaptation of Barry Broadfoot's best selling book. Tickets available at the Agnes Etherington Division of Concerts Box Office.

Thursday, November 28 - Bethune a film biography of Dr. Norman Bethune, Canadian hero of the Chinese Revolution to be shown in Stirling Hall. Theatre A at 7:30 p.m. All welcome, free admission.

November 28, 29, 30 - McArthur Dramatic Arts presents: The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man in the Moon Marigolds Place: McArthur Theatre, Sir John A. MacDonald Building, Union Street. Time: 8:30 p.m. Tickets available at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre.

Grant Hall Concert
IGOR OISTRAKH
"a spectacular violinist,"
MONTREAL STAR

Monday, 25 November
8.30 p.m.
Ticket Information
547-6194
A Division of Concerts Event

WUSC
(World University Service of Canada)

SUMMER SEMINAR '75

two month travel-study for Canadian university students in a developing country. this summer (1975) in EGYPT.

Call the International Centre for more information and applications

547-2807

ABRAMSKY'S MEN'S WEAR

Has Winter outerwear to keep you warm.

259 Princess Street.

COMMODORE HOTEL

840 PRINCESS ST.

The Commodore Hotel at 840 Princess St. is pleased to offer all Students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and MacArthur College a preferred rate for room accommodation for their Parents or friends during the 74-75 term when they have occasion to visit Kingston.

NIGHTLY ENTERTAINMENT
in our Lounge

THIS WEEK : Lisle

Amateur Night every Wednesday

Queen's Students Welcome
In Our Lounge

Krestel's body found

The Department of External Affairs has confirmed that the body of a Canadian found near the Guyana-Brazil border is that of Donald Andrew Krestel, Queen's Phesa.

74 Krestel's parents, natives of Port Rowan, were notified earlier this month that their son's passport had been found near the body which was later identified on the basis of dental charts and by a pin found in a bone Krestel had broken years ago.

Active during his years at Queen's, Krestel had been an A.S.U.S. representative on Outer Council and Campus Activities Commissioner 1973-74. He had been teaching Pys. Ed. to children in Trinidad as a representative of Crossroads International until September and was touring South America at the time of his death.

A memorial service will be held in Grant Hall at 1:00 p.m. today.

Grant fails to cover inflation costs - Watts

from Page 1

advocated by the Council of Ontario Universities and endorsed by Queen's University.

"The sharp financial short fall will force most universities to choose one or more of three drastic options.

One is to carry large budget deficits, which may lead to bankruptcy.

A second is the limitations of salaries to levels well below those already approved by government for people with similar qualifications in the public service or in the hospitals. This has implications for the quality of the service which the university can provide, since the best academic staff are highly mobile and can easily move to where salaries are more competitive. Non-academic staff will be drawn by higher salaries to other employment within their own community.

The third option is to reduce staff by more drastic means than attrition. This would require either a reduction in

Taxi to station too expensive? Huehn investigates $2.50 rate

by Ian Jarvis

Taxi fare out to the new train station, located at Counter Street and Highway 2 has recently been hiked to $2.00.

This state of affairs has not gone unnoticed by External Affairs Commissioner Al Huehn, who for the last week has been busy researching the situation in hopes of either negotiating a more reasonable fare or finding an alternative service.

At the moment taxi licenses and fares are controlled by the Kingston City Police Board. It is they who delineate the various zones in the Kingston area which in turn determine the taxi fare. Each time you move into a new zone the fare increases. Huehn talked to one of the people on the board, John Cunningham, who appears to be "very concerned about the matter and has in fact, invited myself to attend tomorrow's Police Board meeting at which taxi fares will be a major topic of discussion".

Those who had hoped to use the regular Kingston bus service will unfortunately find themselves dropped about a mile short of the station. The station is served by Dial-a-Bus however, this only operates from 6:30 am until 11:15 in the evening. When Huehn enquired of the transit authorities whether bus routes would be extended he was told no such plans were in the wind because it is at the moment quite uneconomical. According to the transit commission too few people used the bus to the old station on Montreal Street to convince them that there is a real demand for it.

Equally as important as the economics, are the politics involved here. "The real problem", says Huehn, "is that, because we're in the city of Kingston and the new station is in Kingston Township, transportation in the area between is presently handled by two different boards."

The reason the station has been relocated is so that trains may now by-pass a particularly bad turn in the track which posed a serious hazard while going through the old station

"Your shop for the unusual"

The Brown Bear, 238 Princess St., wishes to invite all Queen's Students to come in and look at our fine collection of Canadian Crafts, Jewellery, pottery, sculptures, Hudson's bay coats and jackets.

We have unlimited selections of fine crafts, ideal for Christmas gifts.

If you present your Queen's student's card, you will be entitled to a 10% discount on all merchandise until December 14.

The Brown Bear
238 Princess St.

Science '44 Open House

314 William St.

Saturday, November 23

10 am - 4 pm

Co-ed and co-op - its hard to beat

Rectorship appears as intriguing and historic

by Connie McLeese

If we were to ask what former Prime Minister R.B. Bennett and Gary Gannage have in common, after a bit of research, we would discover both have held 'ractorships' at Queen's University. From 1912 until four years ago the position of rector was an honorary title, usually given to prominent Canadians such as O.D. Skelton, Leonard Brockington and the war time governor-general the Earl of Athlone. However, in 1970 the rector became a student-elected position.

Douglas Roche, MP

Survival of global village questioned

by Ian Jarvis

"We in Canada are going to have to cut back our consumption and at the same time find ways to increase the production of necessities such as hospitals, food and basic education. This is not pious dribble. It is not a dream but rather a compelling necessity."

Douglas Roche M.P. used the opportunity of his address Wednesday night to reiterate the message we are hearing more and more from those concerned with the survival of the "global village".

He stressed however that before we can help the rest of the world we must put our own house in order. Top priority must be given to the establishment of a comprehensive population policy for Canada. As Roche explains, this policy must reach beyond simply demographic factors and concern itself with resource consumption, regional disparities, immigration and the concept of social justice. That this policy integrate itself with a world policy is also of utmost importance. "We can no longer think in solely Canadian terms", says Roche. "We must see ourselves as being responsible to the rest of the world."

The population dilemma we face and any solutions to it, must be predicated says Roche on a realistic estimation of what the world can hold. He uses the term "carrying-capacity" which lends itself easily to the image of Dr. Ehrlich's spaceship earth. Estimates of this carrying-and channel students to the proper authorities. Stemming from tradition he serves a ceremonial function of appearing at all convocations, instalments and retirements.

Five persons are candidates for the up and coming Rector election. In order to be officially nominated, each hopeful required two hundred student signatures.

The Rector will hold his position for three years and will be elected by both students and staff.

Bite the one you love

STEAK & STUFF
LICENCED DINING ROOM 1399 Princess (near the station)
AUNT LUCY'S RESTAURANTS

Estelle Says:

THE LICTOR NEEDS WRITERS OF ALL LEARNINGS
CALL 546-5858

'BEAT THE NOVEMBER "BLAHS"
Meds-Commerce SMOKER

Saturday,
November 23
Grant Hall

EVERYBODY WELCOME

Aesculapian and Commerce
Societies
Sponsored Jointly by the

Rector Elections

Vote!
Tuesday,
Nov. 26

Polling Stations	Hours
Phys. Ed. Complex	9:30 - 4:30
Student's Union	9:30 - 4:30
Douglas Library	9:30 - 4:30
Residence Meal Lines	4:30 - 6:30
Macdonald	9:30 - 12:15
Kingslon	9:30 - 12:15
Ellis	9:30 - 12:15
Macintosh-Corby	12:30 - 4:15
Stirling	12:30 - 4:15
McArthur West Campus	10:30 - 1:00
Gordon	12:30 - 4:15
Etherington Hall	1:30 - 4:30

"When are you going to listen?"

"Tell me again,"

"The record prices at are lower on 90% of
Your favourite albums

TREMBLAY'S
356 PRINCESS ST.

First AMS buses start up today

by Nancy Flood

The first buses of the new AMS operated Student Bus Service leave the Student Union at 4:30 today. Replacing the often criticized and now defunct Excursion Club, the new AMS service has its own paid manager, Peter Rose, who is responsible to the AMS service commissioner John Beech, Vice Pres. (Operations) Peter Druxman and the Business Administrator Joyce Rose.

Rose succinctly describes the purpose of the new service as one of "giving the people what they want, since they didn't get it before." He hopes to determine what passengers want by means of a questionnaire concerning times for leaving, returning, prices, etc., which is being filled out by all those who purchase tickets.

He asserts that the service will be run on the basis of what people want in the way of comfort, destinations etc., and that the price of tickets ($8.00 Ottawa return, $10.00 Toronto return), reflects only operating costs.

The buses themselves are chartered from Wagar Coach Lines, a company licensed for the operation of public vehicles unlike the source of buses used by the QEC. This means that government safety standards and regulations are observed and professional drivers are employed, both points on which the past QEC was criticized bitterly. As well, between both Wagar Coach Lines and the government, the AMS bus Service will be providing a two million dollar per student insurance coverage instead of the one million dollar per bus insurance policy of the QEC.

There are no known plans to refund QEC membership as the monies received from the payment of these membership fees did not even appear in the QEC financial books, say both Rose and Beech. In short, Beech describes the QEC as having been a "rip-off" and see it's demise as beneficial clearing the way for this new service.

The AMS Bus Service, now in a trial period, is presently running buses to Ottawa and Toronto. Rose hopes to be able to meet any demands for expansion perhaps to Montreal or into special excursions. He says that it is basically a matter of meeting the needs of the customers. Buses come in several different sizes so any number of weekend travellers down to a minimum of 15 and an indefinite maximum can easily be accommodated. Wagar has promised punctuality and barring "acts of God", trip durations of 2 1/2 hours to Ottawa, 3 hours to Toronto. One way tickets though not at present available, says Beech, are being considered as the service is open to any card carrying student of any post secondary institute in Canada.

Tickets are on sale Wednesday and Thursday 11:30-2:30 and Friday 11:30-4:30 in the John Orr Room. Rose is enthusiastic about the chances of success after the first day of ticket sales and sums up his goals by saying that the new service will be happy "as long as we can get kids away for the weekend, and back."

LLBO ruling

Administration must run Pub

Continued from Page 1

Druxman also said that the LLBO was unaware that most student governments were incorporated. As a corporation, the AMS can be held legally responsible for safety and control of the pub. Druxman feels that there is still a good chance they will allow those incorporated student governments to retain operation of their pubs.

The pub also has some more immediate problems. Druxman says it is clear now that the House of Commons will get a permanent licence.

Though the pub is deficient in a number of areas the LLBO will grant them permission to keep on operating because there should be a new 450 seat pub in the University Centre by next December. AMS Vice President (University Affairs) John Gray reported that space will cost $17,000 per year in rent, paid by a $10 levy per student.

O.F.S. field worker Marilyn Byrnett didn't want University Administrations running pubs as she felt that price increases would result and would be passed onto the students as higher beer prices.

Druxman didn't see this as the main problem since prices must be set with the LLBO before it issues a license and can only be changed after review by them. He had more basic reasons for wanting the Administration to stay out of Pub operation. Druxman feels that the University is an institution for learning and research. He really can't see where running a pub fits into their responsibilities. "It's not their job," he emphasized.

1975-76 hike

Continued from Page 1

2. A system whereby one BIU value would be applied to 1973-74 enrolment to compensate for inflation and a lesser BIU value would be applied to enrolment growth in the current year, or

3. A suspension of the operating grants formula and a flat increase be applied to each institution's operating grant for the current year.

It is expected that, with this early announcement, our consultative approach will ensure that any distribution mechanism adopted takes into account the diverse needs of the institutions. An early recommendation by the councils will be acted upon speedily by the Government allowing the institutions to make the appropriate budgetary arrangements for next year.

"The Government will inform the House when it has received the advice of the Council of Regents and the Ontario Council on University Affairs and when it has decided what course of action to follow in this matter."

George Bailey
sporting goods
40 Princess Street, K7L 1A4
Kingston, Ontario
Tel. 613/542-2293

Woods Down Insulated
Hiking or Skiing Jackets - $53.96
Vasque Hiking Boots - $39.95
Mini Rucksacks - $3.95

With Student Card

Show Her The Way You Feel

with a Petite Diamond Ring
from

Brock Jewellers

Love diamond ring
Set in 10k yellow
gold $42.00

BROCK
JEWELLERS
161 Princess St.

SKI SADDLEBACK MOUNTAIN
MAINE

Ski from January 1-5, with unlimited use of lifts. 5 night accommodations and transportation included for $86.00. Reduction possible if enough people can provide their own transportation. Call Jim Downey (544-7703) or Steve Gareau (549-0797) 6-9pm. For more info, or drop up to 405 Brockington. A $25 deposit is required before December 2.

A Snowball Ski Club Presentation.

TERRA FIRMA

A new concept in walking comfort
"Back to earth feeling"

available at:

available in: navy
tan white

LOCKETT WALKWEL

"PUT YOUR FEET IN OUR SHOES"

179 Wellington Street,

Kingston, Ont.

Rectorship

Views of the candidates

Historically, the office of the Rector was established as part of the Scottish-Presbyterian tradition upon which Queen's is based. It is a position unique in Canadian Universities, which allows an individual to represent the students of the University in a complete way.

As the only student voting member in the Board of Trustees, the body which owns Queen's, the Rector can represent student interests and make a definite input into the decision-making process.

In this way, students are provided with a voice they can utilize. His position is completely autonomous from any other in the University. As an ombudsman, he does not hold a position in the Alma Mater Society, faculty, or administration of the University so that he is free to move between the groups, learning their interests and channelling them to the appropriate people. The position is a prestigious one, and this allows the Rector to act with the authority and responsibility that is required.

Aside from the active responsibility of the Rector, his other function is that of a ceremonial nature. Along with the Principal and Chancellor, the Rector presides over the most official of the University ceremonies.

The position is a two year term with an optional third year. It is one which allows for great personal development. If handled properly, the Rector can be one of the most viable forces on campus.

Alex Faseruk

Politics '77

Within society today there has been a great increase in bureaucracy which has led to much alienation amongst conflicting groups. This has led to a polarization between the students and the administration at Queen's. This problem can be solved by a spirited Rector if he: 1) Constantly obtains student opinion. 2) Acts as an ombudsman and liaison. 3) Has an informal Rector's Council to aid him. 4) Does not inject his personal prejudices into the position. 5) Functions as a public relations man between Queen's and Kingston. 6) Works very diligently at all these tasks.

If elected I promise to live up to all these above outlined qualities I feel are important to a Rector. Although my experience at Queen's has been limited, it has been diversified since I have been a D.S.C. for two years. I have also helped on the Upper Leonard Hall and Suzie-Q Social Committee and I have been a member of the Queen's wrestling team. I feel I have had a diversified background which would enable me to convey student opinion to the Board of Trustees and the community at large if I were elected Rector.

Jim Henderson

Stephen Ross

In the four years I spent, first qualifying for the medical rat-race, and then running in it, I've learned the importance of being a rounded human being - and the difficulty of becoming so in the university environment. I am interested in art and music, and audit courses in both. Unfortunately, until now, I have not had time to contribute directly to Queen's University. I have obtained permission to take a year off the Medical program, and I hope to spend my time actively contributing to Queen's.

Rector-Vectors
I believe the Rector should not be a politician. Rather, he should be an ombudsman: unpartisan and helpful. He should be open and receptive, especially on a face-to-face level. Actively in touch with the university as a whole, he should facilitate the spread of innovative and necessary ideas. Though these may be obvious means to such ends, they deserve brief mention: advertised office hours, Journal articles, and CFRC programs and above all "on the street" conversations.

Rector-Vectors
The Rector must be more than a communications channel; to this end I have proposed the formation of the "Rector-Vectors": a volunteer group of persons, working with the Rector, without bureaucratic constraints, investigating campus concerns, a community action group. In short a Nader's Raiders for Queen's. The university must be a thought-provoking, involvement-stimulating institution. The Rector-Vectors will encourage participation by all, not just those elected.

We must broaden the university educational experience, make it a time of freedom for exploration - a time for the integration of knowledge, to develop meaning in our lives. Universities overemphasize efficiency and tend to overlook learning. Our real goal is to learn how to learn; how to solve problems of all kinds. Ideally, the university is a place where the individual is able to taste all realms of knowledge.

In summary, then, I feel that the Rector should not be another A.M.S. politico. His role should consist of two unique functions: (1) Helping individual students co-exist with university institutions and (2) acting as a "leading edge" for the evolution of Queen's as a learning centre.

The Rectorship is a difficult position to define, and necessarily involves considerable thought and energy on the part of any person holding the position. It is obviously an individual position in which the person must be his own spokesperson. Besides carrying out the formal and constitutional responsibilities, I feel that the Rector must do something extra to spark awareness and concern on the campus.

As Rector, I would voice my opinion on the various issues that concern us (e.g. housing, campus planning, allocation of resources, grievances). I would form my opinion from many influences and sources of information, but I would then let it be known what I am saying at the Board of Trustees level and, what I think at the other levels (i.e. Senate, Faculty Board, A.M.S.). By doing this, hopefully I will trigger some response, both positive and negative, which can be aired in the Journal and Golden Words, for example. We use these papers as forums for many things, and I feel it is important for the Rector to state what his opinions are and to be prepared to defend or amend them.

The Rectorship can be effective and can be developed. Please think about it.

Bruce Trotter

- presently a part-time student in Biology
- presently a Teaching Assistant in Environmental Engineering
- a member of the University Centre Users Committee
- Experience
- past Vice-President of the Alma Mater Society
- a past Internal Affairs Commissioner of the A.M.S.
- a Tricolor Award winner

In my article for Golden Words on Wednesday, I stated the three functions that the Rector must fulfill; namely 1) being a creditable student voice on the Board of Trustees, 2) being a knowledgeable and approachable ombudsman for students on an individual basis and 3) to act as the student representative, or figurehead, for official and ceremonial functions.

The position of Rector is a unique one; in that he has no official affiliation with university organizations such as the A.M.S. and the university administration. What the Rector is able to accomplish for students is almost entirely dependent upon to what degree his comments and advice are listened to and heeded by the Board of Trustees, the administration and the A.M.S. With his political autonomy he can work for students individually or collectively, with no axe to grind, through the university structures that exist.

The issues in this election, if any, are a) the differences between what candidates perceive the job to be and b) what qualities each candidate possess to enable him to do the job. Promises of setting up this and that or a "better mouse trap" have been offered before only to be unfulfilled. A Rector candidate can promise next to nothing because he controls no organizations but rather has inputs into many. My main concern with this university is the quality of education. Universities have lost the ideals they once held; the ideal of producing a thinking graduate with at least some resemblance of a general education; one who is taught an approach to problem solving rather than how to solve each specific problem. This has given way to what we now have; a glorified community college, fragmentary in nature with a whole host of specialized training programs, as evidenced by the large number of schools, departments and faculties.

To me, this is what I feel most strongly about; the change from a centre for critical thinkers to a job training centre for the production of employees to fill tomorrow's industry openings. I do not promise I can change the university but at least you can have some idea of what I believe in and will work towards.

When you vote you should look for two things. The first, does his idea of what the Rector is coincide with your views are? The second, is the candidate: credible, experienced, knowledgeable, truly concerned about students and approachable?

Dave Gordon

MEMBER OF Science 76 (Civil),
Member of Queen's Senate,
Board of Trustees-Senate Campus Planning Committee
Founder and President of Project Green

A lot of people have asked me to describe exactly what the Rector is, so I will use this space to give a condensation of my views. The Rector is one of the top three positions at Queen's, after the Chancellor and the Principal. Students have filled the position for the last five years, but the job is still quite flexible after three functions are performed: 1. Figurehead The Rector represents the students at all official ceremonies, such as convocations and installations. This is a traditional role, which still must be observed.

2. Board of Trustees The best defined part of the Rectorship is that of student representative on the Board of Trustees, which owns the university and has the final responsibility for spending. The Rector is the only voting student member of the Board and must voice the student's concerns clearly and rationally.

3. Ombudsman The most important function of the Rector is to act as an ombudsman for students. He should both express student problems directly to the administration and keep the students aware of the university's concerns.

I have been lucky in my extra-curricular activities at Queen's because I have been exposed to the University administration and, in the Senate, have tried to work for the benefit of the Queen's community as a whole. I have worked with some members of the Board in the joint Board-senate Committee on Campus Planning, and this experience led me to form Project Green, the new campus-wide tree planting group.

I hope to be able to use some of my past experience to represent ALL of Queen's to the best of my abilities. The Rectorship is a demanding position and I am willing to work very hard to express your interests to the university. I am sincerely interested in the job and I urge you to consider the issues and VOTE.

Thanks, and have a good weekend.

Doug Hutchinson

The Rector's problem-solving ability lies not in his membership on the Board of Trustees or the Executive Committee or the University Council or any other committee. Rather he can be of use to students by his informal contact with administrators. For this reason he is more of a lobbyist than a politician, and since he has no budget, he is certainly not an administrator. The Rector is the student's elected lobbyist.

A lobbyist has no credibility and therefore no effectiveness, however, unless he has active student participation and support, and everybody knows that he has this participation and support. Therefore, it is an absolutely necessary first step to open up the Rectorship. It must be open in two senses: The Rector must be an open person, warm and always available for consultation, and the Rector must be prepared to act in many areas of student life, to keep his duties flexible and open-ended. The Rector should never say "Sorry, that's not my responsibility."

To achieve these broad goals, certain specific programs should be adopted by the Rector. He must keep long, regular, and well-publicized office hours so that students can drop in on him in his office on the third floor of the Student's Union. He must publish regular articles about events in the administration, about issues of current interest and about issues that he feels should be current interest. He should appear regularly on CFRC's news shows. He should renew contact with Queen's students and he should make contact with new students every September. The Rector should be as familiar to all the students as preceptors and dons are familiar to students in residence. Since these duties are very time consuming, he will not be able to remain a full-time student.

These are the principles that will guide my conduct as Rector.

CHUNG WAH CHOP SUEY
SPECIALIZING IN
CHINESE & CANADIAN FOOD
TAKE OUT AND DELIVERY DIAL 544-6128
217 UNIVERSITY (CORNER OF WILLIAMS)
OPEN 8 AM TO MIDNIGHT
SUNDAY 10 AM TO 6 PM

Sunday Afternoon
Music Recital

November 24 4 p.m.

Julia du Prey, voice
Hans Colpa, piano
French and German Late Romantic Music

Admission is free
Agnes Etherington Art Centre

STEVE AMEY'S
Lakeview Manor
PLAYING THIS WEEK IN
THE CENTENNIAL ROOM
Charlie Epstein

28 Yonge St., Kingston

FLOWERS & THINGS
fresh flowers
delivered
around the corner
and around the world
176 Ontario St.

Editorial

What's a Rector?

Next week, Queen's students will be asked to choose a new student Rector - potentially one of the most important positions on campus.

If utilized to its extent, the Rector can become the most vocal, influential student in the decision-making bodies of the university.

But, like the AMS government, the position has grown to be an obscure, almost elitist campus concern. It seems that the only students truly interested and aware of the affairs that go on are those directly involved, while all the rest of the student body remain passive amidst the activity and decision-making.

However, this need not be the case with the Rectorship. Being a voting member in the Board of Trustees, and having affiliations with all facets of government at the university, the Rector can become a viable force in stimulating student awareness. (Where have we heard that before?)

Up to now the Rector has been a name and a figure who appears at Convocation in a fancy robe. In choosing your representative for the next two and possibly three years, consider his track record. The position is complex enough without the added confusion of becoming initially oriented to university affairs.

Consider the candidates in light of his experience and take advantage of choosing your communicator.

politics that ought to be the concern of every student. I hope, however, that other writers can be located who are willing to put forward opinions contrary to those of Mr. Bonnell, and that through such a forum the Journal can stimulate discussion among students of important political issues.

Yours sincerely,
James C. Avis

Mr. Bonnell Responds:

Finally I get a negative comment - thank you. At last I know there's someone out there who disagrees with my views - radical though they may seem.

"One Man's Politics" has been an attempt to take partisan political issues and place them in what I hope is a semi-intellectual context. As such I'm disappointed in your letter, Jim, if only because your opinions (and they are clearly numerous) are backed by little more than emotional diatribe. An academic approach is surely not enhanced by comments like, "None but Mr. Bonnell could hold such views". Thanks for the letter Jim, but no thanks.

Doug Donnell

letters to the editor

Semi-deities grace campus

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter in the hope of making public knowledge the arrogant behavior of a so-called "concert committee" at this evenings Bruce Cockburn concert.

When I arrived at the concert, I found that the sixteen seats comprising the first two rows, front and centre, of the balcony had been reserved for the "concert committee". Naturally, because the concert was well attended, many people were turned away from these seats as Grant Hall filled. However, by the time the show was about to begin, only five or six of the seats had been filled. During the course of the first half of the show, several people filled in and sat down, but by fifteen minutes before intermission eight of the seats were still empty.

During intermission I told these people that I had knowledge there were sixteen people on the concert committee and that I wanted the names of the people for whom the seats had been reserved. After I had returned to my seat, one of the girls turned to her cohort and said, "sure I can get sixteen names... he's just some guy who only paid to see the show".

When someone else asked another member of the "concert committee" by what authority these seats had been reserved, one of the male members of the troupe responded with, "I authorized these seats by the same authority that I put these shows on. If I wanted to I could make everyone wait outside until we were ready to sit down, then I wouldn't have to have these seats reserved".

Just before the start of the second half of the show, one of the male members of this "concert committee" stood up and asked the AMS constable nearby to ask three girls who had seated themselves in the first row during the first half of the show to leave. These seats were subsequently never filled, and the people in the second row used the backs of the chairs as foot rests throughout the second half of the show.

To add insult to injury, these people included in their number several who smoked. I spoke to the AMS constable nearby, and asked if there was a rule which prohibited smoking in Grant Hall. I was told by her that, "yes there is, but so many people smoke anyway its the kind of rule you can't enforce".

The point is that these people behaved in such a consummately arrogant fashion that there is no justification whatsoever which qualifies it. While I recognize the effort required to put a concert on, I feel that sixteen seats were far too many to have been reserved.

The next time you are standing in the wintry chill waiting to be admitted to a concert, I suggest you contemplate the attitudes of your concert committee toward you, the mere student who is "only paying to see the show". When you get inside Grant Hall, look up, and perhaps you may see them there - those paragons of student participation - ensconced in their royal box; legs sprawled over the backs of chairs that aren't fit for the common hoarde, smoking away in defiance of fire regulations, and just generally having a grand old time. Treat them with respect mind you, or they'll probably have you tossed out of your seat.

Let 1974 mark the year when the concert committee, and friends, rose from relative obscurity as mere students to the level of the semi-deity.

Yours truly,
Warren Johnson

Discussion stimulated

Dear Editor:

This is a comment on the column "One Man's Politics", (November 15). It is not difficult to understand why Doug Bonnell's politics are those of only one man. No one but Mr. Bonnell could hold such views. Few people can accept anymore that "the Davis government has been primarily a good one". Has it been good for public servants? Teachers? Dentists? Hospital Workers? Senior Citizens? Students? Home-seekers? Beer drinkers? No! It has been good mostly for Toronto-based developers and American corporations. The list of those disenchanted by the Tories grows longer with each new announcement of government policy. The decline of Davis popularity is not just a theory; it is a fact evidenced by four consecutive by-election defeats. Contrary to Mr. Bonnell's belief, many voters can no longer see Davis as an honest man (remember Hydrogate?). Even Madison Avenue promotion can no longer make the "good, old Bill" image credible. Both the Liberal and New Democratic Parties have demonstrated by their conscientious opposition in the legislature that there exist preferable alternatives to The Conservatives in Ontario today.

In passing, I want to mention my appreciation of The Journal's policy in allowing Mr. Bonnell to present his views. There has been a long-standing tendency at this university to neglect the real-world

AMS starts soul-searching

Dear Editor:

There's something wrong with the AMS. We aren't getting enough input. At present the AMS is composed of 39 people - but it's supposed to be 10,000. We the undersigned feel that something should be done about it. We desire submissions and/or criticisms from faculty, staff, students or other interlopers. Drop them in or mail them c/o the Education Commission in the AMS office.

Outer Council can't represent student interests if they don't know what students interests are.

Sincerely,
Liz Glashan, Carol Town,
John Wilson, Gaye Clemson,
Education Commission

Film review misses point

Dear Editor:

One expects nothing beyond the sophomoric in the Journal, and with justification. The drive which passes for a review of "The Odessa File" (Journal, Nov. 12) cries out for comment. Mr. Thompson's little review is simply studded with mispunctuations and orthographical atrocities. (Rega, Heidelberg psychoathic...) It is a pity that Mr. Thompson's obsessive usage of commas is overshadowed by the carelessness with which he copies "twenty-five-cent words" from his well-thumbed Rogel's Thesaurus.

The movie is still-born, Mr. Thompson: had you cared to read Forsyth's novel, you would have seen even more clearly the films shortcomings. The "book is true and easy to believe". For you, perhaps. How do you know? The corridors of the subway Munich (munch) may well be cold at times, but they are not foggy: "... lends itself perfectly to a chase scene". Really? Well then, what a pity that Mr. Noane neglected to include one in his film! The photography of Hamburg's streets consists of a very few, short "location shots". Is Mr. Thompson commending the film of the shop (which was brightly illuminated, incidentally) seemed to do or perform, to commit, to be guilty of, to impose. (Webster) Did Mr. Thompson mean "penetration", perhaps? Voight was wooden; Mr. Thompson, absolutely wooden, from his very first syllable of poorly-pronounced "mock German." "Best effort so far?" What rubbish. As if this were not enough, Mr. Thompson completely misses the films main point - that Voight's primary motivation is that of revenge for his murdered father.

Such pabulum as this "review" may be suitable mental fodder for some Queen's students, but one would hope that graduate students from other universities deserve a higher standard of student Journalism. Are there no remedial English courses for Journal contributors?

Sincerely, David Read Fac. of Ed.

Ed. note: Usually I try to correct most of the grammatical errors in a letter, however Mr. Read's credentials so impressed me that I left his letter untouched. But I think it necessary to point out that Mr. Read is standing, quite conspicuously, in a glass house. There are at least fourteen solecisms in his letter. Anybody who can correctly identify ten of these will receive a free drink at the Pub. D.C.

Error corrected

Dear Editor:

I notice that in the article on tenure (pages 8-9 of the Journal for November 15) the author refers to "departments such as Classics where enrolment is small and declining." I hope that the writer is not referring to our Department at Queen's, since her statement would be conspicuously wrong. In the past three years our total enrolment in Classics has increased by more than 40 per cent, while our numbers in beginners Greek and Latin continue to rise.

It was unfortunate that the only reference in the article to an individual discipline was so mistaken. The problem of tenure is difficult enough to solve, even when we get our facts straight.

Sincerely yours
S. E. Smethurst
Head, Department of Classics

Vol. 102, No. 22
Fri., Nov. 22, 1974
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario.

Editor-in-Chief: Suzanne Sherkin
Business Manager: Terry Collins
Business Staff: Anne Robertson, Meg Bottomley
Managing Editor: Dan McClelland
News Editor: Sarah Yarnell
Features Editors: Wendy Reynolds, Laurie Gibson
Arts Editors: Kerry White, Peter Haworth

Comment: Twice the eve of exam time and all through the books, every nose was 3-peering, yes even the books, the facts were embedded all snug in their heads, with visions of Grad school, of Law and of Meds. But down at the Journal the staff were preparing, to line up for Welfare with all the despairing

Founded in 1873 and published on Tuesdays and Fridays during the academic year by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated, Kingston, Ontario. Founding member of Canadian University Press. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editor and not necessarily those of the AMS nor the University. Telephone (613) 547-7836. Printed on pages at the St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario. Lithographed in USA on Canadian newspaper.

One Man's Politics

by Doug Bonnell

With Christmas almost upon us, student politicians are already jockeying for support in preparation for the February rebirth of the Alma Mater Society. Perhaps then it is appropriate to take a look at one of the central organs of the AMS, and one of the more important instruments for shaping the student heavies of the future - Outer Council.

Council consists of four vital groups: the immediate executive, commonly referred to as Wolman, Druxerman and Gray; the five commissioners and Outer Council Speaker Ian Nordheimer; Society Presidents; and representatives of those societies elected for one or two year terms. The divisions are important in that a fully effective AMS relies on strength in all four areas. Thus many of this year's problems in the AMS are due to weaknesses among the individual representatives and a lack of coherent direction among the Society Presidents.

At present the executive and the Presidents are at odds over the viability of the AMS in meeting the needs of the individual societies. It began with a rejection on the part of the presidents of a motion by Wolman asking for discussion by the societies on that very issue. Why the negative reaction? For Peter Druxerman (VP-Operations), the answer is simple. "For the presidents, Outer Council is no longer thirty-eight people, but eight people. They expect everything to be done for them." Tony Wolman has a similar reaction. "There's an immense potential in those Presidents, but how do we know what they want unless they tell us." ASUS President Sue Harper argues that the executive has not given enough direction, that the issue is too major to be taken lightly and should be resolved by a committee of faculty reps. "Not only that", she says, "but I just don't have enough time."

Harper is right in that the issue could be resolved by the individual reps - if those reps were capable of handling such a major issue. But Outer Council's representatives are, on the whole, apathetic, overly political, and totally unprepared. For example, Peter Druxerman's monetary policy, presented in report form at the last meeting, was passed without debate. It's a good report. Druxerman's policy will determine the AMS monetary approach for years to come. But it wasn't for that reason that the report was not debated. I don't think the individual reps had read the damn thing. Half an hour later Outer Council spent twenty minutes on a motion by John Gray calling for bilingual letterhead - yes folks, bilingual letterhead.

Not all the reps are incompetent. Five in particular stick out as properly prepared, concerned and enthusiastic. All five are ASUS reps, and unfortunately, only one was present at the last meeting. The five are Sue Harper, John Wilson, Terry Machi, Liz Glashan and Carol Town. Two stick out as totally ineffective - Bartley Bull (Commerce) whose attack on honoraria was totally arbitrary; and John Moreland who backed up a motion at the last meeting with the following mumbling: "mha blah-huh-de-da". It was the most substantial thing Moreland has said all year. Unfortunately, too many reps fit into this last category.

Without better representation Druxerman's conception of a more centralized Council may be necessary.

CHEESE BOARDS
CUTTING BOARDS
TRAYS & TRIVETS
SPECIAL 10 PERCENT
OFF
SATURDAY ONLY
DOMUS
BROCK ST. BETWEEN KING & WELLINGTON

"I can't promise to keep the pub open."

"I can promise to be your voice
at city hall on local matters."

VOTE LOIS MILLER

on December 2
Your representative in Sydenham Ward

the MARKET
BARBER SHOP
& hairstyling salon

Peter Smits invites you
to his new hair core shop
549-2110
43 BROCK ST. KINGSTON ONT

Crystal Restaurant
TASTY FOODS
COURTEOUS SERVICE
"THE PLACE WHERE ALL GOOD PEOPLE MEET & EAT"
STEAKS - CHOPS - CHICKEN - SEAFOOD
PASTA - PIZZA - SUBS - SUSHI - SKEWERS
OPEN 7 DAYS
Try our Delicious
Shish Kebob
240 PRINCESS
TAKE-OUT SERVICE
Free Delivery
Over $3.00
KGTN 542-8515

BRIDGE LESSONS

starting Saturday, Nov. 23, at 1.00
and Continuing Next term.

Phone Pieter Geerkens at 544-7504
for more information

Are you or your group
doing something you
would like others to
know about?
Tell Us....
USE OUR BULLETIN
BOARD
Cable Cast TV 13

Writing, Layout and especially typing

GAEL APPLICATIONS

Available in the ASUS box in the AMS office, Lower
Students Union

Applications must be returned by Wednesday, December 4, to the AMS office.

For additional information
call 546-0903 or 546-1070

$250
ADVANCE - WITH VALID STUDENT CARD
$3. AT THE DOOR
tickets in John
Orr all week

A JOINT PRESENTATION
AMS CONCERTS
& SCIENCE 78
LOTS & BEER

Bluegrass BOOGIE

FRIDAY NOVEMBER 22 BY.O.D.

GRANT & KINGSTON HALL doors open 7:30 pm

the
GOOD Brothers

COMING!

Fiddlin Powers and Family

Veteran, Edison and Okeh Record Artists

SOUTH'S GREATEST "OLD TIME STRING BAND" from "Old Virginia"

COMEDIAN, SINGIN' and DANCIN'

A Good, Clean, Instructive Amusement. You Can't Afford to Miss A Children under 5 years Free Over 5 years etc. Adults etc.

TEDDY TIN CAN GRAPHICS

OPEN ROAD

BURTON COUNTY LINE

Canada's involvement in Latin America

Programme

Tuesday, November 26 at Dunning Auditorium 8 p.m.
"Free Enterprise responsibility in Latin America"

Wednesday, November 27 at Dunning Auditorium 8 p.m.
Panel: "Institutional co-operation between Canada and Latin America: Government and Church"

Thursday, November 28 at Grant Hall 8 p.m.
"The development crises and the Canadian dilemma"

Thoughts, facts about Chile

Ed note: To serve as background to the Dunning Trust Area Series, the committee has arranged for the publication of the following essays, which deal with Latin America in the areas of education, politics, history and literature.

by Gregorio Lamas

The name of Gregorio Lamas is a pseudonym for a Chilean student now at Queen's.

Those of us who lived through the extraordinary experience of three years of Dr. Salvador Allende's government in Chile and who, for one reason or another, were caught up in the moving social and political process experienced in that period, ask ourselves today what path may a country take to frame its own destiny, when it is denied with the brutality shown in Chile the channels of participatory democracy.

Through these three years certain events occurred that had never before taken place in the history of the country. For the first time, owners of commercial establishments such as clothing, food and hardware stores, etc., took strike actions. For the first time, owners of industries and manufacturing plants suspended production and, finally, abandoned their plants and left their workers unemployed. For the first time, those land-owners whose properties had still not been expropriated let their lands lie fallow. But, also for the first time, the common people discovered that a plant, industry or farm could produce in the absence of their owners.

I was involved in education, particularly university education. My information has been gathered from many different sources, and from personal experience; I cannot disclose many names, dates, or more concrete facts, since disclosure would endanger persons now living under the military dictatorship in Chile.

Transforming educational system

Great currents of thought, some conservative, some radical, struggle for the opportunity to apply their ideals in a concrete way, and education, as the formative force in the historical consciousness of man, is precisely the means to that end.

If it were necessary to define this struggle in one phrase, we would say that conservative forces understand the educational process as the transfer of knowledge, while reformist forces understand it as the preparation for discovery. And, of course, history has shown that every discovery entails a revolution of form and content.

At first, Dr. Allende's regime did not have a concrete plan for educational reform. The government reacted, however, to the pressures brought to bear by teacher and student organizations and presented a project that, under the name of Escuela Nacional Unificada (ENU), was to represent the government's position in matters of education. Essentially, this project consisted of measures that would transform the traditional basis and goals of primary and secondary schools. The project produced an impact on all the people; for the first time in the history of the country everybody participated in the discussion.

While the ENU was transformed by the contributions of students, teachers, workers, mothers, and everybody who was, in one form or another, involved in the problems of the primary and secondary schools, the universities also began a process of deepening changes. The University of Concepcion, whose students had always been in the avant-garde of change, spread its influence to all other universities in the country.

"Commissions of University Reform" were created, which functioned almost continuously in every university in the country, the only exception being Austral University, where the conservative forces hindered the Commission's normal functioning. Matters discussed in these Commissions ranged from the smallest problems, such as the implementation of new courses in specific university subjects, to the discussion of wider social and economic problems, such as the role of the university in Chilean society and in the future of mankind.

As the reformist position gradually gained influence over the masses, students and university professors, the conservative forces kept raising obstacles to the airing of ideas that sought changes within the innermost circles of the universities.

This process brought an end to what used to be called "academic tranquility," but there is no doubt that this ideological struggle allowed interesting considerations of education, not only as a Chilean but as a universal problem. Many brilliant academics, who had never before considered the problem, had now an opportunity to do so. The demise of academic tranquility gave place to a more fruitful academic restlessness, a constant preoccupation with those complex questions asked by everyone concerned with university life.

The basic national contribution of the students of the University of Concepcion was a new concept of what the university should be. They considered that the university should be an instrument in the service of the revolutionary changes needed by the country, and that it should form a new kind of man, who would be well prepared for the building of a socialist society. This concept of the university was greatly influenced by a political leader recently put to death by the military dictatorship. I refer to Miguel Henriquez. This man was the first to expound methodically on the new concept of the university, a concept which was to become, in a short time, the nucleus of national discussion. Along with the University of Concepcion, the University of Chile also played an important role.

(continued on Page 10)

The discussion of the educational process, in its three levels, obliged the whole of Chilean society to become informed and commit itself, in one way or another. The teachers of our country, who had a history of struggling for social and educational changes, began slowly to influence many opinions of many people. This fact explains the brutality exercised against teachers and students after the military coup.

Education after military coup

Repression of many elements of Chilean cultural life has been well documented since September 1973: the destruction of Pablo Neruda's house, the Commission of the University of Chile, was put to death by torture. Let's not forget that Professor Munoz was executed in the north of Chile. (1) And we must make mention of a little known death: that of the education officer of Talca, Professor Hector Valenzuela who was shot in his own house, with his wife and small daughter, for the crime of agitating for educational reforms. To complete the circle of sad memories, there is the figure of Victor Jara, folklorist and teacher, who was cruelly tortured and killed.

Other names could be added to this list, but these could have no meaning for burning of books, above all, the assassinations of teachers and students after the coup. Let's not forget that Enrique Paris, President of the Reform reader, since they belong to the great numbers of anonymous people who lost their lives at the hands of the military.

In Valparaiso, the number of arrested was almost four hundred (naturally, only teachers); in Valdivia, of two thousand political prisoners held in one precinct (where there were only four prisoners before), three hundred were teachers.

The teacher's union (Sindicato Unico de Profesores de la Educacion) was

NOTES

1. Professor Munoz was the conductor of the only children's orchestra in Chile. Among the charges brought against him, the most important was that of "radicalizing children," for the presumptive crime of having made a tour, with his orchestra, of several socialist countries.
2. Article by Mario Rinalvucchi in The End of Chilean Democracy, edited by Laurence Burns, The Seabury Press, New York, 1974.
3. Vallee, Lionel, Report on a Trip to Chile, December 1973, The Social Research Council of Canada, Ottawa, 1974.
4. Document obtained by direct source

Territorial comparisons ... how we match up

canada	is a little larger than	brazil
ontario plus quebec	are, together, a little smaller than	argentina
england	is a little smaller than	nicaragua
british columbia	is a little larger than	venezuela
ontario	is about the same size as	bolivia
ontario	is a little smaller than	colombia
the prairie provinces	are about the same size as	mexico britain france spain west germany	are, together, about the same size as	quebec or	peru and ecuador

made illegal. A majority of its leaders were imprisoned and others dismissed from their jobs.

The number of teachers who lost their jobs is very high. Professor Mario Rinalvucchi, who worked in Austral University, in Valdivia informs me that of 500 professors employed by that institution over 100 were dismissed. (2) Students were expelled from all universities secondary schools and even primary schools. Professor Lionel Vallee, of the University of Montreal, says that in the University of Concepcion alone, of 10,000 students no less than 6,000 were expelled. Professor Vallee also tells us that the most affected departments were those that were most closely related to the problems of education and that are "the centres of critical reflection on the society of yesterday and today." (3)

Military intervention in education has manifested itself in many ways. In all universities, members of the Armed Forces now serve as Deans. In many cases with the consent of the previous Deans. The military have also dismissed hundreds of career officials and have put in their place "reliable" people, regardless of their intellectual capacity or level of education.

Another form of military intervention is the "new compulsory course in Security and National Defence in all levels of

Latin American politics

How the system survives through change

by Bruce J. Berman

Professor Berman is a specialist in underdevelopment, particularly in Sub-Saharan Africa. He studies and teaches about Latin America as a stimulating adjunct to his own research.

To North American eyes Latin American politics has long been viewed through the banana republic stereotype of pervasive corruption, a seemingly endless series of coups and posturing military juntas, frequent assassinations and sporadic violence. However, it has been pointed out, where the usual mode of changing governments is by "revolutions" every year or two, each occurrence of a revolution simply affirms that things are carrying on as usual and the system is both eminently stable and predictable.

Nevertheless, it has taken non-Latin analysts considerable time and effort to move beyond the assumptions and expectations of Anglo-American politics, find the "system" in Latin American politics and delineate the rules of the game under which it operates.

The paradigm for understanding Latin American underdevelopment has increasingly been provided by the "dependency" theory. This approach has documented the continuing politico-economic dependence of Latin American nations on British and, later, U.S. interests. These external forces have been instrumental in the shaping of Latin American's export oriented, primary-product economies and in sustaining both the power of the traditional land-owning ruling class and the weakness of the local bourgeoisie. Dependency theory however has its limits in explaining Latin American politics. It cannot deal with the specific elementary and secondary schools universities." (4) The alternatives for a compulsory two semester course specific University Divisions or Faculties complemented by demonstration National Defence and with a practical diploma in certain areas, this course be a pre-requisite, and is to serve military service and, on completion confer the rank of Officer in the Reserve.

This document adds that the purpose of such a course is: To teach the military power is an element of national power and that it is the responsibility to watch over and guard national interest.

Finally, the document adds that the course will be obligatory for all students entering their first year and for all who will be graduating.

There is only one conclusion to be drawn: the policies of the Chilean dictatorship are slowly drowning all efforts at free expression through the imprisonment of the press and the persecution of people. This very sad conclusion forces us to ask of the world the widest possible support; it is what moves me to write this short outline, in an effort to awaken attention of the uninformed reader.

When the actions of the Allende government mounted a serious attack on their interests, the Chilean military with the support of other established elites ruthlessly demolished more than a century of constitutional politics, eliminated radical parties and political groups, and effectively expelled the peasantry and the working class from the political system.

In short, the traditional corporatist systems have shown considerable capacity to adjust to change by sacrificing institutions. The major issue remains, however, how long and at what cost will the established power groups be able to maintain the systems against further attacks. In the meantime, the welfare of the great mass of the population is a moot question—but that's not what the existing systems are about anyway.

However, where a new contender group threatens the continued existence of the incumbents, the latter tend to react with ruthlessness and unequivocal repression. It is here that U.S. support aids the established elites and sustains and extends their power. Violence can also result when an established participant in the political process violates the rules of the game and threatens to upset the delicately achieved balance by encroaching on the vital interests of another participant. Here however, the violence is often symbolic and stylized—successful coups have been carried out without a shot being fired—and ousted leaders can withdraw safely and gracefully into political exile.

The high cost of threatening the established rules of the game has led to a noticeable "learning process" among reformist or revolutionary groups, especially political parties such as the Aprist Party in Peru or the Accion Democratica in Venezuela, whereby initial objectives and intransigent demands are moderated or rhetorically stated with the tacit understanding that they will not be acted upon. In some instances reformist and radical groups have gained access to the political process and actually passed radical legislation, without the capacity or intention to actually implement it. (When Salvador Allende was elected President of Chile in 1970 with a hostile majority in Congress that impeded passage of his legislative program, his administration was able to use radical legislation already existing in the statute books, but not seriously implemented by previous governments.)

Roots of Latin Am. politics

The cultural and philosophical roots of Latin American politics lie in the corporatist traditions of Latin America, an approach to society politics largely alien to the liberal Anglo-American tradition. As Howard Wieth has put it:

Politics still centers around the hierarchically organized and vertically compartmentalized system of corporate interests and elite groups, now expanded and broadened somewhat to include newer elements, but still authoritarianly controlled from the top and linked together directly through the government. (Wieth, 1973)

Within the intellectual and institutional confines of this system, Latin American states have been able to accommodate a considerable degree of social change and incorporate to some degree into the polity new or previously excluded social groups. This has been accomplished through an exceedingly complex process of conflict bargaining among the elites of the corporate interests, both traditional and modern.

Latin American political systems are characterized by a wide variety of economic and political groups—contenders—competing for the control of a variety of power resources (including wealth, armed force, mass support, technical expertise, and ideological authority), which can be used to demonstrate a power capability justifying their claim to a place in the political process. What this means is that if a political party wins an election this does not automatically guarantee it will form a government. Having used one power resource (mobilization of support) to demonstrate a power capability (winning the election), the party must now enter into negotiations with the elites of other established political power groups and gain their tacit consent to the formation of a government.

The process of negotiation among the elites of groups commanding various power resources is the key element of the corporatist political process. The traditional pillars of the Latin American political order, the landed oligarchs, the army, and the Church, not only survive but even retain their predominant position in many cases and control the terms of admission of new participants. To gain access to the political process, a group must employ one or another power resource to demonstrate a power capability. Since the demonstration of power is not intended in the first instance to actually wreak havoc and destruction but only demonstrate the capability of doing so, much of the apparent turmoil of Latin American politics is highly stylized and symbolic. Having demonstrated its power capability, the new group must then demonstrate its willingness to enter the existing process of negotiation and not threaten the vital interests or existence of already established participants. This process has been capable of the limited incorporation of new groups without forcing out any of the older ones. For this reason Latin America has been described as a political museum, in which every ideology and interest known in the West over the past 450 years and even some unique local variants can be found in various forms of uneasy coexistence.

However, where a new contender group threatens the continued existence of the incumbents, the latter tend to react with ruthlessness and unequivocal repression. It is here that U.S. support aids the established elites and sustains and extends their power. Violence can also result when an established participant in the political process violates the rules of the game and threatens to upset the delicately achieved balance by encroaching on the vital interests of another participant. Here however, the violence is often symbolic and stylized—successful coups have been carried out without a shot being fired—and ousted leaders can withdraw safely and gracefully into political exile.

The high cost of threatening the established rules of the game has led to a noticeable "learning process" among reformist or revolutionary groups, especially political parties such as the Aprist Party in Peru or the Accion Democratica in Venezuela, whereby initial objectives and intransigent demands are moderated or rhetorically stated with the tacit understanding that they will not be acted upon. In some instances reformist and radical groups have gained access to the political process and actually passed radical legislation, without the capacity or intention to actually implement it. (When Salvador Allende was elected President of Chile in 1970 with a hostile majority in Congress that impeded passage of his legislative program, his administration was able to use radical legislation already existing in the statute books, but not seriously implemented by previous governments.)

In some notable cases the established elites have not waited to be challenged but have created their own captive organizations to control and contain potentially threatening groups. This is particularly apparent in the official stimulation of trade union and peasant organizations. The role of the captive elites of such groups is to control their constituencies in behalf of the existing system's dominant elites, distributing limited benefits and drawing the teeth of more radical demands.

Changes rare in society

Despite considerable political turmoil, genuine revolutions involving major structural changes in society are actually very rare in Latin America. Cuba is perhaps the only existing example of a successful revolution. But then Cuba, given the virtual absence of traditional ruling groups and the extreme dependence of its bourgeoisie on U.S. interests, is not typical of Latin American States. The revolutionary enthusiasm of the 1960's, which saw Cuba as the first of a wave of triumphant struggles throughout the continent, has largely died down in the face of the capacity of the established order to defend itself.

This is the inevitable outcome of the failure in the existing system to legitimize any single power factor or institutional mode of access to the political arena. Where the outcomes of processes defined by the formal state institutions have threatened any established elites, these have tended to reverse those outcomes, even at the cost of destroying the institutions.

When the actions of the Allende government mounted a serious attack on their interests, the Chilean military with the support of other established elites ruthlessly demolished more than a century of constitutional politics, eliminated radical parties and political groups, and effectively expelled the peasantry and the working class from the political system.

In short, the traditional corporatist systems have shown considerable capacity to adjust to change by sacrificing institutions. The major issue remains, however, how long and at what cost will the established power groups be able to maintain the systems against further attacks. In the meantime, the welfare of the great mass of the population is a moot question—but that's not what the existing systems are about anyway.
